PRESIDENT FIXES FIRST OF AUGUST FOR MEETING OF PEACE COMMISSION

Governments Agree to Meeting Between First and Tenth.

Nelidoff and Rosen Selected By Russia as Representatives.

Takahira Only One Thus Far Selected By Japs.

Washington, June 26.—The president has expressed a wish to the Japanese and Russian governments that the plenitoptentiaries meet in the United States on the first day of August, and if not on that date, then at the earliest date thereafter. The following statestatement regarding the meeting of the plenipotentiaries was made public at the White House today:

"The president has received from both the Russian and Japanese governments the statement that the plenipotentiaries of the two countries will meet in the United States during the first ten days of August, and the president has expressed to both governments the wish that the meeting take place if possible on the first of August, and if not on that date, then at the earliest date thereafter."

M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador to Paris, and Baron Rosen, the new Russian ambassador to Washington, are Russia's tentative selections of plenipotentiaries. Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister here, it is understood, has been selected by his government as one of the plenipotentiaries, but the name of the ranking Japanese envoy cannot be learned. It is not believed that Marquis Ito will be able to come, and it is possible that Field Marshal Yamagata may take his place. This confirmation comes from a high source, but it is understood that no formal announcement can be made until it is learned whether M. Nelidoff's health will permit him to make the trip here.

St. Petersburg, June 26.—Both Japan and Russia are now understood to have agreed on the time when their plenipotentiaries shall meet at Washington. It will be during the first ten days of August but the exact date probably will be announced by President Roosevelt. The question of precedence evidently is the main stumbling block to a prompt settlement of the number of personal negotiators. Both sides seem desirous to make the other take the initial move. Russia seems to consider that it is Japan's duty to name her plenipotentiaries before Russia announces hers. While the exact number of the plenipotentiaries has not been officially arranged both powers seem to have tactily agreed on three. The actual announcement of the names of the plenipotentiaries is expected within a few days.

The official statement of the situation is: "All is going on favorably."

The question of a possible armistice as stated last week remains in abeyance for the moment. Japan it is understood declining even to take the matter up until the issues involved in the Washington meeting are definitely settled. In the meantime there have been heavy downpours in Manchuria and the rainy season may enforce a suspension of military operations before diplomacy can act.

FAST TIME RESUMED

Eighteen-Hour Schedule Resumed By Twentieth Century Limited.

New York, June 26.—The 18-hour running schedule for the Twentieth Century limited between this city and Chicago, temporarily abandoned, following the wreck at Mentor, Ohio, will be restored today.

The following anouncement was made by President Newman of the New York Central:

"The rigid investigation of the wreck on the Lake Shore road at Mentor, Ohio, which has been made by the officials of the Lake Shore company and by the state railroad commissioner of Ohio, who with the chief inspector of railways for the state made a personal investigation at the scene of the accident having shown conclusively that the accident was not caused by the speed of the train, it is now decided unnecessary to continue longer the slower schedule of the Twentieth Century train, the time of which was lengthned pending a thorough investigation of the cause of the accident. Its schedule of eighteen hours between New York and Chicago will be resumed Monday, June 26."

MOUNTAIN FIRE IS DOING GREAT DAMAGE.

Ogden, Mont., June 26.—A mountain fire, which is not yet under control, is burning north of here. With a frontage of more than a mile, the fire has traversed five miles of territory, destroying fences, fuel, crops and hay stacks. Hundreds of men are trying to keep the fire spots from the scattered dwellings in the vicinity. A power magazine directly in the path of the fire was only saved by strenuous efforts. No estimate of the damage has yet been made.

CURZON IS AT ODDS WITH GOVERNMENT

The Viceroy of India Will Resign His Position.

Objects to Kichener's Being In Control of the Army.

LORD CURZON.

Simla, June 26.—It is freely rumored that the viceroy, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, has either already tendered his resignation or shortly will do so in consequence of the decision of the home government, whereby Lord Kitchener, commander-in-chief of the forces in India, has been given complete control of the army in India. Two special meetings of the Indian council have been held since the publication in London of the Blue book, referring to Lord Kitchener's plans, the approval of which is considered to be a severe blow to Lord Curzon, since he and practically the whole council unanimously advised against the decision ultimately adopted. The keenest excitement prevails in official circles here. The Times of India decares that India cannot afford to lose "either of the great men, Lord Curzon or Lord Kitchener who dominate her affairs."

London, June 26.—While it is considered quite possible that Lord Curzon may tender his resignation because of the course taken by the home government directly at variance with his views, it is not believed that it will be accepted, or that the viceroy will insist on quitting his post, at least until after the prince and princess of Wales have completed their tour of India, extending from November to March.

A question asked in the chamber of commons this afternoon elicited from Indian Secretary Broderick the statement that the government had received no information that Curzon had any desire or intention of resigning the viceroyalty of India.

CONSERVATIVE TEAMSTERS TO TRY TO CHECK RADICALS

Chicago, June 26.—Steps to be taken today by the conservative leaders in the teamsters' ranks were expected effectually to check a growing sentiment among the more radical element in favor of a general strike of all teamsters in Chicago and to encourage a prompt ending of the existing struggle, either by accepting the employers' terms or calling off the strike.

At the present time the main portion of the teamsters' army is intact, only 4,000 out of 27,000 being on strike. A general attack on employers, it was declared, could result only in general disorganization and a call for the militia. This move also would result in the drivers cutting loose from their main basis of support—the teamsters who are employed.

Meetings will be held tonight by the department store drivers and the railway express drivers to vote on the question of accepting the peace terms of the employers. According to H. C. Cork, chairman of the peace committee of the teamsters' joint council, a favorable vote by these two locals would mean an end of the strike, as the other unions would follow. The terms practically are the same as were offered three weeks ago. Some changes in the phraseology have been made at the request of the teamsters' committee. One alteration, it is understood, was in the article concerning the wearing of union buttons, in order to have it made clear that no employer objects to the wearing of union buttons, provided they are not exposed.

LONDON HOUSE FOR BELASCO

Will Have New Theater —Mrs. Carter to Open It.

New York, June 26.—A London cable to the Herald says: Contracts have been signed by which it is definitely settled that David Belasco will become a London theatrical manager. A new theater is to be built for Mr. Belasco, and the autumn of 1907 will see Mrs. Leslie Carter opening the new playhouse.

Mr. Belasco, with B. F. Roede, has been in London about ten days and will sail on Tuesday. The American manager lunched on Tuesday with Bernard Shaw at the latter's country place at Welwyn and the same evening was entertained at dinner by Beerbohm Tree in the beautiful home of His Majesty's theater.

Mr. Belasco has been interviewed by the newspapers here and got in a little fling at the theater syndicate which has attracted attention and editorial comment.

Speaking about his new theater, Mr. Belasco told me he was to have carte blanche as to arrangement and decoration.

"I am unable as yet to disclose many particulars about the project," said Mr. Belasco. "The playhouse will be in the West end. The company with which I have signed the contract has unlimited capital and has done me the honor of naming the theater after me. Mrs. Carter will open the play house with a new play. All my other stars, including Mr. Warfield, will come over here. The building will be small, as I don't believe in large playhouses, but somewhat larger than my theater in New York. I have some new ideas as to stage appliances and decorations and shall carry them out. The contract is to run during my natural life, or so long as I am capable of conducting the theater. It is stipulated I shall direct no other house in England.

"As to the arrangement of the building, the interior will be radically different from other London theaters. I have been going about since my arrival, visiting different ones and seeing plays from the orchestra, gallery and pit. When I get back to New York I shall begin shaping my ideas and completing the designs before the work of construction begins.

"One criticism I have to make about London theaters generally is the lack of a central aisle, making it necessary sometimes to disturb a dozen or more persons to get to one's seat.

"I have made up my mind to retain the pit, which here is traditional. There is no use antogonizing the public by trying to abolish it. I have taken the trouble to sit in it, and find it is the heart and soul of the general theater-going public. When it is pleased, one may be sure one has a popular success on the stage. It is not only intelligent, but very artistically inclined.

"With the exception of 'Leah Kleschna,' which is a fine drama, there is not a single play now running in England which I should care to take the trouble to produce in America," said Mr. Belosco. "From my talks with managers I am led to the conclusion this is the most disastrous season in the history of the English stage. I am told by them there has not been a single successful new play produced.

"I have been in consultation with some leading theatrical managers regarding the theatrical trust and find them in a nervous condition over the outlook. They don't quite know what's going to happen, but realize that the trust intends to get control."

KILLED FROM AMBUSH.

Antigo Chief of Police Victim of Maniac.

Antigo, Wis., June 26.—Chief of Police Jack McArthur was shot and instantly killed by an escaped maniac from the Oshkosh insane asylum Saturday night. McArthur was notified that the maniac was living in an old hut six miles from the city, and with Deputy Sheriff Michaelson went to capture him.

While McArthur waited for the possible return of the crazy man to the house, Michaelson went to a mill a short distance away to call help. When Michaelson and the millmen returned, McArthur was found dead near the hut, apparently having been shot from ambush.

A charge of buckshot had entered his body, causing instant death. McArthur had his revolver in one hand and his club in the other.

SIXTEEN INCH GUN IS FAR TOO COSTLY.

New York, June 26.—The ordnance experts of the United States army are said to have practically decided that the 16-inch gun, from which so much was expected, is not practicable as a weapon, and a decision by the war department to abandon the type is anticipated. Only one of those guns has been made so far and that one is now at Sandy Hook. The experiments, while showing that the gun could do all that was expected of it in one way have, nevertheless, convinced the experts that as a weapon it is too costly.

POPE RECEIVES BISHOP O'DEA.

Rome, June 26.—The pope today received in private audience the Rt. Rev. Edward John O'Dea, D.D., bishop of Nesqualdi, Wash., who presented the report of his diocese, the pope manifesting interest in the progress made by the West. Mgr. James Davis, coadjutor bishop of Davenport, Iowa, also was received by the pontiff.

HURLED TO DEATH

Switchman Falls From Scenic Car to the Ground Below.

Was Warned of His Danger But Refused to Heed It.

Chicago, June 26.—In view of several hundred pleasure seekrs, Charles Worthmiller, a switchman, has been thrown from a rapidly moving car on the Scenic railroad at a southside pleasure resort, falling to the ground, fifty feet below. He died soon afterward at the resort's emergency hospital.

When the scenic train departed down the incline, high in the air, Worthmiller and a companion were in the front of the car. As the car was being elevated to the depot, Worthmiller stood up. He was warned of the danger but paid no heed to the caution.

When the car started on its trip down the steep incline, running at a rate of seventy-five miles an hour, the man waved his arms and shouted. The next instant the car bounded up a curve. The jolt caused Worthmiller to lose his balance. He threw his arms out to catch himself, and as he did so struck one of the posts. He was thrown from the car headforemost.

When he was picked up he was unconscious. He had landed on his head fracturing his skull.

A SPECIAL COMMITTEE

To Be Appointed to Consider Swedish-Norwegian Situation.

Stockholm, June 26.—As a result of the negotiations between the different groups of the riksdag, it has been arranged that a special committee to consider the Swedish-Norwegian situation shall be appointed tomorrow to consist of nine conservatives and three moderates from the first chamber and five liberals, five agriculturists and two reformers from the second chamber. It is anticipated that the government's proposal to settle the crisis amicably by arranging a modus vivendi between the two countries will be violently attacked in the upper chamber and generally supported in the lower chamber during the debate tomorrow on the subject.

As a precautionary measure pending the settlement of the crisis, the Swedish council of state has decided not to discharge the time expired men from the navy until further notice.

CLEVELAND HAS $100,000 FIRE LOSS.

Cleveland, June 26.—Fanned by a stiff northwest gale, the flames from a fire which broke out early today in the building occupied by the Wilard Storage Battery company, in the center of the wholesale district in St. Clair street, threatened for a while to do far greater damage than the $100,000 loss incurred. The Willard company's building was gutted and the upper floors of the Fairbanks, Morse & Company's warehouse was destroyed. The roof of another building was on fire and sparks were being carried to other adjacent property, when a terrific thunder storm intervened and checked the blaze.

A DES MOINES SENSATION.

Prominent Lawyer Indicted For Embezzlement of $8,000

Des Moines, Iowa, June 26.—The biggest legal sensation in a long time was created here Saturday, when A. L. Steele, a prominent lawyer and candidate for county attorney, was arrested on a charge of having embezzled $8,000 from the Gladiator Gold Mining company. The indictment was returned this afternoon and Steele's arrest followed. He had no difficult in procuring bail.

The indictment is another chapter in the bitter conflict which has been raging for some time between Steele and the Gladiator people. The company brought suit against Steele for $12,000 alleged to have been wrongfully withheld from it. The case was taken from the jury and the company's appeal is now pending.

Steele declares that his adjudication is a bar to the indictment, and is not afraid of the consequence of a trial upon the merits as charged.

EXPENSIVE VEAL.

Butcher's Man Kills a Calf Worth $1,000.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 26.—Butcher P. D. Kelly of Beaver Meadow, near here, recently acquired a calf of unusually fine breed, valued at $1,000. Saturday he took some friends to see it and found it missing from its pen. He hurried to his butcher who was working at the slaughter house and inquired anxiously if the calf had escaped.

"Not this trip," said the butcher. "There she hangs."

He had found the calf in the slaughter house and not knowing its value thought it had been sent there to be killed, and killed it.

MURDERER ENDS HIS LIFE.

Lewiston, Pa., June 26.—Ellwood Garman, convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of William Murray, was found dead in his cell at Mifflintown today. He committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

FEARFUL FIGHTING MAY OCCUR AT ANY MOMENT IN THE CITIES OF POLAND

SECRETARY HAY HAS ATTACK OF URAEMIA

Responds to Treatment and Is Expected to Recover Rapidly.

SECRETARY JOHN HAY.

Newberry, N. H., June 26.—Secretary of State John Hay was prostrated by an attack of uraemia at his summer home here last evening, but early today his condition had been relieved by a local physician and two specialists who had come from Boston by special train and it was expected that the secretary would be soon in his usual health. The attack which was similar to others experienced by Secretary Hay during recent years, was attributed to a cold contracted on his journey from Washington to Newberry last Saturday. Dr. J. L. Cain, the local physician who was the first one called to attend the sick man said at 9:45 a. m. today:

"Secretary Hay's trouble has been relieved. He will need attention for a day or two. If no complications arise he will soon be as well as usual."

He stated also that Dr. Charles L. Cudder, one of Boston's physicians had returned home this forenoon. The other, Dr. Fred T. Murphy, will remain for a day or two in case unexpected symptoms should develop.

Secretary Hay began to be in pain early yesterday. Remedies which have given relief on previous occasions were applied, but failed to help him and Dr. Cain was called from Newport. He found that in changing from the climate of Washington to the cooler temperature of the Lake Sunapee region, the secretary had takn a severe cold and that organs weakened by previous attacks had been seriously affected. Upon learning this, Mrs. Hay desired that specialists should be summoned at once and as soon as possible Drs. Scudder and Murphy were on the way here by special train from Boston, reaching the bedside of the secretary about midnight. A quick but complete examination of the patient was made and it was seen that his condition, while it was exceedingly painful, was not for the time at least, serious. Under treatment the patient soon showed improvement and the necessity of an operation, which had been discussed, was averted. During the latter part of the night Secretary Hay grew steadily better and by morning had regained the strength which had been exhausted by hours of incessant pain. On account of the organs affected by the cold, however, the physicians decided the secretary should remain in bed for a day or two.

Dr. Scudder then left for home, placing Dr. Murphy in charge, with Dr. Cain assising.

Dr. Cain said today that the usual remedies failed to give relief. "I understand," said Dr. Cain, "that Secretary Hay's present illness is of a different kind from that for which he went abroad for treatment and for which he took the baths at Badnauheim. Should attacks, such as he experienced yesterday, recur frequently, there is no doubt there would be justification for grave anxiety. But Mr. Hay certainly seems to have got clear of all danger in the present instance."

TRAINING SCHOONER GOES TO THE BOTTOM

Sunk By British Steamer and Twenty-Two Cadets Drowned.

Copenhagen, June 26.—A serious disaster occurred last night, near here, when the Danish cadet training schooner Georg Stage was rammed and sank by the British steamer Ancona. The Georg Stage sank in one and one-half minutes. Twenty-two cadets were drowned and fifty-seven rescued.

The boys were all in their bunks at the time of the disaster. The night was overcast, but it was not so dark that objects could not be seen at some distance.

The Ancona was considerably damaged along her water line. The port authorities have placed an embargo on the Ancona, which will remain here until the inquiry into the collision is completed.

Thus far only a single body has been recovered by the divers, who have gone down to the wreck.

The Georg Stage was a schooner of 206 tons register, and was 103 feet long. Apparently she was a training vessel, for the mercantile marine, and was owned by a private firm of Copenhagen.

PRESIDENT HURRIES TO GET AWAY

Washington, June 26.—With farewells and unfinished business, President Roosevelt had a busy day at the executive offices. His scheduled departure for Cambridge, Mass., at 5:30 p. m. led to an order that no callers should be received after luncheon. The morning visitors included members of the diplomatic corps and cabinet. The first of the former contingent was Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister. Among other callers representing foreign governments were Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambasador, and Mr. Jusserand, the French ambassador. Attorney General Moody, Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Representative Burton of Ohio and Representative Allen of New Jersey were among the visitors who remained long enough to tell the president good-bye. Secretary Wilson announced that as soon as the investigation of the charges of leakage in cotton statistics have been completed, he will make a tour of the Western forest reserves.

ESTABLISH NINE-HOUR DAY AND "OPEN" SHOP.

Philadelphia, June 26.—A nine-hour work day and an "open" shop was instituted today in forty-five of the leading establishments in this city, employing, it is said, two-thirds of the local compositors.

This sanction was decided on at a recent meeting here of the United Typothetae, at which master printers from all sections of the country were present. It was taken in anticipation of a demand to be made by the printers for an eight-hour work day, beginning next January. No immediate opposition to the new order is expected. The national convention of printers will be held in Toronto in August, and action will then be decided upon.

FIVE LOCOMOTIVES BURNED.

Evanston, Wyo., June 26.—The Union Pacific round house here was destroyed by fire early today, entailing a loss of $75,000. Five locomotives are reported to have been destroyed, one of them being blown up by an explosion of oil.

JULY DISBURSEMENTS INCREASE $3,500,000.

New York, June 26.—Total dividend and interest payments for July will reach the sum of $140,311,500, according to statistics compiled by the Journal of Commerce. This is a heavy increase over July, 1904, the gain amounting approximately to $3,500,000.

Quite a number of changes appear in the industrial dividend disbursements, which show an increase of $5,300,000, as compared with the January total, and a gain of about $1,000,000 compared with the July payments a year ago.

The Red Flag of Revolt Raised In Many Places.

In Warsaw the Situation Fast Approaches Open Rebellion.

The Affair at Lodz Accidentally Precipitated a Crisis.

St. Petersburg, June 26.—The red flag of revolt has been raised at Warsaw, Kovno and other places in Russian Poland, out of sympathy with the victims of the rioting at Lodz, and so far as these cities are concerned the situation almost approaches the dignity of open rebellion. The news received in St. Petersburg is meager, on account of the vigorous censorship, but it is evident the troops are being resisted, and a repetition of the sanguinary encounters at Lodz is anticipated. The three big socialistic parties in Russian Poland are well organized, but the authorities claim they have no chance of success, single handed. Neither the Jewish socialists, called the bund, nor the Social Democrats are separatists (as are what are known as the Polish socialists), but they are all bitterly opposed to the existing government. The affair at Lodz seemingly has accidentally precipitated a crisis, but the authorities declare there is no machinery for a general insurrection behind it. This, however, may increase the slaughter in crushing the outbreak. Many people believe that Governor General Maximovitch is hardly equal to the task, but so long as the disturbance is confined to Russian Poland, the authorities believe it can be kept in hand. The main danger lies in its spread to socialistic organizations in other parts of Russia, with which those in Russian Poland are closely allied. In the meantime the Caucausus is aflame with an insurrection on a big scale. The Mussulmans are actually besieging the Armenians in some of the towns. Peasant uprisings have also recurred in several provinces, notably Kharkoff, where the estates of half a dozen nobles have been burned, and where the workmen resisted Cossacks with arms, wounding several of the soldiers.

Kovno, Russia, June 26.—A mob of 1,000 persons surrounded and attacked the police station and the governor general's palace today. All the windows were broken before the rioters were overpowered by the police. Five policemen were wounded. A detachment of dragoons finally arrived on the scene and dispersed the rioters.

Warsaw, June 26, 2 p. m.—The Jewish districts are now in full revolt. The shops and stores are closed, and traffic has ceased. The street cars have been overturned to form the nucleus of barricades. Great crowds are assembling in the streets, and the ugly temper of both the populace and the troops threatens to break out in bloodshed at any moment.

The city has the appearance of a military encampment. Infantry and cossacks are bivouacked in the streets, and patrols are circulating everywhere. The shops largely are closed, but cabs and street cars are still running. Barricades have been erected at the corner of Ogrodowa and Zelazua streets, and occasionally the crack of the rifle is heard as strikers shoot at men going to work.

The victims of last week's outbreak total over 1,200. Thus far the bodies of 343 Jews and 218 Christians have been buried. The wounded number over 700. Some semblance of order has been restored and the workmen are gradually returning to the factories.

Gen. Maximovitch, the governor general of Warsaw, was appointed March 5. He is a former hetman (or chief) of the Doncossacks. On March 30 an imperial rescript was issued [illegible] Maximovitch. On April [illegible] summoned the [illegible] papers to [illegible] freely and [illegible] especially [illegible] inviting the [illegible] of any disorders. Maximovitch [illegible] vers, pistols [illegible] the whole [illegible] tration. [illegible] governor general [illegible] middle of April and soon afterwards it was reported that he had tendered his resignation but had been prevailed on to retain office. On May 1 a bomb doubtless intended for the governor general was exploded in Miodowa street at noon, killing twenty-three persons including three women, one student and two school boys. The governor general was attending services at the cathedral a few yards away from the scene of the explosion. Many threats have been made against the governor general particularly since the May day disturbances.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Contractor Says Elephants Can Walk on New Pavement.

New Sidewalks Needed on First Street to Match Pavement.

"The elephants can walk on First street pavement on circus day," said P. McDonnell, the contractor, this morning, as he watched the workmen rapidly putting the creosote blocks into place.

"I am trying to get the pavement complete by July 4, and I expect to have it all done, with the exception of one block, in time to allow the circus parade to go along here on July 3."

The workmen started laying the blocks at the corner of Fourth avenue west this morning, and within a day or two will have the section from Third to Fifth avenue completed.

The new pavement has, apparently, made a good impression on the property owners along the street, and many favorable comments have been heard on the work that is being done.

"What we want now to make First street as fine a business street as any in the city is some new sidewalks," said one of the property owners this morning.

"There are some old wooden sidewalks along the street that should be removed. With as fine a new pavement as this is going to make, and with property along this street worth $400 to $500 a foot, it is a shame that some of these old wooden sidewalks should be allowed to say. There is just enough of the plank walk to mar the appearance of the street, and when the new pavement is complete, I hope to see the planks replaced with concrete walks just as soon as it can be done. They don't have plank walks on Superior street through the business section, and we ought to get rid of them on First street just as soon as we can. We will have as fine or a finer pavement than they have on Superior street, and we ought to have concrete sidewalks along the street.

"That also applies to the avenues running from Superior street to First street between Lake avenue and Fifth avenue west. They are getting new pavements laid, and the old wooden walks should be torn up and replaced with cement as soon as it can be done."

EDISON HURT BY RADIUM

Inventor's Eyes and Stomach Affected Seriously By Experiments.

New York, June 26.—Thomas A. Edison's sight has been impaired by radium. His stomach also has been affected. So serious are the effects that he has been forced to discontinue his experiments with the mysterious mineral. His assistant has died as a result of the experiments. Mr. Edison made this disclosure today in discussing the wonders of radium.

"I have hunted for this new substance in a thousand places," he said, "and chemically examined a great number of specimens of ore from different mines and mountains, but thus far have not succeeded in finding it in any quantity. I have, however, reached some decided conclusions on the subject.

"Radium is similar to X-rays in its power to pass through substances, and its effects are apparently as injurious to investigators. This is especially true of the X-rays.

"Radium is a mighty dangerous substance to experiment with, as I found out to my cost. I am even now suffering from the effects of it. It damaged one of my eyes seriously and has also caused me great trouble with my stomach. My wife became so exercised over my condition as a result of studying it that I promised her to quit for a while at least.

"Its effect on me was the most mysterious thing that I ever had occur. I found after a time that my eyesight was beginning to trouble me. That was the first symptom. I noticed that whenever I walked along the street and tried to read a sign a little distance away I would see double. After a while I found that every time I attempted to read it gave me a severe headache. This set me to worrying quite a bit, as before I always had remarkably good eyesight.

"Mrs. Edison insisted that I was getting old and needed spectacles. Well, she might have been right about both statements. Anyway I went to an oculist and had him examine my eyes.

"They stumped him. He puzzled over the case for a long time and finally confessed to me that he did not know what was the matter. He said it was the most remarkable eye case that he ever had come across. One eye, he said, was perfectly normal and all right, and the other about a foot out of focus.

"Besides the affliction radium has brought on me, my assistant died about a year ago from its baneful effects. It first attacked him in the right hand. The surgeons were obliged to amputate it. Then they had to cut off the limb again at the elbow, and still again at the shoulder. Then it attacked his left arm, and that was amputated in two places. Then he died.

"Now his brother, who also is my assistant, is suffering from radium effects in his breast and arms in the form of red discolorations. This seems to me very strange, too, because he has not been making any X-ray experiments for more than a year. He ceased the laboratory work with radium absolutely more than twelve months ago, for fear of this very thing.

DUCK JOINS THE CLUB.

Mrs. Bradley Martin Plays Joke In Paris.

New York, June 26.—A Paris cable to the World says: Mrs. Bradley Martin, Jr., has achieved this season an undoubted social triumph as much among the authentic French noblesse as among the American leaders of the world of amusement.

At the Paris Polo club there is an unpretending duck, which for some inscrutable reason is allowed to waddle about among the luncheon tents, gobbling morsels thrown to him. One day of frequent showers the Duc de Biscola remarked that the duck was the only really happy being on the grounds. Mrs. Bradley Martin immediately exclaimed: "Suppose we make him a member." She had the committee immediately summoned to her tent and the duck was solemnly voted into full rights and privileges, with an authentic card of membership made in the name of "Monsieur Cassimir" and hung around his neck. Champagne was opened amid great merriment and every newcomer was presented to the new member who quacked contentedly and was fondled by two princesses, three duchesses and innumerable countesses and baronesses.

Mrs. Bradley Martin, Jr., is one of the women most active and enthusiastic in trying to form a Paris women's four-in-hand club on American lines. The plan at first met strenuous opposition, but the American woman finally won the considerable support of such French grandes dames as the duchess d'Uzes, who is absolutely necessary to such a scheme, so there is every prospect that next season Mrs. Bradley Martin will have the satisfaction of finding her idea fully realized.

STABBING CASE

Mike Manella Accused of Assault Upon Carl Hanson.

Ittalian Fruit Dealer Being Tried on Serious Charge.

The preliminary hearing of Mike Manella, the Italian fruit dealer, who is charged with stabbing Carl Hanson, is being held today in the municipal court.

Alexander Marshall is defending Manella, and C. E. Adams has charge of the prosecution in the absence of County Attorney McClintock.

The offense with which Manella is charged, is assault in the second degree, and the affair out of which it arose took place about ten days ago on West Third street near Thirty-ninth avenue.

Manella was driving a fruit wagon at the time, and Carl Hanson with some other young men happened to pass in the vicinity. In some manner a quarrel arose between Hanson and Manella. Hanson's story is that he bought some bananas and finding them bad, took them back, whereupon the boy in the wagon hit him with a potato. He was carrying a fish-pole in his hand and he poked at the boy with the fishpole. He and the boy then clinched on the ground near the wagon, and during the melee Hanson was stabbed in the back with some sharp instrument.

Manella admits that there was a quarrel, but he denies that he was in any way the aggressor, or that there was a knife used during the affray.

Dr. David Graham, who attended to Hanson's wound, testified that there was a cut about four inches long in Hanson's back, which had evidently been inflicted by a sharp knife which was probably held in the hands of some person who stood behind Hanson at the time.

Hanson himself, when placed upon the stand, testified that he did not know who stabbed him, or that he was even aware he had been stabbed at the time it was done. He said he felt a sharp pain in his back, and it was not until he felt the blood trickling from the wound, that he realized what had happened.

The hearing was continued until this afternoon, and will probably occupy the greater part of the afternoon session of court.

Manella is a well known figure among the Italians of the city. He formerly owned a small fruit store on First street, and had several street sprinkling contracts. He is reputed to be moderately wealthy.

MRS. TOOMEY'S STAR WITNESS

Maid Eliza to Tell of Interesting Love Scene.

St. Paul, June 26.—Eliza, the maid of Mrs. Eleanor M. Toomey, arrived in St. Paul Saturday and will be one of the witnesses called by the plaintiff in rebuttal in her $25,000 breach of promise suit against Dr. Joseph W. Bettingen. The maid was taken to the home of the friend in St. Paul where she will be kept until her turn arrives to testify in behalf of her former mistress.

She is looked upon as a star witness and there was joy in the Toomey establishment at the Merchant's over her arrival. It is claimed that she will testify to being an occupant of the carriage in which Mrs. Toomey drove to meet Dr. Bettingen at the French Catholic church, Wabasha and Exchange streets, a few evenings before she left for San Francisco in order that Mr. Toomey might get a divorce quietly.

"I said that I would meet him," said Mrs. Toomey, "and with my maid Eliza drove to the church. Dr. Bettingen met us with a carriage and we got out of our carriage and went into his carriage. We then started to drive about the town and drove for an hour.

"Dr. Bettingen then protested his love for me. He said he could not live without me. He said that he had never loved another woman in the world and never could love again as he did. Eliza heard him say all this.

"Finally he begged me to go away to San Francisco and stay until the trouble blew over. He also spoke to Eliza saying: 'Eliza, I want Mrs. Toomey to go away until this is quieted down. I love her better than any woman that ever lived, and as there is a God above me I intend to marry her.'

"Then Eliza said to him:

"'Dr. Bettingen you took an oath before God. Do you mean this and do you believe in God?'

"'Yes, Eliza, I mean it,' said Dr. Bettingen, 'for I am as good a Catholic as you or Mrs. Toomey.'

"He then took me in his arms and kissed me."

It was hoped by the plaintiff that Mrs. McDermott, who was present when Dr. Bettingen first called on Mrs. Toomey in her apartments, could be brought to St. Paul to testify. It was intimated Saturday by those connected with the plaintiff's side of the case that much of the evidence had been withheld for rebuttal, and that several new witnesses would be called to the stand.

Mrs. Toomey occupies a suite of rooms on the third floor of the Merchtnts, together with a maid and her companion, Miss Julia Fleming of New York. During her stay her friends have been attentively sending her large quantities of flowers. She receives few callers, and declines to see any men.

All hope of either side securing the services of W. C. Toomey as a witness has vanished. When the papers were first served in the suit, Mrs. Toomey says she received a letter from him in which he hinted that he would aid her in the trouble. During the ten weeks which have intervened Mr. Toomey has put several miles between him and the breach of promise suit. It was stated when questioned Saturday evening as to where Mr. Toomey was, Mrs. Toomey replied that she thought he was in Ceylon. She has heard he left the United States for good.

THE POPE FORBIDS

Monasteries Doing Business In Opposition to Rome Hotels.

Practice Is Said to Have Been Prolific of Abuses.

New York, June 26.—A Rome cable to the World says: The hotelkeepers of Rome have just won a big victory for which they have been trying for years, even under the reign of the late pope, who always turned a deaf ear to their complaints. Pious X. has just issued a decree to all the houses kept by the religious orders in Rome absolutely forbidding that visitors to the Eternal City be entertained as guests in monasteries and convents unless they are connected with the orders in question.

It has been customary from time immemorial for many Roman Catholics from all parts of the world, who came to pay a visit to Rome to seek their board and lodging while in the city at some one of the many religious institutions which made it a practice of receiving such guests in order to turn an honest penny. Excepting the convents under strict inclosure, and some of the larger male monasteries, there was hardly a religious institution of Rome which did not take in boarders.

From an ecclesiastical point of view the practice involved great abuses, not only because it prevented the observance of the religious rules by monks or nuns who were busy entertaining their guests, but also because in many instances male visitors were received in institutions kept by female orders, occasionally giving rise to scandalous gossip.

The hotelkeepers of Rome on their part felt that the competition in the business of keeping boarders was ruinous to them-as the rates paid in all such religious institutions by the temporary guests were much lower than those of hotels, and thus created a great demand for the accommodation. Several times they had sent petitions to the late pope complaining about the matter, but their complaints had always remained unanswered.

A few months ago a similar complaint reached Pius X. who promptly ordered an investigation which disclosed that lay people were not the only offenders on this point, but that many prelates and bishops and cardinals from abroad made it a practice to stop at the houses of the religious orders. By the new decree of the pope even the prelates hereafter will be enjoined from such practice unless they happen to have some ecclesiastical connection with the order in question, and in such a case their entertainment will have to be free of charge.

The policy of Pius X. in enlisting the support of the Italian Catholics in favor of the government's candidate at the last election, which resulted in the defeat of the extremists in the national parliament, has been pursued by the pope in the municipal elections which are now taking place in all the cities of the kingdom. The recent local elections at Florence resulted in an overwhelming victory for the government candidates, owing to the support they received from the Catholic voters, and it is the pope's intention to follow the same policy in every city of Italy.

Already great activity is displayed by the Roman Union, which numbers 20,000 Catholic voters and which will decide the elections of the municipal councilors and the mayor, soon to be held in this city, in favor of the government. When patriarch of Venice Pius X. took a personal interest in the municipal elections of that city, and insisted on all Catholics voting for the government's candidates, notwithstanding the apparent strained relations between the government officials and the vatican authorities.

As a consequence the Venetian municipal council was always favorable to the church authorities, and during the present pope's administration of the Venetian diocese never was a measure adopted in the least objectionable to the church authorities. Now that, as head of the church, he is in a special way the bishop of Rome, Pius X. has determined to take a hand in the municipal elections of the city and to dislodge from the capitol the extremists who have held the upper hand for several years. In this he has come to a perfect understanding with the government, and orders have been issued to the officers of the Roman union to cooperate with the monarchial and moderate parties in electing the right kind of candidates.

Pius X. has, however, disappointed Catholic politicians in that he has made it understood that, contrary to the custom in vogue under his predecessors, no funds of the vatican will be allowed for election purposes. They are to be expended only for religious uses. On being remonstrated with he suggested to the leaders that they apply to the candidates themselves, "many of whom are known to be rich and can well afford to spend some money for their own election."

IS A GOOD FELLOW.

Knife River Landlord Befriends Soaked Fishermen.

Three Duluth young men feel that they almost owe their lives to the kindness of Landlord Pepper of the Knife River hotel. The trio went fishing Saturday afternoon, and chose Knife river, about ten miles from the Iron Range tracks, as a spot for their night's camping ground. As everybody knows it rained, and rained hard Saturday night. The Duluthians, trusting to luck for good weather, had no blankets or tent with them. They were out in the rain all night, and they got wet, just about as wet as they could possibly get. With the first streak of dawn they started for Knife River station, and arrived there in a half-drowned condition, having to wade in water up to their waists for a considerable distance. They made their way to the hotel conducted by Mr. Pepper and were there treated like princes of the royal blood. They had no change of clothing, so Mr. Pepper rounded up a dozen railroad men and told them of the need of the strangers. Dry clothes enough for ten were immediately produced, and the unhappy trio were soon made more comfortable. Warm food, dry clothes and the finest treatment soon put them on the road to content again, and now they mention Mr. Pepper in their prayers. They didn't catch any fish.

NEGRO SENTENCED

To Prison For One Thousand Years.

Waco, Tex., June 26.—Loud expressions of amazement greet the statement that Lee Robertson, a negro, has been sentenced to 1,000 years and a day for attempting an assault. Had the deed been accomplished a death sentence would have been promptly recorded. Mrs. Alonzo Robinson, the victim, was badly hurt in her struggle in self defense, but will recover.

Lee asked the court to sentence him so that the term might at once begin. He will feel safer behind the bars, and cares little for the long season of his confinement.

Excursion on Lake.

The members of the naval reserves have arranged for what promises to be a most enjoyable excursion on the lake tomorrow evening.

The steamer America has been chartered for the occasion. It will leave Booth's dock, on Lower Lake avenue, at 8 o'clock, taking the trip out in the lake and around the horn, and returning about 10 o'clock. La Brosse's Naval Militia band, and two quartets of stringed instruments will furnish the music, and refreshments will be served on board the boat, which will be appropriately decorated in flag ship style.

The excursion is the last entertainment to be given by the reserves until next winter, and the proceeds will be devoted toward purchasing uniforms for the band, and to paying off the debt that has been incurred.

Burrows Prices Bursted!

The moment the Columbia struck Duluth, clothing prices were hit by a bomb, and high profits went a-flying to come down in a very dilapidated condition.

With the prices of wool soaring to heights not known in many years (Wisconsin raw wool, for instance, is 26c per pound against 15c a year ago), you can doubly appreciate the feast we prepared for you.

That you do appreciate it is shown by the way you have thronged our aisles from morn till night, ever since we re-opened the old "Great Eastern" store with our shingle over the entrance.

Keep a-coming! The more you help us to make "The Columbia of Duluth" an instantaneous success, the better will we do for you in coupling the highest qualities to the most moderate prices, not only during special sales, but 365 days of the year.

Expenses are high here. We have heard you kick about rents and retail prices. We'll see to it that you can at least buy clothing for man and boy fully as low as in the Twin Cities or Chicago.

The young man who wishes to have a little extra spare money for a good time on the Fourth of July, had better dress up at the Columbia Sale of the Burrows stock.

Convention of Northwestern Coal Dealers Opens Tuesday.

Sessions Will Close Thursday With Banquet at Spalding.

The fifth annual convention of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association will open in Duluth tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, in the Commercial club rooms, with an address of welcome by Mayor M. B. Cullum. Delegates will begin to arrive this evening, and by tomorrow night it is expected that in the neighborhood of 800 or 1,000 of them, from various Northwestern points, including Milwaukee and Chicago, will be here. The sessions will continue for three days, coming to an end Thursday evening with a banquet at the Spalding hotel.

The program will be carried out as originally arranged, although the committee having the affair in charge announced a few days ago that instead of the boat ride about the bay there would be a reception, attended by the mayor and members of the city council, at the Commercial club. The local committee agreed to this arrangement, but later E. M. Ferguson, president of the Commercial club, was requested to change the program back to its original form. This means that the reception will not be held. Instead, the delegates and their families, if any of them have their families with them, as it is expected they will, will be given a ride about the harbor on the steamer Newsboy, Thursday afternoon. They will be shown all points of interest, and probably several stops, one of them at the Zenith furnace, will be made.

All the business sessions will be held at the Commercial club rooms. The response to the mayor's address will be made by Senator M. Crane of Cooperstown, N. D. Following this will come the reading of the annual reports by President C. M. Morse, Secretary G. H. Reeves and Treasurer George J. Fullerton. Committees will also be appointed.

In the afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, Delos Hull of Chicago will read a paper on "The Cost of Handling Coal at Retail," followed by questions by dealers and answers by the speaker. J. B. Cavanaugh of Chicago will read a paper on "Refusing Coal in Transit and at Its Destination," speaking for the shippers of the Northwest. F. E. Crandall of Mankato will respond to this.

Ernest Pratt of Chicago will speak on "Co-operative Concerns," and there will be replies by J. K. Dering, W. L. McCaulese and H. E. Smith.

The Wednesday morning session was to have opened at 10 o'clock with an impartial talk by Commissioner F. B. Sipp of Chicago, on "Short Weights in Coal," but it is now understood that Mr. Sipp will be unable to be present. John M. Warnock of Minneapolis, will read a paper, subject; "Abuse of Quotations and Shipments by the Producers to the Consumers, and Its Effect on the Regular Trade." Responses by H. N. Taylor and W. S. Bogle. C. L. Dering of Chicago, will read a paper on "The Abuses Producers Are Subjected to by the Dealers."

At the afternoon session Hon. C. J. Traxler, attorney for the association, will deliver an address on association work. The rest of the session will be taken up by routine business.

This will be the first time the association has ever met in Duluth. The gathering will be quite an important one, and will, it is believed, prove beneficial to the city in more ways than one. The delegates nearly all have more or less to do in a business way with local concerns, and being able to meet them at this time, and to view the mammoth coal docks at the Head of the Lakes, is sure to have a good effect.

An idea new to Duluth will be introduced during the convention. The name of every delegate present will be printed on a paper and each name will be given a number. A corresponding number will be pinned to the lapel of the delegate's coat, and in this manner everyone of them may be readily identified without questions by a person having one of the slips of paper.

Board of Review Listens to Protests Against Assessments.

Session Opened With Rush of Indignant Property Owners.

Protests against personal property assessments came so thick and fast this morning, that the indignant owners had to be given checks after the manner adopted in barber shops, and their cases were disposed of in the order of their coming.

The board of review, composed of Mayor Cullum, Comptroller McCormick and City Assessor Jackson, met this morning for the purpose of hearing the protests, in the city council chamber, and it will continue in session all of this week, or until all of the protests have been disposed of.

All owners of personal property have been notified by postal card of the amount of their assessment, and they will be taxed on the basis of this, unless they can convince the members of the board that their assessments are excessive and should be lowered.

This morning about fifty cases were disposed of by the board, and the work was taken up again promptly at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The protests were coming in a little more slowly this afternoon, and by tomorrow it is hoped to have the majority of them disposed of.

Many citizens kick against the assessment not because it is excessive, but because they feel like taking the chance of having their taxes reduced. Such cases are given scant consideration by the board.

In other instances a mistake may have been made in the figures, or the assessor may, for some reason, have put an excessive estimate on the value of the property. There are still other cases where the property has been assessed to the wrong person, or is claimed to have been.

Such cases as these have to be gone into very thoroughly in order to avoid injustice.

STREAMS ARE BOISTEROUS

Lester River Overflows Banks and Does Much Damage.

The creeks running into Lake Superior, in the vicinity of Duluth, were full to the level of their banks yesterday, owing to the heavy rains of Saturday night.

Lester River in particular acted in a most boisterous manner. The small wagon and footbridge, below the Duluth & Iron Range tracks, was carried away, and the river overflowed its banks in a number of places.

Out near Colbyville three deserted logging camps were carried away, together with a strip of the bank about thirty feet in width, which caved into the stream.

Several farms in Colbyville were flooded and considerable damage done to the young crops.

In some places the river rose from fifteen to twenty feet above its usual level, and at Colbyville one or two of the bridges were buried completely from sight.

ceased, and opinions on the second race were not backed by financial speculation.

DAMAGED BY THE RAIN

Bridges on the Alger-Smith Road Swept Away.

The heavy rain storm of Saturday damaged the Alger-Smith railroad, which leads eastward from Knife river, to the extent of several thousand dollars, and no trains will be able to run over the line until repairs are made. It will probably be ten days before the tracks are in condition for use.

The bridge over the Gooseberry river was washed away, and half of the bridge over the Knife river was destroyed by the rushing water. Knife river raised fifteen feet above its normal level. The roadbed was damaged in several places by the action of the water.

Opening of the Olympia.

Great crowds attended the opening of the new Olympia Fruit and Confectionery company, corner of Lake avenue and Superior street, Saturday afternoon and evening. Mars & George the proprietors, were kept busy receiving congratulations on the handsome appearance and up-to-date equipment of their new store, which makes a strikingly attractive appearance on one of Duluth's most important corners. Mars & George are also proprietors of the Minnesota Candy Kitchen, 111 West Superior street. Their new store is considered one of the finest in its line in the Northwest.

AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS

Ought Not to Be Imposed on Filipinos, Says Taft.

New Haven, June 26.—Secretary Taft addressed the students of the Yale law school today, saying in part:

One of the most useful results of our recent territorial expansion for those who have had to do with uniting our new possessions with this country and adjusting certain of the Spanish codes, which we found in force in Porto Rico and the Philippines to the new American sovereignty has been the comparative study made necessary of the two great systems of the law the Roman or civil law and the Anglo-Saxon or common law.

After referring to the institution of the writ of habeas corpus, trial by jury, or any other rights of preserving the rights of the individual against oppression of the government, Secretary Taft, said: "We have no right to force upon Porto Ricans or the Filipinos, institutions of our own which have proved of the highest benefit to us, unless we can see, on other than mere sentimental grounds connected with our own history that such institutions will now prove beneficial to them in their present condition.

Trial by jury has been adopted in Porto Rico. It has not been adopted in the Philippines. I do not think it too much to say, however, that it has proven to be a failure thus far in Porto Rico. The first question was, in the Philippines, shall it be adopted in civil cases? It would seem unwise. It is by no means clear that in our jurisprudence, trial by jury in civil cases would relieve civil suits and would not, I think with proper appeal, deprive any litigant of an impartial hearing.

THE SHERIFF IS DIRECTED

To Enforce the Betting Laws of Indiana By Governor.

Indianapolis, June 26.—On receipt of a letter from Mayor Holtzman informing him that the city authorities had no power to stop pool selling at the fair grounds during the races this and next week, Governor Hanley today sent a letter to Edward Sourbier, sheriff of this county in which he says:

"I believe the honorable mayor is mistaken as to his authority in the premises, and have so written him, but he will perhaps adhere to his interpretation of the law. I therefore respectfully request and direct that you take such action as may be necessary to enforce the law on the state fair grounds."

The sheriff has replied verbally with the statement that he would do what he thought necessary to have the laws obeyed. Under the Indiana law there is a question as to whether the governor has any authority to direct the sheriff under the circumstances.

TORNADO BELIEVED TO HAVE KILLED THREE.

New York, June 26.—Three men are believed to have been killed when the three upper stories of an apartment house in One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street, between Broadway and Riverside drive, were blown down in a terrific thunder storm late today. The names of two of those supposed to be dead are John Lawler and James Russ, workmen. The high wind broke dozens of plate glass windows in Harlem stores and in that section.

BID PASTOR GOD SPEED

Rev. Elmquist and Bethany Congregation Together For Last Time.

Last night Rev. A. F. Elmquist appeared for the last time as pastor of the Bethany Lutheran church, Twenty-third avenue west and Third streets and tonight with his wife will be tendered a reception at the church, after which they will leave for Racine. He will attend the synodical meeting at Racine and from there will go to Minneapolis to take his new charge, St. John's English Luthern church.

Last evening he bade farewell to his congregation as a whole, but hoped he would have the opportunity to bid them good bye individually. He spoke feelingly of the intimacy which had grown up between him and his congregation at Bethany church and said that the greatest regret which he felt at leaving is the breaking of ties that have bound him affectionately both to individuals and to his congregation at Bethany church He said that he hoped his departure from Duluth would not cause a break in these ties, for he valued them too much to desire that, but hoped that at the most they would be only stretched a little.

The departing pastor dwelt on the joys and sorrows which he and his congregation have borne together, of the joy of birth and marriage and the grief of death through which he has ministered unto them.

Mr. Elmquist almost broke down at times in telling this good bye to his parishoners and they in turn were visibly affected.

MUST PAY FOR HORSES

Judge Dibell Files Findings In Hammel Suit to Recover.

Judge Dibell has filed his findings in the case brought by L. Hammel & Company against Morris O'Brien, D. S. Turnbull and the Samuel C. Jackson Lumber company, in which he holds that the Hammel company is entitled to judgment against D. S. Turnbull and the Samuel C. Jackson Lumber company in the sum of $825 with interest at six per cent from September 5,1903, together with the costs and disbursements of the action. The court directs that the judgment shall not determine the relations between the three defendants as to the promissory notes involved or to the respective liabilities between thmselves.

The case is one in which L. Hammel & Company sought to recover on some promissory notes given by O'Brien & Turnbull for payment for some horses used in logging camps and which it was alleged that the Samuel C. Jackson Lumber company indorsed.

O'Brien & Turnbull claimed that in a settlement with the lumber company, with whom they had a logging contract the latter was to assume certain obligations among which was the indebtedness for the horses.

The lumber company claimed no knowledge of the horse transactions and alleged that the indorsement was an accommodation indorsement.

Judge Dibell finds that O'Brien & Turnbull executed Sept. 5, 1903, to L. Hammel & Company a promissory note of $400 due May 14, 1904, with interest at six per cent, which was indorsed, before coming into possession of the horse dealers, by the Samuel C. Jackson Lumber company.

The court further finds that July 15, 1904, O'Brien & Turnbull executed another note of $425 to the horse dealers, indorsed also by the lumber company, and that no part of either note has ever been paid.

The delivery of six horses to the Samuel C. Jackson Lumber company, constitutes, the court finds, the consideration passing from L. Hammel & Company for the notes and the lumber company is not found to be an accommodation endorser or a surety for O'Brien & Turnbull.

PUBLISHERS TESTIFY AGAINST PAPER TRUST.

Milwaukee, June 26.—All the newspaper publishers of Milwaukee have been cited to appear in the hearing of the case of the federal government against the German Paper company. L. T. Boyd, representing the Milwaukee Journal, today, told of the differences in prices now and before the organization of the General Paper company. He testified that in 1899, the last contract made for paper prior to organization of the paper company the price was $1.70 per hundred pounds and that now the price was $2.25. Before the year 1900, contract bids were received from all over the country, but since the General Paper company organized only one bid was received.

ENGINEER IS KILLED

T. E. Mitchell Meets Death In Accident on the Missabe.

T. E. Mitchell, a locomotive engineer, was killed in an accident on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad this morning. His engine fell through the track into the Mountain Iron mine at the village of Mountain Iron, and he was crushed to death. The fireman escaped uninjured. Details of the accident are very meager, but the accident is said to have been caused by the heavy rains washing away a portion of the roadbed.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPH.

Lectures and Demonstrations Are Attracting Crowds.

The free lecture and demonstration on the Marconi wireless telegraph at Steinway hall Saturday night attracted a large crowd, and a great deal of interest was manifested in this very interesting subject. The instruments on which the demonstrations were given were the same as are used on all ocean steamships, and the lecturer told of some wonderful experiences with wireless telegraphy, and how thousands of lives and vasts sums of money have been saved by the use of the system. More lectures and demonstrations will be given at the same place tonight, tomorrow night and Wednesday night.

FIGHT TO FINISH

M. M. Gasser Proposes to Run His Own Business.

Tells Why He Has Broken From Grocers' Association.

"For years I have been endeavoring to run my own business. I have finally cut ties which for so long have been obnoxious to me and it is now up to the court to decide whether I can hereafter run my own business or whether that business must be dictated to me by an association."

This was the opening statement of M. M. Gasser this afternoon when asked if there was anything he cared to say about the action he has instituted in district court against the members of the retail grocers' association, the wholesalers and jobbers, charging a conspiracy under the state laws.

"It has come to a pass where it means the survival of the fittest. Either I must do business my own way or it will break me.

"I have attempted on former occasions to break away from the association, but through threats of boycott and of ruining my business the association has forced me into line again.

"This time I am going at it differently. The whole matter will be aired in the courts.

"There is only one good feature about the association and that is its credit system. This system has merit.

"Members of the association declare there is no combination or conspiracy to maintain prices. Just look at this and you fill see that the grocers belonging to the association have been 'unconsciously' breaking the law."

Mr. Gasser at this point produced what purported to be a copy of the price list fixed by the price list committee of the association and which gave the following commodities and prices for strict observance of the members:

|---|---|
| Granulated sugar, 14 lbs. | $1.00 |
| 7 lbs | 50 |
| 3½ lbs | 25 |
| Package coffee, per pkg. | 18 |
| 2 pkgs | 35 |
| 6 pkgs | 1.00 |
| Kerosene oil, per gal. | 13 |
| 5 gal | 60 |
| Quaker oats, per pkg. | 15 |
| 2 pkgs | 25 |
| Gold dust washing powder, per pkg | 25 |
| First patent flour, 98 lbs. | 3.70 |
| 49 lbs | 1.85 |
| 24½ lbs | 95 |
| 6 bars | 25 |

"These prices are for the following brands: Gold Medal, Pillsbury' Best, Universal, Zenota, Commander, Imperial, Primus Dakota, Best of All, Hiawatha, Golden Link and Headlight. All standard brands of soap, 12 oz.. 05

The schedule concludes with the following words: "$10 for cutting these prices. Articles on the list are not to be advertised in any way."

"I think that is about all that I can explain or all there is to my stand in this matter," concluded Mr. Gasser.

This afternoon Judge Cant signed an order directed to all the defendants named in the complaint filed by M. M. Gasser & company and commanding them to appear and show cause why an injunctional order restraining them from doing the things mentioned in the complaint should not be issued. It is understood that the order is returnable one week from next Saturday. This order to show cause was issued in lieu of any temporary restraining order as was understood from Mr. Arnold's explanation this morning.

The things which Mr. Gasser recites in his complaint and against which he desires the grocers and others be restrained is from picketing his place of business, scattering handbills, declaring a boycott, attempting to influence his customers to keep away, attempting to influence the jobbers from selling him goods or from destroying the credit which he now enjoys with the jobbers and compelling him to pay cash.

Mr. Gasser also states that he fears the wholesalers will endeavor to turn him off by declaring that they have not the goods asked, or that they will discriminate against him by fixing prices in advance of those quoted members of the association. Against such possible practice he also demands a restraining order.

OPENED FOR SETTLEMENT

On Aug. 15 Will Be Fond du Lac Reservation Lands.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Acting Commissioner Fimple of the general land office has announced that on Aug. 15, 37,800 acres of Indian lands lying in the Duluth, Cass Lake and Crookston land districts, will be thrown open to settlement. These lands now belong to the Fond du Lac, White Earth, Red Lake and Chippewa Indians, and are thrown open to white settlement under the acts of congress of Aug. 14, 1889, and June 17, 1892.

No squatting will be permitted upon these lands prior to the date set for the opening. Considerable of the land is known as cut over land, and all are said to be good agricultural lands.

GALE ON RIVER TOO STRONG FOR PRACTICE.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 26.—A westerly gale on the river today made the water too rough for strenuous practice of the three crews. On the east side of the river, Georgetown was the only crew that went out. They tried to cross to the west shore to take advantage of the sheltered strip under the mountains, but the passage was found too dangerous, and the crew returned to the east shore where they were able to do a limited amount of work. All the Pennsylvania crews got out and skirted the west shore for miles up the river.

VILLAGE IS IN A WRANGLE

Because Plants Were Not Allowed In Methodist Church.

Birmingham, Mich., June 26.—This village is literally riven from center to circumference by a church and school wrangle. Some of the members of the Methodist church objected to having flowers and bunting used in the decorations of the church building for the graduating exercises of the school, but it rapidly grew beyond that until it came to a point where the minister's wife made charges of forgery and threatened the arrest of a member of the school board.

The graduating exercises have been held in that church every year for a quarter of a century, and flowers have always been used. But this year the people declared that when the junior class held their services there they spoiled some plush chairs by watering the flowers.

Finally the church people consented to the use of potted plants. Just before the graduating day Chairman Bookham of the church board changed his mind and declared to Miss Mary Huibert, a member of the class, that they could not take even one potted plant into the church. Then the war began in earnest.

The members of the class declared that they would not stand for a graduation without either flowers or plants, and the school authorities made a quick shift and rented Library hall for the occasion, where the eight members of the class were duly graduated amid a blaze of floral and potted plant glory.

Rev. S. R. Williams of the Methodist church was on the program to do the praying, but Clarence J. West, the only boy member of the class, wrote a note to him saying his services would not be required, and Rev. Maxwell of the Presbyterian church made the prayer in his stead. The note was delivered by William McClellan, a member of the school board, and when the Methodist minister's wife saw it, she flew down to see McClellan, charged him with forging West's name and threatened to have him arrested, and was only induced to go home when he personally acknowledged that he signed the note.

Next Rev. Williams accused Prof. Bellis of going through all the school rooms, asking all the children who were Methodists to hold up their hands, and then telling them that he should be ashamed to be a Methodist. Prof. Bellis denied this, and said that all he did was to announce the change in the program.

Mrs. McDonald, with whom young West boards, is a Methodist, and she told him that if he wrote that note he could "pack up his duds and get out of her house."

The ladies of the Methodist church were to have served ice cream in the basement on the night of the exercises to make a little church money out of the affair. The school children got up an ice ceram sale of their own on the lawn around the library, and went all over town asking citizens to boycott the Methodist ice cream sale and patronize theirs. The school children claim that the Methodist ladies didn't sell a single dish, while the children sold "slathers" of it.

What complicates the affair and adds to the bitterness is that many of the school people are also Methodists, including some of the seven girl graduates. Pressure has been brought to bear on the latter, and there is talk now that they will repudiate the note that young West wrote. West says they talked it over and it seemed to be the feeling of all of them that they did not want Rev. Williams' services. The end of the fun is not yet in sight.

Prof. Bellis has secured a statement signed by the four teachers, Mabel B. Koontz, Zoe Spenser, Margaret E. Murray and Margaret Pepper, as follows: "As near as I can remember Mr. Bellis said in my room the following: 'I wish to make an announcement about the commencement exercises, which will be held in Library hall instead of the Methodist church. The Methodists have decided that we cannot use bunting or potted plants for decorations, so we will go somewhere where we can decorate as we wish. If they are so afraid of our hurting their church we can go somewhere else.'"

Miss Mattie Baldwin, president of the school board, left Saturday for Chicago as a delegate to the National Woman's Suffrage association at Portland, Or. She was asked to call a meeting of the board, but said someone else would have to do that, and she seemed glad to escape the row.

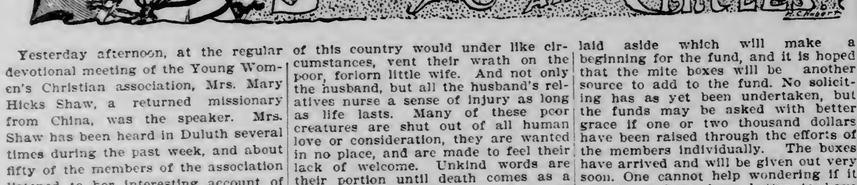
Come and See These Wonderful Instruments.

STEINWAY HALL, First Street and Fourth Avenue.



Yesterday afternoon, at the regular devotional meeting of the Young Women's Christian association, Mrs. Mary Hicks Shaw, a returned missionary from China, was the speaker. Mrs. Shaw has been heard in Duluth several times during the past week, and about fifty of the members of the association listened to her interesting account of life among the middle class Chinese. She spoke particularly of the women of the country and the struggle for happiness which they so seldom achieve, handicapped as they are with a heathen religion, which ignores the women or inflicts indignities upon them which the women of America can scarce comprehend. Mrs. Shaw has many interesting souvenirs which she exhibits, and she wears a gorgeous costume of the country.

In speaking of the women, she said in part: "No doubt in your thoughts of missions, the people as a whole is what you have considered, and today I want to bring to you a message that will make the needs of the women of China a little more real, and a little more personal to you, and I hope that the idea of your responsibility for these sisters of the East may be increased. In China there is no old maid-hood. Every girl must be married; whether she be ugly, deformed, or even idiotic, a husband must be found for her. To accomplish this, somebody must be lied to, and it is, of course, usually the young husband, who does not see his wifes' face until after the ceremony. If she be ugly or marred horribly from smallpox, which is prevalent there to a great extent, or if she be displeasing or unattractive in any way, the men of China act much as I imagine the men of this country would under like circumstances, vent their wrath on the poor, forlorn little wife. And not only the husband, but all the husband's relatives nurse a sense of injury as long as life lasts. Many of these poor creatures are shut out of all human love or consideration, they are wanted in no place, and are made to feel their lack of welcome. Unkind words are their portion until death comes as a kind of release. To them the news of Savior, who will welcome them as gladly as one of beautiful face and manner, comes as a revelation that brings untold joy. I wish you would think of these women in your thoughts of missions.

And then there is the Chinese woman who has lost through death her children, or one very dear to her. Many of you have doubtless felt the sorrow of the loss of friends through death, but you have the comfort of sympathy of many of your friends and the hope and belief in the religion of Christ. Can you imagine how infinitely harder it would be to bear such a sorrow, if your friends withdrew from you and said among themselves, she has sinned deeply or the gods would never have taken her children from her. Or else they say the child was not a child but an evil spirit, and immediately after death no crying is allowed, for fear the evil spirit will see that its work is succeeding, and often this bravado to deceive the spirit goes so far as to mutilate the body of the child. Although the mother believes this also, her grief is none the less keen at the loss of her child, and the teachings of Christ to this class is a comfort that has often brought hem back from a death from sorrow and anguish."

FOR BUILDING FUND.

Y. W. C. A. Actively Working In Its Interest.

At the annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian association, which was held May 16, it was decided to distribute among the members mite boxes that any small change which the possessor might be inclined to save might be put in these boxes to go toward the building fund. A new building of its own is the purpose which the Y. W. C. A. now has before it, and although the building may be an accomplished fact only after a few years, it is the goal which is never allowed to sink from view.

A percentage of the surplus over the expenses of the lunch rooms has been laid aside which will make a beginning for the fund, and it is hoped that the mite boxes will be another source to add to the fund. No soliciting has as yet been undertaken, but the funds may be asked with better grace if one or two thousand dollars have been raised through the efforts of the members individually. The boxes have arrived and will be given out very soon. One cannot help wondering if it would not have been better to have them of the sort given to children, just one place to put money in and the only way to get it out to tear the box.

The Y. W. C. A. building fund boxes open at either end as simply as any box and strong minded indeed will be the girl who will not after putting a quarter in the top open the end and abstract it. It can be done so easily, but the enthusiasm of many of the members is undoubtedly greater than their delight of pilfering from self, and it is hoped that at the next annual meeting several hundred dollars will come from this source alone.

SCREEN DOOR PARTY.

Sample of Porch Courtship In Chicago.

The young man with the straw hat and the girl in the white summer gown have been saying good night for the last half hour. She cleverly manages to let the screen door, which has been swinging to and fro as they stand there, swing shut. The young man finds himself suddenly on one side of the barrier, the girl on the other, says the Chicago News.

She (very sweetly)—Really, Dick, you must go home. Why don't you?

He (indignant at the situation)—I like that! Such a tender, thoughtful nature as you have! Come on back out here on the porch—I've a lot to say yet! What on earth did you do that for?

She (innocently)—Do what?

He—Shut the door in my face!

She—But you can talk just as well—your voice carries beautifuly through the screen.

She (dimpling)—Oh, I latched it. You can't open it.

He—Now, Mame, that is hateful of you! How can I talk in this ridiculous position?

She—Seems to me you are doing very well. What is it you have to talk about that is so awfully important?

He—As though you didn't know! I've been trying to tell you all evening. I believe you are nothing more or less than a flirt, or you wouldn't torment me this way. Whey don't you give me some sort of an answer? You know I love you—oh, hang it all, a man can't say things like that through a screen door!

She (camly)—Oh, you are going to say things like that?

He (artfully)—If you'd come out here on the porch you'd be more certain of the fact. Come on!

She—It's rather fun not to be sure—to be in a little doubt, you know. You see, I can't be really sure back of this screen door—maybe the wires change the tone of your voice or even twist your words—one can't tell.

He—I'd like to get hold of you for about two minutes! You're having lots of fun, aren't you?

She—You'll get your nose all black if you lean against the screen door!

He—What was that? Say it again! Hang my nose!

She (judicially)—You have an excitable disposition, haven't you? Aren't you getting tired standing there?

He—Decidedly I am! I'd go and sit down if you'd come out, but you see the chairs are too far away for me to carry on a conversation with you under the present circumstances. I don't see why you don't like me a little.

She (deliberately)—Why, I do—a great deal. More than you can imagine!

He (bitterly)—You wouldn't dream of saying that if you weren't back of that door! You don't mean it and you know it!

She (softly)—Yes, I do, truly, Dick!

He—You darling! I—oh, confound that door!

She (struggling with an irresistible laugh)—Oh, but isn't this funny!

He—I'm glad you think so! I confess I don't see the joke. See here, Mame, are you coming out where I am or aren't you? Because if you are not I shall be forced to remove the screen from a parlor window and come in that way!

She—You can't They fasten inside. Besides, you should be so overwhelmed with my saying what I did that you'd be content to go right home and say good night.

He (bitterly)—I'd like to know how I'm to tell you good night through a screen door! You haven't any heart! And I want to have you tell me seriously that you care for me. Do you really mean it?

She (retreating farther into the room)—You know I do, Dick!

He—At least come up here, so I can see you, I'd like to shake the door down! I—why, it isn't latched at all! I could have opened it all this while and you knew it. If you aren't the limit! That's right—I'd laugh if I were you!

JOE PIXLEY'S REVENGE

By Thomas P. Montfort.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Ben Burket was a widower and Joe Pixley was a bachelor. The one was a Possum Ridge farmer and the other taught the Possum Ridge school. They were both well past middle age.

Burket's chief purpose in life, it seemed, was to oppose Pixley. No matter what the latter attempted the former was ready to do all in his power to defeat him. There was no reason for this, so far as anybody could see, for Joe was a quiet, inoffensive man, who attended strictly to his own business; and he had certainly never harmed Burket. But it had been so for years, and it looked as though it would continue as long as they both lived. However, no one knows in what day or what hour the worm may turn.

There lived on Possum Ridge a homely old widow, who was chiefly noted for her temper. Her name was Morgan. She had had three husbands, but, fortunately for them, they were all dead. They had died happily, for, while they did not knowing what was awaiting them in the next life, they knew from what they were escaping in this. They felt that even at the worst the change would be a great improvement.

One day Pixley conceived a brilliant idea in connection with this widow. He had long felt that he had suffered enough from Burket's interference in his affairs, and that he ought to do something to put a stop to it; but he had not been able to devise any plan. Now, however, a plan was at hand and he saw his way clearly. He chuckled softly as he anticipated the final results.

The next day Pixley called on Mrs. Morgan. A day or two later he called again. From that time on he became a frequent visitor at her house, and the oftener he went the longer he remained.

On Possum Ridge news traveled fast, and whatever one person did was soon known to all the rest. So it was not long till everybody knew of Pixley's visits to the widow. Everybody knew, too, or at least they thought they knew, what his object was. It could not be anything short of matrimony.

Some laughed at the thought of the trouble Joe was liable to get himself into. Some shook their heads gravely, and in their hearts they pitied him. One or two of his more intimate friends went to him and tried to convince him that he was making a serious mistake.

"If you marry that old woman," they said, "you will never see another minute of peace on earth. She will harass you to your grave. You are too old to be such a fool."

"That's all right," he replied. "Don't you worry about me. I know what I'm doing."

Calmly and smilingly he went on his way; keeping his own counsel, and continuing his attentions to Mrs. Morgan.

A couple of weeks passed, then one day Ben Burkett rode up to Squire Beeson's and called the Squire out.

"I'm going to get married," he said, "and I want you to go along and perform the ceremony."

"All right, Ben," the Squire replied. "I'm always ready to accommodate a neighbor, especially if there is a fee in it. Who are you figuring on marrying?"

"The Widow Morgan," Burkett answered.

The Squire looked surprised, then he grinned broadly.

"We've all been thinking," he said, "that Joe Pixley was going to marry her. But I see how it is. You are at your old tricks again. You are going to beat Joe out of her."

"Any man has a right to marry a woman if he wants to, I reckon," Burket replied. "He don't have to wait to see if anybody else wants her, does he?"

"Of course not," the Squire admitted. "It's a free fight, and if you can win the widow she ought to be yours. But do you know her?"

"Not very well. I've only met her a few times; but she's a likely looking woman. They say she has some temper, but I think I know enough about women to manage that."

The Squire smiled knowingly, but said nothing. He had his own ideas of some things, but he did not feel called upon to express them. Ben Burket was old enough to take care of himself, certainly. He ought to know what he was doing, and if he didn't it was not the Squire's lookout. Then, if Ben married the widow, Pixley could not have her, and that was a matter of considerable moment in the Squire's estimation, since he was a friend to Joe.

Beeson saddled his horse and rode with Burkett over to Mrs. Morgan's house. She was waiting for them, and was all ready to be married. Without delay the Squire performed the ceremony that made her and Ben husband and wife. Pocketing his fee, he said:

"I've done you all the damage I can, and from this on you will have to fight it out between yourselves."

Ben took his wife to his own home, and, in order to make his victory over Pixley the more complete, rode around by the school house, so that the latter might see them. Joe had just dismissed school, and was standing out in front when they rode up. With a smile of triumph Ben said:

"Pixley, I want to introduce you to my wife."

Naturally he thought he was dealing Joe a hard blow, and he expected to see him sink under it. But Joe did nothing of the kind. He did not seem in the least cast down. Instead, he laughed loud and long and acted as though it was all a good joke. Ben was puzzled at such conduct, and he was more puzzled yet when Joe said:

"I knew you would fall into the trap, but I didn't think you would do it so soon. I guess we are about even now."

"What do you mean?" Burket asked.

"Nothing," Pixley replied, "only that a man who is always butting in may butt in once too often. I wish you much joy Ben. Good evening."

As Ben continued on his way he fell to pondering Joe's words. What did they mean, he wondered? What trap had he fallen into, and what did Joe mean about them being even, and about a man butting in once too often? It was all incomprehensible to him and he could not fathom it.

Then Joe had not seemed in the least disappointed at losing the widow. Rather, he had laughed at it as if it was a most enjoyable joke. He appeared to be so highly pleased as though it was the one chief thing in his life upon the consummation of which he had set his heart and soul.

Ben wondered at these things, but could not understand them—not just then.

It was about a week later when Pixley again met Burket. The latter was in a sadly dilipidated condition. His clothing was torn, and he had one eye bandaged and one arm in a sling. His bride had been giving him a little taste of her temper. He was humble and pitifully meek.

"Joe," he said, "I owe you an apology. I beat you out of the Widow Morgan when I had no right to do so. I'm sorry for it."

"I guess you are sorry," Joe replied. "I knew you would be. But don't you bother about me. Ben. You did not beat me out of her. I never had a thought of marrying that woman."

"You never?"

"Certainly not."

"But you were going to see her?"

"Yes, but I had a purpose in it. I wanted to get revenge on you for the way you always interfere in my affairs. I knew that if I showed her attentions you would jump in and marry her. That was what I wanted."

Joe walked on, and Ben stood looking ruefully after him. Presently the latter muttered:

"And I've got that old vison on my hands for life! Darn an old fool who hasn't a lick of sense! I have certainly butted in once too often."

MICHAEL DORAN RETIRES.

St. Paul Politician of Note Quits Business.

St. Paul, June 26.—Michael Doran, pioneer, broker, Democratic bass and general factotum of St. Paul, announces that he will retire from active business and become a gentleman of leisure. Mr. Doran is 78 years old and has been a hard worker since he came to St. Paul. He came to Minnesota in 1856 and settled in Le Sueuer county as a farmer. Three years later he was elected county treasurer and later to the state legislature.

This was the beginning of his long and active political career, which culminated in his joint control of the national patronage in Minnesota during the Cleveland rule. Doran and P. H. Kelly, doing business under the firm name "Mc and Mike" ran things in Minnesota to suit that firm. At that time Doran was state chairman of the Democracy and Kelly national committeeman. Doran was the accepted captain and Kelly the first mate of the Democratic ship. Of late years, however, Mr. Doran has been less active in politics.

After coming to St. Paul in 1869 he founded the brokerage business which he closed up with Saturday's business. The business of the old firm will be transferred to James B. Doran. During all the years Mr. Doran has been in business dealing in grain options, his company has never been troubled or embarrassed by a lawsuit or serious misunderstanding with its patrons.

MARKET IS STRONG

Sales of Lumber Are Made at Advanced Prices.

Indications of Important Pending North Shore Timber Deals.

During the past several days a few lumber sales of some consequence have been made, all tending to show the advancing prices of lumber and the strength of the local market.

About 1,500,000 feet of the William O'Brien stock has been sold at $20.50 for No. 3 and better. The Duluth Log company has sold about 800,000 feet at $19 for No. 3 and better, log run, from very coarse stock. The W. H. Cook interests have been disposing of quite a lot of lumber for the Virginia Lumber company, including 4-inch No. 1 at $21.50 per thousand feet, 12-inch No. 1 at $27.50 and 12-inch No. 2 at $21.50. It is claimed that others sold a corresponding stock a year ago for $17.50 upward, or about $4 per thousand less than was obtained this season.

The Murray-McCann mill on Superior bay, which was closed down about a week on account of a strike on the part of the pilers for an advance to $2.25 per day, has resumed operations with a new crew, most of the men coming from Ashland. It is claimed that the mill, on account of its isolated condition, has been paying 12 cents more a day than any of the others and the pilers are said to have demanded a 12½ cent raise to that figure.

Logging is said to have continued quite active this summer in spite of the wet weather, which has impeded works at some of the camps. Alger, Smith & Co. are forwarding about sixty carloads of logs a day off the Duluth & Iron Range road; the Scott-Graff company is forwarding about thirty-five carloads per day from Drummond and William O'Brien is loading about the same number from his camps on the Cloquet river.

Alger Smith & Company now have the Duluth & Northern Minnesota railway built to a point back of Beaver bay and are continuing to push it in a northeasterly direction. It is figured that about 1,500,000,000 feet of standing timber in Cook county will come out over this road when it is completed. The Pigeon River Lumber company is building a road south from Gunflint lake and has five miles in operation, connecting at the lake with the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western, for the lumber company's mill at Port Arthur. This company cuts, of course, for the Canadian market, but the rest of the timber is coming south.

In addition to the Cook county timber there is about 1,000,000,000 feet in Lake county part of which belongs to Alger, Smith & Company, part to the Oliver Iron Mining company, part to A. H. Stange, of Merrill, Wis., part to the Red Cliff Lumber company and part to other lumber interests. It is reported that Alger, Smith & Company are estimating the remainder of the timber of the Nester estate on the north shore, and all but about 15,000,000 feet of the timber at Split Rock with a possible view of purchase. The 15,000,000 feet of Split Rock timber that will not be included in the sale comprises the lot that the Split Rock company intends to take out next winter to wind up its operations. Many estimators are now working through Lake and Cook counties and it is believed that some important pine deals are pending.

Three large interests are now gathering in the north shore timber between Duluth and the International boundary line, Alger, Smith & Company, Wright & Davis and the Weyerhaueser interests. The Red Cliff Lumber company, Ackeley & Smith, the Lesure company, Schroeder Lumber company, Thomas Bardon and others own north shore timber, but the indications seem to point to the gradual accumulation of the timber in the hands of the first three concerns named.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Resident of County of Menominee Charged With Arson.

Menominee—Frank Lavendoski, who resides some eight or nine miles from Menominee up the bay shore, was arraigned in Justice Van Den Berg's court charged with the crime of arson. The crime is alleged to have been committed on the 14th of January and consisted of the setting fire to the residence of John Kruger, who lives in the same neighborhood, and who swore out the complaint against Lavendoski. It was only recently that the evidence was uncovered that led to the suspicion and apprehension of Lavendoski. The man was unable to give bail for his appearance at the trial and was lodged in the county jail.

The recount in the Menominee school census resulted in the gain of 150 names, the total now being 4,272, or a loss of over 300 from last year. It is estimated that the gain of 150 names will mean $400 or $500 more primary school money for the city, so the recount was a good investment.

The J. W. Wells Lumber company has purchased the old mill site of the Bay Shore Lumber company lying directly south of its location at Menominee. The Bay Shore site comprises eleven acres and has a water frontage of 465 feet. The buildings have all been rmoved, but the yard is still well equipped, with side tracks and docks. The Wells company made the purchase because it needs additional yard and track room.

Gladstone—The Buckeye mills at Gladstone are now being operated both night and day. There are 325 men on the pay roll. This is at least one-third of the working population of the city.

St. Ignace—Ahen owned by Henry Lake of St. Ignace has been laying som big eggs lately, the largest measuring eight inches one way and seven the other. It contained three yolks.

Escanaba—Contractor J. W. Lawson will shortly begin the construction of a new school building at North Escanaba. The present building will be re-constructed and used in connection with the new structure. The building will cost $5,874. The room to be provided is greatly needed.

LAWSON IN ST. PAUL.

"Frenzied Finance" Author to Lecture There.

St. Paul, June 26.—Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, he of the "Frenzied Finance" fame, is to lecture here on the evening of July 13. Mr. Lawson will arrive on the morning of that day and will be the guest of Governor Johnson. Mr. Lawson was also invited to lecture in Minneapolis but will be unable to do so, but both he and Governor Johnson will probably visit that city during the day.

WIFE SITS UPON HIM.

The Plaint of 96-Pound Iowa Husband.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 26.—The cares of married life are too heavy for James Watson. He has begun a suit for separation from his much better half. He weighs 96 pounds; she tips the beam at 213.

Mr. Watson says that his wife sits on him literally and so often that he suffers from chronic indigestion. His heart is weak, too, and although he constantly practices in the gymnasium at lifting weights, he finds his home life no more endurable. He says plaintively in his application for relief:

"My wife uses her extraordinary weight as a means of enforcing her bulldozing tactics, and has frequently battered and bruised me to such an extent that I have borne the marks for weeks."

The unhappy man adds that when he appears in public with his spouse, insolent persons jeer him by asking her such questions as "Why don't you put him in a go-cart?" He closes by threatening "to unfold a tale at the final hearing of my suit even more harrowing than I am disposed to set forth at this time."

AN IMPORTANT ISSUE.

Somebody appears to have made the important discovery that there are combinations among the butchers and the grocers of Duluth to hold up prices, eliminate competition, and to perform other operations more pleasing to the butchers and the grocers than to the public that has to buy the things the butchers and grocers sell.

The result of the discovery is the filing of complaints in two suits, one against the "butchers' trust" and the other against the "grocers' trust," to compel them to cease being and acting and also to require them to pay certain sums in damages to the complainants. The charges will be found on the local pages of The Herald this evening, in the form in which H. C. Frink and M. M. Gasser, the plaintiffs, have made them.

That they will be not altogether unfamiliar to the public goes without saying, because, to put it mildly, "rumors" of this sort have been afloat for some time. The charges that have been made are easily susceptible of proof, if they are true, and the plaintiffs appear to be in a good position to furnish such proof if it is available, one claiming to be the victim of a combine, and the other being a member of the other combine who seeks to have the court restrain it from carrying out its alleged objects upon him.

The matter touches the people very closely, and it will therefore be watched with vast interest. It is well that the matter has been placed before the courts, because this affords an easy and certain way of clearing the matter up. If, as the plaintiffs allege, the combinations are exerting influences prejudicial to the public, that can be shown and stopped, if the law, as appears likely, is sufficiently elastic to cover the case. If, on the other hand, the objects and operations of the combines are harmless to the public, as the members claim, this, too, appears to be easily susceptible of proof, and the butchers and grocers are in a position to furnish such proof.

In view of the repeated charges that have been made that the associations of the butchers and grocers aim to maintain an improper level of prices, the public is interested in having the cases thoroughly threshed out in the courts, that the truth may be known and such action as seems proper to the courts may be taken upon the facts as finally established.

In view, too, of the repeated denials by the butchers and grocers that they are seeking to maintain an unfair margin of profit to themselves, and their repeated assertions that the objects of their associations were harmless to the public, they, too, should welcome the opportunity to present the proof of their claims before a fair-minded and unprejudicial tribunal, that the embarrassing specter of public distrust may be exorcised away.

BOX CAR MERCHANTS.

The state dairy and food department is preparing to get after the so-called "box car" merchant so far as lies within its power, under a law passed last winter giving the department the power to enter and examine the contents of box cars and warehouses in its search for adulterated and illegal food products.

Many of these box car stores are operated by agents of non-taxpaying, non-resident firms who by their methods have undermined the business of the legitimate, taxpaying, Minnesota merchants. It often happens that these box car merchants are in the habit of swindling and poisoning the public with their short-weight and adulterated food-stuffs. Up to this year the department has had no authority to enter such cars and examine their contents, but the late legislature conferred upon the department ample powers along this line, which authority it seems determined to use.

Notices are now being sent out to different parts of the state by the department, asking that it be notified of the visits of box car merchants. Upon receipt of such notification, it agrees to send an inspector to investigate and to prosecute if anything worthy of prosecution is found.

The legislation upon which this action is based is a wholesome and beneficial addition to the pure food laws of the state. If legitimate merchants are to be prevented from getting the larger profits to be realized from selling adulterated and fraudulent goods, it was not fair to them to permit outsiders to come in and reap this illegal and fraudulent harvest. The commissioner is to be commended for his prompt action under the law, and it is to be hoped that everybody concerned will co-operate with the department in its efforts to lessen the evils of the box car merchant's competition with local business enterprises.

PANAMA CANAL PURCHASE.

The incident a couple of weeks or so ago, when the issue of buying materials for the Panama canal in the cheapest markets arose, has worked for the welfare of the republic and its people in more ways than one.

For one thing, it was an invaluable object lesson, and it will take the stand-patters a long time to think up anything to say in answer to it, because it showed beyond any doubt that American goods can be bought beyond the tariff wall cheaper than they can within it, and that that same tariff wall, where it is not absolutely necessary as a protection to an American industry that needs protection and is entitled to it, is an institution that is taking money from those that have not to give to those that have.

A more direct and more material benefit, however, lies in the fact that the Panama canal commission has been able to buy goods of American manufacturers just as cheaply as it could buy the same goods in Europe. This ought not to be a vitally interesting concession, but it happens to be. Now if some arrangement could be made by which people of this country could buy the necessities of life as cheaply at home as they are sold when freight rates for thousands of miles have been paid upon them it would be comfortable, too.

The commission has placed an order for a locomotive and 500 cars with an American concern, and the price at which they were purchased could not be matched by European manufacturers or European agents for the same goods. When American manufacturers concede this much, it makes the American market the cheapest, and all the government's announcement amounted to was that it would buy in the cheapest market. Of course if that market is in this country the government is better pleased than it would be if it had to be in Europe.

But the other lessons from the "cheapest market" incident should not be forgotten, as they will prove valuable when the stand-patter recovers his equanimity and assurance and begins to spin his favorite arguments again.

SECRETS OF SUCCESS.

This is the commencement season in the schools and colleges of the country. From Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon, and from Duluth to New Orleans, a multitude of graduation essays are being delivered, the ripe fruit of the educational tree. Generally, these essays will contain profounder wisdom than the authors will dare attempt a few years later. They will be, as usual, on wholesome, solid topics, and they will be treated uncommonly well. They will be on a high moral plane, from which it is a pity any of the authors ever find it necessary to descend. A favorite topic, expressed in various ways, will be "The Secret of Success."

The wisdom of these essays is sound, as a rule. They are the product of a period when the writers know more than they ever will again, as a rule, and the advice contained in them will be generally worthy of attention. It will be well if the writers themselves carry this advice with them into the world, and do not permit it to be overwhelmed by the experiences of practical life.

A boy down in Des Moines, Iowa, wrote on this topic, and his manner of treating it showed that he had inherent in his makeup qualities that make for success. He wrote to sixteen men who should reasonably be presumed to know something about success, including Theodore Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland, Secretary Shaw, Governor Cummins, ex-Governor Larabee, Secretary Wilson, W. J. Bryan, Edward Bok, and presidents of various colleges. Every one of these men answered his letters except President Roosevelt, who was then hunting in Colorado.

To sum up the advice they offered would be to epitomize the secret of success in one word—Work. Some of them added character, which is more or less formed by work, and some added preparation, which is also work. The letters were valuable, and the essence of the advice contained in them was of such a character, coming from these sources, that it is impossible to lay it aside.

While Edward Bok's success is not so conspicuous as that of some of the Des Moines boy's other correspondents, he expressed himself just as clearly as any and more succinctly than most. He said: "The chief factor in a success of any kind is work; if you add to that the next essential, which is work for work's sake, and not for the money it may bring, you have covered the ground."

Naturally, some of the writers included among the essentials honesty, perseverance, energy and economy of time, but these group themselves naturally around the central idea of work. Work that is dishonest never succeeds in the right way, and work that is not persevering and energetic can never be effective, while wasting time is inconsistent with real work.

Hotel Gossip.

"These heavy rains at Duluth enjoys every once in a while always remind me of the time a friend and I were stranded for three days on the bank of the Vermillion river," said J. S. Overman of Grand Forks at the St. Louis. "The other fellow had a claim up in that country somewhere, and as it was along in the fall of the year, in 1899, I think, he prevailed upon me to accompany him on a trip to it, arguing that I would find some good hunting if I went along.

"We had an easy-rowing, flat-bottomed boat to use in ascending the stream. We loaded our supplies into this when we reached the place where the work of rowing was to begin and started out. We did not meet with any trouble on the trip up the river. It took us three or four days to reach the point where we were to leave the boat and strike across country, and then two or three days more walk to get to the claim. Once arrived, we staid longer than we had intended doing, and when we started out on the return trip our provisions were running rather short. The fact that we were able to obtain plenty of fresh meat at little labor to ourselves kept us from worrying much on that score, however. We had scarcely reached the river bank and got our tent pitched for the night when it began to rain. We had two partridges which we cooked for supper, and these, with coffee and fried oatmeal, constituted our meal. After that we had only coffee and oatmeal to last us until we reached a settler's cabin, fifteen miles down the river. At first we did not regard the rain in a very serious light, but in a little while the storm grew worse, and when finally we crawled under the blankets it was pouring down at a great rate. Our tent proved an effective protector from the water and our sleep was not interrupted. In the morning it was still raining and we decided to remain where we were until the storm abated. It rained almost without a break for two days and three nights, and all of that time we staid in the same spot, living on oatmeal and coffee. We boiled the oatmeal, fried it and ate it with cold water, trying it in every imaginable form, but at best it made a poor meal. Finally, on the evening of the second day, we became desperate, and resolved that if the weather did not clear up by the following morning we would start out anyway. It had stopped raining when we awoke, but was still cloudy. When once we were in the boat all we had to do was to steer, for we were carried rapidly along without any other effort on our part. All our troubles came to an end at the settler's home. He fed us all we could hold, and gave us enough provisions to last us the remainder of the journey."

The Dubbs of Dublin.

New York Tribune: Dudley Dubb, a dude of Dublin, dubbed Dud Dubb, had a budding love for Isabel Dubbell, a bud of Dublin, dubbed Belle Dubbell. He babbled of his bubbling love, but was doubly muddled when the bud debarred the doubling of their lives unless their names were doubled too. At the idea of her and himself as the bud Belle Dubbell-Dubb and the dude Dub Dubbell-Dubb, Dud Dubb doubled up with double-dyed delight. Dominie Dobb, driving doddering Dobbin to Dublin, doubled this doubly-dubbed dude and bud couple, thus doubling their dove love.

There came to this doubly-dubbed couple double doublets, Dobley and Bobley, dubbed Dob and Bob Dubbell-Dubb, and Adele and Ardilla, dubbed Dell and Dill Dubbell-Dubb. These adorable double doublets, Dob and Bob and Dell and Dill Dubbell-Dubb, dubbed the dude Dud Dubbell-Dubb "Daddy," the bud Belle Dubbell-Dubb "Mudder."

"Oh, the lovey-dovey double-doublets, Dob Dubbell-Dubb, Bob Dubbell-Dubb, Dell Dubbell-Dubb and Dill Dubbell-Dubb," drolly drawled the doting doubly-dubbed Dubbell-Dubb couple, Dude Daddy Dud Dubbell-Dubb and Bud Mudder Belle Dubbell-Dubb of Dublin.

New York Times: "The most apropos come into my 57 years," said Bishop Brewster of Connecticut the other day, "was a little detail in a church service. It sounds too good to be true, but I heard it.

"It was in the July of 1902, when I chanced to be in England. King Edward's coronation had been postponed because of his illness, and then came the operation, and then the services of rejoicing over his recovery. I attended one of these, and it is a fact that the clergyman in charge, announcing the hymn from the chancel, said to us, 'Let us sing "Peace, Perfect Peace," in the appendix.'"

The Weather.

No, it did not break any records. True, it rained hard and often and a lot at a time, but at that it did not come up to the storm of a few weeks ago in the amount of rainfall registered at the local forecaster's station. It did seem as though it must be breaking all records, but it didn't break any. Yet the fact remains that it rained, and rained hard, and that it was a fierce and disagreeable Saturday night and Sunday.

You who remained quietly at home and grudged a little of your time to good literature are not to be sympathized with, however. There was a party that carried a bit of a tent out into the woods to have a fine time camping Saturday night waiting for daybreak that they might start toward home. You may not have had a purely enjoyable time, but you don't want to begin complaining in the hearing of the members of this party.

Sunday has had a way of coming a day too early lately. It is noticeale that in most cases Sunday has been unpleasant and Monday fine. This was eminently the case this time, for this morning dawned with the clouds scattering rapidly toward the West, with the sun shining joyously again, and with nature preening her wet feathers in his mellow rays. The wind was still in the northeast, but that could be forgiven because the disappearance of the clouds gave the sun a chance to equalize the coolness of the breeze, which it did most satisfactorily.

Evidently the weather men forgot to take out that standing notice: "Showers with cool weather and probably fog tonight and Tuesday. Fresh to brisk northeast winds." It is in his official sheet today, and since he did not replace it with anything more encouraging it will have to go as the day's forecast.

The showers which fell here Saturday and Sunday were not confined to the Head of the Lakes. Yesterday and spread over all northern territory, and there were showers in the gulf region, too. At the other end of Lake Superior they got it as hard yesterday as Duluth did Saturday night. The barometer is low over New England and the far Southwest. It is cooler over the upper Mississippi Valley and near Lake Michigan and warmer over Montana.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 26.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Showers with cool weather and probably fog tonight and Tuesday. Fresh to brisk northeast winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 26.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Tuesday: Wisconsin—Fair tonight and Tuesday. Continued cool tonight. Slowly rising temperature Tuesday. Minnesota—Increasing cloudiness with showers Tuesday and in south and west portions tonight.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Showers tonight and Tuesday. Warmer tonight.

Impotency of Graft.

Kansas City Star: It is a tremendous commentary on the power of public sentiment that the supposedly impregnable Republican machine in Philadelphia was smashed to pieces between two Sundays. Before the righteous wrath of the people, brought to the point of revolt by the fatuous insolence of the boodlers, Boss Durham became, in twenty-four hours, as pliant and nonaggressive as a dog well flogged.

There was nothing invulnerable about the Philadelphia machine when the people got after it. It tumbled down about the heads of its authors and finishers who were sent scurrying in all directions for refuge from the avenging storm.

You can depend upon it that the government of any municipality or state in America, and of the nation itself can be made just what the people elect that it shall be. And when you see such a shameless and disgraceful organization for plunder as Philadelphia has tolerated for years, you can be certain that the people and the people alone are to blame for it.

This Sounds Homelike.

Boston Transcript: Once more Boston proves her claim to being the coolest place on the map, and thereby clinches all invitations sent out by her to residents of other cities to consider her an ideal summer resort. To be sure, some might think she is overdoing the cool breeze attraction these last two days, but isn't it better to err in this direction than in the other, we should like to know? New York, Washington and other cities where the mercury spent yesterday near the 90 degree mark must, if they are sensible, agree that a drop too much is preferable to such antics. We take turns, it is true, here in Boston, at blessing and cursing our east wind, but when it steals in as it did Sunday night and we wake up Monday morning to find ourselves the envied of many cities who swelter, most of us have nothing but pretty things to say of it.

What Frank Eddy Thinks.

Sauk Center Herald: There is not a trust magnate in the United States that is not a "standpatter."

There is always something the matter with the Republicanism of those Republicans who are alpways clamorously insisting they are the only simon pure article.

Rockefeller has bought an entire village and is going to turn it into an artificial lake. He could fill it with water out of the Standard Oil stock.

If women's tears could save men they would all float into salvation.

Cleaning Her Gums.

The Brown Book: A New York woman was visiting friends in Pittsburg. One morning after breakfast the father came into the house and called to his children: "Come, children, if you want me to drive you to school, come. Say, Mary, where are those children, anyway?"

The visitor suppressed an exclamation of horror, and slipped away to the library to seek aid from the dictionary. She learned that "galoshes" in England and "rubbers" in New York may be "gums" in Pittsburg.

An Awakened People.

Boston Herald: Signs of a better condition are appearing. The people who not long ago were complaisant under the reign of arrogant despoilers are developing a temper of revolt and a purpose to guard their property and rights bravely, and to recover, so far as possible, what has been lost by their former supineness.

Twenty Years Ago.

A company is going to fit up one of the Apostle islands for a summer resort.

Will Spalding and W. Shawger have returned from a trip of over two weeks in the north shore woods, near the international boundary line. They canoed 100 miles, striking the chain of lakes about thirty miles from Grand Marais. They saw some beautiful scenery on their trip, going between perpendicular cliffs, on one side of which a surveying party, supposed to be the United States geological survey, had marked the height, 299 feet. Will Spalding built a house on his claim, and began the usual improvements required by the government.

Hartford, Conn., June 20, 1885.—My Dear Young Friends: Your kind and pleasant letter being directed to Andover, where I do not live, was forwarded thence to Mandarin, Fla., where I have a winter home, from thence forwarded to Hartford, which is my Northern home.

Owing to all these delays your letter of the 9th did not reach me till the 20th of June. I hasten to reply, uncertain whether my reply thus long delayed can reach you in time for the purpose you speak of. I thank you sincerely for your kind words and wishes. I can only trust and pray that should you live to my age you will have the same comforts and hopes that support me. For me there is now left only one book, the Bible; only one way, and that the way pointed out by the Bible. Without this comfort and hope, dark indeed would be my 74th birthday. I am watching daily by the sick bed of my husband, slowly sinking under an incurable disease; my own health is far from firm, yet solely and only through what I have learned from this blessed book, old age, weakness, sickness and death all have their bright sides as leading to eternal peace and rest.

May these same hopes and comforts be yours, is the prayer of your true friend. H. B. STOWE.

Rev. T. A. McCurdy, president of Macalester college, occupied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church, Sunday morning and evening, speaking in the morning on "Highest Christian Education."

One of the features of the high school commencement exercises was the observance of the birthday of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe by the presentation of a few scenes from "Oldtown Folks." Mrs. Stowe had been apprised of the event, and responded with the following letter:

LAUGHING MATTER.

Washington Star: "You don't subscribe to the newspaper?" asked the visiting neighbor.

"No," answered the hostess, "we know more than the newspaper can tell. My husband is a census taker."

Chicago Tribune: "Shadbolt has a wonderful memory."

"Yes; such a memory as his is a nuisance. Every time I meet him I can see he hasn't forgotten the dollar and a half I borrowed from him five years ago."

Detroit Free Press: "Blank'll have a hard time in the next world!"

"Why so?"

He's so lazy he'll have to hire a chauffeur to flap his wings for him!"

Philadelphia Ledger: "The fight," said the reporter, "began in a little alley down there. I don't know the name of it."

"Call it 'Harmony court,'" said the editor, "it's bound to be something like that."

Puck: Mrs. Crawford—Why don't your husband buy you an auto?

Mrs. Crabshaw: He says we can run into debt fast enough now without employing machinery.

Washington Star: "Do you resent these investigations?"

"I should say I do!" answered the trust magnate. "Why, they are taking up my time and putting me to almost as much inconvenience as if I were a member of the grand jury."

Puck: Mrs. Crawford—Why don't your husband buy you an auto?

Mrs. Crabshaw—He says he can run into debt fast enough now, without employing machinery.

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Long Prairie Argus: It is one of the characteristics of the American that he is ready to face almost any task no matter how difficult. If proof of this is needed we cite the Doubting Thomas to P. W. Dowling of Eveleth, the noted whitewash artist. He is ready to undertake the gigantic task of kicking out of the Republican party the eighty thousand Republicans who refused to toe the mark last fall on command of the corporations. Of course he expects some help from Bill Lees and Bill Verity's little league, but most of the task will devolve on him alone. Any one of the recreant voters who expects to get another chance in the Republican party will have to give bond for his good behavior forever hereafter.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Jack London on his last visit to New York was introduced in a cafe to a musician.

"I, too, am a musician in a small way," London said. "My musical talent was once the means of saving my life."

"How was that?" the musician asked.

"There was a great flood in our town in my boyhood," replied London. "When the water struck our house my father got on a bed and floated with a stream until he was rescued."

"And you?" said the musician.

"Well," said London, "I accompanied him on the piano."

THE BABY.

THE BABY.

Like a tiny gilnt of light piercing through the dusky gloom
Comes her little laughing face through the shadows of my room.

And my pen forgets its way as it hears her patt'ring tread,
While her prattling treble tones chase
the thought from out my head.

She is queen, and I her slave—one who loves her and obeys;
For she rules her world of home with imperious baby ways.

In she dances, calls me "Dear!" turns the pages of my books;
Throws herself upon my knee, takes my pen with laughing looks.

Makes disorder reign supreme, turns my papers upside down;
Draws me cabalistic signs, safe from fear of any frown.

Crumbles all my verses up, pleased to hear the crackling sound;
Makes them into balls and then—flings them all upon the ground.

Suddenly she flits away, leaving me alone again
With a warmth about my heart and a brighter, clearer brain.

And although the thoughts return that her coming drove away,
The remembrance of her laugh lingers with me through the day.

And as chances, as I write, I may take a crumpled sheet;
On the which, God knoweth why! I read my fancies twice as sweet.

Seeds of thine influence subtly are sown,
Breathing thy perfume, oh queen of

Epworth League Convention at Grace M. E. Church Concludes.

Fine Sunday Evening Meeting—E. N. Brown Chosen President.

The first annual convention of the Duluth district Epworth league closed yesterday evening with a rally which took place at Grace Methodist church. This rally was taken part in by Lester Park, Merritt Memorial and Asbury Methodist churches, and resulted in a large attendance at Grace church. Bert N. Wheeler, president of the Duluth Epworth League union of Duluth, presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers.

Prominent among these was C. E. Southwick of Albert Lea. Mr. Southwick is city attorney of Albert Lea, and also has the distinction of being at the head of the Epworth Leaguers of the state, being state president.

"Christian Activity" was the general topic for the evening, and Mr. Southwick handled it ably in his talk to the meeting. He claimed that no one branch of work in the church reaches the field touched by the Epworth league, and claimed that it does more work in the reclaiming of young people than any other branch could possibly do. It is an entrance way to the church, and is the primary school for the teachings of the central body, the church.

Miss Mabel Little, a recent graduate from Hamline university, who will leave for the mission field in Western China in September, spoke on the station system in missions. The station system is the scheme adopted of a group of people sending out and supporting a missionary to a certain part of the mission field. The system has proven very successful.

B. N. Wheeler spoke of the international convention of the Epworth league, which will be held in Denver next week. Miss Grace Scribner and Mr. McFadden will go as delegates from the Duluth union, while Miss May Cummings, Mr. Wheeler and Rev. M. S. Rice will attend on their own account. Mr. Rice will have charge of the devotional services of the convention.

Last night's meeting was closed by devotional services, conducted by Rev. E. C. Clemans, who also delivered a farewell address to the delegates.

In the afternoon Norman McLeod addressed a meeting of boys, and Mrs. John Callahan addressed a meeting of girls at the church. Rev. C. H. Hawn of Grand Rapids addressed the Sunday school, giving an instructive chalk talk. The morning services were conducted by Rev. J. B. Hingeley of Minneapolis, who preached an eloquent sermon on "The Four Gospels."

On Saturday afternoon the permanent organization of the district was formed for the current year. It consists of the following officers:

Presiding Elder Clemans will appoint three more vice presidents and a treasurer in a short time, and will name the place for the next meeting.

IN LESTER RIVER

Joseph C. Polzin Loses His Life In Swollen Stream.

Tragedy Takes Place In Full View of His Companions.

Lester river, transformed into a wild and raging torrent by the heavy rains of Saturday night and Sunday morning, threatening death to anyone caught in its swollen current, claimed a victim yesterday afternoon in a most extraordinary manner. Joseph C. Polzin, head pattern maker at the National Iron works, West Duluth, was hurled to his death in the twinkling of an eye.

For the past few weeks, ever since the trout season opened, Superintendent James A. Lawrie, of the National Iron works, Mr. Polzin, who was Mr. Lawrie's roommate, and other friends, have been in the habit of going out Saturday nights to the camp of Arthur Krieger, on Lester river, and starting early Sunday morning to fish the stream. They did this as usual last Saturday night, but yesterday morning owing to the swollen condition of the river, the water being about six feet above the normal, decided not to fish but to spend the day gathering driftwood, which was coming down the river in large quantities, so as to lay in a supply to last all summer.

Shortly after noon Messrs. Lowrie, Polzin and Krieger went out upon some rocks that jutted from the shore, and were waiting to catch any stray wood that came along. Mr. Polzin was in the center and Mr. Krieger nearer the shore with a long pike pole. Suddenly from the rapids above, a log some forty or fifty feet long, made its appearance and headed directly for the rocks on which the men were standing. Coming with lightning rapidity it struck the rock on which Mr. Polzin was standing, slid up the incline and passed directly between Mr. Polzin's legs. After passing through several feet, the rear end was caught by a counter current and the log swung as though on a pivot, catching Mr. Polzin astride of it and carrying him high in the air as the other end of the log plunged down the rapids.

The sweep of the log struck Mr. Krieger, knocking him a distance of ten or twelve feet into deep water just above the rocks, but by means of the pike pole he managed to get ashore.

In the meantime Mr. Polzin was hanging to the log and in the twinkling of an eye he was carried down by the rushing waters and pitched over two falls and was lost to view in the edies below. The sides of the river are very precipitous at that point and although his friends made every effort to get to him they were futile and Mr. Polzin was never seen again. It is doubtful if the victim lived a minute after being carried into the rapids.

A few hundred feet below where he fell there is an accumulation of logs and driftwood and it is supposed that the body is lodged somewhere in the pool above them. It is not thought it could get through the jam, but if it has, it has probably gone on the lake where it will probably never be recovered.

Mr. Polzin has only been in Duluth for about two months, having come here from Ashland, his former home being in Milwaukee. In searching his effects for information concerning his relatives, Coroner McCuen found about $700 in his trunk as well as several life insurance policies and other securities. He has a father and mother living and the coroner and the police are endeavoring to locate them by wire. Mr. Polzin was about 27 years of age, and occupied apartments with Mr. Lawrie at The Melrose, 318 West Second street.

Search will be made for the body today, but it is not expected it will be found until the waters go down.

BUTCHERS AND GROCERS ARE SUED

M. M. Gasser Company and H. C. Frink Sue Two Associations.

Claim Existence of Combines That Force Maintenance of Prices.

Two suits, aimed at the local combine of grocers and of butchers, which is claimed to exist, were filed in district court late Saturday afternoon.

M. M. Gasser & Co., one of the city's prominent retail grocery concerns, has instituted an action against the Duluth Retail Grocers' association and its officers and members for triple damages under the state laws, which provide that any corporation or company of persons that aim to regulate the prices of merchantable articles with the purpose of compelling others to sell at that price or who shall attempt to force a boycott shall be liable for triple damages and may be enjoined by the court from carrying out the purposes alleged.

Mr. Gasser charges such a conspiracy on the part of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association, also on the part of the wholesale and jobbing houses, which are claimed to be joint conspirators for the purpose of raising prices and for the disciplining of those who refuse to join the ranks of the grocers' association or obey its regulations.

H. C. Frink seeks damages in the amount of over $57,000 from the local branch packing houses, their managers, the Duluth Retail Butchers' association, its officers and members.

Mr. Frink also charges conspiracy under the statutes to force prices and to boycott persons outside the association and charges collusion between the retail association and the packing houses to prevent him from getting meat supplies.

In his complaint Mr. Gasser states that he was formerly a member of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association. He says he is desirous of operating a grocery business independent of the alleged combine, but fears that if he attempts to do so he will be injured in being boycotted by the wholesale dealers, under an agreement between the wholesalers and the retailers' association.

Mr. Gasser claims that pickets would be placed about his place of business and that his customers would be notified that he is not in good standing with the grocers' association and that he will be otherwise hindered so that it would be impossible for him to carry on a profitable business as conditions were, he alleges, about April 1, 1904, when he attempted to break away from the association.

The complaint filed by Mr. Gasser charges that the Retail Grocers' association is formed to enhance the retail price of staple groceries, the necessities of life, and to fleece the public generally in every way possible in the business without fear of interference.

He attaches to the complaint what purports to be a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the retail grocers' association, which sets out, among other things, that the object of the organization is to correct excessive and unmercantile competition, to remove by concerted action such evils and customs as are against the policy and sound business principles, whether it be by cutting of prices, the selling of wholesale houses at retail, improper house to house peddling, the distribution and consumption of adulterated goods, etc., not attainable by individual effort.

It is also provided that a price committee shall fix prices and provides a $10 penalty and expulsion by a two-thirds majority of the members present for any member underselling the prices fixed. Provision is made for the expulsion of any member guilty of unmercantile conduct. All meetings are to be executive in character, unless voted open meetings by a two-thirds vote of the members present.

Affixed to the complaint is also a price list, purporting to be the list drawn up by the association, in which fixed prices are set on sugar, flour, coffee, kerosene and other staple articles, and to which is appended a note that there will be a $10 fine for the cutting of the prices mentioned. Articles on the list are not to be advertised in any way.

H. C. Frink, in his suit against the butchers and packing houses, claims a combine, and alleges that he is not, nor never has been, a member of any such combination, but that he has been, as an independent dealer, driven out of business in Duluth on account of a conspiracy on the part of the retail butchers with the packers.

Mr. Frink claims that to the best of his belief the Retail Butchers' association was formed to raise and control the prices of meat, to drive out competition on the part of all persons who do not belong to the alleged combine. He claims that when a member is expelled from the association he is boycotted, the packing houses being notified not to sell him any meat supplies, on the penalty of losing the custom of members of the association.

The complaint alleges that Mr. Frink has been from time to time notified by the wholesalers that they could not sell to him by orders of the Retail Butchers' organization, and that their orders were eventually carried out by all the packing concerns but Schwartzschild & Sultzberger.

This latter firm, Mr. Fring alleges, in spite of the notice by the Retail Butchers' association not to sell him supplies, continued to do so to a certain extent for some time, under an agreement that the transactions should be kept quiet, and be kept from the knowledge of the Retail Butchers' association. It is claimed that in April last Schwartzschild & Sultzberger notified Frink that the grievance committee of the Butchers' association had been getting busy, and notified the branch house that it must stop all dealings with Frink, and that the wholesalers obeyed the order and has since refused to sell him any meats.

Armour Packing company, a corporation; J. C. Fisher, The Cudahy Packing company, a corporation; J. Young, Hammond Packing company, a corporation; Robert A. Peers, Hiram R. Copies of the complaints are to be served by County Attorney J. M. McClintock and Attorney General E. T. Young, who are required by law to proceed in case of offenses as charged. John B. Arnold is looking after the legal interests of Mr. Gasser, and George L. Spangler and Mr. Arnold represent H. C. Frink.

Simon Clark, a member of the Retail Grocers' association claims that the charges are, in the main, false. He claims that the association was not formed for the purposes of boycotting any of the grocers in Duluth, either within or without its ranks, that it had never picketed any store not attempted in any way to interfere with grocers outside that association. Mr. Clark admitted a price schedule was probably in existence as to staple goods, but claimed that of the hundreds of articles for sale by the grocers the percentage of profit on the listed articles was the least. Mr. Clark said the price list had been drawn to prevent by agreement the sale of certain goods below cost for the purpose of attracting customers. He denied absolutely any agreement between the wholesalers and retailers of the city.

E. M. Ferguson, of the Wholesale Jobbers' association, denies the existence of any agreement between the retail association and the jobbers, as to whom the wholesalers shall sell goods and whom they shall refuse to sell. He said that if his firm was approached with a threat of a boycott should it sell to any person not a member of the retail association, that he would probably exercise his constitutional right and sell to whom he pleased or refuse to sell to anybody with whom he did not care to trade.

N. H. Witt, of the firm of N. H. Witt & Co., denies any knowledge of a butchers' combine. He claims that he buys his own supplies at what prices he can and sells for what prices he pleases.

Mr. Gasser could not be seen this morning, but Mr. Arnold, his attorney stated that M. M. Gasser & company is a Minnesota corporation and that it has never been a member of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association. Mr. Gasser, he stated, had been a member and the secretary could probably say whether he still belongs to the association.

"This is a fight to a finish," said Mr. Arnold, "and a temporary restraining order will be issued by the court some time today enjoining the grocers' association from boycotting or in any way interfering with Mr. Gasser or his business, pending the action. The court will, in the restraining order set the time for the defendants to appear and show cause why they should not be so restrained."

Secretary Bert Holcomb of the Retail Grocers' association was not in his office this morning, but George H. Schulenberg, president of the association, stated that Mr. Gasser, to the best of his knowledge, is still a member.

"Mr. Gasser has paid his dues and was a member up to the last meeting," said Mr. Schulenberg," and I have not heard that he has sent in any resignation.

"There will be a meeting of the officers and directors of the association, this afternoon, at the office of Secretary Holcomb at which time the situation will be discussed and steps will be taken to employ counsel."

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK.

Food Eaten Is Worthless Unless Digested—Some Stomachs Must Have Help.

Food taken into the stomach which, from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them, they must be given less work; in other words they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbances in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a-year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is, of course, not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION

Rev. A. H. Wurtele Is New Pastor of Trinity Mission.

Rev. Arthur H. Wurtele, new vicar of Trinity mission, preached his first sermon before his new congregation yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. The attendanco was large. Rev. Wurtele only arrived on Saturday from New York, where he was pastor of the St. Augustine chapel in the tenement district. The impression he made was a good one. His manners are pleasing and in appearance he is distinguished.

He said that the day marked an era in his life, and perhaps in the life of Trinity mission, for it meant a new beginning for both. He expressed the hope that his many years of study in the university, and of spiritual activity and religious experience in the mission field of the West and of the crowded sections of New York would be the means of exalting him to accomplish his duty as fully as possible. The sermon was an interesting one and was listened to with attention. It showed a fine mind and a finished education.

Mr. Wurtele was born in Quebec and was an honor graduate of Lenoxville university, Quebec. For three years he was engaged in work in Trinity parish, New York, and for a year he was assistant at St. Agnes chapel on the upper West side of the Eastern metropolis, near Central Park, later accepting a call to St. Augustine chapel in the tenement district of the city. The members of this congregation presented him with a gold watch as a token of appreciation for his earnest efforts. He is a Mason and is chaplain of Dyment lodge No. 442, under the grand lodge of Ontario.

THE AMERICAN GIRL.

How She Keeps Beautiful.

Like the flowers that bloom in the spring the young girl just budding into womanhood is an inspiring sight and she is usually beautiful if she is perfectly healthy. She stays beautiful just so long as her health and constitution remain good. Let her be nervous, have backache, sleepless nights, and how soon does it take for wrinkles, crow's feet and dark circles to appear in the face? Her cheeks were rosy until she began to suffer from woman's weaknesses and the constantly recurring pains and drains brought her quickly from the beautiful age to the premature middle age. It was not meant for women to suffer so—it is due to our unnatural, but civilized methods of living, and to the fact that so many neglect those small ills which soon lead up to larger ones. Nothing so drags a woman down as those constantly recurring periods when she suffers more and more from a chronic condition that can be easily cured. No woman should take an alcoholic compound for that will disturb digestion, and the food is quickly compacted and becomes hard and tough in contact with alcohol, rendering the food indigestible. She must go to nature for a cure. The native Indians of early times were far from wrong when they called a marvelously effective medicinal plant "Squaw root"—what the physicians of our day called Caulophyllum or Blue Cohosh. This root, and another, which the Indians called "Rattleweed root," are important ingredients of a wonderfully successful remedy in modern times, namely, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Having made a specialty of the diseases of women in the early sixties Dr. Pierce soon found that a non-alcoholic extract of these roots with hydrastis or Golden Seal and Lady's Slipper root, combined in just the right proportions, made the very best tonic and cure for the distressing complaints of women. Where women suffered from backache, weakness, nervousness and lack of sleep, it was usually due to functional trouble, therefore this prescription directed at the cause cured 98 per cent. of such cases. That is why Dr. Pierce soon put it up in a form easily to be procured all over this United States.

The best known remedy in all America for the following symptoms: Aching from head to foot—that is the condition that afflicts some women at stated periods—backache, dizziness, and pains almost unbearable is Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription—an honest and a safe remedy which no woman can afford to lose the opportunity of trying for the cure of those distressing complaints which weaken a woman's vitality. Dr. Pierce not only assures you that his "Favorite Prescription" is honestly made, but he lets you know just what it contains. It is now nearly forty years since he put up this prescription in a form to be easily obtained at every drug store. Previous to that time Dr. Pierce practiced medicine and made the diseases of women his specialty. He found that there was one prescription that cured ninety-eight per cent. of his cases. The ingredients were taken from nature in the shape of a non-alcoholic extract of medicinal roots whose curative properties are generally recognized by the medical profession throughout the country, and whose harmless character you can learn from any druggist or physician. Dr. Pierce early learned how to combine these ingredients in just the right proportion to make a harmonious and efficient remedy. Experienced chemists under his direction use great care in the preparation of this non-alcoholic compound.

Miss Carrie Sprecher, of Mount Morris, Ill., writes Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows: "For over one year I suffered from what my physician pronounced womb trouble. Had doctored with doctors in the East and also in the West but found only temporary relief. I finally purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' and by using only that small quantity I have found wonderful relief. I say to all that it is unnecessary to be sick when one can use Dr. Pierce's remedies."

Sick and ailing women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

VERY ILL AT PORT ARTHUR

John Pengilly Sick From Exposure While Lost In Woods.

John Pengilly, for years one of the best known of the Vermilion range mining men, and lately a resident of Northfield, Minn., is critically ill at the Mariaggi hotel in Port Arthur, as a result of long exposure in a heavy rain storm in Aikens township, where, with two guides, he was looking over some iron properties for Mackenzie & Mann.

When their work in the woods was completed the three started to make their way out, only to find that the guides had lost their way. For twenty-seven hours they wandered about, and all the time it was raining heavily. The guides gave up all hope of getting out of the forest. Here Mr. Pengilly took the lead, and several hours later the trio reached the Canadian Northern tracks. They were taken to Port Arthur on the limited and Pengilly was at once removed to the hotel, for the exposure to which he was subjected had developed inflammation of the lungs.

Few mining men have so extended an acquaintance in Duluth and on the ranges as Mr. Pengilly, who, until he resigned some time ago, was superintendent of all the Vermilion range properties of the United States Steel corporation.

FLOATER FOUND.

Storm Washes Up Badly Decomposed Body.

The decomposed body of an unknown man was washed ashore by the severe storm Saturday night, and was found yesterday morning on the bay near the Northwestern Fuel company's dock.

The body was covered with winter clothing, overshoes and a heavy mackinaw, which would indicate that the body had been in the water since winter.

There was nothing in the pockets that would aid in the identification, and owing to the advanced stage of decomposition, Coroner McCuen ordered Durkan & Crawford, the undertakers, to bury the body at once, without attempting to hold it for identification.

FUNERAL OF MRS. EKLUND

Immense Number of Friends at the Final Services.

A large following of friends attended the funeral of Mrs. J. J. Eklund yesterday afternoon. After a brief service at the family residence, 13 East Third street, the remains were removed to the First Swedish Lutheran church, where Rev. Carl Solomonson conducted services, assisted by Rev. A. F. Elmquist. At the residence Dr. A. W. Ryan read from the Scriptures and Rev. W. J. Krantz of West Duluth read the prayer. The four pastors officiated at the grave. Interment was at Forest Hill.

The pall bearers were C. W. Erickson, N. A. Linderberg, J. B. McGiffert, W. H. Jones, Albert Baldwin and H. B. Knudsen. F. A. Phorwall, Gus Meden, A. H. Melander, C. A. Erickson, John Carlson and H. Jalmar Ahl were an honorary guard.

The church service was attended by more than 1,200 persons. Several people, among them the following, were in attendance from outside points:

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Freeman and daughter, Emma, St. Peter; Nels Eklund, Vasa; Mrs. John Olson, Minneapolis; Mrs. C. Engdahl, Ortonville; John Peterson, Miss Agnes Peterson, O. J. Schultz and Mrs. Milgren of St. Paul.

You may have known some particular store very well yesterday—and yet hardly recognize it today. New goods! Let the ads. keep you posted.

Fargo, N. D., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mr. Finnigan was no puzzle to the Duluth aggregation Saturday, and the visitors fattened their batting average at his expense. An even dozen of hits were accumulated by Artie O'Dea's bunch, and a quartet of these were for extra bases.

Two of Duluth's trio of scores were earned. Finnigan kept his hits well scattered, however, and never permitted more than two in any inning, and after holding the visitors down to three runs, he had hopes of his team mates doing enough execution with the stick to win. Fast fielding by Fargo kept the score down, three men being caught at the home plate.

There was no scoring until the fifth. With two down Menelce hit what would have ordinarily been an easy out, but Rosy slipped in the young lake just back of the infield and took his annual bath. The ball fell in the mud four feet away and stuck there till Menelce landed safely on second. There was plenty of joshing at Rose's expense, and he looked madder than the proverbial wet hen. O'Dea enjoyed Rose's swimming exhibition to such an extent that he landed safely for a two-sacker and the elongated fellow easily scored.

Fargo concluded the seventh was lucky and tied the score. With Alberts down, Fitzgerald hit to center and Erickson concluded he would catch the shortstop at first and made a high heave that O'Dea never saw till the ball was in the right field bleachers. By the time it was retrieved Fitz was on third, and Erickson's new play was not a success. Finnigan struck out, French walked and stole second, while Fitz scored on an overthrow by McAleese. Mehl walked and French scored on Traeger's single. Mehl was caught between second and third, retiring the side.

Duluth got another run in the eighth without a hit. Warnish muffed Erickson's pop-up fly, and the big fellow was pushed along to second by McAleese's sacrifice. French juggled McShane's fly back of first and Erickson scored.

Fargo had three men on the paths in the first, but Jarvie struck out. In the sixth, with two men on, Jarvie made the third out on a little one to the pitcher. In the ninth, with two men down and two on, Traeger made the third out from short to first. Fargo had the opportunities but could not make the hits.

The grounds were frightful and the game was played in a sea of mud. The score:

WIN TWO GAMES.

Both of Saturday's Contests Went to Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Maroons took two games from Crookston Saturday.

Lefty Sporer pitched twenty-one consecutive innings, allowing but thirteen hits and three runs in that time. The afternoon game went twelve innings, Howells tying the score in the ninth on a slide to the pate. Kilroy forced in the winning run with a base on balls, when the bases were full.

The evening game was the fastest of the season, the entire nine innings being played in an hour. Sporer pitched again for Winnipeg, and was in even better shape than in the afternoon. The scores:

TAKES SHARP BRACE.

Superior Aggregation Takes Two at Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Tigers outplayed the visitors here Saturday, winning by the score of 5 to 3. Anderson, the first man to bat for the Tigers, sent the little sphere across and trotted around the circuit. That was the only score made until the third inning, when Varco, who had started the inning for the locals with a hit, scored on Spanton's put out. With the bases full and two men out Caldwell fanned.

In the fourth inning the Twins got busy, and made things interesting for the fans. Nehr hit a grounder to Converse and was retired on the initial sack. Then Hanson clouted the little sphere for a two-bagger. Howell was thrown out by Varco on first. With two men down Gilchrist stepped to the plate and gave a terrific swing, sending the little oval far across the rightfielder's head and into the weeds. He sent Hansen in ahead of him and then trotted home himself before the ball was located, tying the score.

The Tigers tried hard to even things up a bit in the last half of the fifth, but the visitors played rapid ball, making their first double, which was followed with two more before the game was over. Chandler led off with a hit, and Leach sacrificed. Hanrahan took a hit and scored Chandler. Spanton got a clean hit, and Caldwell sent a long drive into the center garden, which was caught by Nehr. Hanrahan took a chance, but was doubled out on home.

The Twins failed to get a man as far as third base for the remainder of the game, and the Tigers got busy again in the seventh inning. Chandler led off with a hit, and Leach went out on first. Hanrahan sent a liner through the third baseman, which sent Chandler to third. Then "Reliable" Spanton ascended the rostrum and swung the bat with terrific force for two strikes, but the third one was the one which did the deed. The ball shot over the first baseman's head and into the right garden, and while it was on its journey, Chandler and Hanrahan crossed the home plate, winning the game. The score:

Grand Forks, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first Sunday game of the league ball for this season was played yesterday, and a good sized crowd witnessed the game despite the threatening weather, and the heavy clouds, which threatened to let loose at any moment. The Twins turned the tables on the Tigers, and took the game by a score of 4 to 2.

Houch was on the delivering table for the Tigers, and Hansen did the work for the Twins. It was not until the sixth inning that the visitors solved the mystery connected with the curves as delivered by Houch, and in that inning two singles and a three-bagger netted them two runs. Hansen pitched excellent ball getting eight strike outs, and not issuing a single pass.

The Tigers scored in the first and fourth innings, and failed to get a man across the home plate after that. In the first inning Anderson flew out to Wing, and Varco got a life on an error by Ripley. Chandler sent a long drive into the left garden, and was caught out. Hanrahan lined out a clean two-bagger, and scored Varco. Spanton went out on a foul fly to Ripley. The second and last score made by the Tigers was in the fourth inning, when Spanton sent the ball over the fence.

The first scores made by the Twins were in the sixth inning. Nehr led off with a hit, after Ronesh had struck out. Hansen then sent a long drive past Bradley, and went to the third bag. Howell took a single, and Wing allowed the Tigers to make a double by sending the ball to Houch, who sent it to first, and from there it went to Hanrahan on third. It was in the eighth inning that the visitors scored again, and for the last time. Ronesch again started the inning by being put out on first. Nehr then led with another hit, and Hansen did likewise. Howell got to first on an error by Varco, and Nehr scored on the same play. Wing took a hit, and scored Howell, but was later caught trying to steal second.

St. Paul Wins.

St. Paul, June 26.—The Chicago lacrosse team was beaten by the local team, 13 to 3, in the second game for the Carling cup. The Chicago team is a new organization and the veterans on the St. Paul team had little difficulty in scoring goals.

TRANSFER COMPLETE.

Superior Club Again Enters Northern League Company.

The transfer of the St. Cloud-Brainerd club to Superior will be completed today, and the Twins will henceforth be known as the Superior club.

Counting out the two defeats administered by Pitcher Harris, Superior enters the league with a record of fifteen games won and eighteen lost, and occupying fourth place.

NO SUNDAY BALL.

Police Stop National League Game at Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 26.—There was no professional baseball played here yesterday, although a game was scheduled for the New York and Brooklyn National league clubs at Washington park. The gates were thrown open and about 500 persons entered the grounds, but while the players from both teams were on hand, none of them donned uniforms on account of the edict issued Saturday by Police Commissioner McAdoo. The game will be played next Thursday, the original date set in the season's schedule.

PROTESTS RACE

Joe Roth of Scud Claims Foul By Dr. Frank Lynam.

Yachts Feather and Spray First In Saturday's Contests.

Joe Roth, who sailed the Scud in Saturday's yacht races on the bay, has filed a protest against giving Dr. Frank Lynam, master of the Feather, first place. According to the official time, as kept by Commodore Johnson and Capt. R. W. Marshall, the Feather crossed the line ten second ahead of the Whirlwind, sailed by Will L'Estrange, and twenty-five seconds ahead of the Scud, but Roth claims that Dr. Lynam fouled him a few minutes before crossing the line, and if this charge is shown to be true first place will be given L'Estrange and second to Roth. The matter will be decided one waay or the other by the sailing committee.

The contest was one of the closest ever pulled off on the bay, only a few seconds dividing the first three boats as they crossed the line in a light breeze. There were six entries altogether, but Banshee, sailed by Arthur Leroy, and Miss Modesty, sailed by Julius H. Barnes, dropped out the first time around the five and one-half mile course. North Wind, sailed by H. S. Mann, finished six minutes behind the Scud. These boats were in Class A. In Class B, Spray, sailed by Fred Smith, was pronounced the winner.

The yachts, with those who sailed them, and time of starting and finishing, are as follows:

CLASS A.

| | Starting Time. h. m. | Finishing Time. h. m. |
|---|---|---|
| Feather, Dr. Frank Lynam | 3:30 | 6:11:05 |
| Whirlwind, Will L'Strange | 3:30 | 6:11:15 |
| Scud, Joe Roth | 3:30 | 6:11:30 |
| North Wind, H. S. Mann | 3:30 | 6:17:20 |

CLASS B.

| | Starting Time. h. m. | Finishing Time. h. m. |
|---|---|---|
| Spray, Fred Smith | 3:35 | 5:11:15 |
| Florence, Sterling Smith | 3:35 | 5:15:03 |
| Frolic, H. A. Earnshaw | 3:35 | 5:20:00 |
| Thistle, Charlie Halg | 3:35 | 5:32:00 |

The Class A boats sailed twice around their course, and the Class B craft went twice around their triangular course. The first six crossed the starting line at 3:30 o'clock sharp, and the others five minutes later. The one-design boats were pretty evenly started. Dr. Lynam was first across the line, and he maintained a good uead until near the finish. Down the first leg he steadily increased the distance between the Feather and her followers, and he was first around the first buoy, with Whirlwind second. Shortly after rounding the first buoy Banshee and Miss Modesty dropped out, and the race was left to the other four.

After the course had been sailed once around Feather had a lead of about eighty rods, and appeared to have a cinch on first place, but coming up toward the club house from O-at-ka beach Whirlwind and Scud gained on her at a rapid rate, until the three were almost abreast when 200 yards from the line. The wind, which had not been very strong at any time, here died out almost entirely, and for a short distance it was little better than a drifting match. Then came a slight breeze, and the suspense was soon ended. It was at this critical moment that the foul is claimed to have occurred. The Scud was forging steadily ahead when it came in contact, it is said, with the stern of the Feather, after the Scud had obtained an overlap on the other boat.

This was the first of a series of five races for both classes of yachts for pennants and cups. The races for the cup and pennant will take place on alternating Saturdays.

PARADE OF AUTOMOBILES

Between Thirty and Forty Cars Will Be In Line.

Between thirty and forty automobiles will be in the parade which will take place this evening, previous to the banquet of the Duluth Automobile club.

Efforts are being made to get the cars from Cloquet, but owing to the bad condition of the roads, it is doubtful if they will reach here.

Superior owners are also being requested to turn out, and together with the Duluth cars, the procession will be an imposing one.

W. J. Stevens will act as toastmaster at the banquet, which will be held in the Commercial club rooms. B. A. Ledy, secretary of the St. Paul Automobile club, will be present to explain the details of the big meet to be held in St. Paul next month. The other speakers will be:

William Dalrymple, president of the club; B. F. Ellison, Superior; W. B. Silvey, R. B. Knox, Mayor M. B. Cullum, Fire Chief John T. Black, A. E. McManus, W. W. Walker.

Why suffer with your stomach, kidneys and liver when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well. If taken this month, keeps you well all summer. 35 cents. Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

DAMAGE BY RAIN

Small But Widespread—Bridges Washed Away and Cellars Flooded.

Rainfall Not as Heavy as In Storm of Few Weeks Ago.

No, the rain Saturday night and Sunday morning was not the worst Duluth has had.

Fact is, there have been two worse rains this year.

Assertions were numerous that the rain the other night was "the worst I ever saw in my life."

But there is no denying that is was bad enough. Since Saturday night, up to this morning, the rainfall, as measured at the weather station, was 2.34 inches and about 2.28 inches of that fell during Saturday night and Sunday morning. Once before this month the rainfall in twenty-four hours measured 2.66 inches and once in May of this year it was almost as bad as that.

This rain seems to have done a great deal of small damage. There are roaring torrents where before there were but whispering streams; there are flooded cellars which ere this defied water; and at least one life has been lost through the raising of the water in Lester river, caused by the heavy rain.

Duluth got the worst of the storm Saturday night and Sunday morning, but yesterday it had spread over the entire region of Lake Superior, and at Houghton, Marquette, the Sault and other points the rainfall was almost as heavy as in Duluth. The storm took in most of Northern Minnesota, Northern Wisconsin and Northern Michigan, each suffering a great deal. Very little wind accompanied the storm, but as an electrical storm it was one of the worst of the year. The lightning was terrific and it was feared that it must have done a lot of damage. However, in the city nothing but the striking of the Scott-Graff mill at Twenty-fourth avenue west with but small damage has been reported. The bolts were numerous and as people term it "close." Some paving blocks in the city were loosened by the rain, but not much damage resulted.

Considerable damage was done to bridges and banks of streams by the rain. The rain of a few weeks ago raised all of the streams in this part of the country and they had not fully subsided as yet. The rains of Saturday and Sunday coming on top of this made the streams raging torrents. Lester river and Chester creek looked particularly vicious and the former claimed one life. The water in Lester river carried out a footbridge in the park and swept a number of boats out into the lake. Nobody occupied them fortunately and all but one small boat were recovered.

The Duluth & Northern Minnesota bridge aross Knife river lost one section, it being swept out by the flood which roared down the stream. It is expected that within a few days numerous tales of small losses will straggle in.

GUN CLUB SCORES.

Sportsmen Make Good Records With Blue Rocks.

In the shoot-up for the high average cup, Storey made 45 and 44 out of a possible 50, Berry scored 44 and Fulton killed 45 and 47.

In the shoot-ups for the class medals, Berry broke 22 and 21; Fulton 24 and 24; Story, 21; Wilson, 18; and Peaslee, 15 and 16.

| | |
|---|---|
| Webb | 23-23-19-22 |
| d'Autremont | 15-13 |
| Bradbury | 19 |
| Harrison | 11-13 |

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

Fire in the retail shopping distrito of Nashville, Tenn., Sunday caused damage estimated at between $500,000 and $650,000. The flames were discovered in the Palace, a big department store occupied by Harris Brothers and Jacobus Bros. on the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and Union street, and spread rapidly.

An old Sunday law was enforced vigorously at Austin, Tex., Sunday and saloons and even soda fountains were closed from midnight Saturday night until midnight Sunday. It was impossible to get a shoe shine or a cigar and the baseball managers had to throw wide the gates to everyone in order to play. Hundreds left the city for resorts outside the city limits.

An electric car in South street, Danbury, Conn., ran over several torpedoes placed on the track by boys Sunday night. The loud explosions that followed created a panic among the women passengers, and Mrs. Mary Davis, 60 years old, jumped to her death. The car was moving at a fast rate at the time. Mrs. Davis skull was fractured and she died a few minutes later.

Announcement is made of a gift of $100,000 by the University of Chicago towards the $1,000,000 endowment fund of the American Academy of Fine Arts in Rome.

Thomas M. Casey, cashier of the Salmon bank, at Clinton, Mo., was arrested on a charge of forging two notes aggregating $10,000 preferred by W. M. Stevens. Caseyhad hypothecated the original notes in Kansas City and copies were found in the bank by Bank Examiner Cook. Casey is a son of the late George M. Casey, known as the "Cattle King of Missouri."

INTERNAL TRADE

Grain Receipts at Primary Markets In May Show Decline.

The Live Stock Receipts Show an Appreciable Increase.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Statistics of important internal trade movements, as received by the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, indicate that the grain receipts at leading primary markets were not so heavy during the month of May as they were for a like month in the preceding year, nor was thet otal inbound movement of all cereals at these markets for the first five months of the current year so heavy as that of a corresponding period in 1904, notwithstanding the present year's heavy increase in the movement of corn. On the other hand, live stock receipts, both for the month and for the year, to and including May 31, show an appreciable increase over similar arrivals in 1904.

The total grain receipts at twelve important interior primary markets during May amounted to 27,016,565 bushels, and present a decided decrease, if compared with the preceding month's movement, or with that of a similar month in 1904. For the first five months of the current year grain arrivals at these markets aggregated 222,053,327 bushels, an amount approximately 8,500,000 bushels less than that representing a corresponding movement in 1904. Of the different cereals received, wheat amounted to 55,004,352 bushels; corn, 87,022,899 bushels; oats, 55,942,368 bushels; barley, 21,520,747 bushels, and rye, 2,573,461 bushels. Corresponding inbound movements during a similar period in 1904 were 63,098,533 bushels of wheat, 78,019,351 bushels of corn, 60,742,604 bushels of rye. As compared with the 1904 grain arrivals, losses were sustained at the markets of Cincinnati, Detroit, Duluth, Kansas City, Louisville, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Peoria and St. Louis, while gains were made at Chicago, Omaha and Toledo.

Receipts of wheat at the four spring-wheat markets of Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Chicago and Duluth during the present crop year to and including May 31, amounted to 134,577,081 bushels, as against a corresponding movement in 1903-4 of 137,273,589 bushels, and in 1902-3 of 155,464,414 bushels. Of the current season's movements 89,725,-509 bushels were received at Minneapolis, 6,898,158 bushels at Milwaukee, 22,768,921 bushels at Duluth, and 24,324,-634 bushels at Chicago. As compared with the movement for 1904, losses were sustained at Milwaukee and Duluth, although slight gains were made at both Minneapolis and Chicago.

At the four winter-wheat markets of Toledo, St. Louis, Detroit and Kansas City receipts of wheat from July 1, 1904, to May 31, aggregated 55,891,403 bushels, in contrast with 71,692,155 bushels received during a similar period in 1903-4, and 73,055,147 bushels in 1902-3. Of the current season's arrivals 2,785,638 bushels were received at Toledo, 18,823,690 bushels at St. Louis, 2,229,665 bushels at Detroit, and 21,052,502 bushels at Kansas City. As compared with the 1904 figures, losses were sustained at all four of the markets specified, while comparison with the movements for 1903 indicate a loss for Toledo and Detroit, but a gain for St. Louis and Kansas City. Total receipts of wheat at all of the eight markets named during the crop year to and including May 31, aggregated 190,468,484 bushels, as compared with a like movement in 1903-4 of 208,875,744 bushels, and in 1902-3 of 228,519,561 bushels.

During the month of May the eastbound trunk-line movement of grain from Chicago and Chicago points amounted to 5,786,000 bushels, as compared with a corresponding movement of 1,067,000 bushels in 1904 and 4,457,000 bushels in 1903. The movement for the fifth month in 1905 was the lowest for any one month of the current year, being only about one-half of what it was in April and approximately 10,-000,000 bushels below what it was in March, the opening of the Great Lakes during the early part of May, exerting a powerful influence in causing this early movement. For a five-month period, east-bound rail movements of all cereals from Chicago and Chicago points aggregated 51,681,000 bushels, as against 48,803,000 bushels in 1904 and 45,145,000 bushels in 1903.

At Chicago the receipts of grain during the month of May reached a total of 8,649,353 bushels, this being nearly 1,000,000 bushels lighter than a corresponding movement in 1904, and approximately 4,500,000 bushels below that for 1903. The outbound movement, however, which amounted to 11,569,702 bushels during the fifth month of the current year, although about 3,000,000 bushels below a similar movement in 1903, was nearly 6,000,000 bushels in excess of that for 1904, the opening of the Great Lakes and the consequent reduced rate to the Atlantic seaboard having caused a free movement of the grain stored in elevators. The inbound movement of all cereals at Chicago during the current year to and including May 27 recahed a total of 84,414,072 bushels, an amount over 12,-000,000 bushels greater than the 1904 movement, and about 4,000,000 bushels heavier than that for 1903. Wheat receipts at this city during the current year totaled 6,887,478 bushels, corn receipts 43,074,926 bushels, oat receipts 24,094,407 bushels, rye receipts 537,510 bushels, and barley receipts 9,819,751 bushels. The corn receipts, as compared with those of the first five months of 1904, show a gain of over 14,000,000 bushels, and to this is largely due the heavy increase in the total arrivals of all grains at Chicago. Grain shipments from this market for the first twenty-one weeks of 1905 totaled 60,522,538 bushels, as against 42,715,072 bushels in 1904 and 62,916,591 bushels in 1903.

During the month of May the number of live animals received at Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis and St. Joseph amounted to 2,935,910 head, an amount approximately 400,000 head larger than coresponding movements in either of the two preceding years. Of the current month's receipts at these markets, 534,898 head were cattle, 69,-380 head calves, 1,472,214 head hogs 780,-000 head sheep, and 29,418 head horses and mules. Gains were made in each one of the classes specified by comparison with like movements in 1903 and 1904. The number of cars required to handle the inbound movement of live stock at these five markets during the year totaled 52,338, as against 46,974 cars in 1904 and 48,291 cars in 1903. For a five-month period receipts of live stock aggregated 14,-365,565 head in 1905, as against 12,950,-227 head in 1904 and 12,578,270 head in 1903. The cattle arriving during this period numbered 2,841,695 head—calves, 216,493 head; hogs, 7,410,162 head; sheep, 3714,889 head, and horses and mules, 182326 head.

At Chicago live stock receipts during May totaled 1,348,584 head, an amount appreciably in excess of that representing similar movements in either of the two preceding years. The shipments for the month, which totaled 370,649 head, were also heavier than like movements in 1904 of 1903. Local consumption during May at this city amounted to 972,935 head, and was approximately 100,000 head greater than that of a similar month in either of the two preceding years. During the first five months of the current year 1,334,143 head of cattle, 132,055 head of calves, 3,546,993 head of hogs, 1,696849 head of sheep and 69,853 head of horses were received at Chicago, making a grand total of 6,829,898 head in contrast with a similar movement in 1904 of 6,707,532 head and in 1903 of 6,059,831 head.

Packing house products were shipped from Chicago during the first four weeks of May to the amount of 181,-823,030 pounds in 1905, as against 200,-645,682 pounds in 1904, and 145,490,057 pounds in 1903. For the year to May 27, similar shipments aggregated 965,-161,182 pounds, and were composed of 12,377,900 pounds of beef, 58,180,350 pounds of canned meats, 264,141,934 ponds of cured meats 418,761,119 pounds of dressed beef, 12,255,750 pounds of dressed hogs, 62,657,861 pounds of hides, 126,285,068 pounds of lard, and 10501,200 pounds of pork. The total amount of similar commodities shipped during corresponding months of 1904 amounted to 1,062,606,204 pounds, and in 1903 to 881,320,000 pounds.

Traffic movements on the Great Lakes were resumed in heavy volume during the month of May, receipts for the month amounting to 8,125,360 tons, as against 1,016,733 tons for a corresponding month in 1904, and 7,144,819 tons in 1903. Shipments, which totaled 8,360,607 tons during the fifth month of the current year, were composed of the following items: 97,576 net tons of flour, 15,428,270 bushels of grain and flaxseed, 1,580,847 net tons of coal, 4,-634,822 tons of ore and minerals, 263,615 feet of logs and lumber, and 573,601 net tons of unclassified freight. The total outbound movement during a similar month in 1904 aggregated 1,224,488 tons, and in 1903, 7,1788,105 tons. During the first five months of the current year shipments from various points on the Great Lakes totaled 12,175,018 tons, while a similar movement in 1904 amounted to 2,120,851 tons, and in 1903 to 11,338,790 tons. The great increase for the present year, as compared with that for 1904, was not only caused by an earlier opening of navigation, but also by the restricting influences of the labor difficulties occurring in the spring an dearly summer of 1904.

Traffic on the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Ontario, Canada, for the month of May totaled 5,775,787 net tons, as compared with 449,838 net tons for a corresponding month in 1904, and 5,188,017 net tons in 1903. Of the current month's movement, 4,686,827 tons passed through the United States canal and 1,088,960 tons through the Canadian canal, the total tonnage of those two canals being divided into an eastbound movement of 4,936,851 tons and a westbound movement of 838,936 tons. The principal items composing the eastbound movement were 4,806,670 bushels of grain other than wheat, 4,532,736 net tons of iron ore, and 5,582,061 bushels of wheat while the most prominent items i nthe westbound movement were 624,227 net tons of soft coal, 93,188 net tons of hard coal, 94,8787 net tons of general merchandise, and 59,812 barrels of salt.

DYING OF FAMINE

Is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at all drug stores. Price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

MALARIA

UNDERMINES THE HEALTH

When the germs of malaria enter the blood the entire health is affected, and if the blood is not purified of these germs and microbes, Chronic Sores and Ulcers, Liver Splotches, Chills and Fever, Boils, Aches and Pains, and a great variety of troubles manifest themselves, and soon the entire system is undermined, leaving the sufferer a prey to a most miserable, weak and nervous condition.

913 W. Market St., Louisville, Ky.

For several years I suffered with Chills and Fever, caused by Malaria in my system, and each summer for several years I would have a relapse. Finally my physician prescribed S. S. S. I took a few bottles; this was about six years ago. It entirely cured me, and I have never been troubled since. I am sure no other medicine could have given me so complete and immediate relief, and I cannot speak too highly of S. S. S. My partner in business is now taking S. S. S. for an eruption of the skin, and a general run-down condition of the system, and although he has taken but one bottle, already commences to feel better.

I. SHAFUFF.

S. S. S. counteracts and drives all the poison from the blood and builds up the system by its fine purifying qualities and tonic effects. It strengthens every part, increases the appetite, helps the stomach and digestion, and by supplying the body with rich, pure blood cures Malaria and all its disagreeable ailments. Unlike most blood medicines S. S. S. is purely vegetable. It does not contain a particle of mineral of any kind to disagreeably affect the stomach, digestion and bowels, but by cleansing and strengthening the blood, puts every part of the body in healthy condition. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

Thorough Train From New York to Paris Is Proposed.

French Engineer Suggests a Tunnel Under Bering Strait.

New York, June 26.—"It is possible that it will be within four years, but it will certainly not be very much longer than that, when you will be able to step aboard your Pullman here in New York and go straight through to Paris without getting off the train."

Those were the last words said by M. Loicq de Lobel as he leaned over the rail of the French liner La Savoie just before the vessel pulled out of this harbor bound for Havre.

With him M. de Lobel took the signatures of a notable group of American engineers attesting their faith in his gigantic enterprise and marking what he considers a final step toward the realization of his dream of seven long years—an all-rail route from New York to Paris by way of Alaska and Siberia.

At the point where his rails would reach the water in Alaska at Cape Prince of Wales, and Siberia at East Cape, the Bering strait is only thirty-six miles wide. The chances of successful ferriage across the water was long under discussion, while even a gigantic bridge was suggested to join the two continents.

These plans, however, did not seem to meet the favor of many of the engineers he consulted, and then M. de Label conceived the idea of a tunnel under the straits, and this has been deemed, after invistigation, entirely practicable.

"As a member of the Paris Geographical society I visited Alaska back in 1898," said M. de Lobel, "and the feasibility of the Trans-Alaska-Siberian railway, as we have called the enterprise, struck me then.

"Naturally the most difficult part of the project will be the construction of the tunnel, but the best sense of our engineers is that this work can be accomplished within four years. The water over the route of the tunnel is from 165 to 180 feet in depth, with intrusive granite as the underlying rock.

"Between the Siberian and Alaska coasts lie the Diomede islands. There are two of them, and the larger will permit us to divide the tunnel into two sections of nearly equal length. Here also we can erect works necessary during construction as well as a motive power plant for moving trains either by electricity or compressed air, and also for ventilation of the tunnel.

"Including the approaches, the tunnel will be about thirty-eight miles in length, and this, with the 3,800 miles of railroad which we purpose constructing in Siberia and the 1,200 we intend building in Alaska, will go to make up our 'Trans-Alaska-Siberian railroad.' We will connect in Siberia with the 'Trans-Siberian' road at Irkutsk, while our Alaskan road will pass through Council City, Nulato and Fairbanks, connecting at a point about 100 miles south of Dawson City with the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is planning an extension to that point.

"The Russian government has approved our plans and has granted a concession of a strip of land sixteen miles in width along the entire length of the road in Siberia, almost 40,000,000 acres.

"It will take, we calculate, about $250,-000,000 to complete the road, and when I come back to this country next November I expect that our company will have been entirely organized and placed upon a firm financial footing.

"I am going to Russia very shortly to submit to the czar himself the evidences of American interest in the matter. The special committee to prepare the terms of the ukase on behalf of the Russian government, has been named, and I expect now no further delay. It is our plan to form an American company to undertake the work of actual construction, and this will be done on my return in the fall.

"I have assurances from men high in finance in Russia, France, England and the United States that they are ready to put $250,000,000, and if necessary $500,000,000, into the enterprise."

It took a large corps of engineers three years to complete the surveys for the Siberian portion of the railroad, and during all this time M. de Lobel, his wife and two daughters lived in Alaska at the point where the tunnel entrance will be made.

This is the advisory committee of the American committee that M. de Lobel has inspired with his own confidence in the success of the undertaking: Alfred Craven, deputy chief engineer of the New York rapid transit commission; Edward Bond, Albany, chairman of the advisory board of canal consulting engineers of the state of New York; Elmer L. Corthell, a member of the same board, chief engineer in construction of a portion of the West Shore railroad, and connected with great Brazilian engineering enterprises; Dr. John A. L. Waddell, Kansas City, consulting engineer in bridge construction, and J. L. Harrington, chief of the Montreal Locomotive and Machine company.

Mr. Cortell said: "So long as it was proposed to make connection between Cape Prince of Wales and the Siberian coast by ferry and the more visionary bridge scheme, the matter did not appeal to me. The plan for a tunnel that originated with M. de Lobel is, however, entirely feasible."

Alfred Craven, on the other hand, believes that the ferry plan could also be made a success.

Asked as to the probable fare that would be charged for an all-rail ticket from New York to Paris, M. de Lobel said that the fare would probably be just about what it is now by trans-Atlantic steamer. It would probably take some forty or fifty days to make the trip.

ISHPEMING BOY IN TROUBLE

He Confesses to Stealing Certified Checks at Lansing.

Lansing, Mich., June 26.—"Mike Knight," who was arrested at Grand Rapids on a charge of entering the home of E. H. Fargo here last Monday and stealing three certificates of deposit aggregating $303, was brought back to this city and en route confessed to being Frank Byrns, son of Rep. J. C. Byrns of Ishpeming. The boy, who is about 17 years of age, has been in Lansing during a good portion of the legislative session and was quite well known.

He says that he came back to Lansing on Monday en route from Chicago to Ohio to see a sick brother. He was robber of $50, he says, and as he couldn't borrow money to continue his journey he decided to get it the best way he could and the back door of the Fargo home presented the best opportunity.

He claims that he found the certificates of deposit and a dollar bill in a handkerchief on the floor. He at once took a train for Grand Rapids and wrote from the Hotel Strathmore to H. P. Campbell, assistant cashier of the Lansing State bank, who had signed the certified checks, asking him to cash one of the checks. They were made out to Hattie Fargo, but had been altered to read "Hattig" Fargo.

The boy does not seem to realize the enormity of his offenses. His father, Rep. Byrns, has been attending the national convention of the Woodman of America at Milwaukee, being one of the national directors, but he started for Lansing at once on learning of his son's trouble. Young Byrns was held for examination June 27, on $600 bail.

BIG GIFTS TO THE Y. M. C. A.

Thousands of Dollars For New Buildings Are Offered.

New York, June 26.—The largest gift made by a Southern man to a Southern Y. M. C. A. association is that of W. W. Cummer, who offers $30,000 for a building for Jacksonville, Fla., on condition that $50,000 additional be pledged and that no indebtedness be incurred in erecting the structure. Other large gifts to Southern associations were those by the Peabody brothers to Columbus, Ga., for a $60,-000 building; Mrs. William E. Dodge, a building costing $80,000 to the university of Virginia. H. Rosenberg, a Hebrew, bequeathed $65,000 for an association building at Galveston, Tex., eight years ago.

By the will of Mrs. George P. Lord, Elgin, Ill., receives $56,000. Mrs. Lord and her husband have been constant and liberal supporters of the Elgin association for many years.

Dayton, Ohio, has received a pledge of $15,000 from a gentleman who recently gave $35,000 toward its $250,000 building fund. The conditions named are that the balance of $45,000 be pledged by June 16 The canvas was completed at 10:10 o'clock of that day, thus closing one of the largest building canvasses ever conducted by an association. It has taken several years.

Mrs. Elkins wife of Senator Elkins of West Virginia, has given a corner lot, 100x150 feet, in the heart of the business district of Elkins, W. Va., for a $50,000 building, which will be immediately erected by her and given to the association. Savannah, Ga., Y. M. C. A. has over $45,000 pledged toward its $60,000 building, and Lynchburg, Va., which recently started out to raise $50,000, has raised $60,000 on a $75,000 building. It expects to complete its canvass in a short time.

Ohio Y. M. C. A. now has twelve building movements in hand, involving property amounting to $1,112,000. The state of Illinois has fn pledges for Association buildings $505,737 for twelve buildings at thirteen cities and towns. It seems that the record of the Y. M. C. A. of building a new home every five days will be eclipsed his year.

A. H. Jones, a wealthy bachelor of Hallsville, Mo., has given $15,000 to the fund for the association building at the university of Missouri. The subscription brings the fund up to $30,538. The building is to cost $50,-000. It is probable work will begin upon it this summer.

In West Virginia building projects are moving along swiftly. Parkersburg will open its building in September. Work has begun on Elkins' building. Fairmont will close its temporary work and concentrate on a new building. Wheeling has secured $31,-000 toward a $100,000 new building. J. N. Vance, an ex-president of the association, contributing $25,000 of the amount. The Huntington board is encouraged in its building project. Charleston has secured five $5,000 subscriptions and $1,000 pedges are at hand.

FOURTEEN INJURED IN STREET CAR WRECK.

Chicago, June 26.—Fourteen persons were injured yesterday afternoon, three of them seriously, when an electric car on the Chicago and North Shore railways, left the tracks at Grove street, Evanston. The car was traveling rapidly and left the rails in turning a curve. It ran 100 feet on the pavement and was stopped by striking a pole supporting the trolley wires. The front part of the car was wrecked and the passengers were thrown into confusion among the debris. Nearly every person in the car was injured.

NORWEGIANS' PICNIC.

Ten Thousand Gather at Como Park, St. Paul.

St. Paul, June 26.—Ten thousand sons and daughters of Norway gathered yesterday at their annual picnic at Como Park, adopted resolutions addressed to the members of the Norwegian storthing congratulating them upon their action in declaring Norway independent of Swedish rule, and urging them to stand firm until the freedom of Norway is achieved and good relations with the sister country established. An address to the Swedish-Americans also was adopted. In this it is said that while, as Norwegians and of Norwegian descent, their sympathies are with the fatherland, still as American citizens, they have naught but the kindliest of feelings for their Swedish neighbors and this good feeling they will maintain whatever may come to pass in the old country.

COMPOSITION OF THE NEW GREEK CABINET.

Premier and minister of finance and minister of foreign affairs, ad interim, J. M. Ralli. Minister of war and minister of the interior, ad interim, M. Mavromichaetis. Minister of marine, M. Boudouris. Minister of justice, N. Christopoulos. Minister of instruction and worship, M. Calliphornes.

A cabinet was formed by M. Ralli a few days after the assassination of Premier Delyannes, which occurred June 13, but it tendered its resignation June 22 owing to the opposition among the ministers to Premier Ralli's proposal to modify the Delyannis program. King George then intrusted to M. Ralli the formation of another cabinet.

COURTESY TO CHINESE

Must Be Shown By Immigration Officials.

Washington, June 26.—By direction of President Roosevelt, action has been taken by the administration which not only will facilitate the landing in this country of Chinese of all classes, but will also eliminate from the immigration bureau such adminstrative features as have been the subject of criticism by the Chinese. It is the declared intention of the president to see that Chinese merchants, travelers, students and others of the exempt classes shall have the same courtesy shown to them by officers of the immigration bureau as is accorded to citizens of the most favored nation.

In addition to the president's order, Secretary Metcalf has issued instructions to the immigration officers which, it is believed, will remedy the difficulty heretofore complained of by the Chinese government and individuals. It is anticipated that the prompt action taken by this government to meet the objections made by the Chinese will eliminate the possibility of serious trade difficulties between China and the manufacturers of this country.

COSSACKS KILL A JEWISH FAMILY.

Lodz, Russian Poland, June 26.—The most serious phase of the fighting between the military and strikers is at an end, but there are still isolated attacks in the suburbs.

At Baluty, yesterday morning, Cossacks attacked a Jewish family of five persons, who were driving in a cab to the station and shot and killed all, including the cabman.

At Pabjanice, near Lodz, workmen attacked two policemen and shot and instanty killed one and wounded the other.

BRITISH CRUISER RUNS DOWN PASSENGER SHIP.

Ferroll, Spain, June 26.—The British cruiser Carnarvon ran down the North German line steamer Coblenz in a dense fog at 4 o'clock yesterday morning off Cape Prior, on the northwest coast of Spain, ten miles from Ferroll. The Coblenz was badly damaged and sprang a leak. The passengers were transferred to the cruiser, which towed the liner here. The injury to the cruiser was trivial, but the Coblenz will have to go into drydock.

HEAVY LOSS AT THE MINES

By Floods Near Chisholm —Leonard Mine Stables Burned.

Chisholm, Minn., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The heavy rain of Saturday night resulted in a loss of several thousand dollars to the owners of mines and stripping contractors. Drake & Stratton were the heaviest losers. At the Leonard mine, fire supposed to have been caused by a bolt of lightning, destroyed the large stables, and six horses and three mules were burned to death. The fact that there had been a fire was not known until Sunday morning, after it was all over with. The property loss in this instance was about $2,000.

Aside from the burning of the stable, the mine itself was partly filled with water, and work in it was delayed in consequence. The water will be pumped out late today, however. The operations of Winston & cDar, stripping contractors at the Munroe mine, have also been suspended on account of the rain. There is six or seven feet of water in the pit. Work was suspended in the mine proper because of water in the drift. At the Jordan mine the pits, one of which is quite deep, are both full. A large portion of earth to the west of the shaft was washed away. All work, except pumping water, is suspended. The lake is higher than it has been for years, and in the lower part of town the sidewalks are flooded, although not much damage was done here.

DROWNED IN ELY LAKE.

Eight-Year-Old Boy Fell Into Water.

Eveleth, Minn., June 26.—Stephen Facez, an 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Facez of Eveleth, was drowned Saturday afternoon in Ely lake. The boy had been playing on the shore of the lake, opposite Sparta, with his small brother, and they became attracted toward a boat close to the shore as a more interesting playground. It was while young Stephen was in the boat that it drifted from the shore with him. It is supposed that he became excited on seeing the shore recede, because when it was about 100 feet from the shore he fell into the lake headforemost. His brother immediately started for town to notify his parents or what had occurred.

In the meantime Mrs. Sherman Douglas, with a couple of children was rowing across the lake from Sparta and while some distance away noticed the child go into the water head first. Her supposition was that he was in swimming from the way he entered the water, and she did not pay much attention. The child had risen for the third time when she saw what had really happened, but she was too far away to render any assistance, the child sinking out of sight for the last time.

Andrew Kinnenen, 64 years of age, was run over by an ore train on the Duluth & Iron Range, near the Pettit mine, at midnight Saturday night, and killed. A train of loaded cars drawn by Engine No. 54 had pulled out from the Eveleth yards and was running at the usual rate of speed at the Pettit, four miles east of here. When the members of the crew found they had struck a man, the train was stopped. They found the body on the track and notified Coroner Gleason.

SMALL BOY DROWNED.

Falls From Raft Into a Ravine at Ashland.

Ashland, June 26.—While on a raft with two small companions, Clement Olson, the 10-year-old son of Barnard Olson, of this city, was drowned late yesterday afternoon. The body was recovered fifteen minutes later.

The boy had been playing on a raft constructed by himself, his small brother and little Johnny Raub, on a pond formed in a ravine by the heavy rains at Eighth avenue west and Twelfth street. The water was about ten feet deep and in some manner young Olson tumbled from the raft into the water.

His small companions tried to save him but they were too young to succeed and their cries brought passersby to the scene and the body was recovered.

WOMAN SHOOTS HER FOUR CHILDREN AND HERSELF.

Grand Lake, Col., June 26.—Mrs. Watt C. Gregg shot and killed her four children and attempted to take her own life yesterday. The woman is in a critical condition from a wound in the side and may not live. The tragedy is believed to have been committed by the woman during a fit of temporary insanity. Her husband says that recently Mrs. Gregg has shown sings of mental aberration. The husband, who was on his way to a neighbor's house, heard shots in the direction of his own home and, hastily returning, found his wife lying wounded on the doorstep and three of the children lying on the floor in pools of blood. The other child was sitting in a chair, dead. The children ranged in age from six months to eight years.

HUGE TASK.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." ## Wheat Advances But Has Recession Before the Close.

Weather Is Still the Main Influence In the Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 26.—The wheat market had a firm opening this morning owing to the rains in the Northwest. Before the close, however, most of this gain had been lost. The grain trade fears that the rains are too heavy, but the bullish sentiment created on June rains is not very enthusiastic, about as many traders believing that June rains are a necessity, and that with proper weather following they will aid rather than retard the crop. Cash wheat prices hold fairly strong in all markets. The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ½d higher, Paris ½c lower, Berlin ¼c lower and Budapest 1c lower.

The Winnipeg market was up about 2c during the session today, due to the rains and a driving in of shorts.

The September option in Duluth closed unchanged, ⅜@½ higher in Minneapolis, ⅝c higher in Chicago, ⅜c higher in Kansas City and St. Louis and ⅛c lower in New York.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the previous week and the corresponding week of last year were as follows:

The amount of wheat on passage decreased 568,000 bushels, and corn increased 640,000 bushes.

Car receipts at Duluth were 16, against 15 last year, and at Minneapolis 206, against 278 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 222, against 293 last year. Chicago received 3, against 6 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 344,096 bus., last year 389,118 bus. Shipments 335,467 bus., last year 128,043 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 41,944 bus.

The visible supply of wheat last week decreased 1,494,000 bus., and is now 15,-268,000 bus., against 14,652,000 bus. last year.

In the Liverpool market corn closed ⅜@⅝d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅜c higher. September oats closed ⅝c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 997,350 bus., last year 574,067 bus. Shipments 677,765 bus., last year 369,820 bus. Clearances were 156,267 bus. The visible supply of corn last week decreased 13,000 bus., and is now 2,568,000 bus., against 5,434,000 bus. last year.

Trading in wheat was dull in the Duluth market. The new September option opened unchanged at 84⅜c, advanced to 85½c at 9:55, and fell back steadily until the close, which was at 83¾c, unchanged from Saturday. The old September opened unchanged at 89¾c, advanced to 90¾c and closed ¼c up at 90c. The July option closed ½c lower at $1.11½.

Flax was very dull. The October option opened ¼c higher at $1.26¾, sold up to $1.27 and closed at $1.26¾. September declined 1½c and July was unchanged.

Oats advanced ⅝c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Additional Rains Create Firm Tone In Wheat.

Chicago, June 26.—Additional rains in the Northwest created a firm undertone in the wheat market here today. Weather in the Southwest was favorable for harvesting operations, and on that account commission houses with Southwestern connections were moderate sellers. Pit traders however, were generally on the buying side. July opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 90c to 90¼c. After touching 89½c, the price rallied to 90⅜c, September opened a shade to ⅜c higher at 84⅞@85c to 85¼c, sold at 84⅞c, and then rallied to 85½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 225 cars against 199 cars last week, and 239 cars a year ago.

At 90¼c July touched the highest point of the day. September sold up to 85¾c. Late in the session there was considerable liquidation of the July delivery, cash wheat being weak as a result of the bearish reports from the Southwest; prompt movement of new wheat to market was a depressing influence. The market closed weak, with July at the lowest point of the day at 89¾c, a net loss of ¼c. September was up ⅛c at 85¼c.

Notwithstanding liberal receipts, sentiment in the corn pit was quite bullish, reports from the countr showing very light acceptances of bids from cash houses. Strength of wheat was another influence. July opened ⅛c to ¾c higher at 53⅜c to 54¾c, and advanced to 54c. September opened up ⅛c to ⅝c at 52½c to 52¾c. Later the price touched 53½@54c. Local receipts were 855 cars with 330 of contract grade.

Active buying by bull leaders sent the price of July up to 54¾c and September to 53⅞c. The market closed strong with July up ⅞c at 54⅛c. September was up 1⅛c at 53⅛c.

Oats were firm in sympathy with other grains. July opened unchanged at 31⅞c and sold up to 32¾c. September opened unchanged at 29¾c, an dadvanced to 30⅜@⅛c. Local receipts were 161 cars.

September pork was up 7½c at $13.05. Lard was up 5c at $7.50. Ribs were 7½@10c to 10c@12½c higher at $7.57½ to $8.00.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—World's shipments 10,712,000 about same as week ago, on passage decreases 568,000. This wheat market ruled within narrow range, opening unchanged to a small fraction lower, from which point a rally developed, subsequently losing the full gain. The general conditions seem unchanged. The weather is still the important factor. Receipts of new wheat are at best coming in slowly and while no very urgent demand is noted for cash wheat, there is enough, however, to hold cash markets reasonably steady. The uncertainties as they exist will deter any extended short selling. We still feel favorable to the buying side on recessions.

Corn—This market gave quite an exhibition of strength, starting strong and scoring quite a substantial gain, all of which was not fully held. The trade has been expecting an increase in the visible, but the bulls were agreeably surprised even at the small decrease. Receipts are extremely large and of good quality, but on the other hand the weather is none too favorable for the growing crop. Too much molsture and rather low temperatures causing some concern. The action of the market seems to suggest that the old bull leaders were again on the bull side.

Oats—Partially in sympathy with corn and some short covering, the market ruled quite active and made quite a little headway for the day. The weather will do much in shaping price-making in this market.

Provisions—Smaller hog receipts than expected caused better prices at the yards, the market closing 5c to 10c higher. The trade is still largely of a changing character, and on the whole the market shows some improvement.

* * *

Charles E. Lewis, Minneapolis: I think we are going to have a good big winter wheat crop. When I say this it does not necessarily follow that I feel bearish on the price, because I not only found a lot of wheat, but I found a world of people to eat it. There is no longer a wild and woolly West. The country is settled from one end to the other. Country mills throughout the winter wheat section are running full capacity night and day, and in Oklahoma are paying 92c for good wheat. In Western Kansas 80c is paid for No. 4. If we raise more wheat than we can use at home, and there should not happen to be an export demand, I think farmers more able to carry 100,000,000 bus than ever before, because the country was never so prosperous, and they will hesitate a long time before they get up in the middle of the night to haul their wheat at less than 90c. In Minnesota and the Dakotas we must have a change of weather at once, or we will have another disaster. The season is just like last year.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 26.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 6@10 points in response to slightly lower cables than expected and the outlook for a bearish weekly crop report tomorrow. Offerings, however, were restricted by apprehensions that rains in the South, if continued would cause a renewal of crop complaints and with New Orleans buying, the market soon rallied to about Saturday's closing figures, following which it was quiet, but steady to firm in tone with spot houses buying July.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.30; middling gulf, 9.55; sales, 813 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady; June, 8.64; July, 8.71; August, 8.77; September, 8.84; October, 8.91; November, 8.95; December, 9.01; January, 9.06; February, 9.08; March, 9.11; April, 9.13; May, 9.16.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Operations By Longs Conducted With Vigor and Confidence.

Growing Dimensions of Gold Shipments Finally Chilled Demand.

New York, June 26.—Opening prices rose above Saturday's level ignoring the irregular tone of the London market before the opening here. Union Pacific, People's Gas and Brooklyn Transit gained a point, and B. & O. and Missouri Pacific large fractions. There was a drop of 2¼ in Pittsburg Coal.

Operations on the long side were conducted with new vigor and confidence. The spirited demand for such potent leaders as St. Paul, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, New York Central, Reading, United States Steel stocks and Copper stimulated bullish ventures all through the list. The above named stocks and a dozen or more of prominence, were marked up to 1 to 1¼ before the buying showed any material abatement. When realizing orders made their appearance, the effect was not of consequence, a rise in Erie serving to sustain the list. United States Rubber moved up 2 points and the preferred 2⅜. Northern Pacific and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Soo declined a point each.

There was occasional pauses in the buying but offerings were absorbed with trifling effect on prices. Pennsylvania rose through heavy offerings at 140 to 140¾ and Erie touched 43. Union Pacific, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific and United States Steel preferred made two points gain or over. Delaware and Hudson, Kansas City Southern preferred and St. Louis and San Francisco first preferred advanced 2. Rubber Goods preferred 3½ and United States Rubber preferred 4⅛. Bonds were firm at noon.

Very few of the standard stocks eclipsed their high prices of the morning. Professionals sold at all favorable opportunities, but the absorbent power continued good and prices held particularly well. Even the announcement of an engagement of $1,000,000 gold for export did not have any immediate effect in inducing selling. Reading was bought in very large block and touched 99½. Enameled preferred and Pittsburg Coal preferred jumped 4 points and I. C., and Pacific Mail 2.

The market became very quiet and ceased to advance, but reactions were not more than nominal and there was no urgent pressure to sell.

Union Pacific got above 128, Illinois Central rose 2⅜, Smelting 2½ and People's Gas 7. But the growing dimensions of the gold movement chilled the demand. Engagements were announced of $3,300,000 for shipment to Paris this week. Prices were not much affected by the subsidence of activity, recessions being limited to fractions. Lead advanced 3⅜. Reading and Pennsylvania rose again to the top level, but the closing was somewhat irregular.

PERKINS GOES IN

Third of Big Quartet Christened By Miss Powell of Duluth.

The launching of the steamer George W. Perkins of the Pittsburg Steamship company took place at 3 o'clock sharp this afternoon at the yards of the Superior Shipbuilding company in Superior. The Perkins is the third of a quartet of fresh-water giants to go into the water this year. The first was the E. H. Gary, which has been in commission for over a month and has smashed the ore carrying record; the second was the W. E. Corey which was launched at South Chicago last Saturday, the Pekins is next, and the fourth of the quartet will be the Henry C. Frick.

The registered length of the Perkins is 558.2 feet, her tonnage width 56.8 feet, and her depth 26.5 feet. Her measurements show 6,406 gross tons capacity and 4,922 net tons.

The launching today proved the biggest event in its line that has happened at the Head of the Lakes since the Christopher Columbus slid down the ways and took her initial bath in Howard's Pocket in 1893. Not only did Superior turn out thousands of spectators today, but thousands more went over from Duluth to see Miss Jennie Jewell Powell of Duluth christen the big boat. Tugs, ferries and every kind of craft were pressed into service to carry the cowds over. Launch parties attended in large numbers, practically the whole flotilla of launches of the Head of the Lakes crowding into Howard's Pocket to see the big boat take her dip. The pocket was gay with flags on the launches and other small boats and the bright dresses of the women and girls added to the color scheme.

No mishaps attended the plunge of the steamer. Miss Powell attended by her father, L. W. Powell, and other friends, stood on the staging provided for the occasion and just as the big boat began to slide, smashed a bottle of champagne on her bow, christening the monster George W. Perkins.

FIGHT FOR CHILD

Supreme, District, Probate and Municipal Courts In Mix-Up.

Attempt of Father to Kidnap Little Girl Started It.

Marshall, Minn., June 26.—About a year ago William C. Martin, who was then living in North Dakota, attempted to get his daughter, Arlene Martin, aged 4 years, who was then living with her grandparents, Fred and Dora Lehmann, at Tracy, Minn. The act on the part of Martin at that time caused trouble to himself and the Lehmanns, which has been brewing ever since. Martin's wife was a daughter of the Lehmanns, and died at the birth of Arlene, and Arlene has made her home with her grandparents ever since.

Martin was married again about a year and a half ago, and then he attempted to get his daughter, but her grandparents refused to give her up; he counseled attorneys, who advised him to take the girl. Accordingly, about the 16th day of June, 1904, he went to Tracy with a rig and driver; he drove to the Lehmann residence, where he found Arlene playing in the yard. He rushed in quickly and carried her to the carriage, but before he could get away one of the Lehmann girls caught the team by the head. The driver, it seems used his whip freely on the girl, and she finally let go her hold on the horses, and all went well until the father and child reached Wabasso, where he was taken into custody by the deputy sheriff of Lyon county, under a warrant charging him with the crime of kidnaping. Martin and Arlene were taken back to Tracy and put into jail, where they both remained during Sunday, the 17th.

On Monday Martin had another warrant served on him for assault and battery, and at the same time a writ of habeas corpus was served in the matter, entitled the State of Minnesota ex rel Dora Lehmann, petitioner, vs. William C. Martin. The matter was tried before Walter Wakeman, court commissioner, requiring a whole week for the trial, and during that time many witnesses were examined from Tracy, for the purpose of showing that Martin was not a fit person to have the care and custody of his own child. The evidence convinced the court commissioner of this fact, and he awarded the child to the custody of the relator, Dora Lehmann, and accordingly the child was delivered over by the sheriff to Dora, who has had the child ever since. Martin appealed to the supreme court, and on June 9, 1905, received notice from the supreme court that the order made by Walter Wakeman had been reversed, and Martin given the care and custody of his own child. In the meantime, on May 29, 1905, Fred Lehmann, husband of Dora, petitioned the probate court of Lyon county to be appointed guardian of said Arlene, and the probate court appointed him such guardian. The petition showed that said Arlene had about $25 in personal property, and that Lehmann was a suitable person to be her guardian. On June 19, 1905, William C. Martin again arrived here from his Dakota home to get his child, but found the above order from the probate. He at once petitioned the probate court for an order against Fred Lehmann to show cause why he should not be removed as such guardian of said Arlene. The order was served and the hearing set for 5 o'clock of that day and all parties were present in court. It appeared from the evidence that there was no reason why Fred Lehmann should be given the guardianship of said Arlene, while she was still under the control of said Dora, his wife, and accordingly the court made an order removing said Fred Lehmann as guardian on the grounds that he had not acquainted the court with all the facts at the hearing for his appointment, and on the further grounds that he was not a suitable person to be guardian of said child, as it appeared from the evidence that he was a proprietor and bartender of a drinking saloon in Tracy, Minn., where all kinds of intoxicating liquors are sold. He at once appealed from this order. About the same time that this order was made the judgment of the supreme court was received by the clerk of the district court. An order was at once made and placed in the hands of the sheriff requiring him to take said Arlene from the custody of said Dora and deliver the child to her father, William C. Martin. The sheriff went to Tracy on the 21st, armed with this order, for the purpose of bringing the child back, but when he reached the Lehmann home he was informed by Dora that she did not have the child any more in her possession, as Arlene had been turned over to the possession of her husband Fred. So the sheriff returned without the child. Appeal is now being made to the judge of the district court for an order to bring Dora Lehmann and Fred Lehmann, her husband, before the court to show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court, for refusing to obey its orders.

This is one of the most interesting and hotly contested cases of the kind that has ever appeared in this county, and the end is not yet. It may not be settled until the next term of the district court, but should Judge Webber hold that the Lehmanns are in contempt of court, it may terminate this matter at once. If this should not be done, there will still be a contest on over the right of the custody of the child, Lehmann claiming under the letters of guardianship issued out of the probate court, and Martin claiming under the order made by the supreme court.

ALFRED BUCK LOCATED.

Said to Be Living on Isle of Pines.

Mankato, Minn., June 26.—When Alfred A. Buck, son of the late Judge Daniel Buck, defaulted from Mankato, owing about $15,000, he left for parts unknown. After he left Mankato he went to Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Or. Nothing was heard from him for a long time, and finally his wife and son left for the West and met him at San Francisco. They all went to New Orleans and sailed for the Isle of Pines.

Yesterday some one sent a copy of the Isle of Pines paper to this city. The paper is published at Santa Fe, Isle of Pines, Cuba, and is dated June 12. We find in it a large advertisement of the American hotel, said to be owned by D. W. McGregor and George C. Gould and is located at Nueva Gerona, on the same island. On the first page we read the following among the local items of the same place: "Last Sunday's boat brought sad news for a number of residents here, viz: the death of D. W. McGregor's father," etc. Residents of Mapleton are not in the Sherlock Holmes business, so they cannot account for the accuracy of the information or surmisings. But it is said that when Alfred A. Buck, the defaulting cashier of the Mapleton State bank, went to the island, he took the name of "McGregor," and the item just quoted seems to refer to the death of his father, the late Judge Buck, who passed away May 21st at Mankato.

It is an assured fact that Buck did take the name of McGregor after he left Mapleton about two years ago. It was reported a short time since that Buck had left the Isle of Pines and was in Canada with his wife and son. It is rumored that a well known resident met him on the street in Montreal.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

John Young, Alleged Murderer of Todd, Released on Bail.

Pierre—Attorneys John Pusey of Miller and C. C. Gleim of Wessington Springs, before Judge Gaffy secured the release on bond of $5,000 of John A. Young, confined in the Hand county jail on a charge of murdering George Todd, an aged recluse, in Hand county a year ago. Todd was murdered and the body buried. The crime was not discovered for several weeks after it occurred.

Pierre—Doane Robinson, superintendent of the census, has been called upon to enforce the legal provisions which were provided to cover cases where people refused to give the required information to the census enumerators. The case is in Moody county, where W. A. Davis, the sheriff of the county, is accused of refusing to give the required information, and Superintendent Robinson has ordered the proper county authorities to proceed against the official. The penalty provided is that of a misdemeanor, with an additional penalty of $20 to be collected by civil suit.

Vermillion—Another historical landmark of South Dakota has gone up in flames. Fire destroyed the first building to be erected on the present site of the city of Vermillion. The old frame structure was built on the hill in 1860. It was the first land office in the two Dakotas and James Allen, who was appointed by his old friend and schoolmate, President Lincoln, was receiver.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Hanson celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage.

Chamberlain—The board of commissioners of Brule county has ordered two more dipping stations in the county—one at Kimball and the other in Torrey Lake township. This will make a total of five. Much feeling has been caused by the order to dip all cattle, whether showing disease or not, and farmers declare they will not dip unless compelled to do so by the courts.

Chamberlain is preparing for an old-time celebration of the Fourth of July. A notable feature of the day will be the crossing of the first train over the new railroad bridge.

The first monthly horse sale of the Chamberlain Stockyards & Commission company will be held at the stockyards in Chamberlain on Tuesday, June 27. It is expected that several thousand head of range and domestic horses will be offered.

Huron.—Rev. Charles M. Daley of this city, state superintendent of Congregational Sunday schools, has returned from an extended missionary journey in the south part of the state. He attended commencement exercises at Ward academy, in Charles Mix county, of which he is a trustee. This school, which has had so phenomenal a growth, was established in 1883, and named for the founder of Yankton college, Dr. Joseph Ward. The total enrollment of the year was 129.

FATHER AND SON DROWNED.

Waterloo, Iowa, June 6.—While bathing in the Cedar river at Sans Souci park today, W. H. Young and son of Britt, Iowa, were drowned, the father having been seized with cramps in deep water and the son going to his rescue. The body of the father has been found.

REBELS DEFEAT GERMANS.

Capetown, June 26.—The rebel leader Merengo has attacked and defeated a German force commanded by Captain Siebert at Amoas in the Karas mountains, German Southwest Africa. All the German ammunition and supplies were carried off by the rebels. The losses are reported to have been havy.

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

It is no secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Texas. 25c at all drug stores.

FORFEIT BAIL

Men Pulled For Gambling Do Not Appear In Court.

Thirteen Dragged In at West Duluth Saturday Night.

Lieut. Briggs, Detectives Donald Irvine, Terry and Schulte and Sergt. Fritz raided a gambling room, operated by one William Smith, upstairs in the Phillips hotel on Saturday night and the drag net pulled in thirteen men. The names they gave are John Peterson, James Hill, G. W. White, James Welcome, Peter McDonald, August Swan, John Smith, William Hill, Patrick Duford Charles Hill, John Olson and James Jenkins.

They were taken to the police station and there put up $10 each, Smith paying $25, to guarantee their appearance in municipal court this morning. They did not show up in municipal court today, however, and forfeited their bail. A little poker game was going at the time of the arrest.

LAUNCH UPSETS.

Party of South Superior People Are Wetted.

Yesterday afternoon the launch Ethel, carrying seven or eight South Superior people, ran on a log opposite the blast furnace, tipped over and dumped the crowd into the bay. They clung onto the boat, which filled rapidly when she tipped, and shouted for help. J. A. Curo of South Sixty-first avenue noticed their plight and went out in his steam launch and rescued them.

Their boat was righted, bailed out and again occupied. Mr. Curo towed them to South Superior. The names of the members of the party are not known.

RAMPHREY-BLIGHT.

The marriage of Thomas Ramphrey of West Duluth and Miss Elizabeth Blight of Eveleth will take place tomorrow morning at the latter place. Mr. Ramphrey is well known in West Duluth, where he lives with his parents at 521 Fifty-seventh avenue. He is an engineer on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road. Miss Blight is well known in West Duluth and on the ranges. After a short weddihg trip, the young couple will keep house on Fifty-seventh avenue west.

BIRTHS IN WEST DULUTH.

A daughter was born this morning unto Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Boyd of Fifty-sixth avenue west, a daughter was born yesterday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bolvin of 5517 Gosnold street, and a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Olson of South Sixty-first avenue west, Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Brotherton have also received a new son into the family. They live at 318 North Fifty-second avenue west.

FANS ALMOST KILL UMPIRE

Collapses Under Strain and For Several Minutes Unconscious.

Morristown, N. J., June 26.—For a few minutes there was something of a consternation at the baseball game on Saturday, when the umpire fell in a faint and failed to respond immediately to restoratives.

It was a hot game between the Montclair Athletic club and the Morristown Field club. Two thousand men and women were present. From the beginning it seemed as if both teams were much put out because of the decisions the umpire was making.

Things grew worse as the game progressed. Protests came fast from the first inning to the fifth, when Umpire Newman said he would quit the game if there was any more kicking. The next man up was hit by a pitched ball and the umpire decided that he could not take first base, but must remain at bat.

This so enraged the players that they threatened Newman with violence. He walked off the grounds, but the players coaxed him back again and just after he took his position he said: "My God, boys, I'm going."

He started for the side line, but fainted at first base, and in less than a minute there were a thousand people around him. Two doctors rushed to the fallen man and endeavored to resuscitate him, but their efforts were unavailing for several minutes, and it was feared that the man was dead.

At last, however, the umpire breathed again and insisted on going into the game, but was overruled, and when he was assisted to the club house he was so weak that he could not stand for over an hour. He thinks he will never umpire another game.

MIDSUMMER CELEBRATION

At Ely Attended By Finnish Residents of the Ranges.

Ely, Minn., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northern Minnesota Midsummer day celebration, which began here on Saturday morning, was opened with a parade, in which fully 1,200 people took part. Special trains bearing a large number of visitors arrived from the Mesaba range at 10:30, and then the procession was formed as follows:

Marshals on Horses.
Mayor Vail and Committees in Carriages.
Ely Finnish Band.
Ely Finnish Female Quartette in Costume.
Eveleth Delegation.
Eveleth Band.
Hibbing Delegation.
Hibbing Band.
Ely Finnish Athletic Association.
Ely Citizens.
Carriages.

The streets and buildings of the city were handsomely decorated, and large crowds lined the streets and watched the parade.

The procession proceeded to Sandy Point, where an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor P. R. Vail, prayer was offered by Pastor Matt Lehtonen, and the three bands played Choral No. 310. Then came dinner, and after the wants of the inner man were satisfied, the following program was carried out:

Welcome (in Finnish) .. .. ..... William Vuoti
March .. .. .. ..... Seven Bands.
Singing .. .. .. ..... Mixed Choir.
Address .. .. .. ..... Dr. J. Jackola.
Singing .. .. .. ..... Male Choir.
Poem .. .. .. ..... Em. Mcekli.
Singing .. .. .. ..... Chisholm Choir.
Music .. .. .. ..... Hibbing Band.
Singing .. .. .. ..... Eveleth Male Choir.
Address .. .. .. ..... Judge W. A. Cant.

The balance of the day was taken up with athletic sports and music. The contest between male choirs for a $50 banner was won by Ely. In the band contest, Hibbing won first prize, a $20 baton, and Ely took second prize, $6 cash. In the evening an entertaining concert was held at the opera house.

It was intended to have further exercises and sports on Sunday, but the heavy rainstorm put an end to the festivities.

AMATEUR BALL

Stone-Ordean-Wells Team Defeats First National Bank.

Four Games Are Played In the Interscholastic League.

| | Won. | Lost. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|

| F. A. Patrick | 1 | 1 | .500 |
| First National Bank | 0 | 2 | .000 |
| Kelley-How-Thomson | 0 | 0 | .000 |

In a fast and close game, played Saturday afternoon at Athletic Park, the Stone-Ordean-Wells team defeated the First National bank by the score of 5 to 1.

The game was marked by clean and pretty fielding throughout, with several exceptionally good plays, among which was the stop made by Chester Whyte in the ninth inning, which retired the side, and prevented a batting rally.

Both Lueck and McLean pitched good ball, but the grocers showed their ability as pinch hitters, and made their hits count for uns. A good crowd of spectators watched the game. The line-up:

| S.-O.-W. Co. | | Bank. |

CONSTIPATION is caused primarily by lack of certain elements in the food which tend to more or less imperfect digestion, and to make the liver sluggish and torpid.

The bowels carry away and discharge the fecal matter—that is the refuse matter of the system. If the bowels are constipated, the fecal matter clogs and congests the natural passages, the poisonous excretions are retained in the body. They set back like a stream dammed up, and are absorbed into the system and carried all over the body in the blood.

That's the reason your head aches, your tongue is coated, your mouth tastes like a garbage can, black specks float before your eyes, and you are generally unhappy. It's constipation poisoning.

AS A GRADUATE, NOT AS PRESIDENT, ROOSEVELT PAYS VISIT TO HARVARD

He Spends the Day With His Old Classmates.

The Guest of Bishop William Lawrence While In Boston.

Boston, June 27.—As a Harvard "grad," purposing to participate in the reunion of his class and in the commencement exercises of his college, and not as president of the United States, President Roosevelt came to Massachusetts today. Nevehteless his coming to Cambridge was to signalize one of the most notable commencement celebrations in the history of the university, especially in the matter of attendance, for in addition to the large quota of graduates from Massachusetts many hundreds were present from other states in the Union and points beyond. The president came to take part in the twenty-fifth anniversary of the class of 1880, of which he is a member, and the program for his two days' stay was arranged almost entirely with reference to his participation in the class exercises and the general commencement meetings. A feature of this year's commencement is to be the announcement by Bishop William Lawrence, as president of the Harvard Alumni association, of the result of plans to raise an endowment of $2,500,000 for Harvard from the alumni. This announcement is to be made at the commencement dinner at Memorial hall, tomorrow afternoon, when the president is to deliver an address. President Roosevelt had refused all military escort and all invitations to engage in civic observances of any kind during his visit. Simplicity was to mark his entire course while in Boston and Cambridge, and receptions of all kinds, except those in connection with his visit to Harvard, was to be omitted.

Today President Roosevelt was met at the Back Bay station, this city, by Bishop Lawrence, who will act as the president's host during his stay in Cambridge, and was driven at once to the residence of the bishop, in the university city. Here breakfast was served, the special guests of the occasion being President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard and Lieutenant Governor Curtis Guild, Jr. Governor William L. Douglas had been invited, but a severe cold prevented him from leaving his home in Brockton. It was planned that the forenoon hours should be spent quietly by the president over the college grounds, in company with other members of his class, and at noon the class of 1880, with Mr. Roosevelt as its most distinguished member, was to proceed to the Oakley Country club, at Watertown, for luncheon. An afternoon with his classmates at the Country club, and the class dinner in the evening at the Hotel Somerset, in this city, constituted the program for the remainder of the day.

Special police arrangements have been made both by the Boston and Cambridge departments. A squad of detectives from police headquarters boarded the presidential train just before it entered the state, and will remain with him throughout his stay as a personal body guard, which was augmented by a squad of mounted police.

The president's train reached the Back Bay station at 6:45 a. m., fifteen minutes ahead of time. A small crowd cheered the president as he left the train, and a platoon of police stood on guard. Secretary Loeb, Dr. Stokes and Stenographer Latta also proceeded to the bishop's home, where the president arrived at 7:20 o'clock. Breakfast was served shortly afterward.

Prof. H. H. Morgan of Harvard, who is in charge of the commencement exercises, George C. Lee, brother-in-law of the president, and a Boston eye specialist, who had an appointment to adjust some new glasses for the president, called on him during the forenoon.

Shortly after 11:30 o'clock the president, his son Kermit, and Bishop Lawrence, took a carriage for the drive to the Country club. A thunder storm broke soon afterwards, and the drive was taken up in a downpour of rain.

The president stopped for a moment at the Alpha Delta Phi house, and instead of going direct to Watertown, the party proceeded to Chestnut Hill, where the president paid a brief visit to his mother-in-law, Mrs. George C. Lee.

It was expected that Secretary of War Taft would arrive in Boston this afternoon from New Haven. The secretary and Justice White of the supreme court of the United States will receive degrees from Harvard tomorrow. Secretary Taft will have a conference with the president this evening, arranged before the president left Washington, on Panama canal conditions.

SUSPECTED OF HOLD-UP.

Seattle, June 27.—Frank Ward and Thomas Driscoll, suspected of being implicated in the attempted holdup of the North Coast Limited train near Tacoma, Thursday, were arrested here, today, and are held in the city jail. Ward answers the description of the man who boarded the engine and fired a shot at the engineer.

GRAEME STEWART DIES AT CHICAGO

Political and Social Leader Passes Away at Age of 52.

Was First Stricken With Apoplexy on Evening of May 24.

Chicago, June 27.—Graeme Stewart, a leader in Chicago's commercial, political and social life, two years ago a candidate for mayor on the Republican ticket, and a member of the executive committee of the Republican national committee from 1900 to 1904, died at his residence here early today, after a month's illness. Clotting of blood on the brain, with a series of apopletic strokes was the cause of his death. He was 52 years old.

On the evening of May 24, Mr. Stewart was seated at a table in the banquet hall of the Auditorium hotel, one of the guests at an elaborate dinner given by the Bankers' club. He had just completed the task of collecting the $128,000 guaranty promised by the Merchants' and Commercial clubs to the United States government, in order to bring the lake naval station to Lake Bluff, Ill., and was receiving the congratulations of his friends. Just as Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, was praising the Panama canal policy of President Roosevelt, Mr. Stewart gasped and sank inertly into his chair. He became unconscious at once, and was taken to a room, where restoratives were administered. The physicians announced that he had suffered from an attack of acute indigestion, combined with a slight congestion of the brain, and within a few days he seemed to be well on the road toward recovery. But his strength was slow in returning, for the illness had really been a slight stroke of apoplexy. Another attack brought on a relapse. A third followed a few days ago, and since then Mr. Stewart's life had been slowly ebbing away.

GRAEME STEWART.

PRESIDENT SHEA IS TO BE REMOVED

International Board of Teamsters' Union Decide to Oust Him.

Chicago, June 27.—The Post says: The formal removal of International President C. P. Shea of the Brotherhood of Teamsters has been decided upon by the international executive board. The anti-Shea leaders in the committee practicallly have voted to depose the leader. A "trial" board was held and President Shea was found guilty of violating the constitution of the Teamsters' union. There is no appeal from the action of the international committee. It is planned promptly to announce the finding of "guilty" and to declare the office of president vacant until Shea's successor shall be elected at Philadelphia in August.

For weeks the interantional board has been opposed to Shea and his methods. Fear that the move to depose the leader would make him a "martyr" among the rank and file and insure his re-election as president caused the members of the board to postpone their action. Last night's unequivocal vote of the department store drivers and the striking express wagon drivers against accepting the latest settlement offers of the employers and the palpable return to power of Leader Shea, so far as the rank and file of the teamsters is concerned, determined the board to act.

The specific charge against Shea is calling a strike contrary to the constitution and making expenditures of the brotherhood's money contrary to the terms of the constitution and by-laws.

Chicago, June 27.—The spread of the teamsters' strike to include 1,000 drivers of local express and small delivery wagons was a possibility today. An ultimatum already had been delivered by the teamsters and the employers called a special meeting this afternoon to return an answer. Sentiment was strongly in favor of a fight.

The trouble with the delivery drivers started when a wagon belonging to Page Brothers' Express company hauled a load of tobacco to a strike-affected firm. President Shea at once sent a committee to wait on the express concern with a demand that deliveries to strike-affected firms cease.

The Page Bros.' company is a member of the Furniture Movers and Expressmen's association comprising 200 employers and nearly 1,000 teams in the city. The union committee threatened to call a strike against the entire association.

The raising of money with which to conduct the strike is giving the teamsters' leaders grave concern. President Shea has issued an appeal to all the Chicago locals to meet at once and take up the matter of funds.

Three hundred former employes of the American Express company attacked a wagon of the company, driven by John E. James, last night. James was struck on the head with a brick and probably fatally injured. Four arrests were made.

By a practically unanimous vote last night the teamsters refused to accept the terms recently offered by the employers, and the latest peace prospect in the strike has vanished. The terms offered by the employers were those which have been published from time to time, with the addition that the question of the wearing of union buttons should be left for discretion of individual employers. Only two unions, the department store drivers and the express drivers, voted on the question, the other unions agreeing in advance to accept the decision of these two unions. President Shea has issued a call for a general meeting of local teamsters' unions to be held tonight. He has announced that the only question to come before the meeting is that of financing the present strike. Other labor men declare, however, that the chief topic of discussion will be the spreading of the strike.

WIRELESS SYSTEM

Most Wonderful Thing In Scientific World Being Developed.

Thomas A. Edison Tells of Its Advantages Over Cable.

New York, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—George H. Munroe, head of the firm that is promoting the Marconi Wireless System, arrived in New York yesterday. He is busying himself with preparations for installing the system in the West. Thomas A. Edison, in the New York Herald, says in regard to the question: "What do you think is the most wonderful thing in the scientific world that is being developed at present?"

"Wireless telegraphing, without any question. It is only in its infancy yet, but there is no doubt that it will be perfected to a wonderful state in a very few years. The fact that the steamship Campanic, the other day, was not out of communication with one continent or the other during her entire trip across the Atlantic was certainly a remarkable performance, and is a clear indication of how valuable and important telegraphy is bound to be in the future. Marconi is all right.

"With wireless telegraphy I am confident that in a very short time there will be no more difficulty in using it from New York to London than there is now in using the cable. In fact if they are able to perfect the instruments at the stations, it will be a very much simpler and more effective and comprehensive method of sending messages than by cable. You see, in sending a message by cable there are hundreds of thousands of pounds of gutta percha to be charged with electricity before the wave can be transmitted from one end to the other. That puts a restriction upon the capacity of the cable.

"With wireless telegraphy there is no such restriction at all. When the sending instruments are perfected it will be just as easy to send twenty messages at once over the wireless as it is now to send one over the cable. I have no doubt that in course of time, and not a very long time either, it will be found possible to send 1,000 words a minute by wireless telegraphy, provided, of course, that an instrument can be devised to send it.

"The completion of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph station at Glace Bay, N. S., at a point seven miles inland from the sea, has enabled the Canadian Marconi company to keep in constant communication with steamships crossing the Atlantic from the moment of their departure from American ports to the moment of their arrival at European ports."

Mr. Marconi arrived in Liverpool Saturday, June 10, and proceeded at once to Poldhu, Cornwall, where he is now engaged in the installation of his new high powered apparatus, which is capable of sending 100 words a minute across the Atlantic ocean.

YALE TO BUY BIG ESTATE

For Establishment of School of Irrigation and Other Projects.

New Haven, Conn., June 27.—Presi-Hadley delivered his annual report on Yale university affairs at the general meeting of the alumni today. The report reviewed briefly some of the work of the year, and outlined certain matters of university policy. Nearly 1,000 graduates attended the meeting.

President Hadley said the most distinctive event in the history of Yale for the past year was the arrangement for the purchase of the Sachems wood estate of thirty-three acres. He suggested that a school of irrigation, an institute of colonial administration, or any of the other educational projects in which Yale is prepared to take the lead as soon as the endowment is furnished, might here find a home.

Among gifts to the university, President Hadley announced that Mrs. Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati was the donor of $15,000 for an addition to the infirmary building. Other gifts to the infirmary, amounting in all to more than $40,000, were announced from Mrs. William H. Hurlbut, Miss Dimock and Miss Jennings, all of New York.

WOMAN SUDDENLY EXPIRES AT DANCE.

New York, June 27.—Surrounded by groups of frightened men and women, with the echo of dance music still ringing in their ears, Mrs. James Kirwin suddenly expired in the ball room of an Ulmer park pavilion.

The woman was 55 years old. She was attacked by apoplexy in the midst of a dance at an old fashioned barbecue given by a church society. A priest hastened to her side and administered the last rites of the church. The tragic scene quickly put an end to the festivities.

MAIL POUCH DISAPPEARS.

Bakersfield, Cal., June 27.—Somewhere between Winslow and Albuquerque, a United States mail pouch, which contained $2,000 in national bank notes issued by an Alburquerque bank disappeared. Banks along the line of the road, as well as the police have been asked to keep a sharp lookout for the bills.

IRRIGATION SCHEME SET ASIDE FOR THE PRESENT.

Spokane, Wash., June 27.—Members of the congressional irrigation committee, who stopped here for four hours as guests of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, last night, said the Palouse irrigation project, designed to reclaim hundreds of thousands of acres of arid lands in central Washington, will for the present be set aside by congress. But the faith of Senator Newlands of Nevada, and Senator Ankeny of Washington, that the work will ultimately be done is firm. The committee went east on a late train.

GERMANY SAID TO HAVE ACHIEVED A DIPLOMATIC VICTORY OVER FRANCE

CHIEF ENGINEER OF THE CANAL RESIGNS

John F. Wallace Out of Touch With the Administration.

He Objects to Being Hampered By Taft and Others.

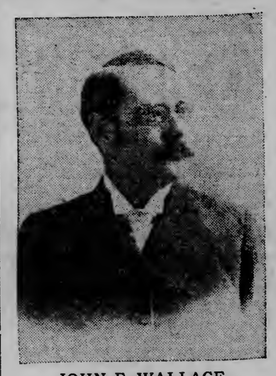
New York, June 27.—The resignation of John F. Wallace of Illinois, chief engineer of the Panama canal, is now in the hands of President Roosevelt, according to a statement made today by the Herald, which adds that it will be accepted today or tomorrow. It is said to have been handed to Secretary of War Taft in this city after a rather stormy conference during which Mr. Wallace is said to have expressed his ideas of what should be done on the isthmus in very concise language. It is understood that Engineer Wallace will at once take charge of a large railroad system in this country and that Theodore P. Shonts will remain as president of the canal commission. As to the cause of Mr. Wallace's resignation there are two versions, one coming from friends of some of the canal commissioners, the other coming from friends of Mr. Wallace. The first is to the effect that it was requested because of differences between the chief engineer, members of the commission, Secretary Taft and through the latter with President Roosevelt. The other version deals with hampering orders.

"That serious differences in the conduct of the work on the isthmus had arisen between the chief engineer, the administration and some members of the canal board, was known," says the Herald, "almost the first week after Mr. Wallace arrived at Panama. Delay in obtaining supplies, methods in advancing the plans according to procedure at Washington were all strange to him and became irksome.

"Being chief engineer of the great undertaking, knowing that he would be held responsible for failure, he insisted that he should be put in a position to have absolute control and objected to orders prohibiting his leaving the isthmus unless he obtained permission from the war department."

These matters are said to have reached an issue at the Sunday conference with Secretary Taft which followed Mr. Wallace's arirval here and at which William Nelson Cromwell was present. Being a man of independent means, the $30,000 annual salary was no object to the chief engineer and no means having been found to meet his views as to the manner in which the canal work should be conducted, his resignation was presented.

President Shonts is also in this city. He refused, however, to confirm for publication the announcement that Engineer Wallace had resigned. Personally he said he had no intention of leaving the commission. "Whatever trouble there may be between Mr. Wallace and the president and the secretary of war," he continued, "will not affect me. I do not intend to resign, but further than that I cannot say. I am not at liberty to talk of the affairs of the commission, and any announcement to be made must come from the president."



JOHN F. WALLACE.

GEN. LINEVITCH'S POSITION IS BAD

Russian Military Experts Consider Him Beaten Before Fight.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—The military experts take anything but a hopeful view of Gen. Linevitch's situation. They do not believe he can be surrounded but apparently the experts do not consider the possibility of a Russian victory. Linevitch's retirement to Harbin and the isolation of Vladivostok seem to be regarded as foregone conclusions when Field Marshal Oyama strikes. According to the latest news from the front, which is thirty-six hours old, Oyama after forcing back the Russian right and center transferred his weight against the left compelling the Russians to give ground there also. The military critics, however, agree that the frontal movement is merely a feint for the envelopment of one or both of the Russian wings without which nothing in the shape of a decisive victory is possible. The impression is that Oyama, profiting by past experience, is more carefully preparing his turning operations but by the same token the Russian staff declares Linevitch has taken ample precautions to keep in touch with flanking movements and that it is not possible to take him by surprise. Occasional heavy downpours of rain continue at the front.

Gen. Linevitch, in a dispatch to the emperor dated June 26, reports outpost affairs on June 24, the Russians being driven in both south of the railway and in the valley of the Tsinhe. In the region of Hainlungchen, the Japanese resumed the offensive June 22 and attacked and drove back Russian advance squadrons.

The negotiations relative to the Washington meeting, are entering on their final phase. Having decided that the time of the meting is to be during the first ten days of August, all that remains is the formal naming of the plenipotentiaries which now will not long be delayed. Russia has already been apprised through the intermediary at Washington of the views of Japan regarding the number of plenipotentiaries, if indeed she is not already in possession of the names of the negotiators who will act for the Japanese emperor and it is believed the Russian plenipotentiaries have been tentatively selected. Likewise there is reason for stating that they do not include a military man.

Foreign Minister Lamsdorff had sufficiently recovered today to go to Peterhof where he discussed the negotiations with the emperor. Later Ambassador Meyer was received at the chancellory and conveyed to the foreign minister a communication from Washington. The Bourse Gazette, today, prints rumor to the effect that Admiral Alexieff will succeed Count Lamsdorff as foreign minister.

HAY PASSES COMFORTABLE NIGHT

Newbury, N. H., June 27.—The announcement, today, from the summer home of Secretary of State John Hay, was that the patient had passed a comfortable night and that the morning found him resting quietly, much refreshed from the night's sleep. Although Mr. Hay's sleep was but intermittent, his repose resulted in the regaining of considerable strength. It was not believed, however, that the secretary will be about as soon as had been anticipated. The arrival of a nurse and of a physician, Dr. Jenkinson from Boston, during the night, was a result of the belief that the secretary would undoubtedly need the most careful nursing and medical attention during the coming days. The family does not, however, apprehend any danger whatsoever, from Mr. Hay's illness, but they realize that the attack of uraemia of Saturday following as it did a period of illness for which Mr. Hay went abroad for treatment, weakened the secretary's physical power and necessitated at least that he remain quietly in bed for several days.

During the night and morning, a number of messages arrived from friends inquiring as to the condition of the patient and expressing hope of immediate return to health.

CARNEGIE GIFT ACCEPTED.

Boston, June 27.—The Boston board of aldermen, yesterday, by a vote of 11 to 1, accepted a gift of $400,000 offered by Andrew Carnegie to be added to the fund left by Benjamin Franklin for the erection of a trade school here. Alderman Frank J. Linehan, who voted in the negative, declared that the money offered by Mr. Carnegie was "blood money," secured from the men and boys employed in the steel industry of the country.

Agreement Reached With Rouvier to Settle All Questions.

Reply to Note Concerning Morocco Delivered By Ambassador.

While Amicable It Refuses Requests Made By France.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—Private advices from Paris say that Germany has achieved a diplomatic victory over France by reaching an agreement with Premier Rouvier for a settlement covering not only Morocco, but other questions by which it is presumed that Germany, like Great Britain, will secure compensation for quit-claiming her interests in Morocco. Germany's quid pro quo, according to report, will be obtained in the near East in the recognition of her influence in Persia.

Berlin, June 27.—The German answer to the French note on the subject of the propcsed Moroccan conference was sent to Paris yesterday. A high official near Chancellor Von Buelow informs the Associated Press that the German note while perfectly amicable in form insists on a conference and also declines to comply with France's request that Germany outline beforehand the program of the conference. The chancellor takes the standpoint that the Moroccan question is an international affair and that Germany having accepted the sultan's invitation to a conference on the subject cannot rightly agree with any single power as to what can be discussed at the conference. Germany insists that France must agree to the conference before any arrangements are made respecting the subject matter for discussion. After France has agreed to this Germany is willing to listen to France's wishes.

The official's attention being called to the warlike talk in the foreign press, he replied: "The fact that we are urging a conference is clear proof that we have no wish for war with France. When a nation wants war it cannot ask for a conference at the same time. If we wanted war with France, we would have regretted M. Delcasse's fall since he was the greatest obstacle to good relations with France. On the contrary, M. Delcasse's removal and Premier Rouvier's decision to retain the foreign portfolio gave great satisfaction in German official circles, because we saw in these steps a guarantee of improved relations."

Paris, June 27.—The council ministers, today, considered the status of the Franco-German negotiations. Premier Rouvier announced that he expected to have a conference later with Prince Von Radolin, the German ambassador who would deliver the German reply to the French note on the subject of Morrocco. Pending the receipt of this the officials say the situation remains stationary as the final outcome depends on the text of the German note. In the meantime the officials here consider that the situation has been considerably relieved in view of intimations they have received from the French ambassador at Berlin concerning the general purport of the German position.

Prince Von Radolin called at the foreign office this afternoon and delivered the German reply to M. Rouvier. A long conversation followed. The note is of considerable length, going over the general subject and maintaining the principle of an international conference, but recognizing France's special interests owing to the proximity of Morocco to Algeria.

The Temps this afternoon printed a special dispatch from Berlin which credits President Roosevelt with using his influence to avoid the Moroccan question reaching a crisis. Similar reports are circulating in diplomatic quarters here, it being stated that President Roosevelt used his friendly counsels with the French and German ambassadors at Washington.

It is understood that the German reply expresses the most amicable and friendly sentiments, but nevertheless continues to maintain that a conference should settle the entire subject of Morocco without prearrangement between the nations taking part in it. According to the German view, all the signatories of the Madrid convention should have a part in the final regulation of the subject. While this differs from the French position in seeking to define the scope of the conference, yet the amicable spirit in which the German response is framed leads to the belief that it facilitates French acceptance of the conference. Moreover, while the German reply seeks to leave the conference free to reach its own conclusions, it tends to facilitate French regulation of the Moroccan frontier adjacent to Algeria.

Although no official statement has been given out concerning the intentions of France, it is generally the feeling in diplomatic circles that an agreement will be reached on the basis of a conference.

STERN POST CRACKED.

Nagasaki, Japan, June 27.—The Great Northern Steamship company's steamer Minnesota has arrived at this port with her stern post cracked. Temporary repairs will be effected here, requiring ten days' time. The vessel, which comes from Hongkong and Shanghai, then will resume her voyage to Seattle, via Yokohama.

BANK SUPERVISORS MEET.

Portland, Me., June 27.—The members of the national association of supervisors of state banks met here today for their fourth annual session. Many topics of interest to members will be discussed.

THE POLLARDS.

Clever Children Open a Week's Engagment.

Harry Bronson ..... Miss Leah Leichner
Mr. Twiddle ..... Master Harold Fraser
Cora Angelique ..... Miss Daphne Pollard
"Doc" Snifikins .... Master Oscar Heintz
Count Ratsi Ratattoo..Master Fred Heintz
Count Patsi Ratattoo..Master Jack Heintz
"Blinky Bill" McQuirk .....
..... Master Teddie McNamara
Kenneth Mugg ..... Master Fred Pollard
Kissie Fitzgarter ..... Miss Marie Pollard
Fricot ..... Miss Lillie Bull
Fifi Fricot ..... Miss Olive Moore
Karl von Pompernick .....
..... Master Willie Thomas
Ichabod Bronson .... Master Jack Pollard
Billie Breeze..... Master Roy Smith
Violet Grey ..... Miss Eva Moore

The Pollard Lilliputian Opera company opened its week's engagement at the Lyceum last evening, appearing in "The Belle of New York." The term "lilliputian" gives a wrong idea, suggesting dwarfs, whereas the company is composed entirely of talented children of tender years. They sing like old people, however, and enter into the spirit of the performance with even more dash and enthusiasm than most of their elders. The company is a large one, numbering some forty people, and the musical comedy is given in its entirety. One drawback to last evening's performance was the execrable work of the orchestra. It was something awful. The instrumentation provided was miserable to begin with, and the director at times seemed to be absolutely unable to hold the men together.

To pick out the favorites or the cleverest of these children is an impossibility. Little Daphne Pollard, who probably made the greatest hit upon the visit of the company here a few years ago, has added just a very few inches to her height, and a great deal of her cleverness, but some very sharp rivals for public favor have developed. She plays the part of Cora Angelique, the comic opera queen, and does it like a veteran. Merle Pollard is another little miss who does astonishing work. She played two parts last evening, either one enough to proclaim her a little genius. Kitty Fitzgarter, the music hall dancer and Mamie Clancy, the Bowery girl. Teddy McNamara, as Blinky Bill, the pugilist, shows fine ability as a comedian. Miss Olive Moore is a charming Fifi, the little Parisessenne. Miss Eva Moore, as Violet Grey, the Salvation Army girl was excellent and has the best singing voice of the company. Fred Pollard is another excellent singer. Leah Leichner as Harry Bronson, was very good, and the two Heintz boys, diminutive little fellows, were very comical as the two Portuguese noblemen. Oscar Heintz as Doc Snifikins was pleasing, and Willie Thomas in the difficult role of Pompernick, the crazy German, acquitted himself very creditably.

The solo and chorus work throughout is fine, the strength of the voices being quite remarkable. They sing with more volume and penetrating quality than most of the musical comedy stars of the day.

This evening "The Belle of New York" will be repeated and at the matinee tomorrow.

AT THE METROPOLITAN.

The new vaudeville bill offered at the Metropolitan this week is one of the best. Cotton and Jarrow do a funny comedy sketch. The Van Der Koors appear in an original act entitled "The Magician and the Yap." Frank Walsh does a monologue and character singing stunt. Claud Rauf has a sensational wire-walking act. Arthur Jackson sings some fine illustrated songs, and the moving-picture machine presents a funny subject entitled "How a French Count Secured a Wife in New York."

THE BIJOU.

The Bijou presented its new vaudeville program for the week last evening, and it was received with much favor. There are comedy, singing and dancing stunts, a trick bicycle act, illustrated songs and a moving-picture exhibit that is calculated to please.

Metropolitan.

Matinee, daily, at 3 p. m., 10c; nights at 8 and 9:30, 10c and 20c.

A WIDOW'S LUCK

Quit the Thing That Was Slowly Killing Her.

A woman tells how coffee kept her from insuring her life:

"I suffered for many years chiefly from trouble with my heart, with severe nervous headaches and neuralgia; but although incapacitated at times for my housework, I did not realize the gravity of my condition till I was rejected for life insurance, because the examining physician said, my heart was so bad he could not pass me. This distressed me very much, as I was a widow and had a child dependent upon me. It was to protect her future that I wanted to insure my life.

"Fortunately for me, I happened to read an advertisement containing a testimonial from a man who had been affected in the same way that I was with heart trouble, and who was cured by leaving off Coffee and using Postum Food Coffee. I grasped at the hope this held out, and made the change at once.

"My health began to improve immediately. The headaches and neuralgia disappeared, I gained in flesh, and my appetite came back to me at once. Greatest of all, my heart was strengthened from the beginning, and soon all the distressing symptoms passed away. No more wakink up in the night with my heart trying to fly out of my mouth! Then again I made application for life insurance, and had no trouble in passing the medical examination.

"It was seven years ago that I began to use Postum Food Coffee, and I am using it still, and shall continue to do so, as I find in it a guarantee of good health." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

HAS BROAD SCOPE

Minnesota Anti-Trust Act Said to Be Strong Measure.

Claimed That Only One Other State Has Its Equal.

A meeting of the officers and directors of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association was called yesterday afternoon at the office of Bert Holcomb, secretary but no action was taken in view of the fact that tomorrow evening the regular meeting of the association will take place, and it was decided best to let the association outline its own procedure.

That portion of the statutes on which the two suits are based is Chapter 194, section 1 of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and is entitled an act preventing and restraining operations of pools, trusts and conspiracies.

The law is considered by local attorneys who have examined it quite carefully as one unusually broad in scope and a far stronger measure than has been adopted by the legislatures in most of the other states in the Union where it has been sought to prevent combines. Some of the local attorneys even claim that there is not another state, with the exception of California, where so strict an "anti-trust" law has been passed by the state legislature.

One of the features of the Minnesota law, which is pointed out as having special significance is that it includes not only the "buyer" but the "seller" and one clause that attracts special attention is one which says "if any two or more persons or corporations, who are engaged in buying or selling any article of commerce, manufacture, mechanism, merchandise, commodity, convenience, repair, any product of mining or any article or thing whatsoever, shall enter into any pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, association or understanding to control or limit the trade in any such article or thing; or to limit competition in such trade by refusing to buy from or sell to any other person or corporation any such article or thing aforesaid for the reason that such other person or corporation is not a member of or party to such pool, trust, combination, confederation, association or understanding or shall boycott or threaten any person or corporation for buying from or selling to any other person or corporation who is not a member of or party to such pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, association or understanding, any such article or thing aforesaid, it shall be a violation of this act."

The law, in section 2 of the same act, provides that any district court of the state has jurisdiction to prevent or restrain any person or group of persons from forming a combination or trust and it shall be the duty of the attorney general and the county attorney of each county to institute proceedings in equity or law to prevent and restrain all violations of the act and of any other law concerning pools, trusts and conspiracies and unlawful combinations.

Such proceeding may be by petition, as in the case of Messrs. Gasser and Frink, setting forth the case and praying that such violation be enjoined or otherwise prohibited.

It is provided that just as soon as an action is begun under this law, the court shall proceed as soon as may be to the hearing and determination of the case and, pending such petition and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order as shall be deemed just in the premises.

This is taken to mean, by those versed in legal matteres, that while the state and the county legal representatives are not concerned in the civil action instituted for damages, they are concerned where there is a petition indicating an alleged violation of the state anti-trust law and it becomes their duty not to prosecute, but to take such steps as may be deemed necessary to prevent the persons or corporations interested from carrying out any pool or unlawful combination.

Another strong feature about the Minnesota anti-trust act is that when it shall appear to the court before which any proceedings under the act may be pending, that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before it, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district where the court is held or in some other part of the state. Subpoenaes and summons may be served by the sheriff of any county in the state and the same shall be valid.

As to the question of damages, section 4 of the anti-trust act says that any person injured in his business or property by any other person, or incorporation, by anything forbid or declared to be unlawful by the act, may sue therefor and shall recover threefold the damages sustained besides the cost of the action and a reasonable attorney's fee.

It is provided that labor unions shall not be termed trusts under this act.

GERMAN CARP AND TYPHOID

Startling Theory Evolved as to the Mankato Epidemic.

St. Peter, Minn., June 27.—Physicians at Mankato are grappling with a novel contagion problem. In coping with a mild epidemic of typhoid fever they have had trouble in determining the source of infection, and the solution hit upon is decidedly unusual. After the most searching investigation, the theory has been advanced that the disease is being spread by German carp.

For a month or more typhoid cases have been mysteriously appearing at Mankato, and in less than a week a half dozen developed in one small neighborhood. All of the wells in the vicinity were tested without result, and the doctors could find none of the germs in the usual channels. Then they learned that their patients, without a single exception, had eaten carp shortly before being taken ill. In several families only one of two persons were attacked. Invariably these had eaten the fish, while those to escape had left it untouched.

In the face of this seemingly conclusive proof medical men say that it would be possible for the contagion to be carried in this manner. Feeding upon sewage and other refuse might cause typhoid bacilli to lodge in the soft flesh of the carp, and the germs need not be entirely destroyed in cooking. Thus far none of the cases has resulted fatally, but it will not be surprising if they have the effect of putting one brand of brain food under the ban.

This incident recalls the fact that a dozen years ago the carp was a strange fish in the waters of the Minnesota river. In the early nineties, however, a wealthy resident of New Ulm imported a quantity of the fry from Germany and stocked a private pond. For several seasons he enjoyed a monopoly, and then a freshet washed out his dam and released the fish he had nourished. Like the English sparrow, they multiplied amazingly, and today the entire river, its smaller tributary streams and many of the lakes that are easily accessible, teem with carp. They have practically exterminated several other species by feeding upon the young, and their voraciousness makes them a menace to the more desirable varieties. Sportsmen have long felt alarm over the "carp peril."

Lightning struck Floral hall, one of the buildings owned by the Nicollet County Agricultural society, Saturday afternoon. The damage to the structure will amount to at least $500.

St. Peter's population will fall behind the figures of 1900. This is due to the decrease in the number of patients at the state hospital. At the last census the hospital had 222 employes and 1,376 patients, but there are now only 199 employes and 926 patients. The enumerators have nearly completed their work and know that both wards will show an increase, but the loss at the hospital will make a difference of about 300.

Pastor at Calumet Checks Panic In His Church.

Calumet—A panic in the large congregation of the Larium Baptist church was narrowly averted by the pastor, Rev. J. R. Baldwin. While in the midst of the sermon the floor of the auditorium dropped eight inches. There was a tumultous scene, the sound of splintering timbers being mixed with frightened shrieks.

Rev. Mr. Baldwin raised his voice above the noise and said that it had always been his firm opinion that the Baptist church stood upon a firm foundation, but appearances indicated otherwise. His words had a calming effect on the congregation. After an investigation, which revealed that some timbers had rotted away and let the floor down to the stone piers, the services were resumed.

The Michigan Bankers' association has chartered the steamer Juniata of the Anchor line for the forthcoming trip to the copper country. The Juniata will leave Detroit July 21, arriving in the copper country the following Sunday. The bankers will spend two days here and local men have arranged an elaborate program of entertainment and sightseeing.

Sault Ste. Marie—It is expected that 500 visitors will be in the city Wednesday and Thursday to attend the third annual reunion of the Upper Peninsula League of Knights of Pythias. It will be the biggest gathering ever held by the organization.

Several teams have entered for the trophy contest. The Soo team won last year and if two more victories can be scored the cup will remain here permanently. The Soo lodge will enter the same team that will compete with Grand Rapids for a state honors this summer.

Wednesday evening a banquet will be served at the Iroquois hotel, at which some of the leaders in Michigan Pythianism will speak. Chase S. Osborn, former railroad commissioner, will preside as toastmaster. Grand Chancellor Will E. Hampton of Charlevoix will address the President James Bryden of shtpeming has been assigned the topic, "Aims and Objects of the Upper Peninsula League." Miles S. Curtis of Battle Creek, grand keeper of records and seals, will discuss the value of degree team contests. Past Chancellor Webster Dock of Hancock and Leo A. Caro of Grand Rapids are also among the speakers secured.

Bessemer—Mrs. Goggins of Houghton, traveling with a horse and buggy from Matchwood to the Norwich mine, was drowned in the west branch of the Ontonagon river.

The city will have a monster celebration on the Fourth.

Iron Mountain—At Iron Mountain, unknown parties fired a rifle ball through one of the windows of the Holy Rosary church and another bullet entered the apartment occupied by Rev. Father Longo. It was either a case of criminal carelessness in the use of firearms or an attempt to assassinate the clergyman.

TREVOR WAS LIVING EASY

Had Good Time In London on Nothing a Week.

London, June 27.—Philip Trevor, gentleman, made public at Old Bailey last week the following written confession, an amazing bit of autobiography:

"On my return from Paris to London I went to live with my mother. Shortly after this I met Madame —— at Burlington arcade. Immediately after she left me I went to Messrs. W. Brooks & Co., florists, Regent street west. I ordered a bouquet, the price of which was £3 10s, to be sent to her apartments. I gave my name as Dr. J. Lowe Warren, Carlton hotel, and asked them to send the account to me there.

"On leaving the florists I went at once to the Carlton hotel and engaged rooms in the same name. I also ordered a carriage sent to the hotel that night. At about 4 p. m. the same afternoon I hired a cab outside the Burlington arcade which I kept for several hours. At 7 p. m., I drove to the Buckingham Palace hotel, where I also engaged rooms—a suite—and another carriage.

"I then sent the cabman to an imaginary address. Shortly after he had gone the carriage that I had ordered a few minutes previously came up. I then drove in it to the florists and asked for the bouquet which I had previously ordered. It was put into a hansom cab and delivered as requested.

"Madame —— and I drove in the carriage to the Star and Garter hotel. Richmond, where we engaged a suite of rooms in the name of Dr. and Mrs. Gray. We remained there until midday the following day and then took the train to Waterloo, leaving her luggage and the coachman at the hotel. Arriving at Waterloo we hired another cab, and after making several calls, drove to Lloyd's bank, city. I went in one door and out of the other. We then drove to Peter Robinson's and ordered goods to the value of $1,000, in the name, I believe, of Dr. Gray.

"I said to the cashier there, 'Please keep my cab waiting until 2 p. m. and you can send your messenger in it to my bank, Lloyd's in the city, where the sum of $1,000 will be waiting for you.' I put on an overcoat, value three guineas Mme. —— at that time handed me her purse containing $10, and her watch to hold. I decamped with the purse, the watch and the money, leaving her behind as well as the cabman.

"The following day I went to the Alexandra hotel with another woman. We registered as Captain and Mrs. Palmer, and also hired a carriage and pair. The following day I went to the Victoria and ordered a bedroom and a sitting room and also a carriage and pair. I drove to dozens of the shops and ordered goods with false pretenses. On Easter Monday I went to Birmingham, where I left the coat which I had obtained from Messrs. Peter Robinson in lieu of payment of the bill. On the following Wedenseday I engaged rooms at Clarges and ordered a carriage from a livery stable. I drove to Harrod's stores and ordered goods to the value of $250, leaving my old ones behind. I went to several hotels where I engaged rooms and also to livery stables, where I hired a number of carriages for which I have not paid.

"On the sixth of the present month I met Miss Florrie Skipper of Essex villas, Kensington, and the following day I engaged a carriage and pair at a livery stable in Kensington and drove with her to Queens hotel, Richmond, where we had dinner. I took a ring from her finger and left her at the hotel, also the carriage and coachman.

"I obtained a pair of boots from a shop in High street and sold them to a second-hand clothes dealer. On the following day I ordered a carriage and pair sent to Hyde park corner for Lady Murray. I met the coachman and told him I was Mr. Murray and after driving about with him for two or three hours I sent him into Knightsbridge on a bogus errand and drove off. After driving about for some time I left the horse and carriage at a cab proprietor's in Notting Hill."

Buying a Piano is not a common ordinary occurrence in every family—most of us buy one piano in a life time—and it is of the most vital interest to us. When we buy a Piano we want it right and we want the price right. If you would have them right, then, by all means visit this Piano Store.

Under our one-price system you will find all instruments tagged and marked in plain figures at their lowest possible prices—which you will find much lower than those of other stores when they have fully completed their "DICKERING PROCESS" of Piano selling. Our one-price system eliminates all "dickering" from Piano buying and has made our prices so far below competitors that there is no argument left.

If you wish to purchase on monthly payments you may do so at the cash price on most liberal terms and we charge you but 5 PER CENT INTEREST per annum on deferred payments.

We will be pleased to show you our splendid instruments at any time whether you wish to purchase or not.

ANOTHER MOOSE

Full Grown Animal Seen Hiking Down Grand Avenue.

Goes Through Wire Fence and Hides In Swamp.

Another moose was seen in the West end of the city Sunday. If the present conditions continue the citizens of Duluth will have to petition the state legislature for a new law permitting them to kill moose out of season in special cases where it is necessary to prevent being run over by the animals or to preserve wire fences.

The animal seen Sunday morning was a full grown cow moose that was making excellent time on Grand avenue out of West Duluth toward Smithville, its speed being accelerated by reason of a small dog that hung at its heels.

Several people residing along Grand avenue saw the big animal swing along and were surprised for the reason that the wild animals were coming to the lake from the woods were supposed to keep to the East end.

When the moose reached Ironton, Fourth division, which has been platted and fenced with barb wire, by its owners, she suddenly turned off the avenue and tore throught the fence with such force that two or three posts wre broken off close to the ground. The fence was hardly a check to the big animal and she made her way into a camp close by the bay. Sunday afternoon the moose was seen by several children, lying down in the swamp, but they feared to go near the animal.

It is supposed that the animal is still making its headquarters in the big swamp near Smithville and the citizens of that place are talking of forming a vigilance committee to protect their fences.

This is the third moose that has been seen within the city limits during the current month and there are probably few citizens that would be surprised to see one of the animals, some morning trotting down through the business section or browsing on the grass plot in front of the postoffice building.

Sportsmen are unable to account for the presence of the animals in this vicinity at this time of the year unless that it be an occasional stray moose, chased by dogs has headed away from its usual haunts and come to Duluth

Others claim that Duluth is now becoming so well advertised as a summer resort that even the wild animals far back in the pine woods hear of the merits of the Zenith City and feel impelled to come and see for themselves.

It is claimed that incoming tourists who have been reading in Eastern papers stories about wild animals invading the best residence districts of the city ask, almost as soon as they reach the city, to be taken out to the best vantage point in those districts where they can see moose and bear when they come down to take a dip in the lake.

WOMAN SHOOTS MAN WHO "JUMPED" A LOT.

Goldfield, Nev., June 27.—Mrs. Phoenix, the wife of a prominent Goldfield real estate man who owns all the land between Goldfield and Columbia, has shot and probably fatally wounded Attorney Hayes of Goldfield.

Hayes had "jumped" a lot belonging to the Phoenix addition and refused to leave, claiming to have the legal right to remain. Mrs. Phoenix attempted to eject him and being unable to do so by physical force, procured a revolver and shot him. She then coolly walked down town and when arrested was eating an ice cream soda. Mrs. Phoenix was held without bail.

A Great Explosion.

Not or fireworks, but of prices. A new innovation in the tailoring business. Mellin & Co., the First street tailors opposite the Board of Trade, are closing out all summer weights at cost, to make room for their fall goods. This is a bona fide sale, lasting but twenty days. Many of Duluth's best dressers have taken advantage of this great sale and are considered very lucky. All garments made by Mellin & Co. have a distinctive feature and style of their own. They are originators not imitators. "He who hesitates is lost." Do not hesitate, but take advantage of this sale before it is too late.

A WEALTHY PRUSSIAN CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

Chicago, June 27.—George Bathalomaeus, who is said to be a wealthy contractor from Cassel, Prussia, is under arrest charged with forgeries aggregating $24,000. Bathalomaeus was arrested on complaint of German Consul Weaver. When the prisoner was arraigned before United States Commissioner Foote teday, the case was continued for thirty days in order that depositions might be received from Prussia. Meanwhile Bathalomaeus must remain in jail, as the offense is unbailable.

West Duluth

AT MELLOW AGE

Capt. Alexander Pollock Dies at Ninety-Seven Years Old.

Noted Lake Captain Passes Away at Home of Son.

Capt. Alexander Pollock, an aged and well-known citizen of West Duluth, died this morning at the residence of his son, W. S. Pollock, 1313 Fifty-sixth avenue west. The cause of death was general breakdown from old age, the old gentleman having come within three years of the century mark, and passed the mellow age of 97 years.

Capt. Pollock was formerly a vessel master on the Great Lakes, staying in the service of the merchant marine until 1893, when he quit the lakes because of his advanced years and came to live with his son. He was well known as a lake captain in the old days, having sailed such well-known boats of the long ago as the Cumberland, the Lake Erie and other steamers, which in their day were considered large. Former Mayor Hugo of Duluth was second engineer on the City of London when Capt. Pollock was her master.

The captain was born in Fraserboro, Fifeshire, Scotland, in 1808 and from the time he was 12 years of age until he was about 30, was a sailor on salt water. When he left the ocean marine service to take to the Great Lakes, he was first officer on one of the ships of the old Black Ball line. Capt. Pollock came onto the Great Lakes just about the time the Sault canal opened and remained in commission until thirteen years ago.

He leaves four sons and three daughters, they being Mrs. Malcolm McLeod of Duluth, W. S. Pollock of Duluth, W. O. Polock of St. Thomas, Ont., Dr. A. Pollock of Yale, Mich., Charles G. Pollock of Berthod, Colo., Miss Grace Pollock of Berthod, Colo., and Mrs. May of Berthod, Colo.

The body will be sent to St. Thomas, Ont., tomorrow evening for interment.

GOOD MOVE

By Council Regarding Source of Public Danger.

The city council last night ordered that the foundation at the corner of Fifty-third avenue west and Ramsey street be removed or something done with it to make it less dangerous. This place has been an eyesore and a source of much danger to children for some time. The excavation is deep enough for rains to make a dangerously deep pool into which children might easily fall and be drowned. The foundation surrounding it is dilapidated and of no use.

It is hoped that immediate steps will be taken to fill the place up. Since the heavy rains of Saturday and Sunday there is a lot of water in the excavation and it is exceedingly dangerous not only to children but to adults walking at night.

BANQUET VICTORS.

Blues of Presbyterian Sunday School Entertain.

As the result of a membership contest, the "Blues" of the Westminster Presbyterian Sunday school, as losers, gave a banquet in Victor hall last evening to the victorious "Reds." The repast was excellent and the program delightful. Miss Nellie Jennings, Miss Edith Adams and Byron Brooks, gave vocal solos which were greatly enjoyed. A quartet also gave some fine selections and recitations by Miss Ethel Jamieson and Miss Florence Butchart were heartily applauded. Rev. W. J. Lowrie closed the program with a short practical talk.

Have Narrow Escape.

On Sunday a launch containing about twenty people from Superior tipped over in Pokegama bay, a part of the St. Louis river, and the occupants had to cling to the edge of the boat and hope for assistance. Vernon Rollins, a machinist at the Zenith blast furnace, was out in his 16-foot launch and went to the rescue of the endangered party. They almost swamped his boat, the whole party trying to get into it. It is built for only a few people. However, the tipped boat was righted and the party towed home.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Duluth chapter, Royal Arch Masons will confer the Royal Arch degree this evening on three candidates. A banquet will be given after the degree will have been conferred.

Theodore Kitz and family of Spooner, Wis., have moved into a house on Fifty-sixth avenue west. Mr. Kitz is the new butcher at Mallough's grocery and meat market.

Frank Prescott of West Duluth, will be married in Duluth Thursday to Miss Smith of Saginaw, Mich. They will go housekeeping on Fifty-eighth avenue west.

It is likely that the wire netting will be put up on the tennis courts at Fifty-first and Ramsey today. Progress with the grounds is good.

The joint initiation of Modern Samaritans and the Beneficent Degree at Schell & Wade's all last evening was a great success. The class was large and many attended.

Mesdames H. J. H., J. M. and A. H. Marriner have returned from Iowa.

Mrs. W. G. Allen has returned from the west.

Celebrate the Fourth in Lauermann's shoes.

RADICAL LAWS ARE NEEDED

For Safeguarding Great National Systems, Says President Wheeler.

Hanover, N. H., June 27.—Today was given over chiefly to the alumni in the commencement proceedings at Dartmouth college. The alumni association held a public meeting, at which the principal address was given by President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California. His topic was "The Abundant Life." He said the economic conditions of the last ten years have suddenly produced a portentously numerous class of American beings whose whole strength and wit are completely absorbed in devising the means of spending any reasonable proportion of their income.

One of the saddest features of lives pursued by wealth, he said, consists in their isolation from humanity. People who maintain steam yachts and dine Frenchfully at night, and flit between Lenox and Newport and Palm Beach and Homburg, are naturally and automatically driven into the society of the like conditioned and bound there. Their sons attend the same expensive academies, their daughters are polished off at the same elite schools, their sons and daughters meet together and they inter-marry and inter-divorce, and the caste of the great rich emerges. Sound judgment and clear perspective in the motives and movements of human life are seldom found among these people of the caste who drag the golden ball and chain. We need, he declared, national laws for divorce, for the oversight of insurance, for the regulation of the traffic of the great national system of railways. We are a nation and must have national laws for national concerns. It behooves us while holding fast to local safeguards for local interests to court the inspiration of the fuller, richer, national life, and be Americans.

331 WEST FIRST STREET.

One of the pretty June weddings took place last evening when Miss Anu Fraser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fraser, became the bride of Andrew M. Gordon of Minneapolis. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents at 305 West Fourth street. The rooms were prettily decorated in flowers, palms and ferns. Under a canopy in the front parlor the ceremony was performed. Before the service Mrs. D. G. Black of Minneapolis sang and the wedding music was played by Miss Lillian Kuhns. The maid of honor was Miss Katherine Gordon of Minneapolis and Harry M. Case of Minneapolis was the best man. At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor and the service was read by Rev. Alexander Milne of the Pilgrim Congregational church. The bride wore a dainty gown of Persian lawn trimmed in lace and carried a shower bouquet of roses. Miss Gordon also wore white and carried pink roses.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Gordon left for an extended Western trip and will later go to Minneapolis, where they will be at home. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Gordon, Misses Edith and Jean Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Scott and A. M. Duff, all of Minneapolis.

The class night exercises of the graduating class of the high school will be given this evening at the Assembly hall of the school. The exercises this year promise to be more interesting than for the past number of years. In place of the out-worn prophecy and history a play, "Men, Maids and Matchmakers" will be presented by members of the class. The president's address will be given by Edward Furni and the class oration by William Harrison. The program is in charge of A. F. M. Custance and admission is by ticket.

• • •

The wedding of Miss Katherine Isabel Moore and James Burrows Murray will take place tomorrow morning at the residence of Bishop McGolrick. The service will be read at 12 o'clock and following the ceremony a wedding breakfast will be served at the home of M. S. Burrows of 1632 East First street. Miss Moore will have as her bridesmaid Miss Corinne LeBlanc of Superior, and the groom will be attended by M. S. Burrows. Mr. Murray and his bride will leave for a wedding trip and will later return to Duluth.

CATHEDRAL SCHOOL

Closing Exersises and Awarding of Medals.

The commencement exercises of Cathedral school took place last evening at the Cathedral auditorium, and a large audience of the friends of the pupils were present to enjoy the exercises. Over 300 children took part in the exercises, including the tots from the kindergarten and the members of the graduation class. Included in the program was the play, "Fabiola," and was well presented by the pupils. The address of the evening was given by Bishop McGolrick, and the medals were presented the pupils this morning.

The gold medals for amiable and polite deportment, scholarship and general progress was won by Misses Mary Maloney, Rose Summers and Eva Idell, and also Masters John Mackey, William Casey and John Risatti. The gold medal for needlework was won by Miss Rose Risatti, and the gold medal for bread making, which was offered by the bishop, was won by Miss Rose McLaughlin.

DESSERT OF FLOWERS.

One of the Fads of the Hour.

An odd conceit for summer luncheons is a cooked dessert made from flowers. The idea has been borrowed from the Chinese "four hundred," who dating from the time of Confucius and before, have been noted for their epicurean tastes, and its very novelty makes it worth a trial, says Leslie's Weekly.

The flower best suited to the Chinese palate, and the one which is served with almost every elaborate Chinese dinner, is the chrysanthemum. The flower has a peculiar flavor, and requires a taste educated by many trials before it can be fully appreciated; but Chinese epicures and a few New Yorkers who enjoy Chinese foods frequently pay fancy prices for chrysanthemums, which they take to the Chinese chefs to have prepared for them. The old-fashioned nasturtium, the rose, and the violet seem to please the American taste, however.

For a luncheon an element of interest is always added by introducing the chafing dish at table. The flower desserts are particularly adapted for luncehons, because of the blossoms' beauty and fragrance as well as the novelty of preparing them for food.

To make the dessert, or the "blossom delight," as some enthusiasts call it, first stir a thin batter of eggs and flour. This should be brought in from the kitchen already prepared. The flowers, thoroughly washed, should be arranged in a glass vase on the sideboard. Have the chafing dish ready, half filled with oil, smoking hot.

Pluck the petals from the flowers, stir briskly into the batter, then dip out in very small portions and drop into the oil. The fritters puff up immediately, and if taken out quickly they retain the color of the flower from which they are made.

When removed from the oil they should be placed for a moment on absorbent paper before being dusted with powdered sugar and passed to the waiting guests who are more than anxious to sample the new idea. The tiny wafers, which are crisp and dainty, are good substitutes for the inevitable champagne wafers in serving ices of any kind.

CULTIVATE YOUR VOICE.

Something American Girls Have to Learn.

American girls are pretty, chic, and attractive. They have cultivated the art of looking their best, and now why not let them turn their attention to the art of sounding their best? For they do not. At home as well as in public they raise their voices until the tone becomes a shriek which grates on the nerves as well as on the ears of all who hear, says an exchange.

This loud talking in public places is an offense against good manners as well as good taste, for it makes the persons talking most conspicuous, as well as interfering with the talk of others. A stranger does not wish to hear the thoughts, opinions, or troubles of another, and to be forced to assist in a revelation of family affairs simply because one is in the same car is not pleasant.

One reason of this loud talking undoubtedly is that the noises of the city are so great many persons try to talk above them. It is not in the least necessary to do this, for if one will only try it will be found far easier to talk below them: That is to say, if the voice is pitched lower instead of higher than the noise it will be quite as easy for the person addressed to hear, while strangers within ordinary earshot will be unable to know what is being said.

It is perfectly good form to talk little when one is surrounded by loud noises. To compete with the subway is trying both to the talker and the person who is listening, and the conditions are not conducive to conversation. If a girl is out in the evening she need not feel that it is incumbent upon her to talk all the time while in the train. Chances are that her escort will feel far more comfortable if he is not put to the strain of listening.

There is less excuse for loud talking in surface cars, where the noises of the streets are not overpowering, and yet it is in them that one is most apt to hear it. Women tell the most confidential things to friends with voices so raised that people directly about hear all the details, and trouble has more than once been the result of this when some one present has known the persons being talked about. It is always to be remembered that, aside from bad form, it is the height of indiscretion to gossip or repeat condemnatory things in public about a person, for it is always within the bounds of possibility that there may be some one present who is acquainted with the individual, who will promptly repeat.

Calling names in public places when a person is being talked of should never be permitted. If conditions are such that a personal matter must be discussed in the presence of strangers the names should never be mentioned. Much trouble may follow, and it is quite simple for the person addressed to understand who is meant without the name of the person being used in every sentence.

A SENTIMENTAL SETTLEMENT

By George Shedd.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Eugene Markham was getting along famously enough before he fell in love and then with his usual luck he fell heels over head in love fith an heiress. The other fellows were not envious of his success in his work—that was all honest enough. But for a man who had weathered the financial storm far enough to be self-supporting by his work as sculptor, to fall into a cool million just because the favor of petticoats—that was the unendurable thing about it.

All of us had had our little affairs with petticoats; were having them all the time, in fact, and still are, but the idea of that long-legged, lantern-jawed tow-headed, dabbler in mud, who shied at the fair sex, and had never had a real bona fide affair, anyway, falling into the very midst of the Four Hundred the first flop—well, it tended to discourage honest endeavor.

'Gene was in love all right, though. Nobody could discount that. He left off work almost entirely and took up poetry for diversion. The old crowd saw little of him, and we did not lose much at that. When he did drop into the particular studio where the pipes and beer were in evidence, he was stupid enough. He seemed to be sort of turned inwards. He even gave up the Saturday nights at Maffioli's; said he'd have to cut out the wine now that he was about to be allied to an angel—or some such stuff as that.

The only time he ever woke up and noticed things during those weeks was when somebody would listen to him talk about her. Then he was all enthusiasm. She certainly had him going all right.

And I reckon she was about as badly gone on him. She really was a pretty sort of girl—not the most acute in the world, but an honest sort of person, despite all the fol-de-rols she was surrounded with. And swell—well, there was no doubt about that. Clothes and carriages and footmen and coachmen, and all the fixings of the upper crust. It used to give the boys the jim-jams to see her drive up to the door of the little old building where most of us drew our drawings, made our music, constructed our poetry or rehearsed our parts. Well, we never could get reconciled to that carriage and team, and as for the coachman and footman—well, I believe somebody would have murdered them only that they seemed to be a great snap for Van Blinks, the cartoonist, who certainly did get abundant use out of them. I often wondered if those menials or anybody in the Fitzgerald family ever saw the papers; still I don't suppose they would have recognized themselves.

The funny thing was that the girl's family didn't make any row over the match. I reckon Miss Florence came pretty near having her own way in the house anyway. Old Fitzgerald, pere, was defunct, and mere took things pretty easy. As for the girl, she not only was very much in love with him, but was immensely proud of his artistic attainments.

Well, time ran on, as Houston is forever saying in his novels that never get beyond the seventeenth chapter, and the happy day was set—that is, informally. Then a funny thing happened. You see 'Gene had no idea how things were done among the rich and great, and after he and the girl decided to get married and there appeared to be no objection to him on the part of the family, he naturally thought that was all there was to it. So he was somewhat surprised one day to receive a summons to appear at the office of Aaron Gammon, attorney for the Fitzgerald family, either in person or by attorney, and arrange terms.

Not having a lawyer, and having, on the contrary, a deadly fear of the cult, he went himself. He had no idea what it was all about. He hadn't anything to settle on anybody himself and he didn't want anything settled on him.

The keen-eyed attorney soon made it evident to the young sculptor that spooning and ceremony were not all there was to the holy bond of matrimony.

"Have you any estate at all, Mr. Markham?" he inquired.

"Nothing but two or three thousand I have saved during the last three or four years," he replied, flushing.

"How is it invested?" asked the lawyer.

"It is not invested," replied Markham, shortly. "It's in a bank. Do you want it?"

"Tut, tut, young man," remarked the attorney. "All these preliminaries are necessary, I assure you, before we tie up a great estate like that of the Fitzgeralds. Well, we'll waive that. Now, it is proposed to settle on your wife a million dollars in gild-edged bonds, and securities. It is further intended to settle on her the house at No. ——— avenue. You will assign your curtesy interest in your prospective wife's estate. For a consideration I might say it is proposed to settle on you a life interest in a very comfortable fortune which will yield you an income of fifteen or twenty thousand dollars for this consideration, I say you will formally relinquish all claims you have or may acquire in the fortune of Florence Helen Fitzgerald."

"Go on," he said.

"In case of the death of your wife without issue your income will cease," and the lawyer added another formidable document to the growing pile in front of Markham. "And your wife's fortune will revert to the Fitzgerald family.

"In case of your death before your wife, without issue," went on the lawyer, selecting another paper, "the fortune invested for you will revert to her." He laid the mass of typewriting on top of the rest.

"Any other mortuary matters?" asked Markham.

"Yes, replied the lawyer, "if you die and there is issue, your estate will pass to the children of you and Florence Helen Fitzgerald in equal parts."

"Very interesting," ventured Markham, brushing his hand across his eyes.

"In case of a divorce or separation," continued the lawyer, ———

"Divorce!" shrieked Markham, dropping his cigar.

"Yes, yes," went on the lawyer, soothingly. "We must provide against all contingencies, you know. In case of divorce or separation your income reverts to her."

By this time Markham was in a towering rage.

"Is that all?" he demanded, sarcastically.

"No," said the lawyer, crossing his legs judiciously. "There is the matter of who is to pay the household expenses, and in what proportion."

"Don't mention it," replied Markham. "I intend to take up a collection for the purpose."

"It is usual for the husband to take care of all regular expenses," went on the lawyer, "although the wife sometimes takes care of extraordinary entertaining."

"We might shake dice every morning to determine as to that day's bills," suggested 'Gene.

He picked up his hat and strode out. When he arrived at the studio he found a messenger there with all the formidable documents Lawyer Gammon had been handling over all day. He took them inside, looked first at them, then at the picture of Florence Fitzgerald on the mantel. Then he gathered legal documents and picture together and pitched them all into the grate. Then he wrote this note to Miss Fitzgerald:

"My dear Miss Fitzgerald—Upon conferring with my physician I deeply regret to learn that it will be many years before I will be able to take up the serious and manifold obligations of marriage. In fact, I am ordered to go abroad at once, and I leave tonight. Please forgive and forget. With the greatest respect, I remain EUGENE MARKHAM."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

La Moure Woman Gives Birth to Four Babies at Once.

NORTH DAKOTA.

La Moure—This town was thrown into a panic Monday, when it became known that Mrs. Eugene E. Reilly had presented her husband with four babies, three girls and a boy, all of whom were alive and crying lustily at last account. The little ones are perfectly formed and normal in every particular, and there is no reason to suppose that their chance of reaching maturity is not equal to that of any youngster. It is confidently asserted that this record, four healthy babies at one birth, has never been equaled in North Dakota, and has been seldom duplicated anywhere. Mrs. Reilly is 34 and is now the mother of ten children.

Rolla—The district convention of the W. C. T. U. held at Maza was a fine success. The state president, Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson, made an address. Two contests were held for grand gold medals—the first at Maza, the other at Cando. The medals were won by Cleara Hesketh and Effie Epton, both of Rolla.

Charles Emerson has returned with his bride from Wisconsin. Two receptions were given one at the home of Rev. E. P. Johnson and the other at the home of Rev. C. A. Bates.

The teachers' institute was one of the most successful held in this county. Prof. Alexander conducted it, with Mrs. Porter as assistant. About forty-five teachers were enrolled.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Lead—To make the reform movement a clean sweep in Lawrence county it is probable that in a few days all resorts in this place and Deadwood will be ordered to move on. Now that gambling places have been closed and the saloons taken care of according to law the good people want the reform to go still farther and clean the city of the social evil. Mining companies complain that one of the obstacles in getting money for investment in the Black Hills is the illrepute of the country, owing to its saloons, dives and gambling places.

Milbank—The old Indian church in Stockholm township, in Grant county, around which clusters so many early associations, is to be saved as a historical relic. A picnic and memorial service will be held on July 9 at the church, and among those who will speak will be Rev. Daniel Renville, who preached in the church in 1880; Rev. John P. Williamson, general missionary of the Presbyterian church among the Indians, and H. S. Volkmar of Milbank, who as been leading the movement for preserving the old building.

The church was built in 1876 by the Presbyterian mission for the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians and was used until 1892. It was sold and was to have been destroyed, but through the efforts of H. S. Volkmar and O. P. Johnson of Stockholm funds were secured to purchase the building. Two acres of land were donated by Rev. Mr. Williamson, who owns the farm upon which it is located.

A new foundation will be built and the building restored to its former condition. It will then be deeded to the Grant County Historical society. It is built of logs which were cut from runs near the spot.

Pierre—Doane Robinson, superintendent of the census, has been called upon to enforce the legal provisions which were provided to cover cases where persons refused to give the requested information to the census enumerators.

The case comes from Moody county, where W. A. Davis, the sheriff refuses to give the information, and Superintendent Robinson has ordered the county authorities to proceed against the obstreperous official. The penalty provided is that of a misdemeanor, with an additional penalty of $20, to be collected by a civil suit. This is the first case of absolute refusel reported, and it will be pushed as an example.

Deadwood—The contract to survey ten townships in the Pine Ridge Indian reservation has been let to O. H. Southmayde of this city. It will require about three and one-half months' work.

Rev. Walter H. Ashley has been extended a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church in this city. He recently came from Massachusetts.

Whitewood—John Mulvaney, who fell into a cesspool, brought suit against the town of Whitewood for $5,000 damages and in the circuit court at Deadwood he received $1,620. The case will be appealed.

GUNNERY IS EVERYTHING.

"Man Behind the Gun" Wins Naval Battles.

London, June 27.—Rear Admiral Fremantle, in an interview recently, said:

In this emphatic fashion the admiral summed up his views of the lesson of the battle of the Sea of Japan.

"Gunnery," said he, "is the beginning and end of every naval engagement. If your sailors can shoot accurately your fleet has a chance to win; if they cannot shoot accurately your fleet is lost. Accurate gunnery is the first essential of naval efficiency, for a man-of-war today is nothing more than a floating gun carriage.

"Sir John Fisher and Admiral Percy Scott,' he added, "have this matter in hand so far as our navy is concerned, and the supreme importance of precision in shooting is being impressed upon all ranks.

"What really determined the result was the vastly superior shooting of the Japanese. From the outsct it was a battle of gunnery.

"The torpedo did some devastating work, but this was after victory was assured to the Japs.

"We do not need to look for the reason of Togo's triumph. It was not a question of ships, guns or torpedoes, but of the personal element, which, notwithstanding the progress of science, is still paramount in a sea battle. The guns must, of course, be there, but it is the men behind them that win or lose the battle."

NEW CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.

Portland, Or., June 27.—A co-operative experiment of a magnitude hitherto untried is to be attempted in this state. The enterprise is known as the Co-operative Christian Federation, with a capital of $50,000,000. The objects of the federation are to buy and sell land, build railroads, operate factories, mills and dairies in Oregon, to be owned and operated on the co-operative plan.

NORTHWESTERN RETAIL COAL DEALERS MEETING IN DULUTH

Three Hundred Delegates Present at Opening and More Coming.

Address of Welcome and Response and President's Address.

Secretary Reeves' Report Shows Remarkable Growth In Year.

Promptly at 11 o'clock this morning the fifth annual convention of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association opened in the Duluth Commercial club rooms, President C. M. Morse of Winona calling the meeting to order. The first session occupied hardly an hour's time, and was taken up by Mayor Cullum's address of welcome and the response by Hon. M. Crane, with the reading of the annual reports of President Morse and Secretary G. H. Reeves. Auditing, resolution and nominating committees were also appointed. G. J. Fullerton of Minneapolis, treasurer of the organization, was not present, but it was announced that he would be on hand to read his report at the afternoon session. The president stated, however, that there was $1,500 in the treasury of the association.

The delegates to the convention, which will continue until Thursday evening, coming to a close with a banquet at the Spalding hotel, began arriving last evening, and by noon today nearly 300 of them had placed their names in the official register of the Commercial club, where all of the business meetings will be held. More members will arrive tonight and tomorrow morning, and probably the total attendance will pass the 300 mark. A number of the delegates have their wives with them.

The parlors of the Commercial club were decorated in an attractive manner for the meeting. In the front of the large meeting room is a stand for the speakers, and on the large table are placed potted plants. A large American flag is hung against the wall. About the walls are mottos and words of advice to members. Following are some o fthem:

"One for all; all for one. Honesty, integrity."

"Power of organization demonstrated."

"Mighty to right that which is wrong."

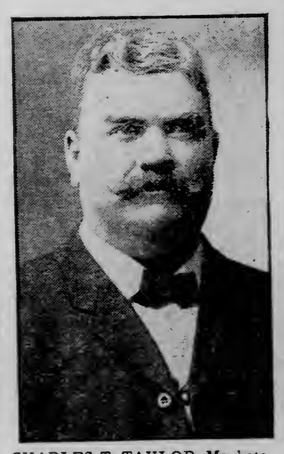
"We can think of no reason why you should not join."

"Remarkable growth of our association is the result of efficient service."

"Gain of 129 per cent in twelve months. 1868 coal yards."

"We ask all members to explain the value of our association whenever opportunity presents itself."

C. M. MORSE OF WINONA
President Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' Association.



CHARLES T. TAYLOR, Mankato, Vice President.

G. J. FULLERTON, Minneapolis, Treasurer.

MAYOR'S WELCOME.

Extends Greeting on Behalf of Duluth.

Mayor Cullum, when introduced by the president, was greeted with a hearty round of applause. His speech was brief and to the point, extending a cordial welcome to the coal men, and touching upon the general features of the most interest about the city. The mayor explained that he was the chairman of the tax commission appointed to look after the equalization of taxes, and that he had torn himself away from a howling mob of abused kickers against their tax assessments on purpose to attend the meeting. This being the case, he asked the pardon of his hearers if his remarks were wandering at times.

"On an occasion like this the mayor is supposed to take advantage of the opportunity to tell something about his own city," he continued. "In a comparatively short time Duluth has grown from a mere hamlet to a city of about 70,000 inhabitants. It is probably more equally composed of the many nativities of the earth than any other city in the country. We are glad to say that those who have come here from foreign lands to make their homes are the best people of their respective countries. The truth of this assertion is shown when I say that among the leading business and professional men of the city there is a liberal scattering of these people who came here from other lands."

Mayor Cullum spoke of the remarkable growth of Duluth's marine interests, saying that the local harbor was the largest on the Western hemisphere in point of shipping, and that it had the largest local marine of any city in the country. He mentioned the manufacturing and wholesale interests, of the development of 250,000 horsepower from the St. Louis river, and of the small cost of distribution of this great power. The cost will be much less than anywhere else in the state, he said. The public institutions, fine schools, churches, etc., were also touched upon. He told the delegates to be sure and pay a visit to the great aerial bridge before returning to their homes. In conclusion, he said that while he was not personally acquainted with the outside dealers, he knew most of those in Duluth, and that it was a recommendation in itself to be able to call them friends. He expressed confidence that the visitors would be pleasantly entertained by the local committee while in the city.

"It is a great pleasure to us to be greeted thus warmly," he said. "It has been many years since I was here the last time. On that occasion I was accompanied by a milk colored jackass and several good fellows who were connected with the coal and lumber business. With the exception of the jackass they were as fine a lot as ever gathered in Duluth.

"Meetings such as the present one are bound to be productive of a vast amount of good, and this fact is coming to be more and more generally recognized in the business world of today.

"It is not for us to question the statements of our hosts at this stage of the game concerning the fine city of Duluth, but in this connection it has occurred to me to ask, before leaving, how it is the mayor and citizens are able to distinguish between summer and winter in Duluth. (Laughter and applause). I have been told, with what semblance of truth I do not know, that next to the local wholesale dealers, the retail men's furnishing stores were second in the amount of their contributions to the entertainment fund."

The speaker remarked that, as nearly all of the dealers present handled lumber as well as coal, it was essentially fitting that the convention should be held in so important a lumber center. He closed by expressing warm thanks on behalf of himself and brother delegates for the warm welcome extended them.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

C. M. Morse of Winona Addresses Members.

President Morse read the following interesting report:

"The pendulum of time has again swung through the orbit of the year and back again to the point of our annual meeting, and it is with the greatest pleasure that I congratulate you on our years of growth and progress. When I speak of progress I refer more particularly to our relations to producers and shippers, for our success depends not alone upon our size, but on our friendly relations with those who can help us most. We feel that we have, with these people, a community of interest which they are bound to recognize if our arguments are plainly, yet tactfully placed before them. This I believe has been fairly accomplished.

"Our secretary will tell you, I am sure, of the splendid growth and vigorous condition of our association. I will therefore refrain from stealing his thunder, and simply congratulate you. That you are deeply interested is evidenced by two facts: First by your presence at this meeting, and second by the rapid growth of the association during the past year. While much of the credit of this increase of membership can be attributed to the zeal and energy of our able secretary, still of himself he could not have done it all. You have strengthened his hands and enabled him to serve you to his own satisfaction and to your benefit.

"One of the strongest arguments in favor of trade associations is the fact of their general existence. They have resulted from the natural reaching out for help from others, for relief from conditions that we cannot ourselves overcome.

"Individualism finds it hard to succeed in this day and generation, and in its place has grown a finer appreciation of association, an appreciation of the fact that such organization is an engine of trade, of education, of advancement, and I want to call your attention here to the fact that such a body cannot be a one-man organization; that it needs helping hands, and that it has so many hands as it has members. In these hands there is an ample power for success, but you must remember that the success will not result from the mere power applied. The greatest aim of our association should be to bring about such a condition of affairs that we can do it without it. Conditions may, in certain localities, seem to have reached this idealistic state, but the time has not yet come. Conditions may have improved, but we are nowhere as yet immune.

"I want to appeal to you to support the local associations that have been organized in a number of places this year, and I want to earnestly recommend the further organization of such meetings. They form the firm foundation upon which our larger structure should be erected. They result in harmony, and I can site hundreds of towns where harmony among retailers exists, and where the coal business is on a profitable basis. You are learning well the profit of the general trade associations, now apply it to your local conditions. There is only one criticism that can be offered to this, and that is that it is building from the top down. Our superstructure is well built, but our foundations are not altogether adequate. We are asking co-operation from shippers and producers, and we are often-times not applying it to our immediate local conditions.

"I feel that I cannot too strongly recommend this matter to your attention. If you have not already taken steps in this direction do so at once. Conditions which seem very difficult often fade away under the magic touch of a genial handshake. If I fail to impress you with the logic of this argument it is the fault of the advocate and not of the cause.

"Concluding, gentlemen, I can only express my hope that you will return to your homes after this meeting with renewed zeal for association work, both local and general. Another year of continued activity on your part will place this association well to the head of trade associations. Do not rest on the satisfaction of work well done. Constant vigilance is the price of success."

SECRETARY'S REPORT

Shows Remarkable Growth In a Year's Time.

Secretary Reeves' report showed a remarkable growth of the association, an increase of about 125 per cent in a year. It was as follows:

"Mr. President, Officers, Members and Representatives of the coal trade: As secretary of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association. I greet you, and bid you welcome to our convention. I trust our meeting together will prove beneficial to us all, both educationally and socially, and that through discussion of topics to follow and interchange of ideas, we may become better business men.

"To me, this is a red letter day in the history of our association. I see before me representatives of nearly all the shipping companies doing business in the Northwest, here to meet the retailers and to discuss, in a freindly way, what is for the best interests of the trade. This is as it should be. Let us ever remember that our efforts should be for the maintenance of harmony, not conflict, and that our real eminence rests in the victories of peace, not those of war and strife.

"On January 17, 1901, at the close of the annual meeting of the Northwestern Lumbermens' association, there were called together in the city of Minneapolis, a number of retail coal dealers from the states of Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota who were interested in the formation of a coal dealers association. As a result of this meeting, Albert Hollister of Manchester, Iowa, (rightfully called the father of this association) together with W. H. Robinson, Geo. J. Fullerton, Maynard Crane and H. E. Bacon were appointed a committee to arrange for a formal meeting of coal dealers for the formation of an association. Secretary Hollis was instructed to call a meeting for January 31. On that date twenty-five coal dealers, representing the four states, met at the West hotel in the city of Minneapolis and formed this association. While we are as a young child just taking its first step and developing its strength, yet we are remarkably healthy and growing very rapidly.

"Our growth the past year has been phenomenal, the greatest in the history of the association. The reasons for this are manifold. The dealers in the protected towns have seen and felt the benefits and have spread the gospel to other towns, yet the work and real benefits of the association, when properly organized and managed, have just begun. Our work the past year has been devoted largely to gathering information, laying the foundation and building up a strong healthy organization.

"At the end of the fiscal year, July 1, 1904, the records show a membership representing 790 yards. We have lost since then, account of non-payment of dues; sold; dropped, etc., thirty-eight yards. On June 20, of this year, our records showed 1,895 yards, making a net total gain of 1,075, in a little less than one year.

"There have been filed with the secretary's office, since the beginning of the association, account of irregular shipments, quotations to consumers, etc., 1,186 complaints. Since July 1st of last year, 454. This might indicate to you that irregular shipments were on the increase. This, however, is not the case, but our members have come to realize that we are an agency for good, and irregularities must be reported in order to be stopped and yet, I dare say, only about 50 per cent of complaints are filed with our office. The reason for this is; the coal dealer does not like to complain of his neighbor and passes over the incident unnoticed. This should not be. You are really doing an injustice to yourself, as well as to the legitimate shippers who are co-operating with us. I ask you, in fairness to all, to report irregularities to the secretary's office.

"There has been a bureau of information started so that we have been enabled to trace down nearly all the irregularities and lay the blame at the doors of the guilty parties. While this has been expensive, yet it is the very foundation of our work and to make our work effective, must be carried on at whatever the cost may be. Nearly all claims have been adjusted satisfactory to all concerned. Some are still being tried out. It is slow and tedious work and sometimes takes months, instead of days, as you might think.

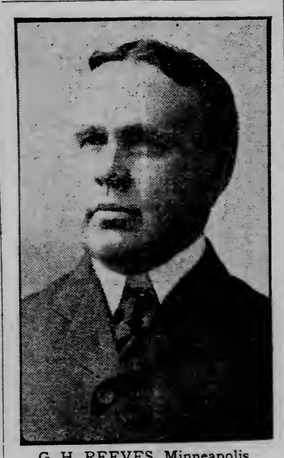
"With the consent of the board of directors, I have employed legal advice regularly at a fixed yearly salary. I feel this was a very wise move. Two cases were brought against us, but thanks to our attorney, I had been well schooled and not violated any provision of law and had proceeded strictly along purely legitimate lines. I have also employed a field man since February last. His time has been entirely devoted to assisting in building up our organization, but now that we are getting strong in numbers and our income nearly sufficient to stand the expense, his work will be directed more toward interests for the benefit of the trade. It cannot be estimated how much good along these lines, a good field man can do.

"In accordance with recommendations of our president in his last annual report, I assisted in organizing six local associations for the betterment of the trade, at the following places: Ortonville, Minn.; Aberdeen, Mitchell, Yankton, Watertown, and Sioux Falls, S. D., taking in territory within a radius of twenty-five to fifty miles of each town. Much good was accomplished at the time and I am more fully convinced than ever, that such organizations should be perfected all over the territory.

"In concluding, I wish to thank our president and other officers for their physical and moral as well as financial support and also each and every member of our association, as it would not have been possible for any one man to increase the membership to any such proportions and accomplish results alone. I wish also to thank the shipping companies for their assistance and loyal support, especially those who have not only been in harmony with us, but who have given their time and efforts in promoting and assisting us in straightening out seemingly impossible tangles.

"Last, but not least, the committees who worked jointly with the shipping companies and our office, giving their time willingly, which has made it possible for shipper and retailer to come closer together and not feel each wanted all, but only what is just and right as between man and man.

"Gentlemen, I thank you."



G. H. REEVES, Minneapolis, Secretary.

COMMITTEES NAMED.

Routine Business Followed By Adjournment.

The president announced the appointment of the following committees:

Immediately after adjournment those who were not already supplied with badges were put in touch with the letter committee. Each delegate is given a celluloid lapel button, with the lettering: "N. W. Coal Dealers" on its face. There is also a number. The delegates are to be supplied with a list of the names of all who are present, and opposite the name will be a number which will correspond with the button he is wearing, so that the visitors may readily recognize each other without the formality of an introduction. Delegates are also given souvenir watch fobs, made of black silk ribbon and gun metal. Attached to the end of the ribbon is a shield-shaped piece of the metal, with a likeness of the aerial bridge stamped on its face, and the words "In Unity There is Strength." On the back is the following: "Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers association. Fifth annual convention. Duluth, Minn., June 27-29, 1905."

SPECTACULAR RUNAWAY

Team of Horses Dashes Through Busiest Part of City.

After dashing madly the length of the business section of Superior street, a team of bay horses, driven by L. P. Totman, was brought to a stop at Fifteenth avenue west about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The runaway was one of the most spectacular seen in the city for many months. The horses were a magnificent pair, and they dragged the light buggy along at a terrific rate. Mr. Totman kept a tight grip on the reins and bent all his energies to guiding the team clear of all obstacles. He steered the horses safely through the principal business section of the city without mishap, but was thrown from the buggy near Twelfth avenue west. The horses were stopped a few blocks farther on.

Mr. Totman was scratched and bruised somewhat, but not seriously.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY.

Col. Petit Thrown Out on His Head.

Col. Petit of West Duluth was thrown out of his rig while driving last evening and is now in St. Luke's hospital quite severely but not dangerously injured. He was driving a team of horses on Grand avenue when they took fright at a steam roller which was working there, and bolted.

Col. Petit was thrown out, landing on his head and shoulders. His head was badly cut and bruised and a foot is also injured. He is quite badly shaken up and as he is rather advanced in years it is much more serious than with a younger man. Dr. David Graham is attending him.

GOING TO CANADA.

State Auditor Iverson in an interview has stated that of the homeseekers passing through St. Paul 90 per cent are bound for Canada.

Passing through the state of greatest agricultural opportunity to go to an alien, though a neighbor, soil. Why is this? Does Canada offer any greater attractions to immigrants than Minnesota? Is her soil any richer, any more accessible, than Minnesota's? Are her markets any handier or any more profitable?

The answer to all these questions is emphatically no. Minnesota's opportunities are just as great as those of any state in the union, or of any country in the world. Her soil is rich, her terms of sale are reasonable, and her markets are near and capable of absorbing all that may be raised.

What, then, is the secret? What is the lodestone that is attracting foolish homeseekers out of their native land, over the soil of Minnesota? It must be potent, because it has even drawn people from Minnesota, who have sought the will-o'-the-wisp success across the Canadian border.

It is advertising. Canada, in seeking to fill her broad and vacant acres with productive farms, set about it systematically and wisely, and inaugurated a campaign of advertising. This it is that is drawing settlers to her by hundreds. This it is that has caused many Minnesota people to leave better things here at home to seek fortune in Canada.

This means of attracting settlers is as free to Minnesota as it is to Canada. But the last legislature grudgingly yielded a small sum of money for this purpose, which State Auditor Iverson is now using to the best possible advantage. But the reason Canada is still drawing the people is that she is spending hundreds of dollars where the penny-wise policy of a purblind legislature limits Minnesota's expenditures to dimes.

It is to be hoped that another legislature may profit by present conditions, and that it may be accorded sufficient foresight and wisdom to enable it to be wisely generous with the cause of immigration.

THE COAL DEALERS.

The fifth annual convention of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association is in session here today, and the numerous guests of the city who will be here during the convention are heartily welcome. It is hoped that their stay will become fraught with such pleasant memories that they will want to come again, because they cannot come often enough to wear out their welcome.

Every possible detail has been arranged to make the convention a success. It has even been arranged that the weather shall be cool during the convention, in order that the delegates may have the comfortable assurance that while they are engaged upon the routine duties of the convention, and are thus taken away from their offices, coal is still being burned, and the dividends are in no danger of being depleted. Next to entertaining Mr. Rockefeller, Duluth feels most highly flattered by having the coal dealers of the Northwest within her gates.

The delegates to the convention, with their wives and sisters and friends, are warmly welcome to the city. It is the hope of every citizen of Duluth that their convention may be a complete success, that their visit may be a thoroughly pleasant one, and that they will come again some other day, either individually or as a body.

COMMON SENSE NEEDED.

Is it any wonder men disagree and dispute and argue and get mad and sometimes fight, when there is so little that is absolutely definite in this world?

For instance, one man comes along and tells you that you should exercise; that if you do not your system will rust out and sluggish organs will fill your being full of mental and physical poison. He is right.

Then comes along another man who says that exercise is dangerous, and scares you to death by pointing out numerous instances of athletes who have died young. He is right, too.

The first one is right because exercise is beneficial and necessary, as he says. The second one is right because too much of it is injurious. To become an athlete is a far cry from taking hygienic exercise. Abnormal muscular development is often attained at the expense of the vital organs, and deaths from heart disease and consumption among athletes are not uncommon.

When both of these men are more or less right, it is not to be wondered at that when they meet they get into an argument which convinces neither and simply bewilders those who hear it.

Again, you read one set of "health hints," and it tells you to drink lots of water for the good of your health. After you have begun to drench your system with pure Lake Superior water, you are astonished and alarmed to read in another set of "health hints" that too much water-drinking produces stomach troubles, Bright's disease and other inconvenient and dangerous ills.

Both are probably more or less correct in their views. The first one argues that water sluices the system and promotes the performance of normal functions by the human organs. The second says that water dilutes the saliva needed to properly masticate and digest food, and interferes with the processes of digestion and assimilation. What the first says is true if the water is taken before and not with or directly after meals, and what the second says is probably true if the process is reversed.

The list of apparently inconsistent propositions that are consistent if properly examined and mixed with the cement of common sense could be enlarged through the realms of tariff, religion, politics, morality, world without end.

There is so little, when you come to figure it out, that is absolutely established beyond contradiction and dispute that the only really safe basis to start upon appears to be the multiplication table. That two times two equals four appears to be beyond reach of argument, while pretty nearly everything else can be made the subject of dispute if you think it worth while.

HIGHWAY ENGINEERING.

Highway engineering is a new profession, and its recognition by an Eastern school is significant of the growing appreciation of the importance of road-building.

It was first recognized in the educational world by the Rhode Island College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, which in the fall of 1904 adopted a full four years' course in highway engineering. For the completion of the course the degree of bachelor of science is given. Two of the senior class of the present year have taken the course, and have qualified as highway engineers.

The course is attracting much attention, and it is cordially indorsed by the best highway experts of the country. It is an exceedingly encouraging sign that the people are waking up to the vast importance of the public highways of the country, and to the need of careful study and systematic preparation by those who would have charge of the work.

Minnesota's school of agriculture would do well to adopt such a course as this, in view of the fact that in the coming years Minnesota will be compelled to pay greater attention to scientific road building. At present the work is in a very crude and unsatisfactory form. Each succeeding legislature develops the fact that it is generally recognized that more scientific work along this line is needed, though so far little of moment has been done. The last legislature provided for a highway commission, authorized to appoint a road engineer, but the pay provided is not enough to command the services of a properly qualified engineer.

Later, undoubtedly, the state will recognize the necessity of its taking charge of the trunk roads, at least, and when that time comes it will be spending a very much larger amount of money on roads each year, and the services of qualified experts such as would result from a well-conducted course in highway engineering will be in demand.

LEVEL YOUR EXPENSES.

A new phrase has come into being that should prove as popular as any of the numerous sharp, condensed sayings that have struck a popular chord and leaped into common use.

"The level of expense," is the new phrase, and it means just what one would imagine it means at first blush. It means to have the various items that make up the expense of living proportionate and in harmony with each other. In failure to observe it lies the secret of most financial failures, and those who observe it will be found to have solved the secret of getting ahead.

The idea is illustrated fairly well when you see a man with a beautiful new silk hat and a rusty suit of clothes or a shabby pair of shoes. When a man buys a silk hat he must live up to it, not only in his coat and his shoes but in his wife's clothes and in his home. When a woman buys a sealskin coat she is not properly managing the finances unless the possession of a sealskin coat is in keeping with the rest of her clothing, with her husband's clothing, with her daughter's clothing, and with the fare that is set forth on her table.

In other words, to "level one's expense" means not to try to indulge a "champagne appetite with a beer salary." It means not to try to pay rent on a handsome house in a fashionable location when that does not leave enough to provide suitable food and clothing for the family. It means not to try to load the tables with high-priced luxuries when that will not permit the purchase of suitable and seemly clothing. It means not to try to dress as vividly as those with twice your income when that will not permit the expenditure of a proper proportion on rent and food.

If your expenses are "level" you have a margin for saving, whatever your income may be. If they are not "level" you have items on the list that are dragging you into extravagances one after another. If you have rented a house that is beyond your income, you are almost inevitably led to live beyond your income in order to live up to the house. If you level your expenses up to your extravagances you are spreading them far beyond your income, and the only possible result from living beyond your income is disaster.

"Level your expenses" is good advice, providing you do not try to level them up to a champagne plane when your income directs you to live on a ham sandwich plane.

Hotel Gossip.

"When I went to Portland I expected that I would suffer with the heat," said M. O. Nash of Milwaukee at the Spalding, "but I was happily disappointed. I was considerably surprised when a friend, one of the natives of the coast town, told me that the average high temperature in July at Portland is about 74 and 70 in August. The thermometer rarely registers the freezing point in winter.

"The exposition is not so big that you don't have time to see anything else. Even for a reasonable stay, all of one's time need not be taken up in exposition sightseeing, but one may easily see the latter and also sandwich in, agreeably, nice trips to different points of interest about the city, and along the Columbia river, which is unrivalled for the beauty of its scenery. There is at least one good thing about the holding of the exposition, and that is that it will probably educate more Americans as to what lies in the Western portion of the country than anything else could have done in the past. There are some mighty interesting places and cities in the West, and no American's education is complete until he has seen some of them."

A young man was seated in the lobby of the Lenox hotel yesterday morning, gazing mournfully out of the window at the passing throng. He did not appear to be in a contented frame of mind. Evidently something had been going wrong.

"Do you believe in hoodoos?" he asked, turning to a friend.

"Sometimes I do and sometimes I don't," said the other.

"Well, I do," came the emphatic assertion from the mournful one. "I didn't once, and until recent years thought such beliefs were foolish, but lately my ideas on the subject have undergone a change, and I have come to the conclusion that there is more to these things than most people believe. Things that would hoodoo some people would not influence others, but everyone is subject to the thing in one form or the other. I have failed in two ventures started on Friday, when all indications pointed to a fine success, and now you couldn't get me to start anything new on this day of the week unless you guaranteed to pay all my losses. I always put on my right shoe first, and do other little things that people ordinarily laugh at, although they may themselves secretly believe in them.

"Now, I have had a beastly run of luck since a year ago last December. I have been sitting here for ten minutes trying to figure out just what has caused it. I have lost money all along the line, and am now working on a salary, where, two years ago, I expected to have thousands at my disposal. I have been unlucky in everything I went into during this period, and have been unable to win at a game of cards. Whether is is the great American game or a little 10-cent smear game, it has all been the same; I have come out to the bad before the play was finished. I have thought this over several times in the last few weeks, but only this morning located the hoodoo. I remember now that I put this lodge pin on my coat a year ago last December, and that I have been wearing it ever since. Maybe it isn't to blame, but it is a cinch that my run of bad luck began about the time I started wearing the emblem. The more I think of it the more I believe the pin is to blame. Do you know what I am going to do? I am going to throw it away."

A minute or two later the speaker went out on the street. He dropped the secret society pin into the first hole that presented itself. In the afternoon he entered a confectionery store where a game of "euchre" was in progress. He was invited to join and so took a hand. He won nine straight games, and left the building without having lost one. And now he is wondering whether his luck will continue.

"One of the newest ties," said a Boston man at the St. Louis, "is the figure eight. It is merely a double of the four-in-hand, but rather difficult to execute and well worth the trouble of learning. Instead of doing the four-in-hand direct you do it backward, and on reaching the last loop take a turn over in the opposite direction and pass the lower end through from the side.

"The run of ties this year is going to be blending colors and soft designs. The four-in-hand is always correct with ordinary dress, but for summer wear, there are a great many flowing effects in flimsy material, and silk ribbons will have a big demand. Ascots will never die out. The old-time broad tie, that we called 'dirty-shirt-hider,' is no more. It is taken now in the East as a frank admission that the wearer is saving his laundry bill. The smaller the tie the better the taste. And in tying, one should always pull up tight, and never stick a pin in the loop, but just below it. Four-in-hands should not be tucked away in the shirt front, but should hang free. In the flowing tie one end should be left longer than the other, and the general appearance should be one of carelessness.

"It is a fright the number of people you see wearing ties inappropriately. It seems that tastes in ties have gone way back to the forests. It used to be that nearly every man was a cravat fiend, but things are different now."

The Weather.

This was another day whose beauties you had to get up early to appreciate. Early the sky was untarnished, the newly-risen sun bathed the world in a warm glow, and the breeze came but gently over the cool depths of the lake. About 7 o'clock the change began to come. The breeze freshened and its chill became more pronounced. Over the hills from the northwest spread a faint white film of cloud, that deepened as the forenoon drew on. For a time the sun shone through the thin misty cloud almost uninterruptedly, and then as the haze grew thicker its warmth was diluted until at times the clouds shut it off entirely.

"Another northeaster," said conditions to the unprofessional observer.

"Another northeaster," said the trained observer at the hilltop, unless it was a mistake that he left this notice in, which has been standing for several days: "Showers with cool weather and probably fog tonight and Wednesday. Fresh northeast winds."

It was warmer over the upper Missouri and Platte valleys and cooler from the Missouri eastward over the Ohio valley to the North Atlantic states. Rains have fallen in southern and eastern states, the Far Northwest and portions of the Dakotas. The barometer continues low in the Rocky Mountain districts. In the lake region the weather was generally clear this morning with fresh northerly winds.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 27.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Wednesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Showers with cool weather and probably fog tonight and Wednesday. Fresh northeast winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 27.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Wisconsin—Fair and cool tonight. Wednesday increasing cloudiness and warmer with possibly showers in west portion.

Minnesota—Probably showers tonight and Wednesday. Warmer in south and west portions.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Probably showers tonight and Wednesday. Warmer tonight and in east portions Wednesday.

Upper Lakes—Light to fresh north to east winds tonight and Wednesday. Fair weather.

THE OLD HOME.

An old lane, an old gate, an old house by a tree,
A wild wood, a wild brook—they will not let me be;
In boyhood I knew them, and still they call to me.

Down deep in my heart's core I hear them, and my eyes
Through tear-mists behold them beneath the old-time skies,
'Mid bee-boom and rose-bloom and orchard lands arise.

I hear them; and heartsick with longing is my soul,
To walk there, to dream there, beneath the sky's blue bowl;
Around me, within me, the weary world made whole.

To talk with the wild brook of all the long-ago;
To whisper the wood-wind of things we used to know
When we were old companions, before my heart knew woe.

To walk with the morning and watch its rose unfold;
To drowse with the noontide, lulled on its heart of gold;
To lie with the night-time and dream the dreams of old.

To tell to the old trees, and to each listening leaf,
The longing, the yearning, as in my boyhood brief,
The old hope, the old love, would ease my heart with grief.

The wild wood, the wild brook—they will not let me be;
In boyhood I knew them, and still they call to me.

—MADISON CAWEIN in the Criterion.

This is the Issue.

Pueblo Chieftain: The great question before the American people today is, not whether municipal or government ownership will accomplish this or that result, but, shall the American people govern themselves, or shall they continue to be governed by the degrading and universal corruption of public utility corporations that make fortunes through purchased officials and a supine public sentiment and degrade and blight the moral standard and the public ambition of every youth in the land?

A Model Introduction.

Kansas City Star: Senator Spooner of Wisconsin says that the best introduction he ever heard was by the German mayor of a small town in his state, who, introducing him, said: "Ladies and Shentlemens—I haf been asked to introduce you to the Hon. Senator Spooner, who to you will make a speech. I haf now done so, und he vill now do so."

Risk is Greater.

Kansas City Star: Speaking about the small salaries paid to Federal officers compared with the pay received by the officials of big corporations, it must be remembered that the latter are often required to do things that would land them in prison if they were working for the government.

Twenty Years Ago.

Chicago capitalists interested in the water company have bought the Smith building on East Superior street, where their offices are located. They have also purchased the corner lot immediately adjoining, at Third avenue east.

F. W. Leavens is spending a few days with friends in the city.

Charlemagne Tower, Jr., has gone to Chicago.

C. Cofield and family have gone on a visit to friends in the southern part of the state.

G. W. Youngblood of Newburg, N. Y., brother of N. Youngblood, has moved to this city with his family and will remain here.

The city council has raised the circus license to $300 for the first day and $150 for each subsequent day. A yearly license of $50 for roller rinks was fixed.

E. W. Mee has arrived at Duluth from Fort Frances, via canoe from the fort to Tower, and thence over the Duluth & Iron Range railroad to this point. He had to foot it for twenty miles between Tower and the end of the track.

Archie A. McLeod, formerly of this city, is now a resident of Elmira, N. Y., and general manager of the Elmira, Cortland & Northern railroad, of which line his father-in-law, Capt. Bart Atkins, is general agent. The line is 120 miles in length, and is doing a large business.

The great $7,000,000 suit of Frederick Prentiss versus property owners in the city of Duluth has passed through one stage, and Mr. Prentiss has received a serious setback. Justice Miller decides that Armstrong had the right, under Chief Buffalo's appointment, to a tract of land in this vicinity, but it would seem that at the time Armstrong made the quit claim to Prentiss, the former had no interest in the particular land in question.

Mrs. Culver and daughter, Ray, have returned from a visit of several weeks at St. Louis.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Waggers—Indeed she did. She was talking when the end came.

Philadelphia Press: "My daughter," said Nextdore, "is quite familiar with all the classical composers."

Judge: Gerald—I wonder whether I shall be numbered with the sheep or the goats on the day of judgment?

Geraldine—Well, you are always butting in.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Everybody is wondering who brought that young Dobson to the picnic. The first thing he did was to sit down on a custard pie."

"Made a bad impression, eh?"

Detroit Free Press: "Do you know your eyes are crooked and out of focus?" said the quack oculist, suddenly appearing at the busy man's desk.

"That may all be," was the reply, "but if your brain wasn't any more out of plumb than my eyes you'd be lucky!"

Washington Star: "You have served your country nobly," said the mikado. "Anything you may ask will be granted."

"I have but three requests," answered the Japanese naval hero; "don't erect a triumphal arch, don't present me with a house and don't let the girls kiss me."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Mankato Free Press: You can talk about the man behind the gun, the hardy son of toil behind the plow; you can relate your stories of the man behind the cash register or the man behind the footlights, but none of them is to be compared with the man behind the linotype.

Madison Independent Press: From the appearances at Camp Lakeview we conclude that it takes considerable quantities of the article that made Milwaukee famous to keep things moving down there.

Appleton Tribune: The Hector Mirror has launched a boom for Congressman A. J. Volstad for governor of Minnesota, believing him to be able to defeat Governor Johnson. In our humble opinion it would be better to leave these two men where they are for another term as each is rendering splendid service for the state and nation.

St. Peter Herald: Eustis isn't saying "nothing to nobody." This sounds suspicious.

Fairmont Sentinel: There was never a better advertisement of our state than Gov. Johnson's invitation for the international peace congress to meet at St. Paul and have the use of our beautiful new capitol building has proved to be. There are many ways in which a wideawake executive can serve his state.

International Falls Press: The University of Minnesota has a greater proportion of women students than any other co-educational school in the country. Northwestern girls are wide awake to their opportunities.

Ada Herald: Governor Johnson never loses an opportunity to do a good turn for the state of Minnesota and his invitation which he extended to peace commission which may adjourn from Washington, to meet at our state capitol, is just another piece of evidence which goes to show that the governor is always on the alert for anything that will gain prominence for the North Star state.

Rush City Post: The Republicans who supported Bob Dunn will control the next state convention. This is a pointer.

Anoka Herald: When the world turns against you and things look badly don't despair; it may be only the grip or indigestion.

KISSING THE ROD.

O heart of mine, we shouldn't
Worry so!
What we've missed of calm we couldn't
Have you know!
What we've met of stormy pain,
And of sorrow's driving rain,
We can better meet again,
If it blow!

We have erred in that dark hour
We have known,
When our tears fell with the shower,
All alone!—
Were not shine and shadow blent
As the gracious Master meant?—
Let us temper our content
With His own.

For, we know, not every morrow
Can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow
We have had,
Let us fold away our tears,
And put by our foolish fears,
And through all the coming years
Just be glad.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

Irresistible Logic.

Harper's Weekly: "Sambo," said the owner of a country place to his gardener, "concerning that tree I wanted you to cut down, my wife thinks it had better be allowed to stand."

"Well, ah think it ought to come down, Massa Brown," was the reply.

"What are your reasons for thinking so, Sambo?"

"We—ll, sir, de first reason am dat de tree done keep de light off de greenhouse; de secon' reason am dat it's gettin' old; and de third reason am dat I cut it down last night."

A Scientific Inquiry.

Milwaukee Sentinel: "I had heard so much on the medicinal properties of Milwaukee beer that when I came to this city I determined to make a judicious personal test," said J. W. Frerich of Seattle, Wash., who is at the Plankington.

"Therefore I am drinking moderate quantities of a different brand of Milwaukee beer every day and when I go home I will be able to inform my townspeople which brand has the greatest invigorating effect on the system. I am sampling the beer in the same invigorating manner that I would try the waters of the different springs at Hunter's Hot Springs or West Baden. By tomorrow night I will be sufficiently well informed to draft a report."

A Hard-Luck Story.

Grind, grind, grind,
Here at the desk all day,
When I can close my eyes and see
The gleam of the fish at play.

Toil, toil, toil,
Toiling with might and main,
When I can dream of verdant fields
Of billowy, waving grain.

Strife, strife, strife
In the heat from the glaring pave,
When I can dream of a far off shore
Anu the sparkle of cooling wave.

Broke, broke, broke,
Busted completely flat,
Trying to squeeze the summer thro'
With our old last year's straw hat.

—WILL F. GRIFFIN in Milwaukee Sentinel.

He Draws the Line.

Littlefork Guardian: There will be a baby show in Littlefork as one of the attractions for the Fourth, and a prize will be given the most likely child. Ernest Polkinghorn, Ira Foster, Oliver Erickson, Wallace Shaw and Rhuben Mercer have been appointed judges. We hold some claims to bravery ourselves. We have once risked our life in a shoal of shark to rescue a fellow being; we have fearlessly faced and fought to defeat a pack of angry wolves; we have stood up at the wrong end of a mule and received its benedictions wrapped up in a sheet of stars, but never—not in a thousand years—would we risk our life as a baby judge. Not us.

Duluth Is All Right.

Anoka Union: After enjoying the hospitality of the Duluth people, and witnessing the way they entertain conventions, and large gatherings, taking note of the hotel accommodations, you will find me quite willing that Duluth should have the big political conventions whenever the town makes a bid for them. The folks up there are the right kind, and they love to have the stranger drop in upon them, and if he is not made to feel at home in about a minute, he is composed of a different kind of dirt from most of mankind. Each man, woman and child is loyal to the place, and are proud of their city, and they'll let you know that as soon as you set your foot in the place.

It is Always Life.

Kansas City Times: For a time it was the strenuous life, then it was the simple life; now it's the Equitable Life.

When I Go Home.

It comes to me often in silence,
When the firelight sputters low—
When the black uncertain shadows
Seem wraiths of the long ago;
Always with a throb of heartache
That thrills each pulsive vein,
Comes the old, unquiet longing
For the peace of home again.

I'm sick of the roar of cities,
And of faces old and strange;
I know where there's warmth of welcome,
And my yearning fancies range
Back to the dear old homestead,
With an aching sense of pain;
But there'll be joy in the coming
When I go home again.

When I go home again! There's music
That may never die away
And it seems the band of angels,
On a mystic harp to play,
Have touched with a yearning sadness
On a beautiful, broken strain,
To which is my fond heart wording—
When I go home again.

Outside of my darkening window
Is the great world's crash and din,
And slowly the autumn's shadows
Come drifting, drifting in,
Sobbing, the night winds murmur
To the splash of the autumn rain;
But I dream of the glorious greeting
When I go home again.

—Eugene Field.

Aggie, Do Be Sensible!

Carlton Vidette: Say, Aggie! Albert says he is getting tired hauling your trunk around and hopes that you will put it somewhere and permit him to stay with it.

Some More Harmony!

St. Cloud Journal-Press: P. W. Dowling of the Eveleth Star, he of the whitewash brush, is kind enough to say that if the Republicans who voted against Dunn are willing to admit that they were wrong, and will pledge themselves to support the Republican party in 1906, they will be admitted back into the party on probation. Dowling is getting to be almost as foolish as Jim Peterson. Seventy-five thousand of the best Republicans in Minnesota, who only ask that the party be decent and honest, will not take orders from political idiots. Dowling is simply making himself ridiculous.

Reflections of a Bachlor.

If a boy is real clever he can acquire a lot of knowledge at school useful to forget afterward.

The way some women's summer clothes are made they would look dressed up if they fell off.

In summer a man thinks he is cooling off when he is drinking whisky and in winter that he is freezing to death when he isn't drinking it.

Punishment is Severe.

Washington Post: Mrs. Eddy says that poverty is not a disease. No; but it is getting to be almost a crime in some sections of the world.

BANQUETS MEMBERS

Duluth Automobile Club Holds Its First Social Event.

Precedes Feast With Automobile Parade on Superior Street.

The first banquet of the Duluth Automobile club was successfully given at the Commercial club rooms last evening. Previous to the banquet the members of the club "mobbed" down Superior street from the East end, and went out as far toward the western end of the city as Twenty-third avenue west.

There were twenty-five machines in the parade, of various sizes and makes, some carrying one person and some carrying several. The electric runabouts headed the procession, being followed by the gasoline automobiles. Several Superior enthusiasts in the art were among those participating in the parade.

It was about 5:30 o'clock when the procession started from about Nineteenth or Twentieth avenues east and the machines whirled down through the East end at a 10-mile-an-hour speed, viewed by a large number of interested spectators along the route.

B. A. Ledy, secretary of the St. Paul Automobile club was too late in arriving in the city to participate in the parade, but he did attend the banquet and gave an interesting talk.

Those participating in the parade were W. J. Stevenson, C. W. Happman, William Dalrymple, A. H. Smith, Victor Hout, A. M. Miller, W. C. Brown, G. L. Douglas, G. A. Wood, E. J. Fillatrault, A. R. McManus, W. B. Silvey, L. R. Martin, R. B. Knox, T. A. Brewer, T. Furniss, D. G. Cutler, C. M. McCord, J. B. Morrow, A. H. Draper, W. W. Walker, Lee Farmer and Chief Black of the fire department.

W. B. Silvey gave some excellent suggestions to the members in his toast "Automobile Ethics."

Mayor M. B. Cullum furnished his share of the entertainment in telling the members "How to Run an Automobile," his experience along that line having been obtained by riding on the street cars.

A. E. McManus responded entertainingly and humorously to the toast, "Duluth From An Automobile," after which Mr. Ledy talked at some length about automobiling in Minnesota, and gave suggestions of the best manner in which the sport could be promoted in the Twin Cities and Duluth.

R. B. Knox responded to the toast, "The Kickers."

W. W. Walker finished the toasts with "Going Some."

In his talk Mr. Ledy urged that Duluth be well represented at the St. Paul carnival tour, which will begin July 4, and continue for a week. The tour is given under the direction of the St. Paul club, and will start from 100 points and enter St. Paul by four routes. The tour is encouraged by the American Automobile association.

Each entrant is to be furnished a license and two canvas signs, bearing the official designation, "1905 St. Paul Auto Carnival Tour."

It is likely that some of the Duulth automobilists will attempt the trip from Duluth to St. Paul in their machines.

BIG RECEIPTS AT LAND OFFICE

Large Payments at Crookston on Red Lake Indian Lands.

Crookston, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Twelve thousand six hundred and twenty-eight dollars was taken in during the six days of last week by Receiver August George of the Crookston United States land office, and during the next few weeks it is likely that the receipts of the office will average even above that high figure. The reason for the enormous rush of money into the land office is the fact that the first payment on Red Lake Indian lands is due, and settlers are paying in accordance with their terms of settlement. On an average, twenty payments per day are made, and the amount received by the officials from each individual settler ranges from $30 to $100, and even as high as $200 on choice descriptions. A million and a half of money will be paid in during the next few years at the Crookston land office.

New business at the office continues at a rate which is surprising, and hardly a day passes but what a number of entries are made out and a dozen or more prospective homesteaders fitted out with facts and figures relative to land upon which they intend to locate. This summer there have been numerous inquiries from school teachers in various sections of the states about government lands, and it is probable that large numbers of the fair instructors will take parcels of Uncle Sam's domain for the pleasure and profit there is in the work.

LED A FAST LIFE.

Railroad Man Is a Defaulter and Fugitive.

Los Angels, Cal., June 27.—Having bucked the stock markets, played the races, squandered his company's money and then lost his nerve, Lewis C. Sheets, for seven years the assistant cashier of the local freight offices of the Santa Fe wrote a confession to his wife and then fled, a defaulter to the amount of $5,000. He was seen last Monday, but not since.

Sheets confessed to his wife that he had promised to marry Miss Emma Nelson of Chicago last November, hoping to secure money from her with which to reimburse the company and cover his defalcations, and Miss Nelson believed him single and came to Los Angeles to marry him. He achieved unenviable notoriety through the exposure of his relations with Miss Nelson, with whom he entered into correspondence through a matrimonial agency.

The National Surety company, which backed his integrity to the amount of $20,000, is seeking him.

MAD DOG ON FARM.

Aged Farmer and Cattle and Sheep Bitten.

Crookston, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Swan Anderson, an aged farmer, residing near St. Hilaire, in Rocksbury township, has been sent to the Pasteur Institute at Chicago, for treatment for rabies, unmistakable signs of which he has shown as a result of a bite from a mad dog received on his farm several days ago.

Anderson has owned the dog for several years and ont understanding the symptoms of rabies when they were manifested in the canine allowed the animal to run loose about the farm, after becoming inoculated with the deadly germ. The result was a wholesale spread of the rabies to cattle, sheep and cats upon the Anderson farm and the final biting of the owner in his endeavors to shoot the frenzied animal.

HEIR TO FORTUNE

May Have Hard Time to Secure It.

Helena, Mont., June 27.—Through reading a newspaper, W. B. Pomeroy of Boston, learned of his heirship to a large estate that his father, T. M. Pomeray, who had died intestate in Montana in 1882, and which had escheated to the territory, had left. He came to Helena, instituted suit in the district court a year ago and was given judgment, from which the state appealed and this has just been heard in the supreme court and taken under advisement. The district judge ordered the state auditor to draw a warrant for $16,000 with interest, but there being no fund upon which he could draw, the attorney general directed him not to comply. The state admits the heirship, but holds that Pomeroy must seek relief from the legislature rather than in the courts.

ESTIMATE WANTED

Council Will Consider Plan to Enlarge City Hall.

Proposed Smoke Ordinance Is Amended By the Committee.

The Council Last Evening:

Called for estimate on cost of enlarging present city hall.

Received committee report amending proposed smoke ordinance.

Granted licenses to dealers in fireworks, not to be issued until after June 30.

Owing to the urgent necessity for more vault room in the city hall, to accommodate the ever increasing collection of records of all kinds, and the growing need for more office room as well, the council last evening instructed the city engineer to prepare an estimate of the cost of adding a third story to the present city hall building, and also requested the building inspector to examine the walls and determine whether or not they are strong enough to bear the additional strain.

The action was taken as a result of the report of the committee on city property, buildings and markets, which was investigating the means for increasing the vault room in the present city building. The committee reported that the vault room was greatly needed, but in their opinion no changes should be made until the building itself was enlarged, as practically all of the offices now in the building are cramped for room, and the city is compelled to pay out $275 a month in rent for the offices of the water and light department.

It is believed that the cost will be approximately $20,000.

* * *

Somewhat disfigured, but still recognizable, Alderman Waugh's smoke ordinance issued from the hands of the committee and was reported on for action.

As amended, the ordinance declares that dense smoke or soot issuing from a smokestack or chimney for more than five minutes at a time is a nuisance, and punishable by a fine or imprisonment.

The time limit of five minutes was given in order to allow locomotive engineers and firemen in large buildings to make new fires.

The limits in which the ordinance shall be effective were also changed, and now extend only from Lester river to Twenty-eighth avenue west, above Superior street from Lester river to Second avenue east, and above Michigan street from Second avenue east to Twenty-eighth avenue west. The factory and railroad districts are thus excluded from the ordinance as amended.

The amended bill will be given its second reading next Monday evening.

* * *

On a motion by Alderman Moore the contract awarded to Sang & Preston by the board of public works, for the laying of tile and cement sidewalks, was approved.

Bids were called for three times before the contract was finally let. On the first occasion the lowest bid was seventeen cents per square foot. The council thought this too high, and ordered a second advertisement. No bids were received at all this time, and on the third advertisement the lowest bid was 17½ cents.

"An explanation is due the council," said Alderman Moore. "The members of the committee thought they could and should secure a lower price, and consequently refused to let the contract at the first figure. But the city appears to be more or less at the mercy of these contractors, and they have us now where we have to let the contract at once.

"But these walks are being laid at fifteen cents per square foot by many contractors, and the people should know that they can get the work done more cheaply by private contract. The trouble is that it is the people who are unable to pay cash promptly, and who secure their walks through the city, that will suffer."

On a motion by Alderman Moore, the council then instructed the city engineer to inspect all walks laid by private contract, if such was not already being done. The walks laid under the city's contract are already being inspected.

* * *

Licenses to about 140 dealers in fireworks were passed upon by the council, but the city clerk was instructed not to issue the licenses until after June 30, in order that the celebration might be confined as nearly as possible to the fourth.

* * *

Permission was granted to the city engineer to purchase a horse and runabout to be used in the work of his department. The appropriation will be paid for from the amount already apportioned to his department.

* * *

Joseph Sheehy was again heard from in a statement in which he charged various officers with crimes, but his application for a license did not come up. His statement was referred.

* * *

Health Commissioner Murray was instructed to advertise for a city ambulance and to let the contract to the lowest bidder, subject to the approval of the council.

* * *

The board of public works reported that complaints had been received regarding the dangerous condition of an abandoned foundation on Ramsey street and Fifty-third avenue west, and of a water hole on Eleventh avenue east and Superior street. Both of thse places are located on private property, and the city attorney was requested for an opinion of the powers of the board to abate such nuisances on private property.

* * *

Mayor Cullum and President Haven were appointed delegates to attend the meeting of the League of American Municipalities to be held in Toledo, August 23, 24 and 25.

GOVERNOR LA FOLLETTE

Will Not Decide About Senatorship Until September.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 27.—Governor La Follette of Wisconsin passed through here yesterday on his way to South Dakota to deliver Chautauqua lectures, and took occasion to state, in response to a question, that he had not yet decided to accept his election to the United States senate, to which he was elected last winter.

He declined to give for publication the reason for his hesitation, and said he would not decide until next September.

Governor La Follette says it would be well for congress to defeat the Esch-Townsend railroad rate bill because he regards it as a half-way measure that does not reach the root of the trouble. He considers it would be worse to pass an ineffective bill than none at all.

WITHOUT PASTOR

Bethany Church Bids Dr. Elmquist and Wife Farewell.

Pulpit to Be Supplied By Prof. Martinson of Minneapolis.

The parting of the ways as between Rev. A. F. Elmquist and Bethany congregation was reached last night when each said farewell to the other and a large part of the congregation accompanied Rev. and Mrs. Elmquist to the depot when they departed last night for Racine, Wis. Sunday evening Dr. Elmquist said good-bye as pastor of the church, but last night at a reception given him and his wife at the church they said good-bye as friends.

Dr. Elmquist's sincerity and kindness were touched upon by M. Peterson, one of the church deacons and a descriptive sketch of a Sunday morning was given by Charles Johnson. Rev. J. V. Soderman of Superior spoke, paid a tribute to Dr. Elmquist as a neighboring pastor and as a friend. Edward Nelson spoke of the splendid growth of the congregation, both in number and wealth during the pastorate of Dr. Elmquist.

B. E. Wellberg, in behalf of the congregation presented Dr. Elmquist with a purse.

In reply to all these expressions of regret at his leaving Dr. Elmquist said that if it was then to be decided whether or not he should go, he feared he would be taken and stay. He begged that his old parishioners should not forget him and showed himself to be decidedly affected. He pointed them to the religious teachings which he has been preaching to them during the years he has been their pastor, and which their fathers have taught them.

Following the speeches a reception was held and refreshments served. Quite a number of friends accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Elmquist to the depot. They went to Racine, where Dr. Elmquist will attend the Lutheran synodical meeting and from there he will go to Minneapolis to take charge of St. John's English Lutheran church.

For the present the pulpit of Bethany Lutheran church will be occupied by Prof. M. Martinson of Minneapolis University of the Lutheran church. Prof. Martinson is said to be a very eloquent speaker and will supply here until the church council decides to call another pastor. The council has not held a meeting to talk over the parochial situation since the failure of its plans in regard to chosing Rev. J. A. Nyvall for pastor. It is likely that it will meet soon, however.

NO NOTICES YET.

Superior Street Assessment Not Yet Ready.

The assessment for the paving of West Superior street from Eighth to Twenty-fourth avenues west has not yet been put on the books of the city comptroller and will not be for a few days yet. Therefore notices of assesement have not yet been sent out in this matter to the property owners affected.

It is hoped by those active in the paving matter that this will not delay the paying in of assesments. If this matter is taken care of quickly, the paving work will start soon; otherwise, if the property owners wait the limit allowed, forty days, the paving will not be in use much before snow flies.

The street is to be paved with tar macadam, and will make a handsome and useful thoroughfare.

West End Shortrails.

The city council last night asked for estimates for paving Twenty-ninth avenue west from Superior to Third streets. This avenue needs the paving badly, and as it is becoming more and more important for traffic, attention to it will soon be necessary.

D. D. Sheldon, who has been living at the Esmond for a long time, left yesterday for St. Paul, for an indefinite stay.

W. H. Duenland of Mankato and Miss Mabel Jackson of Duluth, were married yesterday, and are spending their honeymoon at the Esmond hotel. The groom is now acting day clerk at the hotel.

Two funerals took place at the West end, Sunday afternoon. They were those of Mrs. Sophie Smith from her late residence, 1825 West First street; and Alfred Peterson of 610 Garfield avenue.

Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal church was hurt at the launching in Superior yesterday by falling through some planking on which he was standing. The tendions of his left leg were severely strained and he had to be helped home.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmar Jentont of 2231 West Fourth street.

ONE BOILED EGG

Sufficient to Provide Luncheon For Twelve.

New York, June 27.—Luncheon for twelve, the principal dish one hard-boiled egg, sounds preposterous, but the egg was served Sunday in the restaurant at Dreamland, Coney Island, and found ample. Eggs of the variety served are worth $300 a dozen. It was laid by an ostrich from the farm at Jacksonville, Fla., which has a number of birds on exhibiton at Dreamland and weighed five pounds.

KILLED BY ENGINE

On the Stripping Work at Mahoning Mine.

Hibbing, Minn., June 27.—John Kajola, a Finlander 50 years of age, was killed at the stripping work of Winston & Dear, at the Mahoning mine. He was working on the track with six associates. The dinkey train approached, blowing its whistle loudly. The other men left the track and called to Kajola to get out of the way, but he simply looked up and then resumed work. By this time the engine had approached too close to control and the man was thrown under the wheels. Three cars passed over him.

He had two adult children in America and a wife and five children in Finland.

FLOOD OF IMMIGRANTS

Going Through the Gates at Ellis Island.

New York, June 27.—Streams of immigrants continue to pour into New York through Ellis island, breaking previous records. More than 72,000 immigrants have landed since June 1, and official estimate up to the end of this month is 84,085, as against 51,731 in June of last year, an even larger proportionate increase than in May, this year, being 94,712, as against 70,417 in May 1904. The high water mark in immigration is usually reached in May.

The census office approximates the total immigration for this fiscal year at 1,051,659, which indicates a record breaker, high water nark being 857,046 for the year ending June 30, 1904.

There has been little change in the general character of immigrants in the fiscal year about to close. Lithuanians and Bohemians have been rushing here, mainly to work in coal mines. Poles and Russians come and scatter throughout the country, many settling in sweatshops. Italians crowd in to do manual labor, Swedes and Greeks find their way to the Northwest. There are fewer Germans than of former years, and Ireland seems to have been pretty thoroughly drained.

TALK OF RECEIVER

For the Royal Arcanum Continues at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, June 27.—If the feeling among the Milwaukee members of the Royal Arcanum does not change, an application may be made for the appointment of a receiver for the fraternal insurance order. Yesterday there were several conferences at which various plans were discussed. It seemed to be the general idea that the advisable course, if objectionable rates are not withdrawn, would be to ask the courts to intervene. One plan was to apply for an injunction against the officers at Boston to prevent the carrying out of the proposal.

The ability of the members to secure the appointment of a receiver and have the affairs wound up will depend entirely on whether the court can be made to believe that there is a state of insolvency. While a deficiency of $271,000 exists, according to the admission of the officers, the fact remains that they can raise $11,000,000 or more

An order enjoining the officers from collecting the new rates on Oct. 1 undoubtedly could be obtained, but would accomplish little good, for the main question would still remain unsettled.

"BOOKIES" ARRESTED.

Sheriff Carries Out Governor's Request at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, June 27.—Carrying out the request of Governor Hanley, that he enforce the law against pool selling at the state fair grounds, Sheriff Edward Sourber and eleven deputies last evening arrested eight bookmakers.

Sheriff Courber waited until the pools were being sold for the last race of the day and then ordered his deputies to make the arrests. Each deputy was assigned to a stand and when the order came from the sheriff, they promptly placed the men under arrest. The men arrested gave their names as follows: John Carr and J. H. New of Chicago; Joseph Marks, Clause Jones, Allen Abbott, Harry Philipps, Horace Fankie and John Taylor.

The prisoners were arraigned before Justice John White of Grand Rapids, who held court in the administration building. The men were charged with keeping pool stands and bonds in the sum of $50 each were furnished by Secretary Holt of the racing association, Samuel Pierson and William Blair, for the appearance of the men before Squire White at the administration building at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of July 1, to answer to the charges.

CHEAPER GAS

To Be Asked For Consumers In New York.

New York, June 27.—A petition, based on the recent legislative gas and lighting investigation made here, is about to be presented by Mayor McClellan to the state commission of gas and electricity for a reduction in the price of gas in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the greater part of the Bronx to 75 cents a thousand feet to private consumers.

The petition will be offered under a law passed by the last session of the legislature creating the commission, which provides that the mayor of a city of 100 consumers of a gas company may call on the commission for a reduction in the price of gas.

The law went into effect on June 1 and the commission was to have organized last Friday, but the unwillingness of James R. Sheffield to accept the appointment offered to him by the governor prevented the organization and brought about a situation in which the gas and electrical companies are forbidden to take any steps of importance without the consent of a commission which has not yet come into existence. Many applications under the new law have already been sent to Albany and are now awaiting consideration.

IN SELF DEFENSE.

Yardmaster Kills Former Switchman at Chicago.

Chicago, June 27.—Having shot and killed Jesse E. Thompson, a switchman recently discharged from the employment of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railway company, Yardmaster James S. Walsh of the company, last night telephoned to the police to remove the body, then gave himself up. Thompson was discharged by Walsh for alleged neglect of duty. He had announced his intention, it is said, of killing Walsh and loitered in the yards repeating the threat.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

Archbishop Messmer has appointed Right Rev. Joseph Rainer, rector of St. Francis Seminary and one of the best known priests of the Milwaukee archdiocese, as his vicar general, to succeed Father Augustine F. Schinner, who has been elevated to be bishop of Superior.

Fifteen employes of an American circus were arrested at Grand Mere, by militia from Quebec, charged with kidnaping and ill using a young French Canadian girl at Roberval, and shooting another girl at Chambourg.

The Vigo County National bank of Terre Haute, issued the statement Monday, that Cashier Conzman had resigned, and that a shortage had been discovered in his accounts of about $16,000. President E. G. Hudnut issued a statement, saying that the shortage was about as stated, but that Conzman had turned over securities amounting to $60,000, with which the bank can adjust the deficiency.

James Ford shot and killed Geronimo Cass and fatally wounded Miss Lydia Inchminger in Rova, Bridge county, Va. Cass and Miss Inchminger were returning from church when Ford met them on the road and asked: "Is that Miss Inchminger?" and upon receiving an affirmative reply, opened fire with a revolver. Ford is 20 and Cass 18 years old.

Unable to endure the thought of a long separation involved in the foreign service, to which he was ordered, Henry Eichenrodt, bandmaster of the United States battleship Alabama, and his young wife, to whom he had been united less than a year, committed suicide Monday.

Charles E. Davis and his daughter, Elsie, were found Monday morning, dead in their home at Miami, Fla. They probably had been murdered Saturday night. Both had been shot. One shot killed Mr. Davis, while the daughter was shot twice. No clew has been found to the perpetrator of the deed.

Lieut. Arthur E. Balentine, U. S. A., of Fortress Monroe, and Miss Katherine Reed, daughter of the late Congressman Thomas B. Reed, were married Monday afternoon at the Reed residence at Portland, Me.

FREIGHT TRAIN CRUSHES BALTIMORE TROLLEY CAR.

Baltimore, June 27.—In a collision last night between a trolley car returning from shore resorts east of the city and a freight train on the Pennsylvania, one colored man was killed, Mrs. Sarah Cromwell, white, was so seriously injured that her death is momentarily expected, and a dozen or more were injured. The trolley was upon the railroad track when the freight train suddenly began to back, struck and upset the electric car, crushing it like an eggshell and pinioning many of the passengers in the wreckage.

A Valuable Book.

By order of congress a book has just been published giving an illustrated history of the Declaration of Independence, with the biographies and portraits of the signers. From a historical standpoint it is considered very valuable. The most valuable medicine before the public today for ailments of the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Thousands of sufferers have been cured by resorting to it promptly. Its fifty years' record proves its worth beyond all doubt. When you overload the stomach, the bowels become clogged and you feel half-sick all the time. In such cases use the Bitters exclusively and the trouble quickly disappears. It also cures poor appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, malaria and female troubles. We urge a trial at once. For sale by all druggists.

CHICAGO GRAIN FIRM IS IN BANKRUPTCY.

Chicago, June 27.—Creditors of the grain commission firm of Knight, Donnelly & Co., late yesterday afternoon filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the company. Edward F. Potter was appointed receiver in bonds of $100,000. Claims of the petitioning creditors aggregate $16,000, but it is said that the liabilities will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Preferential payments to one creditor while the company was known to be insolvent is the basis of the action.

Winnipeg, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—For eight innings the game between Duluth and Winnipeg bore every appearance of a close pitchers' battle, but after allowing the Champs to tie the score in the ninth, the Winnipeg team went to pieces badly in the tenth, and seven runs crossed the plate before the smoke cleared away.

Winnipeg scored in the first inning on errors by Summers and Erickson and O'Dea's bad throw to third.

The second and last run scored by the Canucks came in the third on errors by O'Dea and McAleese. Erickson pitched magnificent ball throughout the game and held the Maroons safe at all stages, except when the team behind him failed to give support, as in the first and third.

The score was tied in the ninth inning on the only earned run of the game, when O'Dea led off with a two-bagger and scored on Erickson's single.

In the tenth the entire Winnipeg outfit appeared to be afflicted with an attack of nerves, and went to pieces. With a runner on first and one on third, McAleese sent a little pop-up, which Rogers should have taken. Rogers muffed the fly, Maloney threw high to second to catch the runner from first, and Peterson made a wretched throw of the return from the outfield. By the time the Winnipeg team had collected the ball and got it safely back in the diamond, all three runners had scored.

The Maroons were dazed by the suddenness of the disaster, and before they could get into the game again the visitors had hammered in four more runs by clean hitting on the part of O'Dea, Neighbors, Erickson and Summers, and a second error by Peterson.

O'Dea received a telegram just before the game forbidding him to play McShane, who was reported as released to Crookston, owing to the salary limit being exceeded if he were kept on the team.

SUPERIOR BLANKED.

Does Not Get a Run at Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Great box work by Pete Hanson yesterday with errorless support in the field and strong batting resulted in a shut out for Superior on the first appearance of the aggregation here this year. The game was played in the mud. Jones threw for the visitors and was no mystery.

The features of the game aside from Hanson's box work was a stop by Mehl of Ripley's drive in the third and the way Hanson robbed Jones of a hit in the eighth by beating down an apparently safe drive with his meat hand.

Fargo scored in the second when Fitz worked Jones for the only free gift by the Superior twirler, dug clear around to third on Tripp's Texas leaguer and scored on Hanson's out from White to Howell.

In the "lucky seventh" Fargo got two earned runs by bunching on Jones. Tripp singled and was sacrificed to second by Hanson. French stretched a single into a two-bagger on a return direct to second, while White was watching Fitz on third. Both Fitz and French scored on Traeger's single. Warnish followed with a safe swat, but was caught in a foolish chase down to second, instead of playing on the lines to give Traeger an opportunity to score.

Superior had but two chances to score. In the second with two down, Howell and Wing both hit, but Jones made the third out. In the seventh Ronesch started with a hit. Spicer was put in to bat for Oscar Hanson, but the best he could do was a pop-up to Hanson. Howell got one in the slats. With only one down and two on it looked like a score, but Wing drove a sharp one to Fitzgerald, on which a clean double was made. In the eighth and ninth the visitors died in regular order.

Superior has a well balanced aggregation and now that the Orphans have found a home, it is a sane bet they will be heard from in the race.

Fargo had Dolan at first and Tripp behind the bat. Both are new men and each made two hits. They look like fixtures and will make trouble for opposing twirlers.

By winning yesterday Fargo crawled back in fourth place occupied for a day by Superior as a result of the double-header victory Sunday at Grand Forks.

ONE LONE HIT.

Grand Forks Finds Zider a Puzzle.

Grand Forks, June 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crookston returned yesterday for another series of games with the Tigers, and they celebrated their return by taking the first game, by a rather narrow margin of 1 to 0. It was an excellent exhibition from start to finish, and unmarred by poor plays, or bad decisions. Every man played his position well, and Spike Anderson covered himself with glory by making another one of his phenomenal catches in the center garden for which he received a liberal amount of applause from the grand stand, and bleachers. For the visitors Leighty made a beautiful catch at short. It happened in the first inning when there were two men ready to score, and Hanrahan sent a liner over towards the short stop. It was tagged for two-bases, but that man-bird on short went up in the air and stretching out his long arm, pulled down the ball that would have won the game for the Tigers. Then again in the sixth inning Olsen afforded the fans a little amusement by going to sleep on first. Spanton chased him down the line, and then made a motion to throw the ball, and instead held it, and Olsen ran straight into him. There was not a hit made on either side until after the sixth inning, and it looked for a while as if it was going to be a no hit game. Neither pitcher issued a pass. The Tigers got one lone hit to mar the otherwise perfect pitching of Zider, and that hit was secured by Spanton in the seventh inning. The Tigers saw third base just twice. Varco made a call there in the first inning, and Anderson passed that spot just before him, and was caught out at home.

The only run of the game came in the seventh inning. Leighty was the first man to bat for the visitors. He sent a nice long drive into Anderson's mit in the center garden. Livingstone then approached the guillotine, swung viciously and the ball went down the line past third base. Then Kipp followed his captain with another hit, and things got mighty interesting for the fans about that time. Schlatter tried to kill the ball, and struck out. Then Zider, the one hit pitcher came to the threshold of fame merrily swinging his club. He glanced longingly at his two companions, who adorned the second and third corner, and then his attention was arrested by a rather swift ball sailing across the home plate. It was a nice square hit just out of reach of the short stop, and far enough into the field to be safe, and Livingstone came trotting home, bringing in the only run of the game. Ludwig ended the inning by hitting to Hanrahan, who threw him out on first.

Egan did not show up, and McManus again held the indicator, and he gave perfect satisfaction. Egan is still having it out with Kent over the $20 fine imposed on him by the president for not showing up at the Sunday game or at least not giving notice to the office of the president of his intention not to umpire on Sunday, and so it looks as if McManus would remain on the throne for several more days.

ON THE TURF.

Results of Monday's Races on Various Tracks.

Memphis, Tenn., June 27.—Showers yesterday caused a heavy track for the sport at Montgomery park. After Ravania and Tarton, odds on favorites, took first and second races, respectively, outsiders in the betting captured first money in the remaining events.

Detroit, Mich., June 27.—Harry New, 8 to 1 and 7 to 1, and heavily played, won the last race yesterday at Highland park. Ed Moore's Highland Fling was a nose behind. Track slow.

New York, June 27.—Hamburg Belle, the 9 to 1 favorite, scored an easy victory in the Equality stakes, one mile at Sheepshead bay yesterday. She won by one length from Dandelion, with Dolly Spanker, the heavily played second choice, third, a length and a half away. Jockey W. Knapp was suspended by the starter for a week. Two favorites were successful.

St. Louis, June 27.—Owing to the action of the county officials in arresting a member of the Central Turf association, just previous to the first race yesterday, there were not what might be termed official odds on the race, and whatever betting was done was between individuals. J. P. Mayberry, considered by many to be the best horse, won the fourth race, the best contest on the program. Track slow.

Cincinnati, June 27.—Four favorites were successful at Latonia yesterday. Bardelph and Judge Brady were odds on, while the other two, Helen C and Beacon Light, were heavily played, especially the latter.

JEFFRIES WILL REFEREE

The Hart-Root Fight at Reno, July 3.

Reno, Nev., June 27.—The promoters of the Hart-Root fight for the heavyweight championship of the world, to take place here July 3, received word that James J. Jeffries had accepted the proposition to referee the fight and would leave Los Angeles for Reno Thursday morning. After the fight Jeffries will formally bestow upon the victor the championship title.

Root is expected from Ogden, where he has been in training with Schreck, Tuesday, and will at once establish training headquarters at Shaw's Springs, near Carson City.

Hart has almost finished his hard work and will cease his heavy training Wednesday afternoon. From that time until the day of the fight, he will devote himself to light work and perfecting a new blow, which he has thought out, and with which he expects to turn the trick next week.

MOTION OF CENSURE DEFEATED.

AN UNIQUE FEATURE

Will Mark Welcome of Dayton, O., to John H. Patterson.

One Man to Be Greeted By Forty Thousand Women.

Dayton, Ohio, June 27.—The unique spectacle of 40,000 women, the entire feminine population of a large city, united in doing honor to one man, a private citizen, will shortly be presented in Dayton. On Patterson day, July 11, the women of the city will join with the rest of the population to welcome J. H. Patterson back to his home city after a year's trip around the world.

The women will take an active part in the celebration, and for that purpose have formed a "Patterson Day Women's Auxiliary." They declare that it is fitting that the women should contribute their share to the ovation because of what Mr. Patterson has done to make brighter and happier the lives of women workers not only in Dayton, but by force of example the world over.

Accordingly meetings have been held to decide what the women could do to make their part of the day's festivities a success. The men have planned to have a gorgeous parade, escorting Mr. Patterson from the railroad station to his home. They have arranged for the construction of a triumphal arch beneath which the procession will pass. They have announced their purpose of presenting Mr. Patterson with a handsome loving cup. What was there left for the women to do?

After much discussion it was decided to present the guest of honor of Patterson Day with a beautifully wrought, hand-worked memorial, showing what he had done to deserve the gratitude and esteem of the women; and in order that this memorial might fittingly express the feeling of the women for Mr. Patterson, it was decided that it should be not only written but engrossed upon parchment, bound and covered by the skillful hands of Dayton's women.

The work of preparing the souvenir is to be done by members of the local Arts and Crafts Society. The booklet will be decorated with illuminations in the shape of border designs and initial letters. The cover will be of leather and tooled in handsome design. The color scheme will be crimson and gold, colors of the N. C. R. Company, of which Mr. Patterson is president.

The booklet will recite what Mr. Patterson has done in improvement of working conditions for women. It will show the wholesome influence which he has exerted upon the children of the factory neighborhood by the boys' gardens which he established and maintained. It will make clear the benefit which was gained for Dayton in the beautifying of homes largely through lectures in landscape gardening which Mr. Patterson has had given and the practical illustrations which are afforded by the N. C. R. model factory grounds. The appreciation of women for the man who has done all these things will then be shown with good wishes for continued activity in the lines of work which Mr. Patterson loves.

The improvement of working conditions for women is one of the most interesting features of the welfare work in which this remarkable man has been the pioneer. In fact, it was for women that the welfare work was begun.

About twelve years ago five women left Mr. Patterson's employ for no apparent reason except that they could secure as good or better employment elsewhere. At the same time a large consignment of the product of Mr. Patterson's factory was returned from England as defective.

These two facts set Mr. Patterson to thinking. He figured that there was a connection between the leaving of his employes and the character of the output of the plant, and after much thought he concluded that the only way to avoid a repetition of such occurrence in the future was to make the work so attractive that no one would want to leave his factory, and that no one would be so interested in his or her work that defective product would be an impossibility. How well he has succeeded is shown by the fact that it is now said that no woman employed in the Dayton factory ever leaves except to be married.

In searching for ways to improve working conditions, Mr. Patterson one day passed through one of the woman's departments where he saw a girl setting something in a tin bucket on a radiator. Thinking it was paste, he called the foreman and asked if he had no better way of heating paste than that. He was informed that the bucket contained not paste but coffee which the girl was warming for her lunch. Mr. Patterson, with the quickness of decision for which he is noted, decided that no employe could do good work without a substantial, well-prepared meal in the middle of the day, and here was the germ from which the whole elaborate scheme of welfare work has sprung.

First of all, in the effort to provide the women with the hot lunch, gas stoves were placed in all women departments where the girls could heat coffee and make other warm dishes. Then an attic was cleared and a crude sort of dining room was established. Next a comfortable dining hall was fitted out in one of the main factory buildings, where each day five hundred girls were served a wholesome and attractive meal each day for the nominal cost of twenty-five cents a week. This dining hall had been used until within the last week, when a new building just erected was set aside for the use of 1500 men and women employes as a dining hall.

From providing for the gastronomic welfare of the women it was only a step to care for their health in other directions. It was found that the ordinary benches upon which women sat while at work were conducive to stooped shoulders, cramped lungs and general fatigue. In their place comfortable high-backed chairs, with foot rests, were put in place in the bindery and other departments where the women work.

President Patterson decided that a working man or woman could accomplish more and perform the work better if working amid comfortable and beautiful surroundings. Accordingly the factory buildings have been made unusually light and airy. The walls are practically of glass, so great is the window space. The interior of the working rooms and the machines used have been painted in light colors and make the rooms bright and cheerful. Cleanliness is insisted upon, and all scraps and waste are swept up and carried away before the floor and the work benches can become littered. The The women employes are provided with aprons and sleevelets furnished by the company twice a week and laundered in the factory laundry.

To provide further for the physical comfort of the women, rest rooms have been installed in connection with all the departments where girls are employed. These rooms are furnished with cots, easy chairs, bath, lavatory and a medicine chest. Any girl who becomes ill or indisposed while at work has the privilege of retiring to these rooms. Two nurses make daily rounds of the rest rooms and the women's departments, caring for any of the girls who may desire their services.

Twice a day, at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., the women employes and the office clerks as well are given a recess of ten minutes. The girls generally spend this time in calisthenic exercises, which are a welcome relief from the monotony of sitting at a work bench or a machine. At noon, after luncheon for which an hour and twenty minutes are allowed, the girls generally dance in the dinning hall, where a piano is provided for their use. Magazines and books are to be found on the tables and many of the young women put in an extra time reading. Some employ part of the noon hour in taking walks to the nearby woods, or in sewing or doing fancy work until the whistle blows.

The women of Mr. Patterson's factory have formed a club, with a membership of about 500, called the Woman's Century club. This organization is affiliated with both the state and national federations of women clubs. It has literary, musical and other sections which encourage habits of study among the members.

The Woman's Century club has leased the old Patterson Homestead, a landmark of Montgomery county since Dayton was a little village. This homestead has been converted into a dormitory for the girls who have no relatives living in Dayton. "Rubicon Home," as the homestead is now called, has proved extremely popular with the girls, who have been glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of living there. The home is managed entirely by members of the Woman's Century club, and is self-supporting.

These are the things which Mr. Patterson has done for the women in his employ: He has given them pleasant working conditions, has provided for them a comfortable dining hall, where wholesome meals are served, has helped them to secure a model dormitory, and has encouraged them to form classes and clubs for self-improvement.

Women outside his immediate employ he has benefited by the example which his factory has set, and which other manufacturing concerns are hastening to follow. For all this good work the women of Dayton will unite in doing him honor on his return from abroad.

ANYTHING IS JUSTIFIABLE

To Beat the Government, Seemed to Be Mitchell's View.

Portland, Or., June 27.—Harry Robertson, United States Senator John H. Mitchell's former private secretary, was the principal witness for the prosecution yesterday in the trial of Senator Mitchell. Robertson told fully, without reservation, of his conversations with Mitchell at Washington, of the latter's fear of prosecution for his work before the department and of Mitchell's rage when Robertson expressed to his employer the belief that denial was useless, as several knew of the connection of the firm of Mitchell & Tanner with the work of getting the claims expedited and the likelihood that the whole story would come out.

Upon being subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury the witness said he went to Senator Mitchell and showed him the summons, asking the senator what he could be wanted in Portland for. The senator said it was to testify about the accounts of the law firm of Mitchell & Tanner, and told him that Tanner and his son were threatened with indictment. Mitchell told Robertson that when he reached Portland he should go to Tanner and look at the partnership agreement and Tanner would tell him how to testify.

The senator had cursed the prosecution and had said anything was justifiable in defying the government. On Robertson's return to Washington after appearing before the grand jury, Senator Mitchell, the witness said, shook his fist in Robertson's face and swore at him for his action in Portland and Roberston thereupon resigned his position. In continuing, the witness said Mitchell finally acknowledged that he had known Kribs and remembered the partnership agreements with its damaging clause. He cried and swore and said that he ought not to be prosecuted in the Kribs case as he had only received a few small checks for what he had done.

The evidence given by Robertson was direct. He identified letters given by Mitchell at Washington to be delivered to Tanner, but which were given to Prosecuting Attorney Heney and the grand jury, keeping nothing back, but telling to the best of his recollection the plans made by Mitchell and Tanner to evade prosecution and how the schemes came to naught. The former bookkeepor of the firm of Mitchell & Tanner and later secretary of the senator supported strongly with his testimony the allegations of the indictment upon which Mitchell is being tried. During the recital of Robertson's testimony, Senator Mitchell showed every evidence of mental agony. He protested with attorneys for allowing the introduction of the evidence.

NO CLUE TO MISSING GEMS.

Police Cannot Locate Duchess of Westminster's Diamonds.

London, June 27.—The duke of Westminster's missing diamonds continue one of London's greatest mysteries. It is estimated that the jewels which disappeared from the town residence of the duke while the back of the duchess was turned are worth $50,000. Detective Inspector Drew has furnished the following list of the jewels:

One pearl necklace, strung in two rows, diamond clasp, composed of ninety-nine Orient pearls of good round shape and yellowish tint; total weight, 900 grains.

One heart, set with eight diamonds and eight rubies, each stone weighing one-eighth carat.

One owl's head, set with brilliants, and two small emeralds for the eyes.

One or two diamond rings with square moonstone in center.

Small pearl with pendant in green enamel.

Two military badges in enamel, one mounted as a safety pin, and the other as a brooch.

Two leaves in diamonds on a gold stem.

A plain gold horn.

TRUSTEE WANTED

By Faribault Firm to Settle Its Affairs.

Faribault, Minn., June 27.—The Theopold Mercantile company of this city has issued a circular which it is sending to its creditors containing a proposition to place the affairs of the company in the hands of a trustee. In its circular the firm schedules its liabilities at $311,405 and the personal liabilities of members at $24,000.

The assets of the firm are given at $255,000 and of the personal members of the firm at $100,000. The firm owes banks in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Northfield and Faribault an amount aggregating $120,000, and has obligations in the East aggregating $100,000.

The motive in having a trustee appointed is to give all creditors an equal show and it is undertood that all will be well taken care of.

LADY EGERTON GETS DIVORCE.

London, June 27.—The divorce court, yesterday, granted Lady Grey-Egerton (formerly Miss May Cuyler, daughter of Maj. Wayne Cuyler, U. S. A.) a divorce on the ground of the desertion of her husband, Sir Philip Grey-Egerton. The suit is the sequel of a previous case when the wife sued for a restitution of her conjugal rights and obtained a decree, which, however, Sir Philip refused to obey.

DENIED BY DOCTOR

Dr. Bettingen Denies Making Promise to Marry Mrs. Toomey.

Hackmen Tell of Her Midnight Trips to Resorts.

St. Paul, June 27.—The Toomey-Bettingen $25,000 breach of promise suit was resumed in Judge Bunn's court yesterday after adjournment from last Friday.

After the scathing arraignment of Mrs. Toomey by Attorney Durment, in which the plaintiff was characterized as an adventuress and a wanton, it was expected that the evidence the defense would introduce would be even of a more sensational nature than was the startling etstimony presented by the plaintiff.

The court room was crowded again with a motely throng, keen on the scent of social carrion.

They had seen Mrs. Toomey on the witness stand, attractive, unabashed and had heard her admit the improprieties that shatter a woman's reputation. They had heard her drag the names of some of St. Paul's prominent society folk into the slimy mire of immorality, and more of the scandalous story was eagerly awaited.

It was forthcoming, too, in support of the charges Attorney Durment had made against Mrs. Toomey when he declared she had first come to St. Paul as an inmate of Nina Clifford's evil resort, that since Dr. Bettingen had filed his answer in the breach of promise case she had visited the same place, that she had frequented Mrs. Rice's resort of a like character, and had participated in a disgraceful orgy with men in her Dayton avenue flat.

Mrs. Toomey looked somewhat harrassed, though still the attractive, self-reliant woman she has stamped herself. Her reputation was under fire, and sharp and direct were the attacks on it. The attack on her character came after Dr. Bettingen had denied ever having promised to marry her, and had denied visiting her the night of Nov. 14, when she claims the promise was made.

Then the defense called two hackdrivers, William Barbeau and Edward Clarke, and the densely packed audience expected something sensational. Nor was it disappointed.

Both hackdrivers testified to having driven Mrs. Toomey to Nina Clifford's evil resort after midnight early last spring. She was with a man when Clarke was the driver and stayed at the resort for three hours, until 3 o'clock in the morning, according to the witness.

She was alone when Barbeau drove her and stayed an hour. Then Barbeau said he had seen her go into Mrs. Rice's resort a night or so later.

Mary Sherwood, for ten years night maid at Nina Clifford's, added to the senastional testimony. Mrs. Toomey had been there three times during the spring, twice with a man, once alone, she testified. And, she would not swear to it, but the witness said she felt certain, that eight years ago the present Mrs. Margaret Toomey had come to Clifford's as Margaret Ferguson as an inmate of the place.

Eleanore Margaret Toomey heard the accusations, sometimes apparently without emotion, sometimes with wide-open mouth and expressions of utter astonishment.

She had a dark green bottle of smelling salts in her hands and often inhaled the reviving fumes as the recital of the improper conduct with which she is charged continued.

She laughed loud and heartily.

It was when Barbeau, the hackdriver, said she spoke to him as she started toward Mrs. Rice's resort a night or so after he had driven her to Nina Cliffard's.

Mrs. Toomey was the first witness this morning, being called for cross-examination by the defense.

She said she had two brothers, Joseph McKinney of Great Falls, Mont., and Charles McKinney of San Francisco. Joseph McKinney had visited her in St. Paul three or four times. Charles McKinney had never been in St. Paul.

"Do you know May Buckley, the actress?"

"Yes, I have known her eight or nine years."

Mrs. Toomey said Miss Buckley had spent the summer, four years ago, at the Toomey home.

"When did you find Mr. Toomey and Miss Buckley in a compromising position?" asked Mr. Durment.

"That summer."

Dr. Bettingen was called.

"Mrs. Toomey testified that she had got in a delicate condition, and that you used instruments on her. Was that true?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever visit Nina Clifford's with Mrs. Toomey?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever tell her you had visited Nina Clifford's with other young women, and whose names Mrs. Toomey mentioned?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever tell Mrs. Toomey that married women came to see you at your office and threw their arms about your neck, and that you had hard work to get away from them?"

"No, sir."

"State whether or not at any time or place you ever promised to marry Mrs. Toomey?"

"I never promised to marry Mrs. Toomey."

"State whether Mrs. Toomey's testimony as to what took place in her apartments Nov. 14, 1904, is true?"

"It is not true."

"Were you in her apartments at that time?"

"No, sir," was Dr. Bettingen's firm answer.

"Did you break open her mail box?"

"No."

Dr. Bettingen told of a conversation with Mrs. Toomey in his office the morning of Nov. 14.

"Where were you the evening of Nov. 14?"

"At 8 o'clock I was taking dinner with Dr. Walsh. Later I went with him to Chief O'Connor's office. I remained with Dr. Walsh until 12:30 o'clock."

Attorney Donnelly's cross-examination was searching as to Dr. Bettingen's movements the night of Nov. 14. But failed to shake his testimony. Dr. Bettingen said he went home at 12:30 o'clock and went to bed.

"Where were you the night of Dec. 14?" asked Mr. Donnelly.

"Where were you at 7 o'clock the night of Nov. 10?"

"I think I was home at supper."

"Where were you last Thursday at a quarter of 8 o'clock asked Mr. Donnelly.

"I was home. I suppose at the dinner table then."

"Did you go out after that?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"Auto riding with my nephew."

Dr. Bettingen said that Dr. Walsh and he had gone to Henry Schade's and had a drink before dining the night of Nov. 14.

"How many did you have?" asked Mr. Donnelly.

"I suppose two or three."

"Never more than that?"

"Sometimes more."

"That's what I wanted to find out. You sometimes take more than two or three," said Mr. Donnelly, amid a laugh.

The night of Nov. 15 Dr. Bettingen had left his office with Dr. Walsh. They were discussing an article in a St. Paul paper about Mrs. Toomey.

"What did you do?"

"We went and had a drink," was the doctor's answer, amid a titter.

Attorney Donnelly's questions were then directed toward testing Dr. Bettingen's memory as to dates.

"How do you fix the date of Nov. 14?" asked Mr. Durment on re-direct examination.

"By the article in newspaper of Nov. 15," said Dr. Bettingen.

Dr. E. Freeman Walsh, Dr. Bettingen's office partner, was called. He was shown a St. Paul paper Nov. 14. He had called Dr. Bettingen's attention to the article.

"Did you see Dr. Bettingen that night?"

"Yes; I took him to dinner with me at the Windsor."

"What time did you go to see Chief O'Connor?"

"About 8:30 or a quarter to 9."

"What time did Dr. Bettingen leave you that night?" asked Mr. Durment.

"About 12 o'clock. I took him to the car."

"Was he drunk or sober?"

"Sober."

"Have you interviewed waiters at Magee's since court adjourned Friday in Dr. Bettingen's behalf?" asked Attorney Donnelly.

"Yes," answered Dr. Walsh.

He had questioned the waiters on his own notion, because he knew Walter Joyce's statements Friday were wrong.

BABY GIRL'S AWFUL HUMOR

Would Scab Over, Break Open, and Be Raw—Intense Suffering for Two Years—Doctors and Medicines Failed to Help Her.

CURED BY CUTICURA AT COST OF 75 CENTS

Writing under date of Aug. 15, 1904, Mrs. L. C. Walker, of 5 Tremont St., Woodfords, Me., says: "My sister had a terrible humor on her shoulder when she was eighteen months old, causing intense suffering for two years. We had several doctors, and tried everything, but in spite of all we did it kept spreading. One day it would scab over and then crack open and a watery matter ooze from it and the scabs would all fall off. It would be raw for a time, then scab over again. Some one recommended Cuticura, and we immediately procured a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a cake of Cuticura Soap. She was much better after the first bath with warm water and soap, and an application of the Ointment. Before it was half gone we saw a marked change for the better, and she was entirely cured, without a scar being left, by the one box of Ointment and one cake of Soap. Her skin is now entirely clear, and she has not had a sign of trouble since."

AMERICAN BOATS

Of Submarine Type Used By Japs In Japan Strait.

New Pullman Cars Have Greater Accomodations For Women.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Japanese government has admitted that submarine torpedo boats were used in the naval fight in the Korean straits. It has been known for the past year that the Russians had a number of these modern sea war engines, but it does not appear from the reports that they had an opportunity to test them.

Something more than a year ago one of the two companies in this country which make submarine boats sold to Russia a number of these vessels which were shipped "knocked-down" to the Baltic. It was regarded as somewhat strange that Japan had, apparently, taken no steps toward strengthening her navy by the purchase of such vessels. It appears now that Japan instead of trailing behind Russia was really ahead of her. Japanese naval attaches have watched every movement in connection with the development of the submarine type of naval vessels. A Japanese officer is reported to have taken a submarine trip in the first boat of the Holland type which was purchased by the navy department and upon his report to the Tokio authorities his government acted. Japan did not buy vessels of this character in the United States, but she did purchase the material and supplies from which a small fleet of these insidious war vessels were constructed. This material was quietly shipped to Japan and it was accompanied by one of the most expert submarine boat builders in the United States. He is reported to have constructed not less than ten of these boats within the past six months and it is also asserted by those in a position to know that a very large part of the damage inflicted by Togo upon the fleet of Rojestvensky was through the submarine torpedo boats, designed by Americans and constructed in Japan out of American material and superintended by an American mechanic.

The Pullman Car company has started a reform. Almost every woman who has taken a berth on a crowded car has noticed and complained of the inadequate facilities for morning ablutions afforded by the ordinary sleeping car. These "wash rooms," as they are designated, are usually small and it has invariably happened that one early riser among the "lady" passengers would arise from her section and pre-empt the wash room to the exclusion of all the rest. She would take at least an hour and sometimes very much more, in preparing her toilet. During that period all the rest of the women on the car were debarred from the use of the wash room and the mirrors. Complaints have poured in upon the superintendent of every division of the service for many years, but during the last year they grew louder and more emphatic than ever before. Now the company has taken steps to abate the evil.

Just as soon as it became necessary to send a "sleeper" to the shops for repairs orders are issued to remove the locks first of all. In addition to this the company is increasing the facilities for female primping. Heretofore the ladies' wash room has been a little, tucked-up coop in which it was difficult for two women to stand at any time. On the other hand the men have always been provided with plenty of room. All the new cars are being constructed with a view to the accommodation of as many ladies as are likely to desire a "wash up" at any time and this innovation will doubtless be appreciated.

The action of the president in appointing a commission, with Assistant Secretary Keep at its head, for the purpose of modernizing the business methods of the departments will doubtless bring about excellent results Ten or twelve years ago the Dockery commission accomplished a great deal toward the destruction of red tape. But still there is altogether too much of that commodity in use in the departments. For instance: If a local dealer in Washington sells the government a dozen typewriter ribbons for $6 it requires about fifteen signatures or sets of initials to pass his account to payment. Then, too, there is a stupendous amount of trouble in securing the most trivial supplies. The police justice of the District of Columbia, a federal office, put in a requisition for repairs to an electric fan about May 31. It was three weeks before his wants could be supplied, because of the necessity of advertising for bids. In the meantime the court was compelled to adjourn because of the heat, which could not be abated, and the job, which was finally done for about $5 cost fully five times that sum in red tape, time and annoyance.

A paper of tacks, valued at 5 cents, frequntly costs as many dollars through the requirements of the regulations. The Government Advertiser, a semi-official organ, contains each week hundreds of small advertisements inviting bids for the most trivial supplies. All these are published in strict accordance with the law, and one of the duties of the commission of which Mr. Keep is chairman is to devise some means whereby this "saving at the spigot at the expense of the bunghole" policy can be avoided. Mr. Keep has demonstrated his fitness for such work.

Seventeen years ago the people of Georgia dsired consideration from congress for some federal improvement. They had failed, year after year, in securing consideration. A representative of an Atlanta newspaper conceived the idea of taking a party of Washington correspondents to see for themselves just what there was in the "New South." The people of Augusta jumped at the suggestion and as a result a special train carried some fifty-five correspondents to that historic old town. The men who went on that journey learned just what the term "Southern hospitality" really meant. For three days they were the guests of the most hospitable people in the world. They saw the South, or a section of it, as they could see it in no other way and every man, without a solitary exception, constituted himself an advocate of the Southern cause from that time on. Augusta got what he wanted.

A year or two after the people of Cleveland, Ohio, being deeply interested in the navigation of the Great Lakes, took a similar course and every Washington correspondent was invited to take a lake trip from Cleveland to Duluth and return, and to take his wife or sweetheart with him. During that summer the freight vessels plying between Lake Erie and Lake Superior seldom cast off their lines without taking on board a party from Washington. For the first time in the lives of many of them an ocular demonstration was afforded of the enormous commerce of the Great Lakes and when, during the following winter, congress was considering the proposition to provide for a deep channel between Buffalo and Duluth, there were 200 men who were ready to advocate the proposal, because they knew from personal observation just how much such a channel meant to the consumers of the East and to the commerce of the country.

The necessary appropriations were made and today a vessel drawing twenty feet of water can run as easily from the grain and ore docks of Superior to the ports on Lake Erie as similar vessels can run between New York and Liverpool.

Since then a dozen similar trips have been made by these men, or their successors and each journey has resulted in great benefits to sections visited.

And now Canada has fallen into line. On Wednesday last twenty men representing some of the leading newspapers from the Atlantic to the Pacinc left Washington for a trip, which will occupy nearly four weeks. They go first to Toronto, thence to Montreal and from there to Ottawa. From the Canadian capital they journey westward over the Canadian Pacific railroad through Brandon, Prince Albert, Edmonton, Calgary, Banff, Revelstoke and Vancouver to Victoria, and returning they will strike Minneapolis, St. Paul, Sault Ste. Marie and Toronto again. These men have their eyes with them. They go to find out why the Western province of the Dominion has become so attractive to Americans in the past few years.

There is a vast empire north of the Canadian line of which little is known in this country. Millions of acres of land capable of producing forty bushels of wheat to the acre are still virgin soil. British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Assinboia and Manitoba may almost be regarded a terra incognita to the average American, and yet those states may soon become the wheat-producing region of the earth. It is safe to predict that the result of the investigation of twenty bright men who have started on the Canadian tour will be more widely circulated than a score of government reports would be, but no one can predict the result of the investigation.

Linevitch Has But Little Chance to Defeat Oyama.

London, June 27.—Is it peace or war? The view apparently taken by intelligent Russians is that, whether the Russian government will or not, peace must come and come soon, for the defeat, if not the annihilation of Linevitch's forces, is now a question of a few weeks, and even the boldest exponent of the government's intentions hesitates to declare that it will even then refuse to stop a suicidal conflict. How can the czar, after declaring in his war manifesto that he was resolved to pursue the war until the complete reassertion of Russian mastery in the Pacific was secure, subscribe to Russia's effacement? Yet with the disappearance of the fleet it becomes obviously impossible to reassert a Russian mastery, which, it may be added, never existed.

For on land Russians cannot possibly hope for more than a successful resistance to the next attack of Oyama. Few military experts believe that there is any chance even of this result; none holds that any check sustained by the Japanese in Manchuria would promise a successful issue to the campaign. Russia, in a word is beaten. It is no disgrace to be defeated so long as the vanquished retains his reputation for valor and patriotism, which, in the case of Russia, no one has drempt of challenging.

When France bowed to an inevitable, but undeserved, destiny in 1870, she had to bear a far more grievous burden than any that Russia can be called upon to assume. France succumbed on Fench soil and in defense of her provinces to superior force and science. She could not disguise the national anguish, but she faced her sufferings with a stoic endurance, which won her the warm sympathy and respect of all the world. There is no power, great or small, that has not known the bitterness or defeat.

Russia has but a comparatively small humiliation to incur by accepting the inevitable. She was fighting for the retention of territory which was not her own, and the annexation of which she had solemnly repudiated. Her policy in the Far East was not one of self-defense, but of aggression; if now she acknowledges defeat and accepts its consequences, her enormous empire will remain intact, as it was before she coveted the excluive domination of the Pacific. She has aimed high, and has missed her mark. That is the worst that the czar has to suffer, if in recognizing the disappointment of Russian ambition he puts an end to a struggle which agonizes the human race.

It is idle to plead that there is indignity in accepting terms from a yellow people. If Great Britain, with its proud a reputation as Russia, and an older, can enter into alliance with Japan voluntarily, and on equal terms, it can be no real humiliation for the czar to make peace with the mikado. Japan has leaped in one bound to the front rank of great world powers, and the rest of the world must accept the inexorable fact.

But the problem of peace has also to be studied from the Japanese point of view. The rise of Japan to a foremost position on this planet is a little more sudden than any recorded in history; and not less notable than this rapid advancement have been the spirit of moderation, the modesty, and the absence of self-glory with which she has taken this high place. Obviously she cannot sue for peace, but she has let it be known to all whom it may concern that she asks no extravagant recompense for the sacrifices she has so heroically made, and no arrogant reward for the rare and splendid victories she has fought for and won on land and sea.

It is generally understood that Japan would grant terms of peace—of a real peace—even less humiliating than those imposed upon France at the close of the Napoleonic wars. But she will not be content with peace which is in effect a dormant war. Her object is simple, and so far as the rest of the world is concerned, beneficent. She demands that Russia should no longer exercise a suzenainty over any part of the Chinese empire; that Korea should be recognized as a Japanese dependency, and that Russia should disavow, in theory and practice, her indefensible claim to be mistress of the Pacific.

How are these claims to be guaranteed even if Russia should acknowledge their validity for the moment? Russian diplomacy has earned itself so bad a name that paper assurances could not satisfy Japan. The only alternative that seems possible is that Great Britain should undertake to co-operate with Japan in the defense of such terms as she may extract from Russia. There can be no doubt that the existing alliance between the two countries will be renewed, whatever party may be in power in England. But the extension of the present alliance to cover a mutual undertaking to maintain the status quo, after the peace in the Far East and the Middle East, ought to be possible.

Neither England nor Japan has any desire to expand its boundaries, and for the same reason. So long as the policy of "the open door" is respected and enforced, territorial aggrandizement has no attraction for either power. The avowed policy of the United States tends toward the same end. Their interests in the Far East are identical with those of Great Britain and Japan, and though the Monroe doctrine might stand in the way of Americann engagement in such an alliance as we suggest, there can be no doubt that the moral support of the United States would be cordially given to an arrangement which would insure the maintenance of the status quo.

The only other country really concerned is France, and she, too, has everything to gain by the preservation of the present balance of power in the Far East. Indeed, France would gain by a complete understanding between England and Japan. In questions which arise in connection with the territorial interests of the republic in that part of the world, British policy has necessarily been influenced by the fact that Russia is the ally of France. If, however, Great Britain and Japan agreed to guarantee the status quo in the Orient, England and France could confidently bring the same generous and trusting spirit to bear on difficulties there as has been so brilliantly successful in the arrangement of differences nearer home.

The last power that would suffer from an extension of the Anglo-Japanese alliance would be Russia. She owns an enormous empire, no square mile of which any of her neighbors scovets; within that empire is boundless material wealth only asking to be exploited. For its successful development two things are essential; the first is an abandonment of the external policy of aggrandizement, and the second is the establishment of a stable and firm system of administration. Both of these conditions could be realized by a prompt and unqualified acceptance of the defeats she has sustained in her ambitious designs upon the Chinese mpire, and her menaces directed toward British ndia.

Even the Trans-Siberian railway is not a menace to Japan; it is a facility for commercial advantages, especially for Japan, as it provides means of carrying Japanese products into the interior of Russia which hitherto has not been possible. The completion of the railway was hailed with gratitude by the Japanese people, nevertheless it was utilized for the purpose of accomplishing the so-called testament of Peter the Great to expand Russian territory to the sea coast of warm waters. But ultimately Japan found it necessary in her own interests to prevent further usurpation on the part of Russia in Manchuria.

The secret of the strides made by Japan during the last quarter of a century lies in the fact that she realizes and acknowledges her inferiority to the nations of the West. She strove to reach the Western model, and even today the Japanese have no by-word expressing that certain articles made in Japan are superior to those manufactured elsewhere. Foreign manufactured goods are not despised by the Japanese, even if they are labeled, "Made in Germany." The Japanese feel grateful to the West for their progress and the best proof of this is that they have adapted, and are still anxious to arrive at an ideal stage of European civilization.

SMALL BOATS FOR PEARY.

Three Maine Bateaux For Far North Service.

Bangor, Me., June 27.—The Carleton Canoe company of Old Town, has shipped to Commander Peary of Portland, three lumbermen's bateaux, similar to those used on the Penobscot river in handling logs. There craft are to be steel armored and runnered in Portland for the use of Commander Peary on the trip to the Arctic this summer in the Roosevelt.

The bateaux are built in different sizes, averaging twenty-eight feet in length over all, are flat bottomed, shallow amidships and deep in the bow and stern, the, the bow projecting out much further than the stern. The first bateau was built by Hosea Maynard of Bangor, fifty years ago. Properly built, it is the best rough water boat yet devised, and its carrying capacity is surprisingly great.

The three bateaux shipped to Commander Peary are of different sizes, so that they can be carried one inside the other as dories are "nested." No. 1 is 33½ feet long on top, 21 feet at the bottom, 6 feet 2 inches wide on top amidships, 2 feet 4 inches wide on bottom amidships, and weighs 670 pounds. No. 2 is 32½ feet long, with other dimensions in proportion, and weighs 400 pounds. No. 1 will carry 3,000 pounds, while No. 2 will carry 1,500 pounds. No. 3 is 25 feet long on top, weighs 300 pounds and will carry 800 pounds.

The boats are constructed of very wide old growth pine, with oak rigs and stems, and on their arrival in Portland will be armored with steel to withstand the pressure of the ice. They will have runners on their bottoms so that they may be hauled over the ice.

MUST LIVE ON COCOANUTS.

Frutarian Empire of German In New Guinea.

Berlin, June 27.—An international frutarian empire has just been founded in German New Guinea by Prof. August Englehardt, a distinguished Teutonic authority on dietetics, and the German empire is being diligently searched for recruits.

The professor is firmly convinced that the cocoanut is the natural food of man, and declares that it produces elasticity of body and mind and purity of thought and cures all diseases.

Converts who are admitted into the "Order of the Sun," which is the professor's name for his new colony, are required to live on cocoanuts. In the beginning the cocoanut is eaten grated with bananas and papayas, later it is chewed, and finally the colonists must live exclusively on cocoanuts.

The island of Kabaron, which he has purchased, belonging to the New Lauenburg group in the Bismarck archipelago, has been selected by the professor for his experiment.

As yet the members of the "Order of the Sun" are all Germans, Herr Max Luetzow, the violinist and conductor, being one of them. The founder, however, is making efforts to secure English colonists as well as Americans, but the applicants for admission to "The Order of the Sun" will have to present high references before initiation.

RETAIL COAL DEALERS

workers, would be unable to be present at the convention, as had been hoped.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Talk of Handling Coal By Delos Hull.

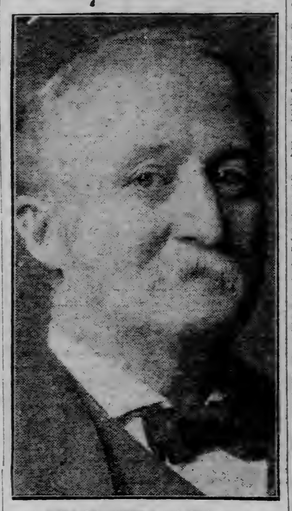
The afternoon session was opened by a talk on "The Cost of Handling Coal at Retail," by Delos Hull of Chicago, one of the largest and most successful coal merchants in Illinois, and editor of the Retail Coal Man, a magazine for the coal dealer. Mr. Hull served for three years as president of the Illinois and Wisconsin Retail Coal Dealers' association, and two years as president of the national council of the State and Interstate Retail Coal Dealers' association, and in that capacity has visited nearly every state in the Union, in the work of organizing state and local exchanges.

Mr. Hull in his address took the stand that the average retail coal dealer sells his coal too cheap, not figuring on a large enough margin of profit, and that therefore he does not make as much money as he ought.

"Not more than one coal dealer in twenty-five can tell just what it costs him to handle a ton of coal," said the speaker. "Most of them figure on about 50 cents, when, as an actual fact, the expense of handling the commodity, taking the yearly average, is 85 cents a ton. This is shown to be a fact by more than 500 letters from all parts of the Union, written me by retailers in answer to inquiries. From this you will see that a man who plans to make a profit of $1 a ton on all coal sold, selling at that price above the actual cost, is not making a very great profit. The general public appears to be of the opinion that there are large profits in the business. This is a mistake, as those of you who have been in the business long doubtless know. If the average dealer in coal make a profit of 3 per cent a year on the amount of money invested, he is doing fairly well. In order to make a reasonable margin of profit retailers in the different towns and cities have got to agree upon some scale of prices, and stick to them. The retail price of coal is too small."

J. B. Cavanagh of Chicago, who was down for an address on "Refusing Coal In Transit and at Destination," was unable to be present. His place was taken by F. C. Hanford of Milwaukee.



DELOS HULL of Chicago, President of the Retail Coalman, Official Paper of Retail Coal Trade Associations.

F. E. Crandall of Mankato responded to the address, and there was a general discussion of the subject among the delegates present.

Ernest Pratt of Chicago, editor of the Black Diamond, gave a short talk on "Co-operative Concerns, Should They Be Recognized by the Trade When Associated Together to Buy Coal and Distribute to Their Members at Cost?" The response to this was made by J. K. Dering of Chicago and H. E. Smith of St. Paul.

10 a. m.—An impartial talk by Worrell Clarkson of St. Paul, Minn., on "Short Weights in Coal." Delegates please take a hand in the discussion.

CUPID IN OFFICE

Assistant City Assesors Pull Off a Wedding Ceremony.

Routine of City Hall Work Is Pleasantly Interrupted.

Dan Cupid invaded the sacred precincts of the city assessor's office yesterday afternoon, and for five short but very interesting minutes, the books and records of personal property assessments were laid aside while the little, blind God held full sway.

It was probably the most informal wedding that has been seen in years, even the affairs which take place in the municipal court being comparatively solemn gatherings.

About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Miss Mabel Jackson and William Dimland appeared at the city hall and asked to be directed to the office of the municipal judge.

J. S. Cox, a friend of the young man, happened to be employed as a deputy assessor, and he directed him down stairs to the municipal court room. Here it was discovered that Judge Cutting was out of the city, and that Judge Windom was engaged in hearing a case.

But Mr. Cox happened to remember that Rev. Emil Sands, pastor of the German Lutheran church, was also employed in the assesor's office as an assistant during the time the personal property was being assessed. The little party returned to the assessor's office, and Mr. Sands consented to perform the ceremony.

Mr. Cox and J. H. Davis, the assistant assessor, acted as best men, and A. M. Morrison gave the bride away. The ceremony was carried through in proper style and all attempted to claim the usual privilege of the bride. But the young man was adverse to any such wholesale osculation, when he noted that there were from ten to a score of assistants in the room, so he paid the minister his fee and withdrew as quickly as possible.

The happiness of the young couple was promptly pledged in a box of cigars purchased with the wedding fee.

It happened that City Assessor Jackson and Mayor Cullum were sitting on the board of review at the time, and they missed the interesting ceremony. Their language when they learned of what they had missed, is said to have been crisp, snappy and expressive.

Judge Windom also had a kick coming. The wedding ceremonies in the municipal court are none too frequent, and barely keep the judicial department in cigars. When it was discovered that the Democrats in the assessor's office had cut out such a prize from under the guns, there was weeping and wailing among the good Republicans who occupy the lower floor of the city hall.

OFFICER HAS MERRY CHASE

Detective Terry Has Exciting Run Along Superior Street.

In an effort to catch John Green, a young man who was wanted for peddling some children's shoes which were believed to have been stolen, Detective Terry was given a merry chase along Superior and Michigan streets this afternoon, shortly before 2 o'clock.

The officer found the young man for whom he was searching on Superior street near Second avenue west. He attempted to place him under arrest, but the young man wrenched himself free, and turning dashed off along Superior street and down to Michigan street, with the detective in hot pursuit.

On Michigan street the chase was seen approaching by Charles McEwen, who intercepted the quarry, and turned him over to the panting officer, who promptly handcuffed him and marched him to headquarters, where his case is being investigated.

BODY IS NOT YET FOUND

Fruitless Effort To Get Remains of Joseph C. Polzin.

Several hours' search for the body of Joseph C. Polzin, who was drowned in Lester river on Sunday, failed to locate the remains. Supt. Lawrie of the National Iron Works, accompanied by Undertaker Filiatrault and several others visited the scene of the accident and by means of ropes were lowered down the sides of the cliffs which line the river bank at that point. The water was still high and but a slight examination of the river could be made. From the present indications the searchers are hopeful that the remains may be found in the log jam which is solidly wedged a few hundred feet below where Mr. Polzin was thrown into the river. Tomorrow morning a large searching party will visit the river, prepared to cut away the log jam, and make a thorough search of the vicinity. If the remains are not found it will become evident that they have been swept out into the lake.

JOSEPH C. POLZIN,
Drowned Sunday, and Whose Body is Either Held By Lester River or Has Gone Out Into Lake Superior.

The police of Milwaukee located the father of the deceased in that city and informed the officials here, stating in the dispatch that he would incur no expense in the matter. Inasmuch as Mr. Polzin, the victim of the said accident, left several thousand dollars in his trunk in money, endowment policies and other securities, there is no need for his Milwaukee relatives to feel worried about the expense of recovering the body or of burial.

Capt. Pengilly Improving.

A telegram received by Duluth friends today states that Capt. John Pengilly, who has been seriously ill at Port Arthur, is much improved. Mrs. Pengilly and daughter left for Port Arthur yesterday, and are there, the telegram having been received from her.

Mrs. Morris is with her daughter.

COPPER STOCKS STRONG

With Butte and Calumet & Pittsburg Advance.

Local copper stocks took a decided spurt today, the advance being most marked in Calumet & Pittsburg and North Butte stocks, in fact, those were about the only ones in which there was much interest. Calumet & Pittsburg, wich has been hovering around $22, jumped to $25 bid at the close, and North Butte was at $27 bid and $27.50 asked at the close.

No particular reason for the advance could be pointed out today, further than that the buying public is beginning to awaken to the low prices at which these stocks are now ruling. Calumet & Pittsburg is probably stimulated by the fact that sinking in the Briggs shaft on that property is again in progress, but that fact has been known for a week.

IMPRISON MANY

The Jails at Warsaw at Lodz Full of Prisoners.

Great Riots Expected During the Mobilization of Troops.

Warsaw, June 27.—All the prisons are full to overflowing, no less than 627 persons, mostly Jews, having been arrested during the last twenty-four hours. It is expected that a state of siege will be proclaimed, as great riots are anticipated during the mobilization.

The laborers on thirty-two beet root plantations in the government of Podolia have struck, and it is feared the harvest will be lost.

The peasants in the government of Kovno are forcefully occupying pasture and other lands of the proprietors of estates.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—There is a complete embargo on news from Lodz, but generally speaking the situation in Russian Poland shows a little improvement. Such advices as have arrived here from Warsaw indicate that the strike is only partially successful, and that the authorities are keeping the situation pretty well in hand. The ringleaders and agitators are being arrested by the wholesale, over 1,000 having been put behind the bars up to this morning.

Following the example of the Lodz workmen, the workmen of Warsaw built barricades at five places, and blood was shed in defending them. Early last night a young Jew threw a stone at a passing patrol, on Krochmalna street, whereupon the Cossacks drove a crowd of people into a courtyard and fired a volley at them, killing or wounding twenty persons, including five women and a boy.

The strikers of the Boamanshvede factory, on being fired on by the son of the owner, retaliated by wrecking the place.

Great pains are being taken to appease the reserve men, who will be called to the colors at the forthcoming mobilization in Moscow and St. Petersburg. At Moscow, in order to create as little disturbance as possible, it is proposed to take 1,500 men per day for twenty days. The Grand Duchess Elizabeth is arranging to distribute presents to the men, and a similar course will be pursued at Romana, government of Poltava.

OPEN BIDS FOR DREDGING

Maj. Potter Recommends James Pryor's Figures For Contract.

James Pryor of Houghton, Mich., was the lowest bidder for the dredging work that is to be done by the government at the Portage Lake ship canal this year. Bids from five dredging concerns were opened this noon by Major Charles L. Potter, engineer in charge of this district, and Mr. Pryor' bid of $17,850 for the work was recommended for acceptance. The highest bid was that of the Zenith Dredge company of this city, which was $25,020. The Great Lakes Dredge & Dock company of Chicago, Ill., bid $20,435 and the Lake Superior Contracting and Dredging company bid $19,020.

The work is divided, for convenience, into two sections. In the first section there is to be 34,000 cubic yards dredged out and in the second section 83,000 cubic yards. Captain Pryor's bid on the first section was 15 cents and on the second it was 17 cents.

Bids were opened yesterday noon by Major Potter for the work of reinforcing the old pile dike at Grand Marais, Mich. The bid of Powell & Mitchell of $26,200 has been recommended for acceptance as the lowest amount. Whitney Bros., of Superior, were the next lowest bidders at $27,650. The amount available for the work is about $27,000.

TRAIN WRECK IS AVERTED BY BOY.

Altoona, Pa., June 27.—The north bound passenger train on the Tyrone division of the Pennsylvania road, between Sand Ridge and Osceola, escaped what might have been a serious wreck and prevented injury and probable loss of life among the 128 passengers who were aboard. Wallace Moore, aged 8 years, residing near the railroad, noticed that a switch had been opened and knowing that the passenger train would soon be due stood on the track until the train approached, when he waved his hat and succeeded in stopping the train.

GOVERNMENT IS CRITICISED

Stockholm, Sweden, June 27.—A joint committee of the two houses of the riksdag was appointed at today's session to deal with the bill seeking authority or the Swedish government to negotiate with the Norwegian storthing for terms of settlement of the separation of Norway and Sweden.

The debate in the upper chamber was initiated by G. A. Berg, who declared the proposals of the Swedish government were nothing less than a surrender to the Norwegian revoluttionists

The riksdag, he said, could not acknowledge Norway as a sovereign state before Sweden's just demands were fulfilled. If the bill was to be passed it should be introduced by the government in whose statesmanship and capacity the riksdag had full confidence. Herren Kennedy and Lithander, members of the right party, similarly criticised the government. The latter declared that Sweden's security and national honor demanded the most vigorous resistance to the acts of the Norwegian revolutionists.

High Praise.

The Business Educator, the leading publication in America devoted to the interests of business colleges, has this to say:

"'Duluth Business University' and 'They Ought to Know' are the titles of two brown-backed booklets by W. C. Carter, Duluth, Minn., which for modernness, good English, printing and illustrating we have not seen excelled, if equalled, this year. Mr. McCarter is a man of education and his education is of the technical and practical kind. In other words he knows how to write a catalogue, using clean-cut English to advertise the merits of an up-to-date business educational institution."

The Duluth Business University is in the front rank of educational institutions in America, being recognized by leading educators everywhere as a practical training school for young men and women desiring to enter on a business career.

ATTEMPTED TO SCARE BOY

Philadelphia, June 27.—What is said by eye-witnesses to have been a deliberate attempt of a chauffeur to scare persons on the street last night, today resulted in the death of Elbon Garber, a 5-year-old boy. During a concert last night at Broad street and Susquehanna avenue, a big automobile driven at a high speed, dashed down Broad street. As the machine approached the crowd its driver deliberately steered the machine towards the child with the evident intention of scaring him. As the machine drew near the boy, the chauffeur became confused and before he had gained control of the machine, it had crashed into young Garber. The automobile driver then put on all speed and rushed up Broad street, pursued by two bicycle policemen. The officers were unable to overtake the machine and gave up the chase after a run of several miles. There were six persons in the automobile when the accident occurred.

September Option Has Strong Advance In All Markets.

Bad Weather, Rust Reports and Strong Corn Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 27.—The wheat market was very strong today, and a variety of influences aided in its upward course. Bad weather in the wheat growing districts was reported, stories of red rust affection grow stronger in the Northwest, and, more than anything else probably, was the very strong corn market. The cash market was also distinctly better. The Liverpool market was unchanged to ¼d lower, so that none of the inspiration came from there. July wheat in Winnipeg was also off 2c. The Danubian countries were also reported to be offering wheat at a cheap figure.

In the Duluth market there was an advance of 1¼c in September. Minneapolis had the same advance. Chicago 1⅝c New York 1½c, St. Louis ¾c and Kansas City ⅞-1c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 281,731 bus, last year 339,985 bus. Shipments 352,595 bus, last year 253,455 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 20,-632 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¾d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed 2¼c higher. September oats closed ⅝c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 102,730 bus, last year 772,920 bus. Shipments 753,380 bus; last year 135,190 bus. Clearances were 44,410 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was again very dull. The new September option opened unchanged at 84¾c, advanced to 85¾c at 11:40 and after that fluctuated between 85½c and 85⅝c until about the last half hour, when it bulged again, going to 86¼c and closing there, a gain of 1½c for the day. The old September also advanced 1¼c, closing at 90⅝c. The July option was unchanged at $1.11½.

Cash offerings were very light. Durum wheat fell 1c.

Flax was dull. July closed 1c lower. Fall options were unchanged, though at one time September was ½c up to $1.29½ and October ¼c up to $1.27.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive—No. 1 northern, $1.11½. On track—No. 1 northern, $1.11½; No. 2 northern, $1.03½. Durum No. 1, 84c; No. 2, 83c; July, $1.11½; September old, 91½c. Flax to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.45; Sept., $1.28; Oct., $1.25¾. Oats to arrive, 32½c; on track, 32½c. Rye on track, 72c; Sept., 62½c. Barley—Feed, 39½@41c.

Receipts: Wheat, 9,531; oats, 9,466; barley, 1,686; rye, 504; flax, 1,122.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Predictions of Further Rains Give Wheat Firmness.

Chicago, June 27.—Predictions of additional rain in the Northwest created a firm tone in the wheat market here today. Distant deliveries showed the greatest strength, the July option being comparatively easy as a result of excellent harvesting weather in the Southwest. July opened ¼c to ⅝s higher at 90c to 90⅛c and September was up ½c to ¼c at 85¼c to 85⅝c. Under scattered selling July weakened to 89¼c, but rallied again to 89⅝c. On the break in July, September sold off to 84⅞@85c but quickly rallied again to 85⅜@¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 212 cars against 180 cars last week and 329 cars a year ago.

During the last half hour the market showed the greatest strength of the entire day, July advancing to 90⅝c and September to 86¾c. Scarcity of offering was largely responsible for the upturn. The market closed strong and practically at the highest point of the day, July being up 1c at 90⅝@⅞c. September was up 1⅞c at 86¾c.

Under active support from bull leaders the corn market was strong. Excessive rains in Nebraska and Western Iowa, had a strengthening influence. July opened ⅛c to ¼c higher at 51⅜c to 51½c and sold up to 51¾c. September opened unchanged to ⅜c higher at 53½c to 53⅞c and advanced to 54c. Local receipts were 242 cars, with 242 of contract grade.

Later the demand from bull leaders was augmented by active buying by shorts. As a result the market became extremely bullish. July advancing to 60½c. September sold up to 55⅝c. The close was strong, with July up 2⅛c at 56⅝c. September also was up 2⅛c at 55⅝c.

A fair demand from commission houses caused a steady tone in oats. Strength of corn was an important factor, July opening a shade lower to a shade higher at 32½c to 32c, sold at 32¾c and then rallied to 32⅝c. September opened unchanged to ⅜c higher at 30⅝c to 30¾c, sold at 30½c and steadied around 30⅝c. Local receipts were 198 cars.

Provisions were firm as a result of a 5c advance in the price of live hogs. September pork was unchanged at $13.00. Lard was up 2½c at $7.52½. Ribs were up a shade at $8.02½.

Close: Wheat—July, 90¾@⅞c; Sept., 86⅜c; Dec., 86c. Corn—July, 56⅝c; old, 56⅝c; Sept., 55⅝c; old, 56c; Dec., 46c; old, 51¾c; May, 49⅝c. Oats—June, 32⅞c; July, 32½c; Sept., 31¼c; Dec., 32½c; May, 33c. Pork—July, $12.67½; Sept., $13.02½; Oct., $13.07½. Lard—July, $7.57½; Sept., $7.47½@7.50; Nov., $7.25; Oct., $7.57½; Dec., $7.17½. Ribs—July, $7.82½; Sept., $8.00; Oct., $8.02½. Rye—July, 66c; Sept., 63½c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.27. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Timothy—June, $3.10; Sept. $3.25. Clover—June, $12.50. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.01; 3 red, 95c@$1.00; 2 hard, $1.03; 3 hard, 95c@$1.00; 1 northern, $1.20; 2 northern, $1.10@1.15; 3 spring, $1.05@1.10. Corn—2, 55¾c; 3, 55¼@¾c. Oats—2, 31½@32c; 3, 31¼@31½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—This has been a great big market, starting with an easier feeling due to improved harvesting conditions in the Southwest. The weather throughout the Northwest, however, shows no improvement. At the low point the market showed but a moment's hesitation, rallying sharply and throughout the balance of the session was rampantly bullish. Conditions in the Northwest have reached the stage where the most conservative people in the trade are seriously alarmed about conditions prevailing throughout the spring wheat country. Moisture has been excessive and temperatures extremely low, the plant needing continued favorable weather and much sunshine from this time out. In the Southwest much disappointment is expressed at the small yield and also with the slow movement of wheat to primary points. The bears prediction of a bumper crop of both spring and winter wheat seems at the moment like a forlorn hope, as conservative people now at best are hopeful of an average crop and this only under the best of conditions. The situation seems to gather strength each day and it seems as if our former advice to buy wheat on the soft spots is still the proper course to pursue.

Corn—At no time today did the corn market hesitate. In the last hour the advance was quite rapid, stop orders placed by shorts playing an important part in the day's advance. Receipting houses are reporting a drying up of offerings from the country. The small stocks place the shorts in an awkward position. Naturally the advance in the wheat market helped the coarse grains, but the corn market itself shows quite a little independent strength. The bull leaders seem to hold the whip hand at the moment.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—As to the immediate situation, the foreign demand is reflected in very light clearances, and crop conditions abroad are mainly favorable. The rainfall in the Southwest has not seriously interfered with harvesting. About the only hardship resulting from recent rains is restriction of the movement of new wheat, but tt that it is larger than usual. In the Northwest the crop has not yet suffered from an overabundance of moisture. The trade is very nervous, however, as was evidenced by the buying following the report of Bradstreet showing a decrease for Europe and afloat of 1,200,000 more than last week and a total decrease in the world's visible of 2,000,000 more than last week. Closing prices compared with yesterday represent an advance of 2c in the more distant futures in Kansas City and a cent for the same options in Minneapolis. It is a good scalping market and the movement will be largely subjected to the weather for the next few days.

Chicago: J. A. Patten, back yesterday morning from a short vacation is as big a bull on corn as ever. "I can see nothing to prevent 60c corn," said he. "I do not see why Europe will not continue to buy right along until the Duanban crop is ready next December. Country stocks in Illinois are cleaned out closer than they have been on July 1 in many years. I cannot imagine where the next big run of corn is coming from. We have taken 60,000,000 of corn since the first of May and it is all gone now. There is always a good demand for corn in September, but where it is to come from is one of the problems that I cannot study out."

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 27.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 5 to 10 points on talk of heavy rains in Texas and a sudden bulge in the English markets. There was heavy realizing on the advance, but demand was very active for both accounts and prices were soon up to a new high level with October selling at 8.90 and other months in proportion. There was some reaction later, but the market continued nervous and prices continued within 3 or 4 points of the top.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market for coppers today continued active but not as strong as yesterday. Allouez came on more freely and toward the close sold off to 25½. The manipulation of Copper Range was continued but the demand around 69 was very good and the stock held firmly all day. Tecumseh opened strong at $4 but an order to sell 1,000 shares at the market declined it to 3½. The declaration of $2 by Osceola was a disappointment to the traders.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Directors of the Osceola company today declared a semi-annual dividend of $2 per share; six months ago, $2 per share was declared. Since the first dividend paid Nov. 15, 1876, Osceola has paid a total of $4,631,900.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 27.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $136,675,615; gold, $64,862,259; silver, $32,368,256.

NORWEGIANS CELEBRATE,

Rev. H. K. Madsen Makes Hit at Big Picnic.

Rev. H. K. Medsen of this city, returned today from the big celebration held at Como park, St. Paul, yesterday. It was the annual picnic of the Sons and Daughters of Norway. For enthusiasm Rev. Mr. Madsen says that the affair exceeded anything that he has ever witnessed, including even the Independence day celebrations that he used to attend in Norway. About 10,000 people were gathered together to listen to addresses by prominent Norwegians of this state, and resolutions were adopted addressed to the Norwegian storthing and congratulating the members on their action in declaring Norway independent of Sweden.

The Twin City papers comment on Rev. Mr. Madsen's address as being one of those listened to with the greatest attention and enthusiasm. He talked for about an hour, Congressmen Stenerson and Nolstead of Minnesota and Gilbert Haugen of Iowa, were among the speakers.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Market Strong During the Morning But Became Reactionary.

Most Leading Shares Showed Net Losses For the Day.

New York, June 27.—Prices opened higher on a well-distributed demand. Gains generally were limited to small fractions, but there were running sales of 6,000 shares of Union Pacific at 128½ and at 129 compared with 128 last night. Baltimore & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Missouri Pacific, Tennessee Coal and Metropolitan Securities rose large fractions. There was a gain of 1⅞ in Central Railroad of New Jersey and of 1½ in Great Northern preferred.

Fractional additions were made to the initial advances in the railroad stocks, but the improvement was carried considerably further in a number of the independent steel stocks. St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading and other favorites fell back to yesterday's closing under realizing. Meanwhile the specialties were being accumulated at advancing prices, and by 11 o'clock Tennessee Coal showed a gain of 3⅛, Sloss-Sheffield Steel 3¼, General Electric 2, Republic Steel preferred 2¼ and Republic Steel, Colorado Fuel and Hide and Leather preferred 1 to 1¼. The buying of these stocks eventually checked the selling elsewhere. In the railroad list Erie, C., C. & St. Louis and Wheeling & Lake Erie improved a point and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo 4⅝. Atlantic Coast Line yielded 1, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha 1½.

The advance in the specialties was used to take profits in the stocks that were strong and active yesterday, including the Pacifics, the Pennsylvania group and some others. Prices of these stocks were carried back to last night's level or below. Tennessee Coal reacted 1 and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo 2½. Others of the Canadian group and Iowa Central made belated gains of 1 to 1½. United States Reduction 2 and Northern Pacific 2¼. The trading became dull at the reaction, and the rise of a point in Baltimore & Ohio stiffened the list at noon. Bonds were steady.

The market showed more inclination to slide than to go up and the midday rally was soon checked by the determined pressure against St. Paul, Union Pacific and Reading. Overnight losses in these stocks reached only a small fraction but little remained of the forenoon's advance in some of the other railroads and specialties.

The market generally showed heaviness and unwillingness to respond to the bull demonstrations in special stocks. Sugar was run up to 139¼ without exerting any decided effect on the list.

The gradual settling of prices established losses of a point or more for St. Paul, Illinois, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred and Smelting 1⅜, for New York, Chicago & St. Louis and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred, 2 for Brooklyn Union Gas and Pere Marquette preferred and 3½ for Third Avenue. American Express sold at a decline of 6. Northwestern rose 2⅜. The closing was easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co. Traders are not losing sight of the fact that on July first something over $5,000,000 more will be distributed in interest and dividends than a year ago. Also Mr. Vanderlips remarks on the gold situation, increase in production, etc., is causing much favorable comment. Pennsylvania is looked upon by many shrewd traders as the key to the situation, they predicting that as Pennsylvania goes, so goes the balance of the market. This company will have a large amount of bonds to finance in the very near future and to make the bond issue attractive stock is expected to improve in a market way. This should have a favorable effect on other Coal properties and the balance of the market in general.

We still feel favorable to the long side, and would buy stocks on soft spots.

* * *

New York to Baker: Some important interests in the market have been and still are advising the purchase of B. & O. on the ground that a five per cent dividend will be paid at the next meeting.

* * *

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market was quite strong again this morning, but it hesitated around noon, and later became reactionary, closing at a material decline from the early prices, so that most of the leading shares showed net losses for the day. Foreign markets were better, but later dispatches declared that Germany had taken a firm and unsatisfactory position on the Morocco situation. There were also indications of further gold exports. At the close the list was heavy in tone. Most of the stocks that were reactionary were those which have recently been strongest, like Union Pacific, St. Paul, Steel preferred, Smelters, Reading and Amalgamated, all of which lost a point or more from their high figures.

* * *

Grier to B. E. Baker: We understand Southern Pacific, while it has put aside money for dividends, has not yet declared as to when it will pay it. The probabilities are when done, it will be a very small one, 2 per cent annually.

TO BE FINE EVENT

Old "Campus Quartet" Will Sing at Alumni Banquet.

President Northrop Wishes to Meet All Old Students.

Outside the address which will be delivered at the first banquet of the Duluth alumni of the University of Minnesota at the Spalding, this evening, by President Northrop, one of the strongest features of the program will be the reappearance of the famous old "Campus Quartet," which for several years during the 90's was the principal musical organiaztion that the university had. Of this popular organization two of the leading members, Rev. J. W. Powell of this city and Rev. Harry Hannum, now of Superior, will be present this evening and they have associated with themselves two other old students of the U. of M., C. E. Luse, who was for two years, beginning in 1890, the leader of the U. of M. Glee club and one of the university's most accomplished musicians, also W. S. Wingate, a well known tenor singer of Superior.

The quartet is expected to recall many fond memories of 'varsity days with a rendition of some of the old familiar songs.

The banquet, which is to begin at 8:30 o'clock, will be preceded by an informal reception in the hotel parlors where the members of the alumni are expected to fraternize and get acquainted before the feasting and toasting begins.

According to the completed arrangements by the committee in charge, the affair promises to be a very successful and entertaining one. The committee has already received orders for 100 plates and more are expected by this evening. Every person residing in this vicinity who has ever attended the university, whether a graduate or not, is invited to be present, and the outlook is for a generous response.

Those of the alumni who have been active in getting up the banquet feel that it is a mark of especial distinction for Duluth to get President Northrop for the university to come here at this time when he has refused invitation after invitation from other large cities in the country to deliver baccalaureate sermons. President Northrop, it is said, has not visited this city in many years and it is likely to be a long time before he comes again after this occasion, if he ever comes, and he is anxious to meet as many as possible of the old students of the university of Minnesota. President Northrop has thus expressed himself in a letter to those in charge of the arrangements.

At this meeting and banquet it is expected to organize a permanent alumni association, there being over 200 persons residing here who are eligible to membership, to the surprise of the committee that has been arranging the banquet, when it started preparations under the impression that there were about fifty of the old U. of M. alumni here.

The Duluth members expect to make the organization the strongest local University of Minnesota Alumni association in this country. They expect it will be second in strength of numbers only to the general alumni association.

The details of the program arranged for the evening have been reserved by the committee in charge, the idea being to make the members of the alumni residing in this vicinity to feel that it is entirely informal in character and that their presence is very much desired.

It is understood that besides President Northrop's address and the music, there will be some observations and short talks by a few of the "old timers."

MAKES ANNUAL TRIP TO MINES

Prominent Officials of United States Steel Corporation Here.

Several of the prominent officials of the United States Steel corporation were in the city today on an inspection trip to the Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan iron ranges.

It is the annual trip of Vice President James Gayley over those ranges, and he is accompanied by D. M. Clemson, president of the Pittsburg Steamship company, and D. G. Kerr, ore sales agent.

Vice President Gayley has for his department the mining and transportation interests connected with the Steel corporation, and this brings him in especially close relation with the Duluth department of the Steel corporation.

This afternoon the party, including T. F. Cole, W. J. Olcott and others of the local officers of the Steel corporation, left by special train to visit the Minnesota ranges. On their return they will visit the Wisconsin and Michigan iron ranges.

APPEAL QUASHED.

Gaynor and Greene Lose in Supreme Court.

Montreal, June 27.—The supreme court today unanimously granted the motion made in behalf of the government of the United States to quash the appeal of Gaynor and Greene from the judgment of the court of king's bench affirming the refusal of a writ of prohibition by Judge Davidson against the issue of a warrant for extradition. The appeal was quashed with costs.

RANCHERS KILLED BY YAQUI INDIANS

Band of Hundred Savages on Raid Along San Miguel River.

San Francisco, June 27.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Tucson, Ariz., says: At least twelve ranchers and several women and children have met death at the hands of a band of a hundred Yaqui Indians who have been raiding the country along the San Miguel river in the Ures district of Sonora and a party composed largely of American mining men, headed by Joseph De Witt, has gone out from Pozo station to rescue the unfortunates who are in danger of being massacred by the Indians.

Dr. Frank Touissant who has returned from Ures brought the news of the trouble which began last Friday. After several families had been murdered by the Indians, ranchers made a determined stand at Buenos Ayres ranch where, aided by about thirty employes, they succeeded in repulsing the Indians, although Jesus Ortondo, proprietor of the place, his brother Francisco, Luis Carranza, proprietor of an adjoining ranch and several other neighbors died from wounds received in the fight.

Dr. Touissant attended Carranza who brought into Lachumala, a mining town near where the fight took place. Besieged Mexicans took refuge in a ranch house and fought from the windows and roof. It is thought that fully twenty Indians were killed although the number can only be estimated as the savages carried off the dead and wounded when they retired.

The nearest armed force is stationed at Ures and when Dr. Touissant left Hermosillo they had been sent to the scene of the outrages. Five Yaquis taken just outside of Lachumala and thought to have taken part in the massacres were immediately hanged.

DEGRADES BOAT

City of Traverse to Be Used as Gambling Ship.

Chicago Sports Use Her to Get Beyond Law's Reach.

The old steamer City of Traverse, well known to ancient and modern Duluthians, is said to be about to be degraded to a pool room in order that the gamblers may get out of reach of the Chicago authorities. A dispatch from Chicago says:

"Chicago is to have a floating pool room, connected with the racing tracks by wireless telegraphy. The old steamer City of Traverse, which ran for many years to Lake Superior, has been purchased by Capt. Stephen Jones and work was begun at once in fitting out the steamer for the new service.

"All the passenger cabins on the saloon deck will be torn out, making a room some 225 feet long by more than 30 feet wide. The main deck will be fitted up as a bar and restaurant. The old boat, properly equipped with life preservers and other safety appliances, will no doubt be given a government permit to carry from 1,200 to 1,500 passengers."

It is claimed that by using wireless telegraphy and staying outside of the three-mile limit on Lake Michigan, thus being in Uncle Sam's domain and not under the jurisdiction of any state, the gamblers can ply their trade without molestation.

By being thus degraded to a gambling hell, the City of Traverse takes a fearful drop. She was once "the" steamer of the lakes, undisputed in her supremacy of magnificence. She was built in 1871 by Hannah, Lay & Co., costing $91,000 and at that time acknowledged no rival on fresh water. She carried passengers and pine between Chicago and Traverse City. Thousands of people along the lakes have basked in the palatial bliss of the City of Traverse and enjoyed the hospitality of the only masters the Traverse has known, Captains George Baldwin and later, his son, Captain Thomas Baldwin. Many who have affectionate memories for the past will be sincerely sorry to hear that this queen of the lakes for two decades has been pressed into the service of corruption and evil.

BREAKS COAL RECORD.

Wolvin Smashes Record She Made Last Year.

The big steamer A. B. Wolvin which arrived yesterday with coal for the Zenith furnaces, smashed the coal carrying record again on this trip. She brought up 10,937 tons of anthracite, which is the best record yet made on the Great Lakes. Last year she smashed the old record bringing up 10,569 tons of coal. Therefore her cargo brought in yesterday is larger than the old record by 367 tons.

Besides her cargo she carried 325 tons of fuel, which, added to the cargo makes quite a comfortable load for one trip.

WOODRUFF INJURED.

The steamer Woodruff of the Gilchrist line arrived today with coal for the Boston coal dock. Her stern is knocked out of gear, but just how, could not be learned, except that it was in a fog. D. T. Helm the agent of the line at this port refused to talk about it.

NUMEROUS KICKS

Over 300 Citizens Have Protested Against Their Assessments.

Work of Board of Review Is Nearing Completion.

Over 300 protests against personal property assessments have been disposed of by the board of review, which has been in session since yesterday morning.

Throughout the entire day yesterday the board was kept busy hearing protests, and this morning when the members assembled about 9 o'clock there were a number of citizens on hand to register kicks against what they claimed to be excessive estimates on the value of their personal property.

The number began to show signs of diminishing towards noon, however, and there is no longer a crowd of people waiting for a hearing, as was the case yesterday morning.

If all goes well the board will complete the work and adjourn tomorrow afternoon or evening.

"In a few cases the board has seen fit to lower the figures of the deputy assessors," said City Assessor Jackson this morning, "but in the majority of cases the figures have been allowed to stand.

"There have been no cases of special interest as yet, and those that we have considered consist entirely of the usual kicks, some of which have been based on good grounds, and others of which were apparently made without foundation."

The efforts made by some of the indignant property owners to convince the board of the worthlessness of their belongings are sometimes amusing. If all the stories told to the board were believed, the members would be convinced that there is scarcely a man in the city who carries a watch worth more than from $2 to $3.

As pauper after pauper leaves the room it makes the casual listener wonder where the Duluth citizens get the money to buy real estate and copper stocks. None of them have more than a few dollars' worth of second-hand furniture, according to the stories that are told, and if all the tales were believed there would be no personal property to assess.

Fortunately, however, the assessors and the members of the board have grown accustomed to the hard-luck stories, and the total personal property assessment is likely to exceed that of last year by a substantial figure.

FIVE KILLED BY TORNADO

South Dakota Towns Visited By Fatal Wind Storm.

Mitchell, S. D., June 27.—A family of three, a father, mother and daughter, were killed outright by flying timbers in a storm Saturday night at Plankinton, in Aurora county, and another family barely escaped with their lives. Their house was blown from its foundation and they took refuge in the cellar. Several business houses sustained damages from the wind.

The town of Artesian was also struck by a tornado. Only meager reports have been received, owing to the damage done to telephone and telegraph lines.

It is known, however, that two men were killed in the storm, and several houses wrecked.

The storm did not do much damage in this city; the precipitation amounted to 1.60 inches.

They lived about four miles south of Plankinton. The mother and babe were killed instantly.

The father was buried in the debris of his house and was taken out alive twelve hours after the storm, but died yesterday at noon.

No one else in the neighborhood was injured.

Artesian is in Eastern Sanborn county and is also on the Milwaukee road running from Madison west to Woonsocket.

LARCENY CHARGE.

Brewery Agent at Hibbing on Trial.

The hearing of Charles Norden of Hibbing on the charge of grand larceny, is being held this afternoon in the municipal court.

Norden was the agent of the Duluth Brewing and Malting company at Hibbing, and is claimed by the company to have appropriated funds to the amount of $593, to his own use.

He was arrested and brought to Duluth last Saturday, and is having his preliminary hearing before Judge Windom this afternoon.

Goes To Juvenile Court.

Roy Teabol, the 15-year-old boy who was arrested yesterday charged with attempting to pass a bogus check of $90 on the Oak Hall Clothing company of this city, was taken before Judge Ensign, in juvenile court, this afternoon, for an examination. The boy is young enough that he comes within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court and his will be the first to be disposed of by the court since it has been organized under the new law.

BAPTISMS AT CHISHOLM.

Range Town Has First Ceremony of Kind.

Rev. John Lindgren, pastor of the First Finnish Baptist church of Duluth, returned yesterday from Chisholm, where he conducted baptism ceremonies at a nearby lake Sunday afternoon. There were four candidates for the church to go through the ceremony of immersion, which was witnessed by a large crowd, it being the first instance of the kind that has ever occurred at Chisholm. Rev. Mr. Lindgren has been conducting evangelistic services at Chisholm for some time past and it is expected that as a result of his labors there will be a number of other candidates to join the church at a date in the near future. The people there have given him hearty support and extended him an urgent invitation to return.

FISHES WITH A KITE.

Maine Angler's Ingenious Trolling Device For Salmon.

Skowhegan, Me., June 27.—Abbott Nelson, hunter, trapper, fisherman and genius, a local celebrity for many years, has, after months of study, perfected a trolling kite for salmon and trout fishing which works to perfection, as demonstrated by him at Lake George, near here.

The lake is well stocked with salmon, but as the water is very clear they are shy and the passage of a boat frightens them so that they will not bite readily.

Nelson evolved the idea that if the lines could be some way let down over some of the choicest spots in the lake the result would be a happy one, and he set to work on a trolling kite.

Several times this spring he has been stealing off in the early morning with a mysterious bundle under his arm, but what he was up to was unknown even to his most intimate friends until one day last week, when he invited a party to accompany him to Lake George that he might show them how to fish.

His mysterious package, which he took along with him, proved to be a sectional kite of his own make.

Joining the parts together upon reaching the lake, he made an aeroplane of considerable dimensions.

To the lower part of this were fastened a number of fish lines attached to automatic reels.

Then by skillfully manipulating it he brought it down so that the lines, all of which were equipped with most alluring salmon spinners and flies, swept over the lake.

Suddenly the kite began to act queerly. First one corner lopped down with a jerk and then the other.

It swayed from side to side and sometimes was almost on the surface of the water. The spectators were astonished beyond measure when, on hauling in the kite, fish were found on four of the five hooks with which it was equipped.

Three were landlocked salmon weighing three to four pounds each and the other one a four pound square-tailed trout.

SNOW SHEDS BURNED.

Gunnison, Col., June 27.—The snow sheds and buildings on Marshall Pass belonging to Denver & Rio Grande railroad have been destroyed by a fire, entailing a loss of many thousands of dollars and a suspension of traffic for several hours. About a mile of sheds were completely destroyed.

TRIAL FOR MURDER

Fourteen-Year-Old Girl Who Deliberately Shot Lover.

Case Unparalleled In the Criminal Annals of Minnesota.

Wheaton, Minn., June 27.—The case of the State of Minnesota vs. Antonette Seidensticker, the 14-year-old girl indicted by the grand jury of Traverse county of the crime of murder in the first degree for the killing of Herman Shipp, May 25 last, is set for trial today in the June term of the district court, now being held here, Judge S. A. Flaherty presiding.

In many respects the case is a most remarkable one, when the age of the accused and all the circumstances surrounding and leading up to the tragedy are taken into consideration.

That a little girl, less than 14 years of age, possessing none of the characteristics of criminal depravity and surrounded by loving and Christian influences in her country home life, could plan, deliberately, with malice aforethought, to commit the awful deed she is accused of, is something that is almost beyond belief, especially in the community in which she was born and reared.

That Herman Shipp was shot and instantly killed by a revolver held in Antonette Seidensticker's hands there is no doubt, but just how the killing occurred is yet unknown, as up to this time she has been unable to give any details of what transpired just prior and leading up to the tragedy. So far as known, her only version of the affair was the incoherent exclamations, "I want to die! I want to die! I shot Herman; we agreed to die together!" made soon after the shooting when the doctors were probing for the bullets from the self-inflicted shots in her attempt to take her own life.

Since she has recovered from her wounds and her mind has resumed, in a measure at least, its normal condition, she seems to have no distinct recollection of what occurred or how it all happened.

She says: "It seems like an indistinct, horrible dream," and there is a sad, far-away haunted look in her pinched face when she makes this statement that impresses you of the gullessness and sincerity of this most unfortunate girl.

The accused girl is the eldest of five children of Frederick Seidensticker, a highly-respected and well-to-do German farmer of this county, residing oh his farm in the township of Wells, about eight miles southwest of Wheaton, on which farm Antonette and her three younger sisters and brother were born and reared.

Last September Mrs. Seidensticker, the mother, who had been an invalid for several years, died, and Antonette, though young in years, took her mother's place as head of the household and care of the younger children, and so well did she perform these duties she was highly commended and respected by her immediate neighbors and acquaintances.

Up to the time of her mother's death she had enjoyed the advantages of a good country school, and is well advanced in all the common branches.

She has always been a great reader, and to gratify this passion, her father provided her with the best magazines and the Youth's Companion; also daily and country weekly papers, as well as several religious publications, the family being devout Christians, Antonette being particularly interested in Sunday school and church work.

She was born in the old homestead, on which the family now resides, fourteen years ago next month, and during all that time Antonette has never been further away from home than Wheaton or Graceville, eighteen miles south of here, going to the latter place occasionally to attend divine services at the Catholic church in that place.

Herman Shipp, who met such a tragic fate, was about 22 years of age, and came to this county about three years ago from Cokato, where his parents, respected people, reside. For two years he was in the employ of Mr. Vern Smith, a farmer and neighbor of the Seidensticker family, and it was while there he first made the acquaintance of Antonette.

During the past winter he went back to Cokato for a visit with his parents, returning to Traverse county about the first of May and going to work for a Mr. Merry, about four miles south of this place, near which farm the tragedy occurred. He is said to have been a steady, hard-working young man, rather above the average farm laborer in appearance and intelligence, but reports and letters would indicate he was something of a favorite with unsophisticated country girls and rather enjoyed toying with their affections.

The love affair between himself and Antonette had been kept a profound secret from her father, as he had not the slightest intimation of it until the awful news of the tragedy was told to him at his own home, where he was awaiting the return of his daughter from Wheaton, where she had gone in the morning with the intention, as she informed her father, to consult a dentist in reference to some dental work.

On that morning, May 25, she came to Wheaton, mailed some letters, one of which was directed to Shipp and the other to his sister, in Cokato. She then called at the hardware store of Erickson & Hellieckson and, to the clerk who waited on her, she stated that wolves were bothering them at home and that one had followed her while at the barn that morning. She requested the loan of a revolver for a few days, as she thought she could kill the beast. Although an unusual request, the clerk complied, and gave her a 32-caliber revolver, with the five chambers loaded. She left town soon after, alone, and drove to the farm where Shipp was employed, about four miles south of Wheaton, known as the Tear farm, arriving there a little after 12 o'clock. A few minutes after she drove into the yard and while she was talking with Mrs. L. P. Deal, who is the housekeeper for Mr. Merry, Shipp's employer, Shipp came into the yard with his team, which he put into the barn and then walked over to the buggy and commenced talking to the girl.

Mrs. Deal went back into the house, and a few minutes later Shipp got into the buggy, and the two drove out to the main road, probably twenty rods from the house, and drove back and forth, apparently engaged in earnest conversation, for nearly half an hour.

While going about the household duties Mrs. Deal heard two shots fired, and stepped to the window and looked out. She saw the girl sitting in the buggy, but Shipp was nowhere in sight. She says she went out of the house to look down the road, but could see nothing of him, and as she re-entered the house she heard the report of two more shots and glanced through the window just in time to see the girl's head drop forward on the dashboard of the buggy. She hurried out, and when she reached the railroad crossing, where the horse had stopped, caused by the rear wheel of the buggy catching on a corner post of the railroad fence, she was horrified at the spectacle that met her gaze. The girl had pitched forward onto the dashboard, while the dead body of Shipp was hanging head downward, forward of the front axle, with his feet caught in the box of the buggy. His face was covered with blood, which had run from his mouth, and the left side of a fur-lined duck working jacket he had on was burning, the flame from the revolver having probably set it on fire.

Mrs. Deal hastily brought water and extinguished the flames, and, believing both to be dead, left the bodies as they were, ran to the nearest neighboring house for help, and from there sent a messenger to Dumont, nearby, from which place the coroner and other officials here were notified by telephone.

Mrs. Deal returned to the buggy, shortly after which the girl regained consciousness, got out of the buggy without assistance and laid down on the grass near the railroad track. About this time Carl Saterback, a real estate dealer of Wheaton, happened along, and, with Mrs. Deal's assistance, managed to get the girl to a house. When the officials and two physicians arrived upon the scene the girl was laying on a bed in the house, moaning in agony and begging that she might be left to die. Though suffering intense pain, she freely, but rather incoherently, answered questions put to her. She said she loved Shipp and that he had promised to marry her, but had kept putting her off from time to time, until a week before the tragedy he had finally refused to carry out his agreement, and wanted nothing more to do with her. She had learned he was paying attention to other girls of late. She could not bear the thought of living without him.

She said that while she and Shipp were driving about in the buggy they talked over their affairs, and she told him she could not live without him, and suggested that if he would not carry out his promise to marry her that they die together, to which he consented. They kissed each other goodbye, whereupon she drew the revolver and shot him and then fired four shots at herself, two of which missed the mark, the other two entering her body just above the stomach, but as the weapon was held in a standing position both bullets passed to the left, striking ribs, glanced, passing through the flesh and stopping under the skin well around towards the back, where they were subsequently easily extracted. The shot that Shipp received entered just below the heart, severing the aorta artery, causing instant death.

That Shipp knew she had a revolver is very doubtful when he consented to die with her, for the inside of his right hand was blackened from powder-burn, in an evident attempt to grasp the gun just as it exploded.

The letter she mailed to Shipp at Wheaton before going to see him is remarkable in its wording and construction, for a child of her years and inexperience. In it she upbraided him for his unfaithfulness and warned him to remain true to his promise to her, and called his attention to the fact that she knew of five other girls he had deceived, and stated that if he did not do as he had agreed by her, she would write and tell his sister all about it, and ended the letter by saying: "Herman be warned; your life hangs by a thread."

The fact of mailing this letter in the morning tends to bear out the theory that it was an after-thought on her part of securing the revolver and driving down to see Shipp.

While there is a great deal of interest manifested by the people of Traverse county over this most remarkable case, there seems to be an entire absence of that intense feeling, sometimes bordering on bitterness, toward the accused in crimes of this nature. In fact, the general sentiment of our people, with few exceptions, seems to be one of pity and sympathy for Antonette Seidensticker.

It is expected that all of today and possibly Wednesday will be taken up in securing a jury. The state's side of the case is being looked after by Edward Rustad, county attorney of Traverse county, assisted by ex-Judge F. T. Stidle. F. W. Murphy, one of the best known and successful young attorneys of this part of the state, has charge of the defense.

THE DEMOCRATS OF OHIO NOMINATE J. M. PATTISON FOR THE GOVERNORSHIP

Chosen on the Second Ballot and Choice Made Unanimous.

Houck Named For Lieutenant Governor By Acclamation.

Chairman Daugherty Says Democracy Is Not Socialism.

Columbus, Ohio, June 28.—The Democratic state convention was called to order here today. M. A. Daugherty of Lancaster was temporary chairman. Mr. Daugherty said:

The Democracy formulated its demand for the extension of the powers of the interstate commerce commission to regulate rates before the Republican party awoke to the injustice and wrongs inflicted upon the public by the carrying companies. The coalition between the Republican party and these carrying companies is so well known and of such long standing that there is justification for the conclusion that growing public sentiment has whipped that party into a pretense of activity only against its own will.

It has been the historic position of the Democracy, a position now firmly held by it, that corporate power created by the state to subserve the public welfare is always subject to the control of the government whose creature it is. And the remedy of the Democracy is regulation and not governmental ownership. The Democracy is not yet ready to concede that privilege has become so powerful and so entrenched in the laws and policies of the government that it cannot be dislodged. The Democracy has not abandoned the struggle; it still has faith in the efficacy of the popular will to restore and to maintain popular rights.

Whenever Democracy shall cease to contend against the constant aggression of privilege pressing on with its ever tightening coil, whenever Democracy shall no longer marshal its legions in the defense of equal rights and shall haul down its flag in inglorious surrender, then the day of governmental ownership and the stagnation and decay of Socialism is at hand. The last resort of the people against the oppression of privilege is government ownership. No man who knows the history, the teachings, the traditions and principles of the Democracy dare associate its name with that of Socialism. Between Democracy and Socialism there is no peace and no reconciliation; they are as far apart as the poles and as diametrically opposed. The paternal attitude of Socialism is offensive to the sight and breath of Democracy. Democracy stands for individual right, individual effort and individual achievement, for that stimulous to energy and spur to honorable ambition which enlarges the heart and quickens the brain, which assures to labor the enjoyment of its own reward, and crowns a life of toil and share with an age of honor and of ease.

Special privilege and paternal government—these are the inducing clauses and fostering spirit of Socialism, and these too, bear the distinctive mark peculiar to modern Republicanism. Socialism springs from Republican policies like the miasma of the air from the marshes of the earth. If that disastrous day shall ever come when Socialism shall write its decadent theories into the laws and policies of the republic, it will be traced to that form of special privilege known as a protective tariff. There is no distinction in principle and no difference in practice between that form of Socialism which would place all industrial agencies in control of the government and that other and infinitely worse socialism which, under the guise of tariff, and by the aid of government, places all consumers at the mercy and greed of its pampered favorites. Socialism, like tariff, trusts, monopoly, privilege and corruption comes trooping from the poisoned womb of Republican policies.

Surprise is expressed that a Democratic club in Chicago should have entertained the president. The Democrats know what Republicans dislike to hear, and if the president is now being borne on the crest of the popular wave, it is because it is understood that he sanctions three significant planks in the Democratic platform, and proposes to employ all the power of his administration and his own personal influence as well to write upon the statute books of the nation—corporate control, the regulation of transportation rates, and the reduction of the tariff, each and all of them Democratic to the core, and to do this against the controlling influences of his own party. Popular favor was never so showered upon President Roosevelt as it is when he is sowing the Democratic seed in Democratic soil prepared for him by Democratic hands.

The boasted prosperity enjoyed by the United States is not the result of the highest tariff law of their history. It has come to them from natural and other causes and in spite of a prohibitive tariff.

The Democracy believes that the hated trusts and the intolerable monopoly will not be exterminated until the economic policy of protection, which is their refuge and nourishment, shall be buried beyond all hope of resurrection. The Democracy believes that the overthrow of the protective system and the administration of the government along the Democratic lines of equal rights to all men and special privileges to no man will be the panacea for all evils that now afflict the body politic.

The Democrary faces the future with hope, with courage and with confidence. Time and the progression of events will vindicate its principles. The dazzling delusion of imperial expansion does not lure it from the path of safety and the steady light of the constitution. It does not measure national greatness in large standing armies, designed to crush labor at home or freedom abroad, or in powerful battleships built to destroy human life and to crimson the seas with human blood. It regards the growing military spirit as an impending danger to, and the mortal enemy of, Republics. It summons young men to its ranks to do battle in its cause that the loved republic may not be supplanted by an oligarchy of wealth or be lost in the maelstrom of empire.

Mr. Daugherty's speech was followed closely and frequently applauded, but the mention of William J. Bryan aroused a storm of cheers which was renewed at the end of the address.

The chairman read a communication from John R. McLean resigning his membership in the national committee. The resignation was accepted.

In answer to a question the chairman said the vacancy would be filled temporarily by the national committee and permanently by the delegates to the next national convention. The platform was adopted as presented.

Judge Williams took the platform and moved that the rules be suspended and the temporary organization be made permanent and the motion was carried with a rush.

Senator Houck of Mount Vernon, made the first nominating speech, presenting the name of Lawrence T. Neal for governor.

The name of John W. Pattison was presented by Former Congressman Dennis D. Donovan and that of John G. Welty, was announced by Robert S. Shields of Canton.

Other names presented for the nomination for governor were Brand Whitlock of Toledo., B. F. McCann of Dayton, Hiram D. Peck of Hamilton county and Judge Sam M. Hunter of Newark. Mayor Johnson then seconded the nomination of Whitlock. A. R. Van Cleaf was also nominated, making eight candidates for governor, on whose nomination the roll was then called.

There was no choice on the first ballot, but Pattison led by more than 150 votes. Welty being second. The vote was announced as: Pattison 363; Welty 176; Neal 71; Whitlock 61; Peck 63; McCann 51; Van Cleaf 19; Hunter 19. Necessary for choice 431.

Pattison was nominated on second ballot. The vote was finally announced as follows: Neal 22½; Welty 175; Whitlock 73; McCann 48; Peck 64; Hunter 15; Pattison 457. The nomination of Pattison was made unanimous on motion of John W. Peck of Cincinnati.

CREW OF RUSSIAN BATTLESHIP KILL OFFICERS AND THREATEN TO BOMBARD CITY OF ODESSA

Awful Crime Committed at Sea and Bodies Thrown Overboard.

Tragedy Occurs on Kniaz Potonkin Which Sails Into Odessa.

Situation Is Precarious---Black Sea Fleet Expected Shortly.

Odessa, June 28.—The crew of a battleship in the roads have mutinied and murdered their officers. It is reported that the mutineers are threatening to bombard the town. All work at the port has been stopped.

Washington, June 28.—Thomas Deinen, American consul at Odessa, Russia, today cabled the state department in substance as follows:

"The Russian warship Kniaz Potonkin and one torpedo boat arrived yesterday evening. All officers murdered at sea and bodies thrown overboard. Men threaten bombard the town if interfered with. The situation is precarious. The Black Sea fleet is expected today."

The Russian battleship Kniaz Potonkin (Potemkine) is a heavily armored turret ship of 12,480 tons, having a speed of about 17 knots. She was completed in 1902 and belongs to the Black Sea fleet. The battleship mounts four 12-inch guns, sixteen 6-inch guns, fourteen 3-inch guns and over twenty smaller rapid-fire guns. She carried a crew of 636 men.

PURCHASE MADE

Steel Corporation Buys Lake Erie & Pittsburg Railroad.

Western Pacific Files a Renewal of $50,000,000 Mortgage.

Pittsburg, June 28.—The Times today says: "The Lake Erie & Pittsburg railroad, now in course of construction between Lorain, Ohio, and Pittsburg, has been purchased by the United States Steel corporation at a cost of several million dollars, the deal, it is said being the largest railroad transaction ever made in this district. The road will be completed as soon as possible and officials of the corporation expect to handle the majority of its ore and finished product, between Pittsburg and the lakes, over the new road by this time next year.

"The action of the steel officials gives color to the statement made by one of the higher officials of the company that within the next ten years the corporation would handle the greater part of its tonnage over its own roads."

RENEWAL IS MADE.

Western Pacific Files Renewal of Big Mortgage.

Salt Lake, June 28.—A renewal of a $50,000,000 mortgage has been filed in the district court here by the Western Pacific Railroad company. The document is in favor of the Bowling Green Trust company of New York, who also held the original mortgage, and covers all rolling stock and real estate owned by the company. The refilling was made necessary by certain objectionable features contained in the old mortgage.

GREAT BRITAIN RESPONSIBLE

For the Franco-German Crisis, Says Russian Authority.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—At Great Britain's door the Novoe Vremya lays much of the responsibility for the Franco-German crisis saying she is pursuing her traditional policy of encouraging a conflict between her competitors in order to profit thereby.

"Great Britain," the paper adds, "pushed France into the Morocco adventure sustaining M. Delcasse, the foreign minister in his resistence to Germany's claims. For decades Great Britain's hostility has been directed against Russia at last succeeding in drawing another country accomplish a task from which she herself shrank. With Russia no longer dangerous for the present all Great Britain's machinations were set in motion against Germany, now her chief competitor in Europe."

The Novoe Vremya thinks it quite conceivable that in case of conflict Great Britain would aid France to the extent of destroying the German fleet and that then with both France and Germany weakened her supremacy would be assured for another half century. The Novoe Vremya, however, believes that with Premier Rouvier in charge of the negotiations with Germany, Great Britain's plans will be defeated and the Moroccan affair will be satisfactorily adjusted.

The Associated Press learns that France is consulting her ally in the negotiations with Germany.

Premier Rouvier's note was submitted to Russia before it was transmitted to the government, Foreign Minister Lamsdorff was apprised of every step taken. The statement that France has already called on Russia to mass troops on her Western frontier, however, is authoritatively denied. Russia is believed to be advising her ally to meet Germany half way.

FOREST FIRES RAGING ON THE YUKON RIVER.

Seattle, Wash., June 28.—Forest fires along the banks of the Yukon river, between the mouth of the Tanana river and Eagle City, have cut off all communication with Nome and St. Michaels and for the past four days, the local cable office has been unable to establish any communication with those points on Bering sea. Advices reaching here from points this side of the break, state that the fires are worse than for several years in the district affected. Miles of wire and poles are believed to have been burned down.

Fire is also raging on Prince of Wales island and many of the residents have fled to Southeastern Alaska.

HENRY PHIPPS' DAUGHTER WEDS BRITISH CAPTAIN.

London, June 28.—Miss Amy Phipps, eldest daughter of Henry Phipps of Pittsburg was married this afternoon in St. George's church, Hanover square, to Capt, the Hon. Frederick G. Gust of the First Life Guards, son of Lord Wimberne.

Most interest was taken in the wedding and the church was filled, the guests including Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, the staff of the American embassy and most of the Americans present in the city.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN STRIKE LIKELY

Several Important Conferences In Progress In Chicago.

Chicago, June 28.—With several conferences in progress and prospects of some important developments in the teamsters' strike seemed likely today. Chairman J. V. Farwell, Jr., of the action committee of the Employers' association met with Attorney Levy Mayer and discussed the situation. About the same time International President Shea of the Teamsters' union, still in full command of the strikers' forces, met the members of the new "peace committee" in his headquarters and planned for a meeting with the Lumbermen's association executive committee to be held later in the day.

A settlement of the teamsters' strike in so far as it affects the united Employers' association of wood industries, was expected to be considered today by a committee appointed by the teamsters' joint council and a committee representing the association.

The committee appointed by the council is composed of President Shea, Albert Young of the Coal Teamsters' union, James B. Barry of the Express Drivers' union, Thomas Hughes of the Lime, Stone and Cement Teamsters' union, Jerry McCarthy of the Truck Drivers' union, Peter W. Reitz of the Department Store Drivers' union and W. J. Gibbons, president of the Teamsters' Joint council.

At a meeting of the Truck Drivers' union the peace terms of the employers were rejected unanimously. Business Agent Jerry McCarthy announced that the Louis W. Stayart company, employing fifteen drivers, has agreed to discharge its non-union teamsters and re-employ union drivers.

This concern is a member of the commercial exchange, and, according to McCarthy, its action marks the first break in the ranks of that organization.

EDUCATED GRAFTERS SEVERELY REBUKED

Methods of Prominent Men Condemned By James B. Dill.

Oberlin, Ohio, June 28.—James B. Dill of New York, in the course of an address to the graduating class of Oberlin college today, delivered a scathing rebuke to men who misuse positions of honor and trust for personal gain. In urging his hearers to go "back to beginnings," Mr. Dill contended that "grafting," which was foreign to the true American character, has been developed by the mad rush for wealth and the recognition of false standards by educated men in the competitive struggle for business power and social prominence.

"A large part of our modern prosperity," he said, "is to a perilously large extent bottomed upon an overproduction of fraud and sham. The crisis is acute. A feeling of distrust is growing throughout the country. Many branches of financial business have been in one way or another taken possession of by the unscrupulous for the purpose of deceiving the unwarry. Trust companies have been made the mediums of the flotation of specious and fraudulent promotions.

"Some companies in the field of life insurance, the highest and in a sense a sacred form of investment are, as we all know now, conduits through which the savings of the policyholders are diverted into operations for speculative purposes.

"Credit and good faith, not money, are the basis of business. Good or bad, our modern prosperity is founded on public confidence. Take that away and the whole fabric falls.

"The fact is that the unprecedented material growth of the country, the resulting ceration of immense private fortunes, the massing of great aggregations of corporate capital, industrial combinations and railroad mergers, all have tended to concentrate and to establish in the highest place in the popular estimation the captains of industry and the powerful financiers, little regard is being paid in making up the judgment, to the fundamental virtues of private individual life.

"Now, whose fault is this? It is ours. It is the fault of public opinion, and public opinion is our opinion, yours and mine—yours of me, mine of you, ours of all the rest. We have to learn to recognize graft, and the grafters, however respectable their disguise, and to punish them, not alone by imprisonment and fine, but with all the might of the terrible scorn of society. We have to recognize that the seeds of socialism, revolution and anarchy are sown by the man of our own class and kind who pretends to be what he is not; these seeds are cultivated by the grafting bank officer, insurance officer, man in power in financial organizations, in short, by every grafter who in his dealings with the public departs openly or secretly from old-fashioned ten commandment honesty.

"This indictment of our business life is not based on an inherent, incurable defect in our American character, but, on the contrary, these evils are an outgrowth of our American strenuosity in the riotous race for the easy dollar and the many dollars. In the hearts of the genuine men and women of our country there is an appreciation of the importance of character; the rank and file of the American people not only believe in, but also stand for right living and a conscience undimmed by business environments.

"Therefore, right and honesty will triumph; a saturnalia of just, and an era of grab, will find itself short-lived, speedily to be ended by the uplifting influence of educated men and women of character."

JAP SHIPS SEEN OFF VLADIVOSTOK

Sighted on Horizon and Believed to Be Torpedo Boats.

Vladivostok, Tuesday, June 27.—Japanese warships, believed to be torpedo boats, were seen on the horizon today.

UNCONFIRMED RUMOR

Says That Gen. Kuropatkin Has Been Killed.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—A rumor spread throughout the city last night that Gen. Kuropatkin had been killed. This rumor was connected some times with a report that 70,000 Russians had been cut off by Gen. Nogi's army and that Kuropatkin had been taken prisoner.

Nothing confirmatory of these rumors has been received either by the general staff or in press dispatches.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, June 28, 2:05 p. m.—The conditions at Lodz are unchanged, excepting that most of the workmen have returned to work. Out of 60,000 men about 7,000 from twenty-two factories remain out. Martial law still prevails, the streets are constantly patrolled, and the liquor shops are all closed. The universal condemnation of the strike movement at Lodz has had the effect of quieting the situation, and it is expected that the remaining strikers will soon resume work.

There was a reiteration on the Warsaw bourse today of the rumor that the mobilization of troops in Russian Poland had commenced, and possibly might be expected in Warsaw in two days, and it caused considerable excitement. It is claimed that if mobilization is attempted here it will lead to serious disturbances.

A strike was declared today at the coal and iron mines, foundries and factories, in the districts of Dombrowa, Strezemiezyce and Sosnowiec.

GEN. LEE APPEALS FOR RETURN OF CONFEDERATE BATTLE FLAGS

Chicago, June 28.—For the second time in its history Columbia post, No. 706, G. A. R., has given a campfire in honor of Gen. Stephen D. Lee of Vicksburg, commander of the Confederate veterans of the South. All of the Confederate organizations of the city joined in the event. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Gen. John Corson Smith, department commander of the G. A. R. for Illinois; Junior Commander Patton of the National G. A. R., and by other prominent veterans. The feature of the bivouac was an appeal by the Southern soldier for the return of the tattered flags and banners that adorn G. A. R. trophy rooms to the men from whom they were won during the struggle of the '60s. In referring to the recent action of congress, providing for the return of the flags now in the war office at Washington, to the Confederate soldiers, Gen. Lee said:

"I am glad the wound has healed so that these flags can be returned before those who loved them and bled for them are all under the sod."

POPE PIUS MAY LEAVE THE VATICAN DURING SUMMER

Rome, June 28.—The Messagero today says that if the pope decides to leave the Vatican during the hot weather, he is most likely to go to the famous Benedictine abby of Monte Cassino, province of Caserta, Italy, and thus will be the guest of Rev. Father Boniface Krug, formerly of St. Vincent's arch-abbey, Beatty, Pa., who is abbot of Monte Cassino. When he was patriarch of Venice, the pope promised to visit Monte Cassino the first time he came to Rome and he intended to go there after the conclave, but as he was elected pope he could not carry out his plan. However, twice since then the pontiff has renewed his promise to visit Monte Cassino.

WOMAN REFUSES TO LIVE ON HUSBAND'S "TAINTED" MONEY

New York, June 28.—A new angle has been given to the dicussion of "tainted money," by Mrs. William Connell of Staten Island. Before Supreme Court Justice Kelly in Brooklyn, in response to habeas corpus proceedings, brought by the husband, who wished to obtain the custody of his children, Mrs. Connell declared she would never live with her spouse so long as he continued to obtain money, as she put it, by gambling. Her husband was a good man and won heavily at the race track, she said, but it was against her religious training to use funds so obtained and although Connell left large sums lying about on tables and in drawers for her, she refused to touch it and had returned to her parents, taking along the children.

Justice Kelly advised the woman to return to her husband, the latter having declared to the court that he was in receipt of a regular income, but the woman refused and the writ was finally dismissed.

DAKOTA FARMER IS EXONERATED

Minot, N. D., June 28.—A jury summoned by Coroner J. D. Windell of this city, to investigate the death of Linn C. Dalzell, aged 24, a farmer, who was shot and killed by another farmer, Kersey E. Gowin, near Glenburn, early Sunday morning, has returned a verdict that Dalzell came to his death at the hands of Gowin, who shot him in defense of himself and family.

The testimony showed that Dalzell had gone to the Gowin home early in the morning and fired a shot through a bedroom window into the room, where Mrs. Gowin and her babe lay asleep, and that Gowin then fired several shots into Dalzell's body, all of which took effect.

The two men had been enemies for some time, and according to the stories told by the neighbors, Dalzell threatened to kill Gowin several times, because, as he had alleged, Gowin had attempted to break up a love affair between Dalzell and a young woman school teacher, who boarded at the Gowin home.

HAY MUCH STRONGER.

Passed Comfortable Night and In Good Spirits.

Newbury, N. H., June 28.—From the bedside of Secretary of State John Hay at his summer home, "The Fells," it is announced today that he passed a very comfortable night. He appeared much stronger this forenoon and was in excellent spirits.

CHINESE WILL NOT UNLOAD AMERICAN GOODS IN ORIENT

San Francisco, June 28.—Edward G. Bellows, until recently consul general for the United States in Japan, has arrived in San Francisco aboard the Pacific mail liner Manchuria.

Mr. Bellows brings renewed confirmation of the boycott which the merchants of China have declared upon the United States manufacturers and on goods and merchandise coming from this country. He adds a new phase to the condition of affairs by bringing the information that the Orientals have carried the boycott to the extent that in many instances importers are having difficulty in obtaining assistance in the unloading of American products.

"There can be no doubt that there is a determined effort afoot in China whereby it is hoped to bring pressure to bear on the United States through the medium of a boycott," said Mr. Bellows. "The object, as has already been exploited, is to force this country to grant more liberal treatment to merchants and other Chinese who travel in the United States.

"All over China the guilds, which are similar to our boards of trades, are using their utmost influence to bring about the desired effect. In the several ports the hands who are accustomed to unload the imported goods have been taught to leave untouched the merchandise brought from our country. This condition of affairs is likely to grow.

"Of course, I am not saying how effectual this mode of procedure may prove. In fact, I think that there is no great cause for alarm. Still, we must remember that in Germany and other nations we have worthy competitors in the Chinese trade, and what we lose is bound to be their gain, to a certain extent at least."

Penang, Straits Settlements, June 28.—A large meeting of the leading Chinese merchants here today decided to co-operate with the Chinese of Singapore and Shanghai in boycotting American products pending the withdrawal of the Chinese exclusion act.

PART PIECE WORK AND PART TIME WORK.

New York, June 28.—After a protracted series of conferences the question of piece work in the shops of the Erie railroad has been definitely settled. Negotiations were in progress between the officials of the company and the International Association of Machinists for more than a month. About 2,000 men employed in the shops along the line are affected by the new agreement, which provides for part piecework and part time work.

CHOUKNIN DECLINES.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—Vice Admiral Chouknin commander of the Black sea fleet has declined to accept the post of minister of marine in succession to Admiral Avellan who recently resigned.

PRESIDENT TO EMPEROR.

Message of Thanks Sent to German Ruler.

"I have just been visiting at Harvard university and the Germanic museum, the foundation of which we so largely owe to you. I take this occasion to thank you, and through you the German people, for the many acts of courtesy and kindliness which in recent years have steadily brought closer together the German and American peoples. This growing friendship between the two nations means much for the future welfare of mankind, and I wish to thank you personally for the efforts you have made to foster it.

CLOSE BIG DEAL

J. L. Washburn and Associates Acquire Large Ironton Acreage.

The Transaction Includes Holdings of Old Ironton Land Company.

After years of litigation and entanglements of title on account of delinquent taxes, and other things, a large area of St. Louis river property within the city limits has come into the possession of a syndicate comprised of local men who have straightened out the titles, paid all the taxes and who now have the property ready to put on the market for purchasers seeking industrial sites, following the development of the water power.

J. L. Washburn and several associates have possession of between forty and fifty acres of water front property in Ironton, Second division, above West Duluth, all the land in fact formerly held by the Ironton Land company. This does not include, however, the twenty-acre tract on which the Ironton Steel plant stands.

The titles to the property have been made out to Mr. Washburn, who, with others, is organizing a corporation to handle it. When asked relative to the transaction, Mr. Washburn said:

"The title to the property owned by the Ironton Land company has been made out to me, and a small company, comprising myself and a few others, will be formed to handle it. That is about all there is to be said. You might say that a large area of water front property that has for years been tangled up in litigation and unavailable for purchase, is now available for any manufacturer who may be looking for a site with dock facilities, and convenient to power."

Mr. Washburn and his associates have been working for a long time past on a project to acquire the property and get it on a basis where it would be available for the uses for which it is best fitted an dthe deal has just been consummated, although it is understood that the deeds are not yet of record.

In general, the property taken over may be said to comprise that portion of Ironton, Second division, that lies between Gogebic and Spring streets, and the Northern Pacific tracks and the St. Louis river channel. On the property there are two buildings, the old Ironton hotel, a substantial brick structure, built several years ago and a small office building.

The land deeded over comprises acreage on both sides of the Terminal tracks, the deeds, of course, carrying riparian rights of no small value.

The fact that this large water front property, which has been so long tied up, has passed into the hands of local people who will have an interest in seeing that it is disposed of to concerns for manufacturing purposes is welcome news to the people in that part of the city.

It is believed that as the water power development progresses there will be a stronger demand for water front property for manufacturing and dockage purposes and it is freely predicted that it will not be many years before little dock property will be available for purchase along the St. Louis river.

THE COAL MEN

your officers. A great deal of credit should be given your present secretary. He is an energetic and conscientious worker, always having, as i have found, the good of association at heart. Some of the more careless wholesale shippers may kick on the aggressiveness of your secretary and your board of directors, but I do not believe any honest, fair-minded producer, shipper or wholesaler will kick on your aggressiveness, or your efforts to protect the interests of your members. your association will continue in the future as it has in the short past, to protect the interests of your members, you will soon find that there will be some pleasure as well as profit in handling your coal and your fuel business.

"Another year has rolled around and you are now entering upon a new year and I hope to see a continued increase in your membership, such as has been shown in the year just closed. Hugo says: 'Let us fear the worst but work with faith, the best will always take care of itself.' It is the bounden duty of every member of this association to attend these meetings. It is the best, the very best education a coal dealer can get. By attending these conventions we learn many new things. It broadens our minds, it gets us out of the narrow rut which we are liable to fall into if we are a stay-at-home. I say again, come to these meetings, meet your neighbor coal dealer, get his ideas of handling his business, compare them with your own, and see if you will not be benefited by it. Be friendly with your neighbor across the street, for those who want friends must themselves be friendly.

"My namesake, MacCauley says: 'The education of the people is the most effectual means of securing our persons and our property,' and so by education also will the same people in the not very distant future secure the product of their toil. It should be the duty of every member of this association to take and read as many of the coal trade journals as his pocketbook will permit. These papers and journals are ably edited by men of brilliant and gifted minds. By reading them we refine our own minds and learn to live upon instruction. Again I say we should read and educate ourselves; keep ourselves posted on everything pertaining to our business, be up-to-date and by so doing we will always be able to handle our business to a much better advantage than we would were we behind the times. Keep up with the times.

"The savage can boast of his friends, but what is it worth? Free as he is, he continues from age to age in ignorance, leads the same comfortless life, sees the same untamed wilderness spread around him, but progress, the growth of power, is the end and boon of liberty. Therefore I say we should educate ourselves by attending faithfully our association meetings. We should endeavor, if possible, to induce our neighbor coal dealer to come also, whether or not he is a member. We should instill into each other the spirit of co-operation, endeavor to make all members a unit, for you all know that in union there is strength.

"In an association of this kind there are always some rough places, some corduroy bridges to cross, perhaps, but by co-operation and fair-mindedness and a consideration of the rights of others, these rough places will be smoothed over. You know the old saying, 'A smooth sea never makes a good mariner.' Let us govern our business in a businesslike manner, and not let our business govern us. Rudolph says, 'It is better to govern a country well than to enlarge its boundaries,' therefore we should always keep our business within the limits of our ability and handle it strictly on a business basis, but in doing so, also respect the rights of others, and remember that others have a right to their opinion. We should not think of knocking out another person's brains because he happens to differ in opinions with us. It would be as rational to knock ourselves on the head because our opinion of today differs from what it was ten years ago.

"My admonition is, pull together for the good of the association, as your success depends largely upon two words, industry and frugality."

Following Mr. McCauley's talk an "experience meeting," was held. It was for the purpose of allowing all of the delegates present to tell personal experiences in the coal business, for the amusement or profit of brother members. Officers believe that many benefits will result from such a meeting, for new ideas of different kinds are advanced by the various members, and many of these ideas may be used to advantage by the retailers.

An early adjournment was taken to allow such members as desired an opportunity to take a trip up the St. Louis river on the steamer Newsboy as guests of Coxe Bros. & Co., who chartered the boat especially for this occasion. The steamer left Fifth avenue west dock shortly after 4 o'clock, headed up St. Louis bay.

Tomorrow morning there will be an executive session, when the officers will have something of importance to say to members of the association only. No one who is not a member will be admitted. Before adjournment is taken the election of officers will occur.

This will be the last business meeting of the convention. In the afternoon, sharp at 2 o'clock, a steamer provided for the use of the retailers will leave the Fifth avenue dock, running up the north shore, returning through the old entry, passing the various coal companies' docks, stopping at the blast furnace, and returning to the starting point between 5 and 6 o'clock. The Third regiment band will accompany the excursion boat. This excursion will be given by the Commercial club of Duluth.

CHASED MAN WITH KNIFE

Fred MacKenzie Pleads Guilty to Disorderly Charge.

Accused of chasing a woodsman along the Bowery, while flourishing a knife and threatening to carve him to mince meat, Fred McKenzie was brought into the municipal court this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct.

McKenzie is said to have become mixed up in a quarrel yesterday afternoon, and to have drawn a knife on his opponent, who turned and ran. McKenzie gave chase, but ran into the arms of Officer Toewe, who brought him into headquarters.

The prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to pay a fine of $22 or spend thirty days in jail.

West Duluth

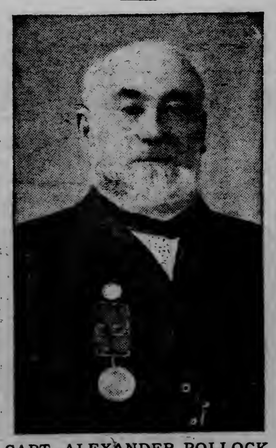
The Gauker Singing society, organized last spring, elected officers in West Duluth last evening. A meeting will be held each Monday night at the rooms of the West Duluth Republican club. The society has forty members and Prof. Rudolph Moeller of Superior has been chosen director. The personnel is drawn almost wholly from the Fram lodge, Sons of Norway. The officers elected last evening are:

President, S. Grefstad; vice president, Gunnar Mebroten; secretary, Anders Mebroten; financial secretary, Ingvaard Reenskaug; treasurer, Jens P. Holt; trustees, A. Jerstad, H. Linnes and John C. Wesenberg.



CAPT. ALEXANDER POLLOCK.

The body of Capt. Alexander Pollock, who died yesterday at the home of his son in West Duluth, will be taken this evening over the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road to the old home of the family, in St. Thomas, Ont. The interment will take place at Fingall, a small place a few miles out of St. Thomas. Capt. Pollock is well known among old-time vesselmen. He was 97 years of age when he died. The above is a good likeness of him.

C. O. F. Meets.

A regular meeting of St. James court No. 614, C. O. F., was held last evening in Gilley's hall. There was a good attendance of members. State Chief Ranger Martin was present and gave an account of the doings of the recent state convention of the order, and he received the congratulations of the members on his re-election to office for the next two years. The delegate from the local court to the convention made an extensive report of the measures taken up and acted upon and feel pleased over the fact that a recommendation of St. James court was acted on favorably and will be taken to the international convention at Boston.

Within the past year the court has made a fine gain in membership. It is the intention to still further increase the work of the order during the next year.

Blight-Ramfrey.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Blight of Eveleth and Thomas Ramfrey of West Duluth took place yesterday morning at the home of W. N. Rowe of Eveleth. Rev. R. J. Taylor of the Methodist church of Eveleth performed the ceremony. After the wedding berakfast the young couple left for the Twin Cities, where they will visit for a time, after which they will take up their residence in West Duluth.

Doe Visits Town.

This morning Victor Dash, deputy clerk of court, while coming in from his home at Smithville, saw, at Grand avenue and Ironton, a full-grown doe which did not seem very much alarmed at his approach. He did not have the time to cultivate the acquaintance of the animal, but he says it did not hurry away, strolling leisurely along, eating grass as it went. Mr. Dash says there are no flies in the woods to drive the deer out and he considers it a rather peculiar circumstance one should be feeding so near town.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

FERGUSON BANQUET

Many Prominent Outside Men Will Participate in the Event.

Private Car Line Practices Will Be Thoroughly Discussed.

Arrangements are now about completed for the banquet which is to be tendered E. M. Ferguson of this city, at the Commercial club Thursday evening, by the business men and citizens of Duluth in recognition and appreciation of his eminent services in the effort to do away with the private car line evil in this country.

The committee in charge reports that plates will be laid for between eighty and 100 guests, a number of whom will comprise prominent business men from cities outside of Duluth, some coming from points as far as Cincinnati.

The banquet will begin at 7:30 o'clock and E. L. Millar has been selected to act as toastmaster.

Letters of regret have been received from Senator Knute Nelson and Congressman J. Adam Bede, who found it impossible to be in the city at this time.

Aside from the social side of the coming event it will be an important gathering for the reason that there will be a general discussion of the effect of the private car line practices as applied to perishable products from the standpoint of producers, the carriers, the shippers and the consuming public and suggestions are expected to be made as to practical remedies for the existing evils and the ways and means of securing the desired relief.

The full list of speakers for the occasion is not yet completed, but among the local people who will participate are E. M. Ferguson, R. J. Mooney, Julius H. Barnes, J. H. Norton and State Senator George R. Laybourn.

Amon gthose from out of town who will take part in the program will be Fred Mason of St. Paul and Attorney W. D. Dwyer of Superior.

STRIKING PICTURE.

Moon, Venus and Jupiter Made Beautiful Group.

A striking sky picture was witnessed by the Duluth citizens who happened to be stirring about 2 o'clock this morning.

At that hour the rising moon, the planet Venus and the planet Jupiter were in a straight line, about five degrees apart. The air was exceptionally clear, and both planets are very bright at the present time, so that the three bodies arranged in a straight line, at equal distances apart, and in the order of their brilliancy, made a very beautiful and extraordinary sight as they rose over the lake.

METCALF, ET AL

Escape From Their Indictment For Conspiracy.

Washington, June 28.—Upon motion of District Attorney Beach the cases against James T. Metcalf, Harry C. Hallenbeck and Norma R. Metcalf, indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the contract for money order blanks, were nolle prossed in criminal court today. Mr. Beach announced that on investigation of evidence he had decided to take no further steps looking to the trial of these persons and asked that the indictments be dismissed.

BEAUTIFUL LAMP

Of Cut Glass Now on Display at G. A. Klein's.

What is probably the handsomest window piece ever exhibited in Duluth or for that matter in the Northwest, is on display at G. A. Klein's jewelry store, 325 West Superior street. It is a cut glass parlor lamp, beautifully cut and of superb design, stands twenty-three inches in height and is an exact duplicate of the original lamp presented by the makers to the mikado of Japan. Art lovers declare it to be the finest piece of its kind ever produced. The lamp will be lighted in Mr. Klein's window every night this week.

LUNDEBERG CHAIRMAN.

Stockholm, Sweden, June 28.—The special committee of both houses to which has been referred the Swedish government bill looking to a settlement with Norway, today, elected Herr Lundeberg, vice president of the first chamber as chairman and Herr Pehrson, vice president of the second chamber, as deputy chairman.

WHAT WHISKEY COSTS THE DRUNKARD.

Cure the Drink Habit With Orrine and Save Money.

Whiskey drinking does not pay. Take the lowest possible view, without counting the loss of friends, the loss of business, the loss of manhood that comes to the drunkard; consider simply the actual money paid out, and see what it costs in dollars and cents. Good authority states that nearly one-third of the wages of the laboring man goes over the bar. How much are you contributing? Figure up for one month how much you take from your wife and children and pay out in exchange for drink. The total will astonish you, and you will swear off. Will-power alone will not cure the habit. Use Orrine, the only guaranteed cure for the habit. It can be used without publicity or loss of time. It strengthens the nerves, gives a good appetite and refreshing sleep. The cost is small, $1 per box. Orrine is sold and recommended by F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street, Duluth.

A Marconi Message

from the blue and sunny skies tells you to get ready for the Fourth of July. There is such a thing as "a rare day in June," when real sunshine can be seen, felt and enjoyed here in Duluth during one entire official period from 4 a. m. to 8 p. m.

The message which "The Columbia" has for you, since the selling out of the Burrows stock began, is a long one, filled with thousands of money-saving items of masculine dress—all of the high standard which made the Burrows label famous. Still all these Burrows labels and the goods to which they are sewed, are doomed to leave the store with very inferior prices marked on the tickets.

Knowing that busy men have no time to read long advertisements, we make most of ours short.

If you dress up here this week in a new suit and get a straw hat or light-weight derby, a beautiful negligee shirt and belt, and then walk off in a pair of our Hanan shoes, you can save more than enough for a good "Fourth of July" outing with the girl of your heart. You will look so swell that she is likely to whisper another delightful message in your ear—wireless, ireless and tireless, and overcoming all distances. Will you listen?

BACK FROM CAMP

Duluth Militia and Musicians Distinguish Themselves at Camp.

Band Members Make Remarkable Scores In Shooting Contest.

Members of Companies A and C and of the staff and band, returned last evening from the annual encampment at Lake City, where they have been for the last ten days.

Judged from the amount of instruction received in the different branches of the service, the outing was one of the most successful ever held. The men also report a very enjoyable time.

Both Duluth companies and also the staff and band fared well in the shooting competitions, the members of the band especially distinguishing themselves.

Out of four experts chosen from the entire regiment, the band furnished two in the persons of Sergeant Simpson and Harry Howell. Charles Helmer also qualified as a sharpshooter, and the following qualified as marksmen: Henry Flaaten, I. Sodahl, Al Bergen, A. Wickstrom, O. Halten, Charles Fremling, H. Spjotvold, Walter Grams and A. Lang.

For Companies A and C Lieutenants H. B. Whitaker, and Emil Kjul, Sergeant Carl Anderson and Private Paul D. Smith made excellent scores.

The staff and band, which included Majors Resche and Eva of Duluth and the other regimental officers, defeated all the companies in the regiment in the competitive shoot by sixty-three points.

While on the way to the camp a week ago Monday, the band played at the Interstate National Guard meeting in St. Paul, receiving the high officers of the army at the depot. It also played at the armory in the morning, at a concert at Fort Snelling in the afternoon, and at the officers' banquet in the Windsor in the evening.

One of the features of the encampment was a sham battle between Company A of Duluth, and I of Crookston, led by Major Resche, and Company C of Duluth and G of Princeton, led by Captain Richard Little of the former company.

The men marched eight miles from camp, and pitched tents for the night. In the morning Major Resche posted his men and was attacked by the opposing forces. Captain Little used a private, disguised in civilian's clothes, for a spy, and located the hidden forces. Both forces claim the victory in the sham battle which followed.

WILL ENLARGE ITS QUARTERS

First National Bank Begins Extensive Alterations in Building.

In order to meet the demands of its business for increased space, the First National Bank of this city has commenced extensive alterations in the first floor and basement of its building at the corner of Third avenue west and Superior street. The work will require a period of about two months, and the cost will be in the neighborhood of between $10,000 and $11,000. The plans have been made by Architect J. J. Wangenstein, and Watterworth & Fee, who have the contract, have already begun work.

The changes will, among other features, mean an increase of floor space for the main banking room to the extent of about 30 per cent. The whole first floor will be devoted to the bank's business hereafter. Not only will added facilities be given by the enlargement of the floor space, but the idea has been adopted of utilizing the basement for a vault for the books and records. The bank will largely increase its safety deposit facilities. It is figured that with the work completed the bank will have just about double the safety deposit vault room that it now has, and will have a large storage room for the safe keeping of large packages of household valuables where the owners are leaving the city for a time and wish their effects safely cared for.

The plans for the enlargement of the banks' facilities have been under consideration for some months, and it is understood that at one time it contemplated purchasing the building immediately adjoining on the east, but as this deal could not be carried through, there was nothing left but to enlarge along the plans outlined.

Coppers Continue Strong.

The strength in copper stocks, in which the local people are interested, continued today. North Butte was traded in at $28, an advance of $1 over yesterday. Calumet & Pittsburg continued at $25 bid, and Lake Superior & Pittsburg was at $32 bid. Pittsburg & Duluth, which has been weakest of all, showed some strength, being up to $16 bid.

Out of Service.

Corporal Glenn, who has been in charge of the marine recruiting office here, will be a private citizen in a few hours. His time in the marine service is up, and he is expecting his discharge in every mail. He will remain in Duluth, at least for some time, and possibly as a permanent citizen. He will be succeeded in the charge of the office by Private Hutchings, who has been his assistant, and Private Julius Abrams has just arrived from Brooklyn navy yard to assist Private Hutchings. Recruiting is looking up again after quite a lengthy dull period.

ONLY TWO DAYS MORE

Those Missed By Census Takers Urged to Speak Up.

Only two more days remain in which to count the people in Duluth, and after Friday, June 30, all those whose names have not been taken by the census enumerator will have to remain unaccounted.

R. D. Haven, the census supervisor, stated today that if any person, who had been missed, either through an oversight on the part of the enumerator, or the inability of the enumerator to reach him, would notify the office, which is located at 217 Manhattan building, his name would be added to the list.

It is desired to get the name of every man, woman and child in the city and any person who has not been counted is urged to either call up the enumerator by telephone, visit the office in the Manhattan building, or notify the supervisor by mail.

COMMUTATION

Of Death Sentences Asked by Two Women.

Harrisburg, June 28.—The applications of two women for commutation of their death sentences to life imprisonment were heard today by the state board of pardons. These women are Mrs. Catherine Danz of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Kate Edwards of Berks county, both of whom have been convicted of killing their husbands. This is the first time that the case of Mrs. Danz, who was alleged to have poisoned her husband, has been before the pardon board. Mrs. Edwards' case has been before the board twice, and she has been refused a commutation. This will be the final meeting of the board before September, and it is believed both cases will be disposed of today.

BIG FANS TO COOL NEW YORK'S SUBWAY.

New York, June 28.—Arrangements have been perfected between officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit company and the Rapid Transit commission, whereby large fans, revolving at a high rate of speed, are to be placed in manholes in the rood of the subway at frequent intervals, to cool the air, which, in recent weeks, has become oppressive in the downtown sections of the underground. Provisions were made when the tunnel was built for such a contingency, and installation of the fans will be comparatively an easy task. Power for operating the fans will be easily obtained from the third rail.

JAPS WORK NORTH

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, June 28. —The most disquieting feature of the strategic situation of the Russian armies, is the persistence of the reports that Japanese cavalry and light infantry, with field and machine guns are working northward east of Kirin and west of the grand trade route towards Bodune. The Japanese cavalry on the west is under the command of Gen. Takahira and Gen. Akiama. Gen. Linevitch is not attempting to seriously oppose the Japanese advance along his front, but is drawing in his outposts on pressure.

St. Petersburg, June 28, 6:30 p. m.—The only news which has reached here from Odessa regarding the naval mutiny is that the crew of the battleship Kniaz Potemkine are reported to have mutined because of the bad food furnished to the sailors.

Other dispatches from Odessa say the strikers have everywhere been successful. They stopped the stret cars and all other traffic. The estate owners of the neighborhood provinces, especially those of Kherson, are flocking to the city on account of agrarian disturbances.

SAY REPORT IS ERRONEOUS

Owners of Section Thirty Disclaim Negotiations For Sale.

The article in the morning paper to the effect that the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company is about to close a deal for the purchase of section 30 iron lands is erroneous," declared one of the owners of that famous property today.

"Furthermore, the rumors current that the porperty has been leased and that the Cleveland-Cliffs company has a shaft sunk on the property is totally unfounded.

"It is true that there are two or three deals talked of with responsible parties, but any information to the effect that any deal has been closed is incorrect."

Reports have been in circulation for some days past that there was about to be closed up a deal with the Cleveland-Cliffs people to take over the ore lands for development, but confirmation of the statement that no such deal is on is confirmed by other owners of the property besides the one quoted.

PIGMIES REACH LONDON.

Strangest Visitors Since Sir Walter Raleigh's Indians.

London, June 28.—The six pigmies brought by Col. Harrison from the great unknown forest of Central Africa have arrived in London at last, after many delays and interruptions on the way.

A few years ago Stanley set the world to talking of the strange little men whom he discovered in his great march across Africa. Now the six pigmies, first of their race to leave the swamps and forests of Central Africa, rode through London in a couple of four-wheeled cabs, one of them smoking a Havana cigar as naturally as a stock broker. Since Sir Walter Raleigh brought his red Indians to England, over 300 years ago, there have been no such strange visitors as these little human monkeys from the darkest depths of Africa.

Out of six pigmies, four are men and two are women, but even Col. Harrison, who discovered them in their forest home, knows no relationship between them.

The little men treat the little women as inferior beings, who ought to do as they are told. There are no signs of affection among them, save perhaps, that Gorrigi, the younger and better looking of the women, spends most of her time in gazing upon Mongogo, the youngest and liveliest of the little men, who is one yard tall in his bare feet.

Magani (man) about 35.
Mafanti (man) about 30.
Mattuka (man) about 28.
Mongogo (man) about 20.
Maroupi (woman) about 39.
Gorrigi (woman) about 16.

Magani, the chief, is four feet high, and the tallest of the six pigmies. He is a splendidly developed pigmy, with broad shoulders, deep chest, and grizzly gray whiskers. He walks with a dignified swagger, gets most of the cigars and generally comforts himself like a forest king.

Col. Harrison found the pigmies living near the equator in the forest southwest of Lake Albert, at the head of the Nile. They reach maturity at an earlier age even than the Hindus. They marry at 8, at 20 they have grown up children of their own, and are "too old at 40" for anything except the grave. The only language they speak is Swahili, the tongue of the Uganda folk.

Perhaps the most interesting thing in connection with this touch of Darkest Africa is the manner in which the pigmies chant their forest songs in the heart of civilization. Quietly the four men rise to their feet and stand in a small circle, gazing at the ground. The old woman pigmy and the "Lovely Princess" sit silently aside. For some moments the four are perfectly still. Next, old Magani, of the grizzly gray beard pats the brown mat gently with his right foot, and Mattuka of the large and shiny nose, begins to hum like a crooning babe.

Then the song and dance of the pigmies begins. The dance is as ceremonious as a minuet, and all four dance exactly alike. In the circle they move round and round with heads jerking and feet pating and stamping gently on the ground. The song they sing is composed chiefly of vowel sounds. It is very melodious, but dirge like, and runs something like this:

"O eea eea ee-ea, O hee he-a hea-ea hea-a-a! O oeo o-o-o-o-o! A-e a-a-aa-aaa—! A-o ee aa aa aa! O-eo-o-o-o-o! Oe o-o-o-o!"

HONOR FOR PREXY

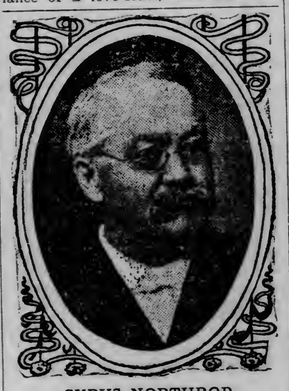
First Banquet of Northern Alumni Hears President Northrop.

Association Perfects Organization For Good of Alma Mater.

The first annual dinner of the Northern Alumni association of the University of Minnesota was held in the dining room of the Spalding hotel last evening. President Northrop of the State university, that best beloved by pupils and public of Minnesota's educators, was the guest of honor and the principal speaker of the evening. Previous to the banquet, President Northrop received the members of the alumni in the parlors of the hotel, and was heartily greeted by each. He was plainly glad to see them, and his delight over the enthusiasm of their greeting was also quite evident. The occasion throughout bore every semblance of a love-feast, with President



CYRUS NORTHROP,
President of University of Minnesota.

Northrop the cynosure of all eyes, to use a threadbare term. Afterwards in his speech the venerable director of the young idea showed the delight that was in his heart, and also gave evidences of being deeply affected by the spontaniety of his greeting.

The banquet began at 8 o'clock, and during its courses fraternizing was the paramount activity. Immediately after the banquet was over, Dr. F. C. Bowman of the class of '79 arose and stated that the principal business before the alumni was to form the Northern Alumni association, auxiliary to the main alumni of the State university, and to elect officers for the same. He spoke of the inception of the movement last winter, when the Duluth alumni of the State university met to protets against the financial handling of the State university by the board of control, at which time it was decided to form an alumni association, frankly for the purpose of extending to their alma mater and her president whatever aid they could. Dr. Bowman, the temporary president, then asked Secretary John M. Powell to read the constitution as drawn up by the executive committee. It follows:

"Article I.—Name and Objects: Section 1.—This association shall be called and known as the Northern Alumni Association of the University of Minnesota. Sec. 2. The objects of this association shall be: 1. The promotion of the welfare of the University of Minnesota through the stimulation of an interest therein of all graduates and non-graduate matriculates of all colleges, by keeping them in touch with, and informed of, the needs and doings of their alma mater, and by the cultivation among them of a fraternal spirit. 2. The functions of this association, so far as state and university matters are concerned, shall always be subsidiary to, and in articulation with, the General Alumni association.

"Article II—Membership: Section 1. The membership of this association shall consist of the graduates of all the departments of the university. Sec. 2. There shall be eligible to associate membership: Matriculates who have not been graduated; and to honorary memberships—members and ex-members of the teaching corps of the university, members and ex-members of the board of regents. Sec. 3. The annual membership dues shall be determined by the board of directors, which board shall also determine the method of collecting the dues.

"Article III—Officers: Section 1. The officers of this association shall consist of a president, a vice president, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall constitute a board of directors, and shall be elected at the annual meeting, said directors to serve until their successors are elected. Sec. 2. The management of the affairs of the association shall be vested in the board of directors; which board shall annually make a report at the regular meeting of the association.

"Article IV—Meetings: The time and place of the annual meeting of the association shall be determined by the board of directors.

"Article V—Quorum: Fifteen members shall constitute a quorum of the association, and three members a quorum of directors.

"Article VI—Changes in the Constitution: Amendments to this constitution recommended by the board of directors may be adopted at any annual meeting by a two-thirds vote of the members present."

This form of constitution was unanimously adopted. The question of electing officers then came up and John R. Heino moved that the temporary officers be made permanent. Dr. Bowman objected to this, but President Northrop put the motion, which was carried.

They are: Dr. F. C. Bowman, '79, president; H. F. Grannis '86, vice president; Rev. J. W. Powell, '93, secretary, and C. B. Miller, '95, treasurer.

Clarence B. Miller was then introduced as toastmaster and took the helm. Mr. Milled demonstrated unmistakeable ability in this particular line. His introductions of the different speakers were notably happy and left the speaker who followed an introduction, safe ground on which to stand in delivering himself of either wit or wisdom or a mixture of both.

The opening number of a selection of the Campus quartet, consisting of Rev. John W. Powell, '93, Rev. Harry O. Hannum '93, Claude Z. Luse '01 and William S. Wingate '94. This quartet opened and closed the program with old college songs and were liberally encored.

Dr. H. C. Leonard of the class of '75 was introduced as the first speaker and talked of the "Days of '69." Dr. Leonard was in the first fresman class of the university, entering in 1869. He spoke interestingly last night of the first faculty of the university and of the equipment with which they had to work. Nearly all of the faculty consisted of ex-army officers, the great Civil war having just been finished. He said that the first two classes graduated from the university consisted of only two each, and in the first of these one of the two was an Indian. Dr. Leonard's talk was most interesting and as it was before the days of President Northrop at the university "prexy" listened with been interest.

Rev. Harry O. Hannum of the class of '93, now pastor of Pilgrim Congregational church in Superior, was down on the program to speak on "Ethical and Culture Influence of the University." He claimed that he had never heard of the subject before, although Toastmaster Miller attempted to tell it to him over the telephone about 6 o'clock. Mr. Hannum said that anyway the subjects were merely for the convenience of the toastmaster, so he would dismiss it and reminisce. This he did and most interestingly and wittily, telling good stories with a proper gusto. He closed by urging the organization and solidifying of the alumni in an endeavor to have strong men put on the faculty of the university and to have the legislature provide money to secure such men.

Miss Laura Frankenfield of the class of '94 spoke on "Co-Education, Its Performance and Promises." She advocated co-education, saying that for girls it helps them take in the energy of boys and the associations give boys refinement and gentleness which they would otherwise miss.

W. H. Hoyt of the class of '90 spoke of the university as the industrial development factor of the state. His advice to young men is to study the scientific courses for the scientific men are getting to be more and more in demand.

In a brief but telling eulogy Mr. Miller introduced President Northrop as the last speaker of the evening. In his honor the alumni gave the college yell with a vim and enthusiasm that showed the sincerest affection for their guest of honor.

President Northrop referred to the remarks of the toatmaster who had said that President Northrop had done more for the University of Minnesota than any other group of men in the commonwealth. The speaker claimed that all he had done was to keep down strife and allow natural laws to work together for the good of the university. He told how he happened to come to Minnesota first, which was in 1881 when he was sent by Yale university to Chicago to preside over the entrance examinations there. These past, he and his family took the steamer Peerless from Chicago to Duluth, so that it was at Duluth his foot first pressed the soil of the state which was to become his home.

Three years later, the regents of the state university went to Yale after him and he came out to see the place and decide what to do. He said the only inviting thing was the evident possibility of growth. At that time, as he expressed it last night it was "Only an old-fashioned college running under bare poles." This condition was caused by the absence of money. He related how, that year the legislature had appropriated $180,000, which was to be available for six years at the rate of $30,000 a year, but the capitol having burned, payment of this sum was postponed. General Sibley, who was a member of the board of regents at the time said that he thought enough should be taken out of that $180,000 to build all of the buildings that would be needed by the university for all time.

"That was about the extent of what was known of the needs of a university," said President Northrop. "Most of that sum was used in building that deformity, the coliseum, which an All-wise Providence saw fit to remove by fire."

President Northrop dwelt on the rapid growth of the university and said that its scientific training is as good as that of any college in New England. Speaking of the growth in attendance, he says there is in the college one student to every 500 inhabitants of the state and one graduate to every 400 population. The state university has over 5,000 graduates already, while Yale in her 200 years of existence has only about $20,000.

President Northrop then talked of the manhood and womanhood which it is his purpose to develop in his students. He said that he does not care for abstract scholarship. He spoke of the steady downward tendency in municipal government, the tendency to get money, rightly or wrongly, and to turn public institutions into sources of private gain by graft. He paid tributes to Jerome, Folk, Weaver, Roosevelt, Taft and Hay for their efforts to create a right spirit throughout the country, and said that if education is good for anything it is to create ideals to live up to and to see that others live up to.

Is Believed to Have Committed Suicide.

Cable, Wis., June 28.—The lifeless body of Edward W. Smith was found in a small lake near this place. He was an inmate of the Sawyer county poorhouse, and wandered away from the farm two weeks ago and a long and persistent search located his dead body in the lake. He was subject to spells of insanity, and his death is conceded to have been a clear case of suicide.

Harley Johnson, who robbed the post-office here two weeks ago, has been sentenced to five years in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. Johnson, who lived here many years, had a hobby of robbing the Cable postoffice, having broken into the office on five different occasions. After completing a term of three years at Stillwater for the crime, he renewed his burglarizing of the office immediately upon his release.

RAY W. JONES FOR ALASKA

Minnesota Man Would Like Governorship of the Territory.

Minneapolis, June 28.—The Journal says: If the territory of Alaska is to have a new governor as the outcome of the present investigation ordered by President Roosevelt, a strong effort will be made to secure the office for a Minneapolis man.

Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones is a candidate for the place and has a formidable backing from men prominent in Republican state and national politics.

Charges have been made against John G. Brady the present governor, who has already been shown the wisdom of resigning from the directorship of certain mining and development companies. By order of the president, the affairs of the territory are now under investigation, and it is said that, irrespective of findings, there may be a transfer which will leave the office of governor vacant.

Lieutenant Governor Jones has been urged by his friends to present his candidacy for the place since the first trouble in the north nearly a year ago. Little was done at that time, but since the recent developments considerable work has been done by the Jones forces. It is stated that both Senator Nelson and Senator Clapp have pledged their support and indorsement and that the congressional delegation is already well lined up and is willing to offer the same support as the senators. In addition, Mr. Jones will have practically the solid support of the state senate over which he has presided for two sessions. This will give him the formal backing of party leaders all over the state. In addition to this F. B. Kellogg of St. Paul, national committeeman, and Thomas Shevlin, former committeeman of Minneapolis, are said to be very friendly to Mr. Jones' candidacy.

Immediately after the adjournment of the legislature in April, Governor Jones went east and, it is understood, had a conference with the senators and others In addition to his support in the state he has influential friends at Washington. At the present time he is at his country home near Frazer, Minn., and could not be seen. It is admitted, however, that his formal candidacy is ready to be presented at Washington as soon as the proper moment arrives.

NO SHAKESPEAREAN PLAYS

London Theater Managers Recover From Revival Fever.

London, June 28.—The Shakespeare revival fever which attacked London managers so severely in the latter half of this present season of 1904-1905, has now thoroughly exhausted itself, and instead of having five or six theaters at the present time relying on "Hamlet" and other works of Shakespeare, not one will have his name upon their play bills.

Last autumn, Mr. Tree began his season at His Majesty's with a revival of "The Tempest," and then on Nov. 29, Otho Stuart put on "The Taming of the Shrew," at the Adelphi. Mr. Walker revived "Henry V" on Jan. 21, and three days later Mr. Tree did likewise for "Much Ado About Nothing." Matinees of the "Merchant of Venice" were given in March at Terry's and Mr. Harvey announced his intention to revive "Hamlet" at the Lyric in May.

Otho Stuart presented H. B. Irving as Hamlet at the Adelphi, and on April 8 Miss Tita Brand threw open the Shaftesbury that the public might see "Othello." While he was filling the Imperial theater nightly with "Beaucaire," Mr. Lewis Waller prepared a revival of "Romeo and Juliet,' and immediately a stage society embodied by all of these events followed Mr. Waller's example at "Royalty." At Easter to honor Shakespeare's birthweek, Mr. Tree revived six of his plays in the space of a week, and then kept "Julius Caesar" in the bill for another week, following that up with "Twelfth Night." Sir Henry Irving wound up the Shakesperean season with Shylock. Martin Harvey withdrew "Hamlet" at the same time and the following evening the same play finished at the Adelphi. Thus all at once all traces of the Shakespearean fever suddenly disappeared.

PIGMIES REACH LONDON.

Strangest Visitors Since Sir Walter Raleigh's Indians.

London, June 28.—The six pigmies brought by Col. Harrison from the great unknown forest of Central Africa have arrived in London at last, after many delays and interruptions on the way.

A few years ago Stanley set the world to talking of the strange little men whom he discovered in his great march across Africa. Now the six pigmies, first of their race to leave the swamps and forests of Central Africa, rode through London in a couple of four-wheeled cabs, one of them smoking a Havana cigar as naturally as a stock broker. Since Sir Walter Raleigh brought his red Indians to England, over 300 years ago, there have been no such strange visitors as these little human monkeys from the darkest depths of Africa.

Out of six pigmies, four are men and two are women, but even Col. Harrison, who discovered them in their forest home, knows no relationship between them.

The little men treat the little women as inferior beings, who ought to do as they are told. There are no signs of affection among them, save perhaps, that Gorrigi, the younger and better looking of the women, spends most of her time in gazing upon Mongogo, the youngest and liveliest of the little men, who is one yard tall in his bare feet.

Magani (man) about 35.
Mafanti (man) about 30.
Mattuka (man) about 28.
Mongogo (man) about 20.
Maroupi (woman) about 39.
Gorrigi (woman) about 16.

Magani, the chief, is four feet high, and the tallest of the six pigmies. He is a splendidly developed pigmy, with broad shoulders, deep chest, and grizzly gray whiskers. He walks with a dignified swagger, gets most of the cigars and generally comforts himself like a forest king.

Col. Harrison found the pigmies living near the equator in the forest southwest of Lake Albert, at the head of the Nile. They reach maturity at an earlier age even than the Hindus. They marry at 8, at 20 they have grown up children of their own, and are "too old at 40" for anything except the grave. The only language they speak is Swahili, the tongue of the Uganda folk.

Perhaps the most interesting thing in connection with this touch of Darkest Africa is the manner in which the pigmies chant their forest songs in the heart of civilization. Quietly the four men rise to their feet and stand in a small circle, gazing at the ground. The old woman pigmy and the "Lovely Princess" sit silently aside. For some moments the four are perfectly still. Next, old Magani, of the grizzly gray beard pats the brown mat gently with his right foot, and Mattuka of the large and shiny nose, begins to hum like a crooning babe.

Then the song and dance of the pigmies begins. The dance is as ceremonious as a minuet, and all four dance exactly alike. In the circle they move round and round with heads jerking and feet pating and stamping gently on the ground. The song they sing is composed chiefly of vowel sounds. It is very melodious, but dirge like, and runs something like this:

"O eea eea ee-ea. O hee he-a hea-ea hea-a-a! O oeo o-o-o-o-o! A-e a-a-aa-aaa—! A-o ee aa aa aa! O-eo-o-o-o-o! Oe o-o-o-o!"

HONOR FOR PREXY

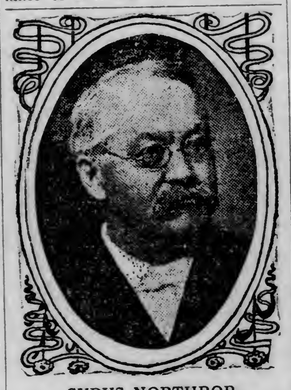
First Banquet of Northern Alumni Hears President Northrop.

Association Perfects Organization For Good of Alma Mater.

The first annual dinner of the Northern Alumni association of the University of Minnesota was held in the dining room of the Spalding hotel last evening. President Northrop of the State university, that best beloved by pupils and public of Minnesota's educators, was the guest of honor and the principal speaker of the evening. Previous to the banquet, President Northrop received the members of the alumni in the parlors of the hotel, and was heartily greeted by each. He was plainly glad to see them, and his delight over the enthusiasm of their greeting was also quite evident. The occasion throughout bore every semblance of a love-feast, with President



CYRUS NORTHROP,
President of University of Minnesota.

Northrop the cynosure of all eyes, to use a threadbare term. Afterwards in his speech the venerable director of the young idea showed the delight that was in his heart, and also gave evidences of being deeply affected by the spontaniety of his greeting.

The banquet began at 8 o'clock, and during its courses fraternizing was the paramount activity. Immediately after the banquet was over, Dr. F. C. Bowman of the class of '79 arose and stated that the principal business before the alumni was to form the Northern Alumni association, auxiliary to the main alumni of the State university, and to elect officers for the same. He spoke of the inception of the movement last winter, when the Duluth alumni of the State university met to protets against the financial handling of the State university by the board of control, at which time it was decided to form an alumni association, frankly for the purpose of extending to their alma mater and her president whatever aid they could. Dr. Bowman, the temporary president, then asked Secretary John M. Powell to read the constitution as drawn up by the executive committee. It follows:

"Article I.—Name and Objects: Section 1.—This association shall be called and known as the Northern Alumni Association of the University of Minnesota. Sec. 2. The objects of this association shall be: 1. The promotion of the welfare of the University of Minnesota through the stimulation of an interest therein of all graduates and non-graduate matriculates of all colleges, by keeping them in touch with, and informed of, the needs and doings of their alma mater, and by the cultivation among them of a fraternal spirit. 2. The functions of this association, so far as state and university matters are concerned, shall always be subsidiary to, and in articulation with, the General Alumni association.

"Article II—Membership: Section 1. The membership of this association shall consist of the graduates of all the departments of the university. Sec. 2. There shall be eligible to associate membership: Matriculates who have not been graduated; and to honorary memberships—members and ex-members of the teaching corps of the university, members and ex-members of the board of regents. Sec. 3. The annual membership dues shall be determined by the board of directors, which board shall also determine the method of collecting the dues.

"Article III—Officers: Section 1. The officers of this association shall consist of a president, a vice president, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall constitute a board of directors, and shall be elected at the annual meeting, said directors to serve until their successors are elected. Sec. 2. The management of the affairs of the association shall be vested in the board of directors; which board shall annually make a report at the regular meeting of the association.

"Article IV—Meetings: The time and place of the annual meeting of the association shall be determined by the board of directors.

"Article V—Quorum: Fifteen members shall constitute a quorum of the association, and three members a quorum of directors.

"Article VI—Changes in the Constitution: Amendments to this constitution recommended by the board of directors may be adopted at any annual meeting by a two-thirds vote of the members present."

This form of constitution was unanimously adopted. The question of electing officers then came up and John R. Heino moved that the temporary officers be made permanent. Dr. Bowman objected to this, but President Northrop put the motion, which was carried.

They are: Dr. F. C. Bowman, '79, president; H. F. Grannis '86, vice president; Rev. J. W. Powell, '93, secretary, and C. B. Miller, '95, treasurer.

Clarence B. Miller was then introduced as toastmaster and took the helm. Mr. Millied demonstrated unmistakeable ability in this particular line. His introductions of the different speakers were notably happy and left the speaker who followed an introduction, safe ground on which to stand in delivering himself of either wit or wisdom or a mixture of both.

The opening number of a selection of the Campus quartet, consisting of Rev. John W. Powell, '93, Rev. Harry O. Hannum '93, Claude Z. Luse '01 and William S. Wingate '94. This quartet opened and closed the program with old college songs and were liberally encored.

Dr. H. C. Leonard of the class of '75 was introduced as the first speaker and talked of the "Days of '69." Dr. Leonard was in the first fresman class of the university, entering in 1869. He spoke interestingly last night of the first faculty of the university and of the equipment with which they had to work. Nearly all of the faculty consisted of ex-army officers, the great Civil war having just been finished. He said that the first two classes graduated from the university consisted of only two each, and in the first of these one of the two was an Indian. Dr. Leonard's talk was most interesting and as it was before the days of President Northrop at the university "prexy" listened with been interest.

Rev. Harry O. Hannum of the class of '93, now pastor of Pilgrim Congregational church in Superior, was down on the program to speak on "Ethical and Culture Influence of the University." He claimed that he had never heard of the subject before, although Toastmaster Miller attempted to tell it to him over the telephone about 6 o'clock. Mr. Hannum said that anyway the subjects were merely for the convenience of the toastmaster, so he would dismiss it and reminisce. This he did and most interestingly and wittily, telling good stories with a proper gusto. He closed by urging the organization and solidifying of the alumni in an endeavor to have strong men put on the faculty of the university and to have the legislature provide money to secure such men.

Miss Laura Frankenfield of the class of '94 spoke on "Co-Education, Its Performance and Promises." She advocated co-education, saying that for girls it helps them take in the energy of boys and the associations give boys refinement and gentleness which they would otherwise miss.

W. H. Hoyt of the class of '90 spoke of the university as the industrial development factor of the state. His advice to young men is to study the scientific courses for the scientific men are getting to be more and more in demand.

In a brief but telling eulogy Mr. Miller introduced President Northrop as the last speaker of the evening. In his honor the alumni gave the college yell with a vim and enthusiasm that showed the sincerest affection for their guest of honor.

President Northrop referred to the remarks of the toatmaster who had said that President Northrop had done more for the University of Minnesota than any other group of men in the commonwealth. The speaker claimed that all he had done was to keep down strife and allow natural laws to work together for the good of the university. He told how he happened to come to Minnesota first, which was in 1881 when he was sent by Yale university to Chicago to preside over the entrance examinations there. These past, he and his family took the steamer Peerless from Chicago to Duluth, so that it was at Duluth his foot first pressed the soil of the state which was to become his home.

Three years later, the regents of the state university went to Yale after him and he came out to see the place and decide what to do. He said the only inviting thing was the evident possibility of growth. At that time, as he expressed it last night it was "Only an old-fashioned college running under bare poles." This condition was caused by the absence of money. He related how, that year the legislature had appropriated $180,000, which was to be available for six years at the rate of $30,000 a year, but the capitol having burned, payment of this sum was postponed. General Sibley, who was a member of the board of regents at the time said that he thought enough should be taken out of that $180,000 to build all of the buildings that would be needed by the university for all time.

"That was about the extent of what was known of the needs of a university," said President Northrop. "Most of that sum was used in building that deformity, the coliseum, which an Allwise Providence saw fit to remove by fire."

President Northrop dwelt on the rapid growth of the university and said that its scientific training is as good as that of any college in New England. Speaking of the growth in attendance, he says there is in the college one student to every 500 inhabitants of the state and one graduate to every 400 population. The state university has over 5,000 graduates already, while Yale in her 200 years of existence has only about $20,000.

President Northrop then talked of the manhood and womanhood which it is his purpose to develop in his students. He said that he does not care for abstract scholarship. He spoke of the steady downward tendency in municipal government, the tendency to get money, rightly or wrongly, and to turn public institutions into sources of private gain by graft. He paid tributes to Jerome, Folk, Weaver, Roosevelt, Taft and Hay for their efforts to create a right spirit throughout the country, and said that if education is good for anything it is to create ideals to live up to and to see that others live up to.

Is Believed to Have Committed Suicide.

Cable, Wis., June 28.—The lifeless body of Edward W. Smith was found in a small lake near this place. He was an inmate of the Sawyer county poorhouse, and wandered away from the farm two weeks ago and a long and persistent search located his dead body in the lake. He was subject to spells of insanity, and his death is conceded to have been a clear case of suicide.

Harley Johnson, who robbed the postoffice here two weeks ago, has been sentenced to five years in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. Johnson, who lived here many years, had a hobby of robbing the Cable postoffice, having broken into the office on five different occasions. After completing a term of three years at Stillwater for the crime, he renewed his burglarizing of the office immediately upon his release.

RAY W. JONES FOR ALASKA

Minnesota Man Would Like Governorship of the Territory.

Minneapolis, June 28.—The Journal says: If the territory of Alaska is to have a new governor as the outcome of the present investigation ordered by President Roosevelt, a strong effort will be made to secure the office for a Minneapolis man.

Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones is a candidate for the place and has a formidable backing from men prominent in Republican state and national politics.

Charges have been made against John G. Brady the present governor, who has already been shown the wisdom of resigning from the directorship of certain mining and development companies. By order of the president, the affairs of the territory are now under investigation, and it is said that, irrespective of findings, there may be a transfer which will leave the office of governor vacant.

Lieutenant Governor Jones has been urged by his friends to present his candidacy for the place since the first trouble in the north nearly a year ago. Little was done at that time, but since the recent developments considerable work has been done by the Jones forces. It is stated that both Senator Nelson and Senator Clapp have pledged their support and indorsement and that the congressional delegation is already well lined up and is willing to offer the same support as the senators. In addition, Mr. Jones will have practically the solid support of the state senate over which he has presided for two sessions. This will give him the formal backing of party leaders all over the state. In addition to this F. B. Kellogg of St. Paul, national committeeman, and Thomas Shevlin, former committeeman of Minneapolis, are said to be very friendly to Mr. Jones' candidacy.

Immediately after the adjournment of the legislature in April, Governor Jones went east and, it is understood, had a conference with the senators and others In addition to his support in the state he has influential friends at Washington. At the present time he is at his country home near Frazee, Minn., and could not be seen. It is admitted, however, that his formal candidacy is ready to be presented at Washington as soon as the proper moment arrives.

The Stage

NO SHAKESPEAREAN PLAYS

London Theater Managers Recover From Revival Fever.

London, June 28.—The Shakespeare revival fever which attacked London managers so severely in the latter half of this present season of 1904-1905, has now thoroughly exhausted itself, and instead of having five or six theaters at the present time relying on "Hamlet" and other works of Shakespeare, not one will have his name upon their play bills.

Last autumn, Mr. Tree began his season at His Majesty's with a revival of "The Tempest," and then on Nov. 29, Otho Stuart put on "The Taming of the Shrew," at the Adelphi. Mr. Walker revived "Henry V" on Jan. 21, and three days later Mr. Tree did likewise for "Much Ado About Nothing." Matinees of the "Merchant of Venice" were given in March at Terry's and Mr. Harvey announced his intention to revive "Hamlet" at the Lyric in May.

Otho Stuart presented H. B. Irving as Hamlet at the Adelphi, and on April 8 Miss Tita Brand threw open the Shaftesbury that the public might see "Othello." While he was filling the Imperial theater nightly with "Beaucaire," Mr. Lewis Waller prepared a revival of "Romeo and Juliet," and immediately a stage society embodied by all of these events followed Mr. Waller's example at "Royalty." At Easter to honor Shakespeare's birthweek, Mr. Tree revived six of his plays in the space of a week, and then kept "Julius Caesar" in the bill for another week, following that up with "Twelfth Night." Sir Henry Irving wound up the Shakesperean season with Shylock. Martin Harvey withdrew "Hamlet" at the same time and the following evening the same play finished at the Adelphi. Thus all at once all traces of the Shakespearean fever suddenly disappeared.

Summer Term

Will begin at the Duluth Business University on Wednesday, July 5. Location, 105-7 West Superior street.

YACHTING WEEK ENDS COLD.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

The Pollard children are from Australia. If you had a sneaking idea that in spite of the press notices that they were picked up wherever the management saw promising material, talk with the youngsters for five minutes and all doubts will be dispelled. Of all the delicious slurring of "haytones" and turning of flat American a's into broad Australian o's and then all the rest of the inflections that make the dialect miscalled cockney, attractive to the unaccustomed ear, you will find it among the Pollard urchins.

The Pollard children were the guests of Charles A. Marshall, manager of the Lyceum, at a brake ride around the boulevard yesterday afternoon and a more interesting group of youngsters would be hard to meet. They are really wonderful. For instance, they acknowledge an introduction with as much ease and grace as a veteran in social arts. There is none of that embarrassed giggling and blushing and striving to hide behind somebody's petticoats. They are all and always "delighted to meet you," and then they never forget to say "thank you." And anybody who has drilled for years and years to get one small creature to courteously acknowledge a service knows how truly remarkable that is. "Machine children?" Oh, not at all, for they can with as much gusto as the ordinary child place the working part of a pin in close proximity to the unsuspecting calf of the leg of the fellow who sits on the seat in front so that on the next swing backward of the same leg—well anybody knows what will happen then.

After being loaded into three tallyhos, an orderly, courteous lot, they were driven out Superior street and then up to the boulevard. As the breeze from Lake Superior drifted along and did its best to locate the marrow of the littel actors, a childish treble on the back seat piped, "My wold; ain't this just like Shang'ai. So cold there." And to the natural question of their host, "Are you cold, girls?" twenty chorused "No, thank you."

They willingly learned the facts that Lake Superior was the largest fresh water body in the world, that the aerial bridge was a truly remarkable structure, that when they were at the highest part of the boulevard they were 700 feet above the lake and between times they discussed the liability of Olive Moore's youngest daughter, Carrie, a flaxen-haired doll, achieving a cold as a result of the ride. They compared the views they saw with Seattle, Shanghai, Manila and Melbourne like the veritable globe trotters which they are. They enjoyed the ride immensely and politely and graciously thanked Mr. Marshall for his entertainment.

One of the wise ones prophesied good weather for today for said she: "Me mother says w'en ther's enough blue in the skoiy to cut out a pair of men's pants, it's going to be fine," and with a comprehensive wave of her arm, "I could cut out a whole bushel of pants from all that." They are an attractive lot of clever, natural, lovable children that give delight at close range as well as across the footlights.

FIND A CHAMPION.

Here's a Man Who Believes In Women's Clubs.

Women's clubs are the natural product of a progressive age. They stand for intellectual and social culture, for philanthropic and educational work, for the discussion of the improvement of the home, the solution of domestic problems. They do not impair home life; on the contrary, they promote it. They do not tend to race suicide; the majority of members of woman's clubs are mothers. They not only improve their own homes, but they extend the helping hand of benevolence to other homes to other people's children, to the fatherless and oppressed, to the poor children of the city whose outings and vacation schools are a few of the many beautiful philanthropies where the altruistic doctrine of woman's clubs is apparent, writes W. L. Bodino, superintended of compulsory education an the Woman's Journal, in interesting contrast in Grover Cleveland's lately expressed views.

I believe in woman's clubs because I am in an official position, as superintendent of compulsory education in Chicago, to know the vast amount of good they have accomplished in child-saving work, in securing legislation on compulsory education, parental schools and juvenile courts, and in the suppression of child labor. Woman's clubs are not theoretical. They are practical. They act. They "do things" for the good of society, for the good of the community and the country. Once upon a time, in old days, women met and talked and rocked over their knitting needles. They were officially personified then by the name of sewing societies. Now-a-days they do their sewing at home and meet as women's clubs, not only to discuss problems of intellectual advancement, but to take a timely hand in perfecting reforms for the betterment of child life in particular and humanity in general. The greater woman means the betted nation. While men have been busy quarreling over the money question and the tariff question woman's clubs have been busy safe-guarding humanity.

Men's clubs as a rule are purely social. Women's clubs are not. Which is of greater value to the home life? There can be but one reasonable deduction in the answer. Let us concede it to the women's clubs, not only in a gracious spirit, but in the spirit of fact.

Any man who would not give his wife a day off once or more a week to spend an intellectual afternoon at a women's club is unreasonable, undemocratic and un-American.

In women's clubs (as in men's clubs) there are two factions, the radicals and the conservatives. Madam President has her own troubles, just as the presiding officer of every organization has his official worries. There are in women's clubs, as in other clubs, some members who are "invincible" in advice and "invisible" when it comes to doing work. But, on the whole, the women's clubs compare most favorably in excellent personnel of officers and good organization with other clubs, and from a standpoint of social and scientific value to the community are far superior to men's clubs.

I believe in women's clubs. What this country needs is more women's clubs, more mothers' congresses, more natural councils of women, more women's leagues; for in organized womanhood lies the moral and intellectual hope of this republic, and the settlement of the divorce question and other sociological problems that the procarstination and propitiation of mankind have failed to solve.

Women's clubs stand for the home, for the school, for art, literature and music, for domestic science, for the intellectual advancement of the American woman who presides over the American home; and the father whose hand pushes the baby carriage of the future American citizen should be proud of the fact that the mothers of the rising generation have the priceless advantage of belonging to clubs which not only tend to promote the social and intellectual culture of the mother, but safeguard most competent rearing of the child.

A SHATTERED IDOL

By Charles W. Cuno.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

He was such a reckless, dare-devil of a man, this Jack Langdon, who wooed by main strength and would not take "No" for an answer.

"Meet me," he had written, "meet me at the Suvesne reception. Afterwards we will go to the cotillion and from there—"

He had left the rest expressively blank.

Pearl Horton had read the note once, twice, and again many times. At first she was angry—what woman would not be?—but then she could not help recalling the gay way other women of her set talked about their flirtations. Why not she?

"Why not?" she asked herself. "Why not?" she repeated so often as she dressed herself to go, that she had questioned herself into consent. She was dressed and ready, when, why was it that at the last moment her husband should say, in his firm, quiet way that she feared to cross:

"Pearl, I wish you to go with me to the opera tonight. Will you be pleased?"

"No, I won't," she exclaimed; "I have made other engagements."

"Never mind," he said tenderly, "let the other engagements go. I do so wish you to go with me tonight."

Visions of Jack Langdon's disappointment came to her mind and she exclaimed petulantly, "You're the most exasperating, unaccountable man I ever met."

Dr. Horton was a man with a broad and liberal mind. He loved his wife and he studied her moods. He saw with what innocent pleasure she played with the fire and resolved that, if he could help her and stand between her and temptation, he would. In the clubroom that day he had heard something, a bit of Langdon's barroom bragadocio, probably, augmented by rumor. On the impulse of the moment his first thought was to seek out this man and give him a sound thrashing, but better councils prevailed. Nor did he go home and raise a fuss with his wife. He was far too good a general for that.

"There, there, my dear," he said, with a touch of finality in his voice. "We shall go to the reception afterward, if you like. What do you say, sweetheart?"

Mrs. Norton accepted the inevitable with bad grace and bounced out of the room almost in tears. "There's no help for it, I suppose," she exclaimed, and sat down to pen Jack a note. It read:

"Dear Jack:

"That dolt of a husband of mine, tonight of all nights in the world, wants me to go to the opera. There's no help for it. I guess I must go. You will forgive me, will you not?" Write me when I will see you again.

"As ever, P."

Dr. Horton, waiting in the hallway below, heard the door slam on the hurrying maid that carried the note to Langdon, and the deep furrows on his brow relaxed a little.

Perhaps, who knows, he knew also of another note that reached his enemy's hand at about the same time.

It read:

"Dearest Jackie:

"Do come down to see me tonight. Meet me at the stage door at 12 and we will have a time. Yours ever, "CISSEY.

"P. S.—Shall we go to Vane's? Don't forget a bunch of flowers, now will you? That's a dear boy."

Nine o'clock saw the Hortons in their box and Pearl enjoying herself in spite of her vexation. But Dr. Horton was waiting patiently for the close, and when they entered their carriage again he said to the driver, "Vane's."

Pearl lifted her eyebrows in surprise, but said nothing.

When they reached that none too respectable cafe Horton plieted his wife to one of the private dining rooms that looked out upon the main hall. Already gathered there were people of all kinds and classes and questionable respectability.

In a few moments another carriage arrived. Horton had placed his wife so that she could see into the dining hall, and Pearl gave a low, startled exclamation when she saw Jack Langdon enter with one of the chorus girls of the opera company.

Her husband ordered supper and attentively supplied all her wants, but she could not keep her eyes off of Langdon and the flashily dressed girl in his company. They had taken a table in the center of the hall and wine began to flow freely. Cissey talked loudly, and finally, apparently at the suggestion of Langdon, leaped upon the table, displayed a very loud pair of hose and danced one of the rather vulgar dances then popular on the stage, amid the applause of the crowd.

By that time, however, Dr. Horton had paid the bill, and, without apparently taking notice of the doings in the other room, led his wife out by a side entrance, where the carriage was waiting. He looked at his watch and sat musing for a moment, while the carriage rattled over the pavement.

"Pearl," he said at length, "would you mind? On our way home there is a patient of mine that, I fear, is not long for this world. I must visit her, and I wish you would come with me. Won't you say a few comforting words to her?"

Pearl's sympathetic heart was touched, and from the gay dining room they went to the poor little room of the girl. She sat down by the girl's bedside and tried to comfort her, but nothing that she said seemed to soothe the sufferer. She took her hand and smoothed her hair.

"Won't you confide in me?" she asked kindly.

The girl shook her head. "I will not tell his name," she said.

The doctor stood behind his wife and made a sign that seemed to change her mind.

"His name is ——," the girl whispered. Pearl bent low to hear the whispered words, and then started back violently when she heard his name. She almost cried out.

"Do you know him?" the girl asked.

"No, no, dear," she exclaimed, trembling, "he—he is—a stranger to me."

No other house at the Head of the Lakes can take the quantity, consequently cannot get the price — and what they don't get they cannot give.

ALIVE TO YOUR INTERESTS as well as our own, our buyers are always searching the markets far and near for new merchandise that can be bought cheap. The quantity seldom scares us, hence the reason manufacturers and jobbers look to us as the only outlet in this part of the country when they want to clean up, or let out a lot of stuff cheap.

We have just secured another magnificent lot of wash goods—all this season's fabrics—all goods that you must have before the end of August—and, fortunately for you, we had our own wash goods stock in such shape that we could handle this big lot. Bought at our own price—a price that will enable us to offer you the goods at about half its usual value.

SALE BEGINS THURSDAY AT 8:00 A. M.

While our prices are low our standard of goods must be the highest character obtainable. The rubbish end of the mercantile business can be handled by the rubbish stores that are flocking into Duluth by the dozen. ENOUGH SAID!

3c — Batiste.

5c — Lawns and batistes.
A fine 30-inch cloth in new, beautiful designs. This same cloth is being sold in this city now at 8c in one house and 10c in another—our price 5c.

7c — Black goods.
In the lot was about a case and a half of fancy corded wash novelties. We see the same goods placarded in the window of a store on Superior street, "10c"—and they are cheap at that, for they are worth 12½c—but our price is 7c.

12½c — Swell stuff.
This lot consists of high-grade bourette suitings, fine polka dot chambrays, shadow striped organdies, drape de voiles, fancy and brousse corded novelties—all the new summer colorings—beautiful, up-to-date stuff; all worth 25c—it goes at 12½c.

12½c — Special notice.
The 12½c lot advertised above is the biggest of the lot. Half of this lot will be put on bargain counter No. 1; the other half will be on sale at our wash goods counter. Come early and secure the plums.

8c — White goods.
In this big purchase was about 20 pieces 32-inch plain white piques—the wholesale price on this goods was 20c—small stores would sell it at 25c—our price 8c.

Consisting of printed organdies, Jasamine batistes and Pacific lawns; not a piece worth less than 12½c and 15c; splendid patterns and colorings, and all at 8c per yard.

10c — A grand lot.
This lot is made up of several thousand yards of voiles, mohair, lusters, sheertones, and nub organdies; every piece worth up to 20c—sale price, 10c a yard.

15c — Chance of the season
A splendid lot of fine, high-grade voiles, check and barred mousselines, valdorn stripes, mercerized corded novelties and imported woven dot mulls; worth up to 39c per yard—they go at 15c.

15c — A splendid bargain.
A splendid bargain — About 30 pieces high-grade satin damask and fancy corded waistings, worth 30c and 35c per yard. Nothing like them ever shown for the money—on sale at 15c.

Remember, the sale begins Thursday at 8:00 a. m.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Twelve-Year-Old Boy at Marquette Stops Runaway Prisoner.

Marquette—Timothy Burke, undergoing sentence in the connty jail, made a dash for liberty from the courthouse, where he had been set to work, and would have succeeded in making his escape but for the 12-year-old son of the sheriff. The youngster saw the man on the street after Burke had gone a block and gave pursuit on a bicycle. Burke ran, but the boy overhauled him and, calling loudly for help, attracted the attention of the city marshal and Burke was returned to jail.

Gladstone—Implements manufactured at a Gladstone plant will be in the outfit Lieut. Peary will take to the Arctic region. An order for three dozen axes and two dozen hunting knives for use in the search for the pole has been received.

St. Ignace—A thief with decidedly novel bent appears to be operating in St. Ignace. It was only recently that a bear cub was stolen, and now a penny-in-the-slot gum machine has disappeared from in front of a store.

L'Anse—At Skanee, lightning struck the house of Charles F. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson had a narrow escape from at least serious injury, a ring attached to one of her ears being torn from its fastenings and pins removed from her hair.

Iron Mountain—Kicked to death by his horse on his farm, was the fate of Nels Westman, a homesteader, near the town of homestead. The man expired almost instantly in view of his small son.

Escanaba—Seventh Day Adventists from all over the Upper Peninsula have been congregating in Escanaba preliminary to a long series of meetings to be held in a large tabernacle tent.

Ironwood—The Chicago & Northwestern railroad has a large crew of men engaged in replacing the steel on its line between Ironwood and Wakefield.

Quinnesec—The township of Breitung, Dickinson county, having had an enabling act passed by the legislature at its last session, authorizing the township to bond to the extent of $6,000 for the purpose of establishing, equipping and maintaining a watherworks and fire department for the unorganized village of Quinnesec, the bonds have been negotiated and sold to the Commercial bank of Iron Mountain, and at least one-half of the $6,000 has been already paid for material. Now the opposing political faction in the township has been getting legal advice, it is said, and expects to fight the proposed system. It is reported that an injunction will be sought for the purpose of stopping the work already in progress.

Manistique—The Manistique Iron company has entered into a contract with the city of Manistique to furnish it with slag for street work at 25 cents per ton. The contract runs for one year, with the option of a renewal for four years more.

THE TAX RATE.

This is the season when people are being informed how much their personal property valuations are, and as the matter of taxation is called to mind there is the usual storm of protests about "high taxes." There probably is not a community in the country that does not complain of high taxes, not because taxes are necessarily high, but because this is one expenditure that most people see no return from, and it therefore hurts to pay it. They do get a return for it, because it is their share of the expenses of running the state, county and city governments, of educating the children, policing the streets, maintaining fire protection, etc.

Taxes do get too high, however, unless they are watched. Duluth's tax rate for last year, the rate upon which this year's taxes are being paid, was too high. It was $33.50 on each $1,000 of valuation against $31.30 the year before. Usually $30 per $1,000 is considered a fair rate, though this amounts to 3 per cent.

The tax rate for the two years was made up as follows:

| | 1903. | 1904. |
|---|---|---|
| State tax | $2.73 | $2.73 |
| County tax | 3.77 | 4.07 |
| Duluth school tax | 9.80 | 11.80 |
| Duluth city tax | 15.10 | 14.90 |
| Total | $31.40 | $33.50 |

The state tax is unchanged, the county tax increased 30 cents, the school tax increased $2, and the city tax was decreased 20 cents, making a net increase of $2.10 per $1,000. With the state tax local authorities have nothing to do. It will be at least as much next year, and probably a little more. Local authorities, however, fix the other rates. The school board fixes the school rate, the city officials fix the city rate and the county board fixes the county rate.

One thing that makes the tax rate high is debt. Out of the $33.50 in taxes paid by a man assessed at $1,000 this year, $8.11 was to take care of public debt. Including 31 cents for an overdraft in the county revenue fund advanced to the poor fund, the county's share was 74 cents, the city's share was $5.34, and the school district's share was $2. City and county are not only levying taxes to pay interest on bonds, but are levying taxes to pay the bonds when they become due.

The school board, on the other hand, is not doing this. It is taking care of small lots of bonds as they come due, but the large issues, which will begin to come due in a decade or thereabouts, are not being arranged for. The policy of the board is to refund these bonds when they become due, thus perpetuating the load of interest-paying and passing it on to posterity. If the school district had a regular sinking fund its levy would be still higher than it is.

This fall the tax rate for next year will be made up, and it will be up to the taxing authorities to get down to a 3 per cent basis if they can. The county is taking care of the new courthouse by an annual tax levy, which amounted to 53 cents per $1,000 last year, and it will not be able to cut much, if any. In fact, the city and school district will also find it difficult to cut. Yet the fact remains that the tax rate is too high, that there may be a slight increase in the state tax, and that a reduction is due the public.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

Ever since the Twentieth Century limited crashed into an open switch down in Ohio, killing and injuring many, there has been a chorus of railroad magnates, accompanied by many newspapers, explaining that the speed had nothing to do with the cause of the wreck, and that it might have happened just as easily to a train going fifteen miles an hour as to a train going seventy miles an hour. This claim is being repeated so many times that a lot of people are going to believe it.

But it appears that the train went through that open switch not into vacancy but upon a sidetrack. A train going fifteen miles an hour would have slid out upon that sidetrack, and the engineers would have had time to stop it before the other end of the switch was reached. As the train was going seventy miles an hour the slight swerve caused by turning into the sidetrack was enough to cause a horrible wreck.

However that may be, whether the wreck was due in part, wholly or not at all to the speed, it could have been prevented. For instance, if there had been a permanent switchman at that switch there could have been no accident. If there had been a track-walker on that piece of track the accident could not have occurred. There are neither permanent switchmen or track-walkers on many of the railroads of this country, if there are on any of them.

In Germany, for instance, every switch is constantly attended by a switchman who must give a safety signal at the approach of every train, and such accidents as this are practically unknown. It is difficult to be prepared for the operations of malice or insanity, one of which is claimed to be responsible for the open switch at Mentor, but the simple expedient of a permanent switchman would effectually guard against such contingency.

The trouble is that there is hardly a railroad accident among the many that occur every year that could not have been prevented by means which the railroads will adopt only after a long course of studied resistance. Even the simple provisions of the safety appliance laws are enforced with difficulty, and inspectors have to be employed to spy constantly upon the railroads to see that they do not break the laws that it took years of hard work to make them observe.

OLD RELIGIOUS PHRASES.

A writer in the Christian Register calls attention to a fact that most people will recognize at once. He says that the old forms of religious expression, stereotyped phrases that had been in common use so long that they had become cant, are going out of use. "Fossil phrases of the past" is what he calls them, and he adds that the fire has gone out of them.

To modern Christians they are only ashes where once they seemed to glow with the fervor of a divine life. This is true not only of words and phrases, but of whole systems of theology, particularly the more gloomy and forbidding ones. The type of religion that forbade joy or pleasure, that was based upon the God of hate in the Old Testament rather than upon the God of love that came with the New Testament, was doomed to die, and if it is not already dead it is nearly so, and it is well for the world and for religion that this is so.

This gloomy, jaundiced religion was a curse to itself and to the world. It made religion a terror when it should have been a joy. It chilled the laughter of the soul and made the way seem dark and dreary, when the true Christianity should lighten the burdens of mankind and make the straight and narrow path more pleasant than the crooked, thorn-hedged ways of sin.

As this writer points out, the religious, stereotyped sayings that once sprinkled prayers and sermons thickly have been largely thrown aside by clergymen of all denominations. Even when they seem to best express the idea of a speaker, he often hesitates to use them for fear that they have become meaningless and forbidding through long use.

Today it is vastly different from the old days, and it is well. The Sunday religion is giving away to the religion that is good all the weeek long. Preachers do not hesitate to speak in common terms, to appeal to popular tastes, to replace ponderous erudition with plain, simple straightforward, heart-to-heart talks.

The tendency is wholesome. The religion of Christ is a religion of light, of joy, of humanity. Nowhere in literature is human nature so thoroughly displayed, so affectionately and compassionately treated, as in the New Testament. It was a crime to shroud this light with the forbidding atmosphere of the Old Testament; rather should the broad, genial light of the New Testament be used to flood the dark places and interpret the less kindly beauties of the Old Testament.

THE MOROCCO BONE.

Probably a good many people are wondering what all this fuss about Morocco means. The average individual has only a vague impression of Moroco, most of which comes from the misty knowledge that Morocco is in Africa, that there is a lot of desert and jungle in Africa, and that therefore Morocco must be more or less of a desert and jungle itself.

This is not the case, however. If it were Morocco would be a very small political consideration; certainly it would not be the bone of an international controversy that has threatened unpleasantness between France and Germany.

A writer in the Deutsche Revue shows what Morocco really is. It offers every opportunity for great industrial developments. In its southern part coal and iron are plentiful, and from the Mediterranean and Atlantic ports a great trade could be developed. Besides coal and iron, there are found gold, silver, copper, iridium, antimony and other valuable minerals. It has been shown that the silver and antimony deposits can be easily worked, and it is believed that the deposits of the other metals are abundant and very accessible. Saltpeter is another possibility.

The agricultural possibilities are great, too. The climate is favorable and the soil immensely rich. The ocean tempers the rays of the African sun, and the air is kept moist. In the small part of the country that has been exploited, oil, dates, figs, corn, grain, etc., are raised and exported to the value of millions. The land is suitable also to the raising of cotton, sugar cane, bananas and grapes.

The mere fact that several European countries have been looking upon Morocco with longing eyes, and that when they caught each other at it they got ill-tempered about it, was sufficient to destroy the impression that Morocco was worthless. International controversies do not arise over deserts and impregnable jungles. When two great countries get to growling at each other over a bit of land, like two dogs over a bone, it is a pretty safe conclusion to draw that there is something worth while in that piece of land. It is no surprise, therefore, to learn of the possibilities of Morocco, though the knowledge may lend a little additional interest to disinterested spectators of the controversy.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Hotel Gossip.

"The north country farmer gets a high price for his products, but it must be remembered that farming in a new country, probably several miles from a railroad, is a good deal more expensive than in older settled communities, so that the average profits of farms of equal size in old and new countries will probably be about the same," said S. J. Hughes, a Virginia, Minn., merchant, at the McKay.

"It takes a man who cuts his farm out of the forest several years before he is in a position to raise a large crop, and his profits must necessarily be pretty good for the first few years to make up for the long period of toil. I know of one man up in the Virginia country, or in the Ashawa country, more correctly speaking, who has expended $5,000 on a 160-acre farm. He is now raising good crops, and finds a ready market for everything grown, at fine prices. He is pleased with the country and has as yet had no occasion to regret the action he took in settling there. His land is steadily increasing in value and will probably some day make him a rich man.

"It is a fact that would seem peculiar to the Illinois and Iowa farmer that in many parts of Minnesota there is no land for sale at any price, owing to the fact that the government has not yet given title to it to the settlers. Thousands of acres are taken up under the homestead act, and as the settlers have been on the land less than the allotted time they could not sell these tracts even if they wanted to. Those who have gained a title to the land after being on it five years feel that, as long as they have put so much trouble into getting their claims, it would be foolish to sell out just as they begin to increase in value. What sales there are are of homestead rights.

"Virginia is enjoying a steady, healthful growth, but there is no boom on there such as some people would have us believe. Business is fair, and the business men all appear to be pretty well satisfied. Virginia is a good town, and her citizens feel that the outlook for the future is a bright one."

* * *

"Angora is one of the new towns on the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road, said C. L. Nord, postmaster of the village, in the lobby of the St. Louis. "We are twenty miles north of the town of Virginia, and indications are that a townsite will be platted this year. The sawmills will open up next fall and hundreds of men will find employment.

"There is a lot of good land up through that district and a number of farms will be under cultivation before long. Logging operations will be vigorously pushed along the Sturgeon river in the fall, and explorations for iron ore will probably be made. The country is developing rapidly, and people coming in are settling down on claims with the intention of staying there. Little government land is now left, however."

* * *

"I read something new in the line of a fish story in a little New York state country paper the other day," said S. E. Mann of New York at the Spalding. "Or maybe the paper in question was published in Pennsylvania. Come to think of it, the lake in question was in the Quaker state, but that is neither here nor there. Anyway, the body of water is a small one, and it is so full of the finny tribe, said the paper, that apparently it is impossible for a fish five inches long to swim straight.

"The small fish are on top and the big ones below, and in order for the fisherman to get his bait down to the big fellows it is necessary to make a hole in the water and carefully drop the hook down through the wriggling mass.

"The article told of how two popular young ladies were at the lake making a determined effort to hook some of the under ones. The little fellows on top, however, made such fierce attacks on the bait that the hooks, time after time, were instantly cleared as soon as they touched the water.

"Many of the little fellows were pulled out in order to make room for the hooks, but when this scheme didn't work a piece of gas pipe ten feet long was secured and placed in the water, and then the hook was dropped through that. In a little while several big ones were landed, but every time there was a bite the piece of pipe of course had to be pulled out.

Rain in Summer.

How beautiful is the rain!
After the dust and heat
In the broad and fiery street,
In the narrow lane—
How beautiful is the rain!

How it clatters along the roofs,
Like the tramp of hoofs!
How it gushes and struggles out
From the throat of the overflowing spout!
Across the window pane
It pours and pours;
And swift and wide
With a muddy tide,
Like a river down the gutter roars
The rain, the welcome rain!
—LONGFELLOW.

The Weather.

Duluth has been standing for several days with its elbows in the air ready to ward off the fierce attack of a northeaster, and it did not come. The wind remained in the northeast and it was cool and occasionally cloudy. Conditions proclaimed the approach of a northeaster, and the weather man said a northeaster was coming. But it did not come.

Well, its failure to appear on schedule time is strongly reminiscent of the story of the man who died and the other man who asked somebody:

"What complaint?"

"Oh, no complaint at all; everybody's satisfied," was handed back to him. That is the case with the nonappearance of the northeaster.

The wind was still in the northeast this morning, but it is due to change. The weather man has taken out that standing prediction of a northeaster, and instead he is more cheerfully announcing warmer weather tonight and Thursday, with winds that while they may be easterly part of the time, will run into the south later, which will cause warm weather necessarily. It will be partly cloudy, and there will be showers tonight and Thursday, but so long as they are not part of the ingredients of a northeaster all will be forgiven.

Showers fell over the Far Northwest, Missouri valley, New England and Gulf states, heavy at Huron and Cairo. The temperature changes were generally slight. Pressures continue low over Saskatchewan and the extreme Southwest. In the lake region fine weather prevails with winds mostly northerly and light to fresh.

Following were the maximum temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

The Departure.

And on her lover's arm she leant,
And around her waist she felt it fold,
And far across the hills they went
In that new world which is the old;
Across the hills, and far away
Beyond their utmost purple rim,
And deep into the dying day
The happy princess followed him.

"I'd sleep another hundred years,
O love, for such another kiss";
"O, wake forever, love," she hears;
"O love, 'twas such as this and this."
And o'er them many a sliding star
And many a merry wind was borne,
And, streamed thro' many a golden bar,
The twilight melted into morn.

"O eyes long laid in happy sleep!"
"O happy sleep, that lightly fled!"
"O happy kiss, that woke thy sleep!"
"O love, thy kiss would wake the dead!"
And o'er them many a flowing range
Of vapor buoy'd the crescent bark,
And, rapt thro' many a rosy change,
The twilight died into the dark.

"A hundred summers! can it be?
And whither goest thou, tell me where?"
"O, seek my father's court with me,
For there are greater wonders there."
And o'er the hills, and far away
Beyond their utmost purple rim,
Beyond one night, across the day,
Thro' all the world she follow'd him.
TENNYSON.

The Meeting of the Waters.

There is not in the wide world a valley so sweet
As that vale in whose bosom the waters meet;
Oh! the last rays of feeling and life must depart,
Ere the bloom of that valley shall fade from my heart.

Yet it was not that Nature had shed o'er the scene
Her purest of crystal and brightest of green;
'Twas not her soft magic of streamlet or hill,
Oh! no—it was something more exquisite still.

'Twas that friends, the beloved of my bosom, were near,
Who made every dear scene of enchantment more dear,
And who felt how the best charms of Nature improve,
When we see them reflected from looks that we love.
THOMAS MOORE.

The Fickle Sailor.

Buffalo Enquirer: Mayor Weaver of the awakened city of Philadelphia was talking to a reporter about a very astute and wily politician.

"It is difficult," said the mayor, "to get this man to do anything he doesn't want to do. Cornered, he advances argument after argument against the course you desire him to pursue. He begins with weak arguments. You think you've got him. But just as victory appears assured he puts forth a final argument that is insuperable, a final argument that floors you thoroughly.

"The fellow is like a fickle sailor of the old romance. This sailor was strong, handsome and gay. The girls liked him, and he, I fear, liked the girls. The following conversation, one moonlight night young woman:

"'Then, Jack, when shall we be married?'

"'But I promised my wife, sweetheart, that I would never marry a second time.'

"The young girl, beautiful in the flattering moonlight, murmured:

"'Would you cast me off for the sake of a promise to a dead woman?'

"'But she isn't dead yet,' said the fickle sailor."

The End of Man.

Sacramento Bee: The man who lifts a burden from the shoulders of Labor; who lightens the heavy load on Sorrow's heart; who bids the weary and the drooping cheer and take heart; who puts sunshine along the daily walks of the poor; who makes the path of this life easier for the millions to tread—such a man is greater than he who can fathom the mystery of the stars and solve the problem of the heavens.

If we charitably, and lovingly, and generously fulfill our duties to our fellow-beings, the heavens will take care of themselves—and of us.

Ed. Chandler, who was very sick with diphtheria, is now nearly well.

SMILING LINES.

Harper's Weekly: "I say, Sambo," said a gentleman to an improvident negro who had just lost a job for the third or fourth time, "aren't you worried over the question of wherewithal to support you?"

"Lordy, Marse Henry," was the reply, "I am't worryin' about wherewithal; I's worryin' about de wherefore fur de herein."

Puck: Arabella—Why do you think Clara so clever?

Isabel—Oh, she can comb her hair to look as if she never rode in anything but an automobile.

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "and the masses are very much like individuals. In order to keep their friendship, you must find out what they prefer and then advise it."

Philadelphia Press: Tess—Yes, Miss Prim was going to write to her fiance today, but she was just lounging around in a dressing gown and she was too lazy to get dressed up.

Jess—Why should she get dressed up just to—

Tess—O, gracious! She wouldn't think of writing to him while she was in dishabille.

Chicago Tribune: Miss Esmeralda, may I ask if your parents object to my coming to see you?

"Why, Mr. Bashley, you come so seldom that I don't think they know anything about it yet."

He came oftener after that.

"It's very appropriate. What does B. A. spell?"

Washington Star: "Do you think that government ownership would solve all the problems of our civilization?"

"No," answered the serene citizen, "but it would create some new ones and so relieve the monotony."

Harper's Weekly: English Rector (to parishioner)—Good morning, Thompson; I hear you have a son and heir.

Parishioner—Yes, sir; our household now represents the United Kingdom.

Rector—How so?

Parishioner—Why, you see, I am English, my wife's Irish, the nurse is Scotch and the baby walls.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A woman always has a reason for not having a reason.

A girl never gets too big to kiss till she falls in love with another fellow.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Northfield News: While exchanges are calling upon parents to guard their daughters, they should not forget to advise an elevation of the son's morals.

Eveleth Mining News: La Follette and Lawson will get together on the same platform. Now we may expect to see the railroads completely smashed, and the oil trust unwatered.

St. Peter Herald: A number of our exchanges are pressing ex-Senator W. D. Washburn as a suitable man for the governorship. Mr. Washburn would be a first class man for the position, but als residing in an overwhelmingly Democratic stronghold is likely to prove too much of a handicap. The Republican party may not want to take chances.

St. Hilaire Spectator: A careful perusal of the literature sent out by the trusts and railroads telling us how much they have done and how little they are making out of it, leads us to believe that the only real snap in this country is running a country newspaper.

Two Harbors Iron Times: He may never hear it officially, but "Lieutenant Governor Dowling" jingles harmoniously to P. Ellard. Stranger things than that have happened in Minnesota politics, and until after the next convention his weather eye will be peeled. He has a most kindly feeling for the fellow who suggested it.

Park Rapids Clipper: Count the market price of "the poor farmer's" land, figure out the value of the stock, put in his bank account and you will find that the average farmer is worth a good deal more than the average townsman.

Deer River News: Local sentiment expresses dam damming dams damaging dammed good land and worse than that.

Northome Record: The paper that today is being copied more than any other country newspaper in Northern Minnesota, and which is bringing the name of its town, and the country tributary to it, into favorable mention all over the state, carries three home advertisements. The xv. chapter, ii. verse of Job is very suggestive in cases like this.

Ripple Compass: Statistics show that insanity is on the increase in this state. Our emigrants to Canada must be getting back.

Grand Rapids Independent: Abolish the grand jury system? What's the matter with the petit jury system for utter futility?

SMILE.

Smile and the world smiles with you,
"Knock," and you go alone;
For the cheerful grin
Will let you in,
Where the kicker is never known.
Growl, and the way looks dreary,
Laugh and the path is bright,
For a welcome smile
Brings sunshine, while
A frown shuts out the light.

Sing, and the world's harmonious,
Grumble, and things go wrong,
And all the time
You are out of rhyme
With the busy, bustling throng.
Kick, and there's trouble brewing,
Whistle, and life is gay.
And the world's in tune
Like a day in June,
And the clouds all melt away.

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Northfield News: The Fairmont News is of the opinion that if Col. Conde Hamlin had been given entire charge of the campaign last fall the result would have been different. Our Fairmont namesake might have added that if Senator Nelson had not wanted to "isolate" so many Republicans "the result might have been different."

Ripple Compass: The representation at the next Republican state convention should be based on the vote cast last fall for governor. In this state there are two classes of Republicans, those who vote for a Republican president and a Democrat governor and those who vote Republicans to both offices. As only state officers are elected next year, what is the use of tilling a convention with delegates who only care to elect a Republican president?

Sauk Center Herald: There is a good deal of discussion in the Republican ranks about "a man to beat Johnson." It will take Republican majority of 75,000 we cannot elect any good Republican our party better take a vacation for a few years and take lessons in practical politics in the kindergarten of the Democrats.

Glenwood Herald: The quill-driving devotees of Bob Dunn in the late gubernatorial campaign are still busy at pouring fire and brimstone upon the heads of those of their fraternal brethren who did not see fit to lend their support to and endorse the pre-convention tactics of the man from Princeton. They do not propose to give them a voice in the organization and conduct of the next Republican state convention, and in various other ways will mete out punishment to them in a measure commensurate to the crime of supporting and voting for a clean, able, conscientious and gentlemanly Democrat in preference to a Republican who cannot rightfully lay claim to any of these qualities. Keep it up boys! Gov. Johnson's record so far is plenty good to entitle him to a second term.

Border Budget: Frank Eddy deserves a seat at the peace council in Washington, as a diplomat he sits alone par excellence on the front seat. His latest is that Hennepin county, the hothouse of renegades and disruption, should be allowed to name the next Republican candidate for governor and he should come from Hennepin county too.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Some of the frivolous brethren opine that the editors of the Journal-Press and Fairmont News cannot "harmonize" on a candidate for governor. Nothing easier. We will agree to support the News man for governor if he is nominated by the Republican convention, and we violate no confidence when we say that Editor Mitchell would try and support himself. Now will the knockers put up their brass tack hammers?

Brainerd Tribune: Every Republican paper that supported the ticket loyally last year has declared that it will support the Republican candidate for governor next year, whoever he may be, as a matter of course. Those that bucked Dunn are either evasive or significantly silent.

Wise William.

Upon the ship "Calusha Shad,"
That sailed the watery brine,
Bill Stover was the wisest lad
That ever drew a line;
And I'd be stowed and likewise blowed
If I knew all that William knowed.

One time I asked, "What bards o' Greece
Was the greatest of their class?"
He answered, "Fido Pyrances,
And Erysipelas."
I must confess, I rather guess,
Ye couldn't corner William S.

And chemistry! Say, Bill could talk
As easy as a wink,
On alimony, sulphur, chalk,
And sulcide of zinc—
He'd tell you, too, what he could do
By mixin' radium with glue.

And so it was quite natterile
That William liked to shirk,
To set in contemplation while
Us others done the work.
Says Bill, "By heck, guess I don't wreck
Me mind by swabbin' down no deck!"

And while we worked and held our tongues,
Wise Bill continued thus
A-tellin' all the ribs and lungs
What growed inside of us;
And, if ye please, he'd name with ease
Jest eighty kind o' heart disease.

Until, one day, the mate he says
To knowing Bill, says he,
"You should be writin' books instead
Of loafin' round the sea.
I'll hire some slob to fill you job—
For any Chinaman can swab."
WALLACE IRWIN in Success.

Brush Up Brothers.

Sacramento Bee: Some of our exchanges, published in towns of from 2,000 to 5,00 population, would be a disgrace to newspaperdom if they were printed on the banks of the Glia, for circulation among the horned toads alone.

How the Railroads Tested the Bohn Refrigerator.

Before the Pullman Company and the great railroads adopted the Bohn Syphon System of refrigeration they gave it many tests. Cars of fruit were sent from California to New York. The fruit in the Bohn cars was better kept and brought the highest price. The cost of ice was less than in any other car.

In dining cars the Bohn Refrigerators kept food longest; were more easily cleaned, used least ice and maintained lowest temperature.

We sell these wonderful refrigerators exclusively and will take them back after ten days' trial and refund money if not satisfactory. The Bohn Refrigerators are economy by the year and they cost little more than so-called "cheap" refrigerators. Come in and see them.

Boat Club Crews Will Take Early Morning Spins.

Course Will Be Covered Every Morning and Evening.

If there is any possibility of developing a winning crew from the material now at hand, the rowing committee of the Duluth Boat club is determined that it shall not be lost through lack of proper training.

Immediately after the Fourth of July the men who are in training for the eight and the fours will move their belongings over to Park Point and sleep in quarters that will be fitted up either in the boat club or in some convenient building within a short walk of the boathouse. Then for the two weeks preceding the regatta with Winnipeg and St. Paul they will row early in the morning and in the evening, covering from four to six miles on each spin.

Arrangements will also be made to have a tug pace the crew in the morning, sending them over the course for all that is in them. The tug will chase the shell for a distance of a mile and a half or two miles, and keep the men rowing at their best to shake her off.

In the evening the crews will be coached from motor boats at least two or three times a week until the regatta. Some of the newly arrived motor launches can keep pace with the eight, and the coaches will follow the crews over the entire course, holding a stop-watch on them every evening, and coaching them through megaphones the entire distance. Up to the present time the coaches have not been able to get anything better than an ordinary gasoline launch to coach from. This was quickly left behind by the crew, and they were soon out of reach of the observation and direction of the coaches. With the motor boat the coaches can get the exact time of the crew over the course, and watch the men closely throughout the trip.

If the Duluth club wins any of the events in the approaching regatta, or even makes a good showing against the visiting crews, not a little of the credit will be due to the members of the rowing committee, which is composed of Ed M. Peyton, H. H. Peyton, Guy Calquhoun, F. N. Lynam and Julius Barnes. These five officers of the club have worked indefatigably to arouse enthusiasm among the younger members in the crew, and have devoted a large share of their time to coaching the candidates for the crew. During the early part of the season they had to make a personal canvass of the members to drum up some material, but now the members appear to have caught the spirit of the game and are entering into it enthusiastically. Whether they can win from such experienced oarsmen as compose the Winnipeg and St. Paul crews is doubtful, but they are determined to make a desperate try for it at least.

E. E. McDONALD

Elected County Attorney of Beltrami County.

Bemidji, Minn., June 28.—E. E. McDonald of Bemidji was yesterday afternoon elected county attorney by the board of county commissioners to succeed Former County Attorney H. J. Loud, whose resignation was accepted today. Mr. McDonald received three votes and the other two votes on the board went to Henry Funkley.

The bond of the county attorney was placed at $2,000, and Mr. McDonald immediately prepared the bond and has filed it with the county auditor.

IMMORTALITY OF THE BODY

Biologist Believes Science Will Find Way to Prevent Death.

Chicago, June 28.—Man will live forever on earth without fear of death, except by accident, if modern science is successful in experiments now taking shape in the great scientific laboratories, according to Dr. Albert P. Mathews, professor of physiological chemistry at the University of Chicago. The immortality of the body depends simply on the discovery of a diet which will keep intact the fundamental principle of the human cell, and it is probable that this will be found, Dr. Mathews believes.

Prof. Mathews, who has been conducting remarkable experiments in regard to the artificial formation of life and the restoration of life by artificial means, announced his views in an article on "What Is Death?" in the current number of The World Today. His view is that death is caused primarily by the cessation of respiration, which may be kept up indefinitely if the proper relation between food and the fundamental cell substance is found.

Dr. Mathews has discovered that the breathing process causes the same reaction as that produced by alcohol on the substance "benzophehone" in the sunlight. The alcohol in this experiment decomposes, and the substances formed are sugar, amido-acids, proteids and other components of the human cell.

The probability of a correct diet keeping up this "life reaction" is commented upon by Dr. Mathews as follows: "Now, this reaction under perfect conditions should continue indefinitely, and so render the human body immortal. Unfortunately, however, it does not so continue. It is the keen desire of all to find out why it does not continue and to change conditions so that it will continue as long as possible.

"The chief causes of its cessation may be divided into obviously extrinsic and apparently intrinsic causes. The obvious external causes are the ordinary causes of death—accidents, assaults and taking of poison, the action of parasites and disease germs—these causes of death are relatively easily removed. They will be removed for the most part in the near future. There will remain apparently intrinsic causes of death, improper feeding and incomplete excretion.

"As yet we are not familiar enough with the chemical processes going on in the different tissues. We do not know exactly what they need for food and in what amount. Our eating is entirely empirical. Until we know exactly what the different tissues need we must continue as at present to give one tissue too much, too little or not quite the right food. The result is that in this tissue the fundamental reaction ultimately ceases. This incidentally ruins the rest of the body. A true science of dietetics, is however, now being formed."

As to the possibility of discovering the chemical nature of the "life substance" in the cell, Dr. Mathews says:

"The endeavor is now being made in many laboratories to discover what the substance is which thus acts on water and carries on the respiration in the cell. When this is known I feel confident that we can speak much more fully on the subject of life and death."

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

It is no secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Texas. 25c at all drug stores.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

For the Crookston District Epworth League.

Frazee, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rev. Dr. Dodds, presiding elder of the Crookston district, has installed the following officers for the Crookston district Epworth league for the coming year: President, W. C. Rice, Fergus Falls; vice presidents, W. B. Auxer of Moorhead, Miss Ada Packard of Crookston, W. M. James of Breckenridge, and J. S. Ulland of Fergus Falls; secretary, George E. Tindall, Warren; corresponding secretary, J. T. Brabner Smith, Frazee; treasurer, Clair Baker, Thief River Falls; junior superintendent, Mrs. L. Dodds, Crookston. Immediately after the installation the new cabinet met at Thief River Falls and planned the program to be given next June at Fergus Falls.

There are now nineteen junior leagues with a membership of 806 and nearly every church in the Crookston district has an Epworth league. The convention at Thief River Falls went against the home talent show in a very strong resolution. Home talent theatrical plays in high schools, colleges and the towns were also condemned. Rev. A. H. McKee, W. C. Rice and others are going as delegates to the international convention at Denver.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Winnipeg.
Superior at Fargo.
Crookston at Grand Forks.

Winnipeg, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Maroons and the White Sox divided things up evenly here yesterday afternoon, Duluth winning the first game and Winnipeg the second.

The Champs pounded Green hard in the first game, while Mullen pitched shut-out ball. Weller's errors in the sixth were responsible for all of Winnipeg's runs.

In the second game Potts was touched up pretty freely, while Spoter held the Champs at his mercy and would have shut them out if it had not been for errors in the ninth inning.

PITCHERS' BATTLE.

Fargo Wins Close Game From Adopted Orphans.

Fargo, N. D., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—It was a pitchers' battle out at League park yesterday afternoon. Superior hit Berrigan once oftener than the locals found Gilchrist, but the Fargo twirler was the steadier and had the better support.

The day was raw and windy, disagreeable for both spectators and players and there was little brilliant work. All flies to the outfield were carried back toward the infield and the players kept close together like a hapsy family.

Both twirlers were on their mettle and there seemd to be considerable rivalry between them. Their splendid work prevented any spectacular batting and the interest of the game was largely centered around the two men. Berrigan had some features in his work, having two assists and a put out in the third and striking out the first three men who faced him in the sixth.

Berrigan's only base on balls resulted in a score and two of the three gifts by Gilchrist were equally unfortunate for the twirler.

Berrigan started badly by failing to locate the pan on Ripley, the first man up. White pushed one down the first base line and in Dolan's effort to head off Rip at second, both were safe. Harris fouled to Warnish. Ronesch knocked a little grounder to Mehl, who threw to Fitzgerald and caught White at second, but Fitz made a mighty heave to first in an effort to complete the double and even Dolan wasn't high enough to reach it. Ripley came in while the ball was out visiting with the right field bleacherites. Nehr fouled out and that ended the scoring for Superior.

An unassisted double by Mehl in the fifth and another double in the eighth headed off promising prospects for Superior to score.

Fargo did nothing till the fifth. With two down Jarvie walked. He purloined the middle corner and reached third on a wild pitch. Gilchrist attempted to catch him at third and threw wild permitting the little catcher to score.

In the sixth with one gone Traeger got a free ticket to the first turning point. White's error on Rose's grounder let both Traeger and Rose land safe, and Traeger scored on Warnish's single to right, Rose reaching third on Spicer's bad return.

A foul from Harris' bat in the fourth put Tripp out of the game with a badly split hand. He may not be able to play for two or three weeks.

CROOKS SHUT OUT.

Grand Forks Takes Revenge on Tail-Enders.

Grand Forks, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The second game of the Crookston-Grand Forks series was pulled off yesterday beneath leaden skies, and in a raw wind, which kept the temperature of the fans nearly to the freezing point. The Tigers got revenge to a tune of 7 to 0. Houch handed the visitors the same parcel that Zider handed the Tigers the day before. In accomplishing this feat Houch allowed the guests just two little hits, and they were so far apart that they didn't count for anything. Ludwig came in for one, and Olson walked off with the other in the ninth inning.

Varco's base running, and Kipp's beautiful catch in the right garden were among the few features of the game. Chandler had on his batting clothes, and his eagle eye right with him, taking three hits out of three times to bat. "Spike" Anderson not wishing to be outdone, followed with a single, and a two bagger out Spanton got his of three times to bat. of three times to bat. and the only hit made by the Tigers was taken by Varco. The first three innings passed with only three men going to bat on either side, but in the fourth, Anderson, the first man up, took a hit, and Varco dropped a nice little one in front of the base, presumably to be a sacrifice, but Sperry, the man behind the wind pad for the visitors, threw the ball far, and high above the first baseman's head. Varco went to second, and Anderson scored. Then Chandler sent a liner to Livingstone, who sent it back to the home plate to shut off Varco, but the speedy little fellow made an excellent sprint, and shot his feet at the plate which he touched before Sperry could locate any part of him. Leech flew out to Smith, and Hanrahan went on an error by Livingstone. Then Spanton wanted his share of the fun, and sent the little sphere over the center gardener's head, making two corners, and sending in Chandler, and Hanrahan. Cladwell went out on first, and Reid did likewise.

Reid was the first man to bat in the seventh, and he got a life on an error by Leighty. Houch played the game and sacrificed. Anderson reached for a two bagger, scoring Reid. Varco took a couple of sacks, and sent home "Spike" Then Chandler, who had on his batting clothes, sent home Varco with a nice single, but Leach was caught out by Olson. Hanrahan went home on an error by Schlatter, and stole second, but Chandler was caught trying to come home, and the side was retired. The Tigers sent three men to bat in the eighth, and didn't get in the ninth.

The Crookston supporters got busy in the ninth, and Houch's shut out was nearly spoiled by Varco's error. Smith went out from Houch to first. Then Olson changed the nature of things, and took the second hit for his side. Leighty sacrificed, and Livingstone went on an error by Varco, and Olsen went to third. But Kipp ended the comedy by hitting to Houch and was retired on the initial sack.

"YELLOW PUP" GAME

Is Awarded to Grand Forks By President.

Once again President Kent has taken a hand in arranging the standing of the Northern League teams, and the White Sox are pulled down a notch.

The second change is caused by the yellow pup deal with Grand Forks. Duluth had the Tigers whipped and driven into their cages, when a yellow cur ran out on the field and chased the ball, causing a Grand Forks man to fumble it. Manager Spike Anderson protested the game, and President Kent has thrown it out.

Grand Forks also loses a game to Crookston. One of the Crookston batters knocked a ball which struck against a tree outside the left field fence and bounded back into the field. The batter was allowed only two bases on the hit, and Grand Forks won the game. Crookston protested and has been sustained.

These two decisions will take one victory from Duluth's standing, one defeat from Crookston's, and one of each from Grand Forks.

No official notice of the decision has yet been received in Duluth, but the Grand Forks, Crookston and Fargo papers all announce it as coming officially from President Kent and the changes are consequently made in the above standing of the teams.

These decisions clear up all the protests on file at the president's office. Duluth has lost four games as a result of protests.

TUESDAY'S EVENTS ON THE TURF.

St. Louis, June 28.—With all betting, except between individual spectators, stopped at the Delmar track yesterday, there was a very small crowd to witness the running of a mediocre card. John Flynn, president of the Central Turf association, was generally looked to for the authority for the odds on the several events which were furnished to foreign pool rooms and accepted by individual bettors.

Memphis, Tenn., June 28—Long shots and well played second choices captured the majority of events in yesterday's racing at Montgomery park.

CLASS PRESENTS A LAUGHABLE PLAY

Something New In Class Night Exercises By 1905 Graduates.

Addresses By President Furni and William Harrison, Class Orator.

With a program that was very different from any given heretofore by a graduating class, the students of the class of 1905 presented their class day exercises last evening in the high school building with unprecedented success. Because the class was so large it was found necessary to find a substitute for the history, the prophecy, and the last will and testament, and a three-act comedy was supplied, entitled, "Men, Maids and Matchmakers."

The play afforded the participants an excellent opportunity to display histrionic ability, and each character was represented in a very creditable manner. As bachelor maids Miss Hazel Owens, Miss Kathryn Hoopes and Elizabeth Sharvy were fine and Agnes Johnson took the part of Miss Alice Marshall, alias Mrs. Selina Wintlrop, a maiden aunt, in a way that was pleasing to all. The young women wore some handsome gowns.

WILLIAM HARRISON,
Orator of Class of 1905.

EDWARD FURNI,
President High School Class of 1905.

As bachelor men Fred Buck, Albert Jaques and Edward Furni deserve much praise. Walter McCarthy took the part of Dr. Imhoff, an old bachelor who falls in love with Aunt Selina, and Allan Nelson made an excellent janitor. The play was under the management and direction of Prof. Custance.

The first scene presents a bachelor maids apartment, with some of the maids working around. Several bachelor men are introduced and complications begin to set in. The second scene shows three love affairs in progress, with everything going wrong. Aunt Selina makes an appearance, and her pet cat, Sammy, requires the attention of the physician, Dr. Imhoff. In the third scene the soothsayer is at work, the course of true love runs happily once more, and everybody is made happy, including Dr. Imhoff, Sammy and the bachelor men and maids.

The exercises opened with the singing of "Alma Mater" by the class assembled together on the platform, where they remained while Edward Furni delivered the class president's address. His speech was characterized by directness and simplicity, saying:

"With great pleasure we present to you the largest class that has ever assembled on this platform to participate in a class day celebration. The program this evening will differ from any other previously given on this occasion; partly because of the size of our class, and partly because we wish to introduce to our kind friends and the public the versatile abilities of the different members of the class.

"Our principal, I believe, has said of the class of 1905: 'They are going out into the world a representative lot of young Americans, wide awake, progressive, and distinguished by a loyalty which is the primary reason for the existence of so large a class. They have demonstrated class spirit to a high degree.'

"This spirit of loyalty to our school and to our friends who have endeavored to guide our course is the kind of spirit that unifies the thought and action, and causes us to strive to attain the hope of those, who by their sacrifice, have made our own training possible.

"When we step from the walls of our beloved school we will do our duty, and you all will be justly proud of the members of the American of 1905. Through the four fleeting years that we have spent here, we have sometimes had a tendency to take the wrong path, but all along we have had our friend and teacher to check us, and to point out to us the beacon of true light, with a spirit of kindness that has made us all better. The man of whom I speak is our beloved friend, father and teacher, Principal C. A. Smith, and we shall miss him.

"To our friends the juniors, we hand you willingly the dignified title, 'seniors,' for we know you will do it justice, although you do not look it. To our allies, the sophomores, we say, keep striving to attain the place reached by '05, and you will surely mount to the pinnacle of fame. To the sprouting bud of 1908 we give the advice of the immortal bard that 'In everybody's life there comes a tide, which, if taken at the flood, will lead you on to fame and fortune.'

"From our freshman year the class of 1905 has shown a disposition to 'hang together' in all afters pertaining to the welfare of the school and the class, and during the past year the class of 1905 has contributed to the athletic teams more of its members than the other three classes combined. And when we remember that the scholarship must be high before the players are eligible, the standing of the class of 1905 is unequaled and unexcelled."

The only other feature of the program that remained unchanged was the class oration, which was given by William Percival Harrison in a forceful manner. He said in part:

"Five centuries ago the supreme owner and ruler of this country was the American Indian, bold, brave, defiant and strong; he stood as one of the most potent factors for many years with whom the white men had to contend in his onward march of discovery and colonization, which movement reached this country in the latter part of the fifteenth century.

"Had the Indian race been an individual unit instead of a series of disconnected tribes, a body living together harmoniously instead of a race engaged in internal warfare and committing atrocities upon one another, which have no equals in the annals of history, the white man's problem relating to the colonization of America would indeed have been a more difficult one.

"Physically the Indian might well be chosen as a model of manhood. Either studying him while walking through the dense forest, with his proud head thrown back, his aquiline nose, his high cheek bones, his lithe well-formed limbs, all accompanied by a peculiar gracefulness; or else studying him mounted on his sturdy pony galloping across the plains, his dark eyes glittering and the feathers in his hair waving defiantly in the breeze, he presents that same picture of physical strength.

"Mother nature was the Indian's best friend. From her he received food, clothing and shelter, and so consequently the first education given to a young Indian was a thorough knowledge of her ways. He was taught how to track the game through her boundless forests, to catch the fish in the blue lakes, grow corn in her fertile soil, to use her hard flint for arrow heads, in short every product tendered him by nature was transformed unto a commodity yielding the Indian both comfort and convenience.

"When the European landed for the first time on America's shore the Indian with childlike simplicity went forward with out-stretched hand to welcome him, little knowing that this European, instead of being a 'sun god,' as he expected, was in reality a white plague, which in time would deprive him of life and property in the never-satisfying search for gold. At first the Indians lavished on the Spaniards every comfort, over-joyed by the fact that their gods had come in person to visit them. But this was soon changed. The Spaniards impatent to find gold, resorted to force, and the Indian's quick nature was changed from friendship towards the Spaniard to a deep, burning and lasting hatred.

"In direct contrast to the Spaniard we find the Frenchman making of the Indian a staunch ally and supporter in order to gain a firm hold on the new world. It was unfortunate for the French that Champlain incurred the enmity of the Iroquois, who allied their entire fighting force with the English, which played a most important part in crowding the French power from the American map forever.

"The white man was to a large degree dependent upon the Indian for his early existence in this country. It was the red man who taught him to grow the Indian corn, how to build the birch bark canoe, and how to construct his rude and primitive dwelling.

"It is in song and story that the most interesting and pleasing side of the Indian's character is pictured to us. The American poet and novelist is here offered a boundless field for his talent. James Fenimore Cooper describes him in warfare scenes, while the gentler side of his life is ably portrayed to us by Longfellow in his Hiawatha. But the pleasing side of the Indian's nature ends with these songs and stories.

"Contrast the Indian of yesterday with the Indian of today. Picture him arrayed in his buck skins, either noiselessly gliding through the forest or else sitting stately in his canoe, and then see him today, with his picturesque raiment displaced by the ill-fitting garment of the civilian of our own time. The former receives our admiration, but the latter can receive nothing but pity.

"The question that now confronts us, that of his future, cannot be answered by the old Biblical phrase, "Am I my brother's keeper? The answer rests solely with the Indian. He will either have to conform to our rules of living and become an American citizen, or else continue to be a mere ward upon the nation, and in time become an extinct race, which in future generations will be referred to as one of the 'lost tribes of the house of Israel,' or in other words, as one of the lost tribes of the American continent."

During the second intermission Miss Margaret Mitchell rendered the piano solo, "Polka de la Reine" in a way that called forth an encore.

Taken altogether, the program last evening was a great success, and the innovation was very favorably received, and was undoubtedly much more interesting and less tiring than the time-worn custom of predicting the future of every student, recounting past events, and leaving a few legacies to the school, the classes and the faculty. The two addresses given showed a high order of oratorical ability, while the play and the players cannot be spoken of too highly.

Gray-Tallant Co

Tailor Made Suits at a Third of Their Actual Value. Shepherd Checks, Cheviots, Panamas.

These prices are so unprecedently low that we have been compelled to work long into the night to keep our workrooms from being snowed under. Consequently it is only fair to publish this warning—that suits to be altered in time for the Fourth should be selected tomorrow. All alterations charged for.

We have gathered nearly a rack-full of short and medium-length silk coats, mostly black, with a few champagnes—to sell tomorrow at exactly one half of the regular prices—$7.50 to $25.00. It's the chance of the season if you want a pretty silk coat, because the wearing time for silk wraps this season has hardly commenced.

White and Colored Linen Suits and Summer Skirts.

There is nothing prettier for your outing on the Fourth. White or colored linen suits at $3.98 up to $20.00—some with beautiful embroidered effects in graceful designs. White linen, pique, crash, poplin and Sicilian skirts at $2.50 up to $10.00 —styles that you will like.

Wash Goods Remnants at Half.

When the sales of wash goods have been brisk we don't begrudge the loss that comes after we've reached the end pieces. So we are ready to sell these short lengths of ginghams, dimities, lawns, prints, percales, etc., at a song, tomorrow.

25c Spun Glass Lining 15c.

This unusual bargain should engage the attention of every dressmaker in Duluth. Spun glass lining of this quality brings 25c a yard in every store—tomorrow the price goes down to 15c for one day only.

Lyons Dye Pongee Silks— 95c for $1.25 Values.

A thoroughly-shrunken cloth and one that will not slip or pull at the seams. A very fashionable silk for swell coats, suits and waists. A silk that can be laundered and is every bit as practical as it is beautiful. 26 inches wide, in browns, blues, pink, natural color and cream. For Thursday only, 95c—instead of $1.25.

Burson 25c Hose for 21c.

Full fashioned and seamless. Because we are able always to sell goods on a smaller margin; because we protect our customers at every point; because if there is anything worth while you'll find it for less at Gray-Tallant Co.'s—therefore, the same Burson hose that's sold elsewhere at 25c a pair costs here 21c.

98c Waists for 50c Tomorrow. $1.50 Waists for 98c.

98c percale Waists in colors, stripes, dots and checks. The making is good—they were not gotten up in skimped fashion for a sale—tomorrow, 50c.

$1.50 lawn Waists in colors, and pique and percale waists in pretty figures and stripes, in a fine variety of patterns. Buy them for the Fourth at 98c, instead of $1.50.

Lingering Laces up to 12½c at 5c.

These Valenciennes laces and insertions have outstayed their time simply because the insertions and laces which matched them were sold first. Select tomorrow from values up to 12½c for 5c a yard.

All Sorts of Bunting and Tri-colored Streamers for the Fourth.

MAKE OR BREAK

Will Thomas F. Ryan In His Equitable Life Deal.

May Yet Be a Waterloo For Wall Street Plunger.

Chicago, June 28.—Walter Wellman, in a New York special to the Record-Herald, says:

"Thomas F. Ryan is the greatest plunger in town. He stands to make or break on this Equitable deal. It is a toss-up as to which it is to be."

This was the statement made to me by one of the most powerful leaders of the financial world—a man who knows Mr. Ryan and his career and character thoroughly, and to whom the inner secrets of the financial district are an open book.

Probably Wall street never saw a more ambitious or daring venture than the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Equitable Life Assurance society by Mr. Ryan. Wall street is accustomed to high play, to bold coups, to dashes out of the box for big stakes. It is never astounded when a daring operator makes a plunge in stocks or "promotes" a big corporation or combination.

But this was something new. This stroke of Ryan's was a sort of thing Wall street had little dreamed of. To buy outright control of one of the greatest life insurance concerns in the world, to acquire by the passage of one small check the mastery of a very Gibraltar of finance, to put two and a half millions in the slot and draw out the power to manipulate a surplus of eighty millions—this was Napoleonic indeed. This was well calculated to make even the most hardened veteran of the financial world "sit up."

Napoleonic, yes. But it is still too early to tell whether Ryan's venture in Equitable is to be for him an Austerlitz, a Moscow or a Waterloo.

New York, June 28.—To prosecute civilly or criminally any director or officer of the Equitable Life, whom his investigation may prove to be a grafter, Paul Morton, the new head of the company, has retained Austin Fox and Wallace MacFarlane, both of whom have reputations as civic reformers.

Mr. Fox and Mr. MacFarlane belong to the City club, the Citizens' union and other reform organizations. They were both Cleveland Democrats in former campaigns. Mr. Fox was a member of the committee of nine appointed last winter to reform the police force and clean up the city.

That Thomas F. Ryan means to go to the limit in the investigation in the Equitable is now accepted as a fact in the financial district, where his purpose in this regard was at first the subject of suspicion.

It is believed, however, that his investigation is quite as much a punitive campaign as it is reformatory, and that before he gets through several big men who have antagonized him in the past will be severely punished.

Both Mr. Fox and Mr. MacFarlane are regarded as men of unblemished integrity, and it is not expected that private friendships or other reasons will prevent them from vigorously prosecuting any man, no matter how rich or how powerful he may be, who has abused the trust imposed in him in the Equitable.

GAIN PARTIAL VICTORY.

New York, June 28.—Partial victory has been gained by the striking iron workers at Erie Basin, Brooklyn, where one concern has granted all the demands and ordered its men to return today. Several hundred men have been brought from other cities and some of the firms involved in the strike declare they will fight it to a finish.

STUDYING THE FLOOD PROBLEM

Congressman Bede and Gen. Mackenzie Have a Conference.

Washington, June 28.—The floods in the Upper Mississippi river and the part the dams on the headwaters of the river had in increasing those floods, were the subject of a conference between Congressman Bede and Gen. Mackenzie, chief of engineers, yesterday. The latter was well informed on the situation and told Mr. Bede he did not believe anything could be done under present conditions. A suggestion for the construction of a canal to connect Pokegama and Leech lake dams was talked over and indorsed by Gen. Mackenzie, and it is probable that recommendations for its construction will be made to congress at its next session. Gen. Mackenzie also adopted a suggestion made by Bede that he make personal inspection along the Upper Mississippi this season or appoint a board of engineers to investigate and report on conditions and suggest means for the prevention of floods in rainy seasons. This report will be laid before the rivers and harbors committee next winter or will be used by Bede as a basis for congressional action. The investigation probably will not be made until July or August.

DROWNED AT RIPPLE.

Frank Dumas Meets Death In Big Fork.

Blackduck, Minn., June 28.—Frank Dumas, a woodsman, was drowned at Ripple Friday while breaking a jam in the falls of the Big Fork river. Dumas was standing near the falls while working on the jam, when he lost his balance and fell into the falls. He was carried down stream by the swift current and in spite of a vigorous effort to swim ashore he was soon overcome.

A companion who witnessed the accident attempted to rescue the drowning man, but failed, and up to the present time the body has not been recovered.

Dumas was about 30 years of age and leaves a wife and one daughter. He was a member of the Blackduck lodge of Modern Woodmen and was formerly a resident of this village. The lodge has been notified of the drowning and will dispose of the remains when found.

WILL ARGUE GARDNER CASE

Argument is to be made before the Minnesota supreme court in a few days in the appeal of the murder case of the state against Joseph H. Gardner, the Itasca county homesteader, who shot and killed William Garrison and who was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The motion for a new trial of the action in Itasca county was denied and William M. Steele of Superior, Gardner's attorney, took an appeal.

Gardner's friends and his wife are leaving no stone unturned in his behalf. Mrs. Gardner is said to have spent every cent that the family had in the world in the effort to get her husband's release and his friends have already put considerable money in the fund raised for his defense.

They claim that it is because of Gardner's unwavering honesty that he was convicted, that while as he alleged, Garrison was killed in self defense, the details of the affair were given so bluntly by Gardner as to give the impression it was a cold-blooded affair.

NO TESTIMONY BY MITCHELL

Aged Senator Did Not Take Stand In Own Behalf.

Portland, Or., June 28.—United States Senator John H. Mitchell did not bear testimony for himself in his struggle for honor and perhaps for liberty in the land fraud cases.

The long trial has practically come to a close. The court room was crowded yesterday when the session opened, many being drawn by the story that the aged senator would take the stand and by his own words attempt to disprove the testimony of his former partner, Judge A. H. Tanner and of his former private secretary, Harry C. Robertson. But all these were disappointed and surprised when the case for the defense was closed within an hour after the court had been called to order.

Only one witness was examined by the defense, he being J. A. Martin of Portland, who testified that he had asked the senator to secure the establishment of the harbor lines several years ago in order that a wharf might be constructed. The senator did as requested and refused all compensation for his services. All of the evidence introduced by Senator Mitchell's attorney has been in this line, and though held to be immaterial by the court, was allowed by the prosecution until yesterday morning when Mr. Heney began to grow restive, as did the court until the defense gave over further efforts and rested the case.

Senator Thurston addressed the court in argument as to the instructions to be given to the jury when the case was sent to them. He contended that the indictment alleged that money had been paid to the senator by Fred. A. Kribs and argued that the proof showed that checks had been given Tanner, who, in turn, sent checks to Mitchell, thus preventing any knowledge on the part of the defendant as to the source of his dividends paid him by the firm.

The defense claimed a close similarity to the case of Senator Burton of Kansas, and maintained that, while the indictment charged the direct receipt of money from Kribs by Mitchell, the most that could be shown was the indirect receipt of money from the bank, and that while the indictment alleged the receipt of checks, this did not occur, as the checks were purchased by the bank and the money later indirectly received by Mitchell was not Krib's money, but that of the bank.

District Attorney Heney maintained that the indirect receipt of money was all that was contemplated by the statute. Attorney A. S. Bennett wanted Judge De Haven to instruct the jury that in case it was shown Mitchell received money without knowing it was unlawfully acquired, a later knowledge of this by defendant could not lay him open to the charge of crime.

Mr. Heney presented the case of the prosecution to the jury in an argument extending over two hours. He said it was the duty of the jury to decide the case on its merits, and upon the evidence, irrespective of the age or position in life of the defendant, disregarding the tears of grown men and the sophistry of speeches made and to be made by the attorneys for the defense.

Judge Bennett and Mr. Thurston presented arguments for the defense today, and it is expected that the case will go to the jury this afternoon.

MATCH BOLT FACTORY.

Its Erection at Cloquet to Begin Soon.

Cloquet, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—E. J. Ellenwood of the Diamond Match company and D. M. Philbin, superintendent of the Great Northern railroad, were in the city recently looking over the site of the match bolt factory. The delay in erecting this factory has been due to getting the matter of sidetrack facilities arranged to the satisfaction of both parties. This matter will be settled in a few days and the building of the factory commenced. This industry will add to Cloquet's business interests, as it will employ a crew of about seventy-five men the year around.

Tim Chamberlain was a Duluth caller Tuesday.

B. J. Summerfield returned Monday from a business trip to the Twin Cities.

Will Allen, an employe of the Tie and Post company, met with an accident Monday. He was working on the boom at Brafield and was struck by a boomstick, causing internal injuries.

Mrs. Charles Bourk of Forest Lake, Minn., spent a few days in the city, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Erwin.

Mrs. Ada B. Fish of Minneapolis is in the city, the guest of her son, Dr. H. B. Allen, and family.

Miss Louise La Piere of Wrenshall spent Sunday in Cloquet, and on Monday morning left for an extended visit with relatives in Michigan.

Mrs. L. A. Fish and children are visiting relatives at Zumbro Falls, Minn.

The marriage of Miss Louraine Patry and Peter Parenteau took place Monday morning, June 19, at Sacred Heart church, Rev. Father Giraux officiating. The attending couple were Miss Tena Patry and Raymond Patry. Mr. and Mrs. Parenteau will make their home in Cloquet.

The Misses Luella Goodell and Helen Eldre of Barnum are in the city, the guests of Mrs. J. A. Parks.

Mrs. Peter Moody and children left Saturday for a visit with friends at Minneapolis.

DYING OF FAMINE

Is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at all drug stores. Price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

Fell Down Embankment.

J. J. McDonald, hotelkeeper at Swan River, met with a peculiar accident on the Superior side of the Northern Pacific drawbridge yesterday. In dropping off at that point from a Great Northern passenger train he was perciptated down a thirty-foot embankment, stopping only a few feet from the water's edge. As a result of his fall he is laid up in a hospital at Superior with a sprained ankle and numerous bruises on his body.

IN GRAVE DANGER!

RESCUED JUST IN TIME.

When a man has neglected his health till he is in such a rundown condition that he has just about strength enough left to drag himself about to his daily work he is really clinging to a wreck. Then comes along some "friend" who recommends him to "brace up" with stimulants or some remedy composed largely of alcohol. If he follows this advice he may fancy that he feels better for a few hours or days, but soon the effect of it passes and he is left in a far worse condition than before. This is a common experience in every community.

WHAT A MAN in that condition needs is something to build up (not shatter) his strength; to increase the oxygen carrying capacity (not to shrink up) the red blood corpuscles, to nourish and replenish wasted tissue rather than cause further wasting.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is designed for this very purpose. This prescription is the result of careful study and experience of one of the most learned and painstaking practitioners this country has ever produced and who has devoted his life's energies chiefly to the treatment of chronic diseases, and whose success has been phenomenal.

Dr. Pierce, with his staff of fourteen medical assistants, all graduates of regular medical schools, will cheerfully give advice either in person or by mail and none need hesitate to apply for it as it is free, and all letters are treated in the strictest confidence.

PROVES MEDICINES PURE.

For the purpose of showing the purity and honesty of his medicines, the "Favorite Prescription" and the "Golden Medical Discovery," Dr. R. V. Pierce has thrown open to public inspection his laboratories and works in Buffalo.

There is no mystery in the make-up of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It contains the non-alcoholic extracts of the following native plants in just the right proportion to make an efficient tonic and blood purifier:

Queen's Root, Bloodroot,
Stone Root, Mandrake,
Cherry Bark, Golden Seal Root.

DO YOU FEEL CHILLY, THEN FEVERISH AND ACHE ALL OVER?

Feel Worn Out, Blue and Tired? Have You a Fresh Cold, With Frequent Hacking Cough? Sensation of Soreness in the Chest or Back?

Don't let your cold run into chronic bronchitis or pneumonia. The very best tonic alterative and body-builder at this time is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Made without alcohol or dangerous drugs, and it contains that rare combination of roots and herbs that will allay a cough (irons it out, as it were), restores the circulation, assists the appetite and digestion, and consequently restores tone to the entire system. That is the reason people look happy once more after taking it—they feel like living, because their liver is active, the blood in their arteries is full of that life-giving quality—rich red blood. The blood in turn feeds the nerves.

Nervousness and neuralgia are only the indication that the nerves are not fed on invigorating blood. This "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce is Nature's own restorer. It tones up the organism and stimulates its functions, furnishing to the body one of its necessary constituent principles of which it is in need.

This preparation is of pleasant taste, agrees perfectly with rebellious and sensitive stomachs, and is extremely effective in restoring tone and vigor to the entire system. It cures gastric troubles of the stomach and at the same time the blood vessels are given a stimulation which throws off a cold. One very good reason why it restores the health of run down, pale and emaciated people is because it first throws out the poisons from the liver and kidneys. It then begins its reconstructive work in building up flesh and making good, rich, red blood.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets once used they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and their attendant discomfort and manifold derangements.

RUINED BY FREE TRADE.

British Gold Beaters Driven Out of Business.

London, June 28.—London's oldest master gold beater William Dickson of Masnette street, Soho, has closed his doors. He claims that the free trade policy of the British empire is responsible for the fact that he was forced out of business.

Said Mr. Dickson in an interview: "Free trade has ruined us by enabling the Germans to undersell us, and the only thing that can restore the trade is to give it protection.

"Years ago we gold beaters petitioned Mr. Gladstone to give us protection against the foreigners. He told us to go and compete with foreigners.

"That is what we have been trying to do; but how can we compete with them when their price is 30 per cent less than ours?"

Forty years ago gold beating was one of the great industries of Soho, but now there are perhaps not more than a half a dozen master gold beaters left in all London.

Mr. Dickson's father was a gold beater before him, and over the door of his curious old shop hangs the golden arm and hammer, symbol of the hereditary trade, gilded by his own hands.

For years he was one of the local celebrities. Dickens knew the old shop, and tells in "A Tale of Two Cities" how folks used to stand outside the shop with their noses pressed to the window, watching the gold beaters pounding the gold with their heavy stumpy hammers. It was, in fact, the only shop in London which did gold beating in full view of the public.

Mr. Dickson made 23-carat gold leaf for gilding picture frames, pillars and railings. He supplied the gold leaf for the decoration of theaters years ago. Now the theaters and the music halls use more gold leaf, but it is of an inferior quality, and "made in Germany."

In gold beating, a piece of metal about the size of a finger and worth $50, is taken to the mill and rolled out until it is several yards long and as thin as paper. This is placed between pieces of oxgut and is then beaten out with a hammer until the leaf is spread out and further reduced in thickness to what is said to be the one-two hundred thousandth part of an inch.

The foreigner, by debasing the quality of the alloy, is able to sell the leaf at a cheaper rate, and as a result real English beaten gold leaf has become a rarity.

Why suffer with your stomach, kidneys and liver when Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well. If taken this month, keeps you well all summer. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

ODD EXPERIENCE

Of Couple In the Lake at Kineo, Me.

Kineo, Me., June 27.—Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Jencks of Woonsocket, R. I., are the first visitors to run down by canoe a bull moose within sight and sound of the hotel, but they accomplished the somewhat unusual feat last week and a number witnessed the chase.

The moose was first sighted by Mrs. Jencks. While on the way by canoe to the northerly point of Kineo Cove she noticed an object in the water, near the shore, which she at first took to be a log. Closer examination showed that it was moving rapidly out into the lake. She called the attention of the guide to the object.

"It's a moose; reel in your lines," he whispered. For a while the guide held the canoe in the shadows near the shore, allowing the mose to put sufficient water between him and the shore, so that retreat would be impossible, and then the race began. With a good start a moose can lead the best of canoeists, but in this case the guide had matters his own way, for head whichever way he might the moose would be losing ground.

In the course of due time the canoe was alongside, and the occupants were stroking the shaggy back of the tired and frightened animal with their fly rods as he surged on, snorting and grunting furiously. After a time the moose was driven ashore half a mile down the lake, and later seen on the shore of the lake.

INQUIRES FOR ROJESTVENSKY

Admiral Ito Sends Aide to Learn of His Health.

Tokio, June 27, noon.—Admiral Viscount Ito, chief of the naval general staff, has sent his aide to the naval hospital at Sasebo to visit Vice Admiral Rojestvensky.

Admiral Ito, through his personal representative inquired into the condition of the Russian commander, expressed his regret over the suffering he had undergone and his admiration at the desperateness of the Russian defense.

THE CZAR WARNED

Alexeieff Kept Him Posted on the Korean Situation.

Emperor Was Anxious For Japs to Open Hostilities.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—In view of the present negotiations looking to the conclusion of the war between Russia and Japan, a short history of events leading up to the war, prepared from the highest sources, is interesting and opportune.

Admiral Alexeieff telegraphed to the czar December 24, 1903, from Port Arthur, informing his majesty that the Japanese were preparing to establish a protectorate over the Korean government, heedless of any diplomatic representations by Russia. Probably only 15,000 or 20,000 troops would be landed, but the whole Japanese fleet and the rest of the army were ready for war, which the admiral observed, constituted a grave danger for Russia.

Admiral Alexeieff warned the czar that the Japanese would forestall the Russians on the Yalu and the roads leading to the Eastern Chinese railway, which would ruin all of Russia's plans and force her to centralize any eventual operations further to the north and leave Port Arthur to its fate. Such good fortune for Japan at the commencement of the campaign would cause a rising of all the elements hostile to Russia in Northern China, who, relying on the proximity of the Japanese army, would be a serious menace to the Russian railway. The Japanese occupation of Korea, however small the number of the troops employed might be, would place Russia in a very bad strategic position, and would compel her, not with any desire of provoking war, but in self-defense, to take the necessary precautionary measure.

In view of these various considerations Admiral Alexeieff suggested the mobilization of the Far Eastern districts, and, if possible, of the Siberian governments, the declaration of a state or seige in Manchuria for the purpose of effecting the concentration of the troops, the occupation of the mouths of the Yalu by advanced posts, the immediate dispatch of the Tenth and Seventeenth army corps to Irkutsk on a war footing, and preparations to mobilize further reinforcements. He also urged that a state of seige should be declared at Port Arthur and Vladivostok in order to facilitate the completion of the unfinished defenses. All of these measures Admiral Alexeieff described as absolutely imperative.

He also telegraphed to St. Petersburg announcing that twenty-two Japanese transports with troops and guns were ready to sail. Japan, he said, could easily send three or four divisions at a moments notice.

As the result of these representations, on December 26, the czar commanded Admiral Alexeieff to mobilize the Far Eastern districts, to declare a state of seige in Manchuria, at Port Arthur and at Vladivostok, and generally prepare for war. The occupation of the mouths of the Yalu, however, was, in the opinion of the czar, undesirable, and should be carried out only in the last resort.

On December 30, 1903, Admiral Abasa, president of the committee for Eastern afafirs, telegraphed to Admiral Alexeieff, giving him an epitome of the czar's views as expressed by him in numerous audiences. Admiral Abasa said the czar considered that every year of peace gained was of enormous importance to Russia. Although he must not yield, Admiral Alexeieff should do his utmost to avoid war. His policy should be firm but courteous in form, and should ignore unimportant details. There must be no discussion about Manchuria, either with Japan or with any other power. That was an affair between Russia and China.

Russia was willing to take into consideration the commercial interests of Japan and other nations, provided they were under the Russian aegis and there were no settlements. Russia would not regard a Japanese occupation of Korea as a "casus belli." On the contrary, such an occupation would be very advantageous to Russia, because it would convict Japan of all violations of international law.

On January 3, 1904, Admiral Alexeieff reported to the czar, expressing the opinion that the negotiations then in progress could not result in any understanding, owing to the insistently provocative tone of Japan, but tended more and more to increase the tension in the relations between Russia and Japan, and would probably lead to a rupture. He therefore asked his majesty's opinion on the situation, dwelling pointedly on the advisability of studying the Korean question in all its bearings.

In view of the surprise of the Port Arthur garrison and ships by the Japanese on the night of January 26 (February 8), 1904, the two following telegrams from the czar to Admiral Alexeieff are of special interest. The first, dated January 25 (February 7), reads:

"Seeing that diplomatic relations with Japan have been broken off, you can prevent, if you consider it necessary, any Japanese descent on Korea."

The next day his majesty telegraphed: "It is desirable that the Japanese, not we, should begin hostilities. If they begin war against you, you should not prevent a descent on Southern Korea, or near Gensan, but if their fleet, with or without an invasion, passes the thirty-eighth parallel you have the right to attack it without waiting for the first shot. I place my trust in you. May God help you."

RHEUMATISM

COMMON IN SUMMER

The time to get rid of Rheumatism is in Summer while the blood is endeavoring to purge itself of all poisons and impurities, and the skin is active, with all the pores and glands open and able, in this way, to assist in the elimination.

Columbus, O., 1355 Mt. Vernon, Ave.

Six years ago I had a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism, and the doctors I had did me no good. They changed medicine every week and nothing they prescribed seemed to help me. Finally I left off their medicine and began the use of S. S. S. My knee and elbow joints were swollen terribly, and at one time my hands were so swollen and painful that I could not close them when opened. I was getting discouraged, you may be sure, when I began S. S. S., but as I saw it was helping me I continued it, and today I am a sound, well man and have never had a return of the disease.

R. H. CHAPMAN.

The inactivity of the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels causes the refuse matter to remain in the system, which, coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid to be absorbed by the blood and distributed to the different joints and muscles, producing the pains, inflammation and other distressing symptoms of Rheumatism. The wandering pains of the disease remind the sufferer that the poison is still in the blood and he should lose no time in getting it out. S. S. S. neutralizes the acid and makes the blood rich and pure. It tones up every organ and cures the disease permanently. S. S. S. contains no harmful minerals to disagreeably affect the system, but while curing the disease builds up every part of the body by its fine tonic effect. ## DRAFTS WERE FICTITIOUS

But Lumber Company Got Money From the Faribault Bank.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—There were no dramatic incidents in the trial of T. B. Clement, the Faribault banker, today. The entire session was a somewhat dreary recital of entries of drafts made by the Minnesota Lumber company of Georgia, on certain alleged customers, which drafts the government says, were fictitious, in that the drawees owed the company nothing at the times the drafts were made on them.

Though the drafts were never presented, and in fact never left the Faribault bank, the lumber company was nevertheless credited with the amounts they called for on their face, and received the money. This money, the government says, came from the funds of the bank and was improperly diverted to the capacious maw of the ill-fated lumber venture.

INSURGENTS DEFEATED

Germans Attack Chief Morenga In Southwest Africa.

Berlin, June 27.—Official dispatches received today from German South Africa report heavy fighting resulting in the defeat of the insurgent chief, Morenga.

Maj. Von Mamptz, sweeping westward from the frontier of Cape Colony, encountered Morenga, June 17, with his entire band in an extremely difficult country along the River Karib. The Erckerti division hearing heavy cannonading, hurried by forced marches to the scene and the Germans took the native position after fourteen hours' fighting, losing fifteen men killed and twenty-five wounded and three missing. Maj. Von Kamptz was among the wounded. Capt. Siebert assumed command of the German troops and pursued Morenga to his stronghold at Narus, on the Karib river, which the Germans captured June 19. The Hottentots fled southward.

An official denial is published of the reports from Capetown of the capture of Warmsbad, German Southwest Africa.

RICH NEBRASKA

Farmers Are Rushing Into the Banking Business.

Lincoln, Neb., June 27.—A computation made by the state banking board the other day discloses the fact that the majority of stockholders in the 521 state banks of Nebraska, meaning the banks in the smaller towns, are farmers. Practically all the banks started in the past three years have had their capital furnished by farmers.

The high prices that wheat and corn have brought and the bountiful character of the hay crops have made big money for most of the farmers. More of them than ever have retired from active life and turned over the farms to the boys in the past year.

At the agricultural bureau it is estimated that $25 an acre is a fair average of production for most of the farms, and this does not take into account the money for poultry, eggs and butter fat, which is usually sufficient to maintain a family. Some of the money has gone into blooded stock, some has found its way East through being deposited in banks that have been lending their surplus to New York, Chicago and Boston, and there is a whole lot that has evidently been hidden away.

Bank Commissioner Royce of Kansas is quoted as saying that while there is no way of getting accurate figures, he has reason to believe that there is as much money hidden in socks and under carpets or buried or carried, as is on deposit, and the Nebraska commissioner agrees with this opinion. He has noticed that where farmers have started banks, the cash on hand or on deposit in other banks does not often show signs of increase, and the only explanation is that the money deposited has been dug out of hiding places.

The last quarterly report showed $107,000,000 on deposit in all of the banks of the state, including national. If as much more is in pocketbooks or buried, this would give a per capita of nearly $210 in Nebraska.

Several instances are related of how young men of ambition in Lincoln and Omaha, with training in the banking business, have gone out into some country town and got active and retired farmers to furnish the principal portion of their capital. They were unknown in most cases to the men to whom they applied, but their recommendations and the profitable character of the business won for them all of the money they needed.

One successful young man said that he found the farmers fairly itching to get into the banking business. One of these banks, started out in Southwestern Nebraska, numbers fourteen former Populists in its list of stockholders. They are all Republicans now, and they find nothing so reprehensible about the banking business.

Country banking has become very profitable. Six per cent dividends are the smallest reported. In one case, where the owner was manager, and combined real estate and stock buying with banking, a clear gain of 35 per cent was noted in two years. Fifteen and 20 per cent dividends are common.

UNIVERSALISTS HOLD MEET AT LA CROSSE

La Crosse, Wis., June 27.—Four state conventions of the Universalist church, the Young People's Christian Union, the Sunday School association, the Women's Missionary society and the church convention proper, are in session in La Crosse today. The Young People's Christian Union of Wisconsin elected the following officers: President, Wall G. Copman, Columbus, Wis.; vice president, Miss Hulda Schrode, Stoughton; secretary, Hugh B. Durkee, Wausau; treasurer, Miss Maud Knapp, Oshkosh.

MAN MAY HAVE POISONED WIFE.

Elgin, Ill., June 27.—Arsenic is said to have been discovered in the stomach of Mrs. W. H. Durfree, whose death here has caused suspicion to rest on her husband. The internal organs are under chemical and microscopical examination in Chicago. Charles B. Hurst, an Elgin attorney, is authority for the statement that the poison has been found. The substance of a mysterious white powder which Durfree gave his wife is being investigated by the Elgin authorities and may solve the mystery of the woman's death. Durfree continues to have his liberty under a bond of $1,000. Meanwhile researches into Durfree's past are being made. The story has many ramifications, including several previous marriages by Durfree.

GET RICH IN FEW MONTHS

Chicago Man Has "Non-losable" System of Playing Races.

Chicago, June 28.—Another genius has discovered a non-losable, copper-riveted cinch system for beating the races, and in a spirit of generosity he is offering bank presidents, professional men with red sporting corpuscles in their blood, clubmen and good fellows generally a chance to get into his syndicate and make 25 per cent a month on their investments—without any risk.

George D. Evans is the name of the philanthropist, and he has a desk in Room 1515 Masonic Temple. His letterheads read:

MAROSE, LEWIS & EVANS,
Turf Commissioners,
New York. Chicago. St. Louis.
St. Louis Office:
721 Olive St., Room 1626.

Evans was once a blacksmith, but declares he hasn't worked for any man for wages or a salary for fourteen years, and that he never will again. High finance is more to his liking. In a few months, he says, he will be worth thousands and wearing real diamonds.

Some of the most prominent men in the city have received Mr. Evans' circular invitation to join the good thing, not only those sometimes classified as men about town, but sedate individuals who wouldn't know one of the bangtails from a cross-town car horse, and who never took chances on any game outside of a church sociable. But the Evans scheme, bless you, isn't a gambling proposition; it's speculation.

Mark its beauties as set forth in the following circular to the big men of finance and business, the addresses to which copies have been sent evidently having been taken from the blue book:

Chicago, June 20, 1905.—Mr. ——

Dear Sir: Would you care to take a flyer on the ponies, provided I can demonstrate to you that 25 per cent a month can be earned on any amount you invest without any probability of losing the principal?

I have just returned from St. Louis, after a month's successful play at the fair grounds race track, and shall leave for the East in a week or ten days, with a number of commissions.

I am playing system exclusively, and if you would like some easy money just drop me a line as to what time I could see you for a few minutes, and I will call and talk it over and show you the records upon which my system is based.

If interested kindly answer at once, as the amount I will be able to handle is limited. Very sincerely yours,

GEO. D. EVANS.

Evans is married and lives at 39 Alice place. Explaining his purpose in writing only to business and club men of reputed wealth and integrity, he said yesterday:

"My system is based upon the results obtained by the various newspaper 'handicappers.' For over a month I have been working night and day, studying out my system, and it is perfect. Give me a $5,000 bank roll, and you and I will soon be wearing diamonds—real ones.

"I am confident that within a few days I will have received so many answers from those to whom I have written that I will be compelled to refuse a lot of would-be investors. It is not a gambling proposition—it's speculation, pure and simple.

"I refuse to work for any man on a salary," he concluded. "I haven't done it for fourteen years, and I never will. In a few months I will be worth thousands—see if I'm not."

BIG GRAFT ALLEGED

In the Annual Free Seed Distribution.

Washington, June 27.—There is more trouble in store for the secretary of agriculture and his department, through which the annual distribution of free seed is conducted, if a letter sent to President Roosevelt by C. A. Nellis of New York results in a presidential inquiry.

In this letter Nellis says: "The communications I sent you during the spring of 1902 concerning charges against the department of agriculture were all, I believe, referred to Secretary Wilson. As he is not likely to investigate his official acts or those of his subordinates, nothing very tangible, I imagine, was ever submitted to you. At best, nothing more than an exparte report could have been made, as the facts supported by absolute proof in our possession were never called for, though they were offered to several branches of the government.

"This scandal has cropped out on several occasions in the public press, never to be denied or explained, but always to be smothered."

Mr. Nellis said in an interview: "Only last season the official in charge of the purchases of seeds stated he would not divulge the source of supply or the prices paid by the department for seeds, yet more than $200,000 is annually spent for his 'free graft' without any question being asked."

BEDS IN THE BATH ROOMS.

London Filled to Overflowing With Visitors.

London, June 27.—London is filled to overflowing with visitors. During last week hundreds and hundreds of distracted motorists were driving vainly from hotel to hotel, from hotel to boarding house, from boarding house to lodging house, to be met always with the cry that there was no room, that in the very bath rooms and billiard rooms beds were laid down and were at a premium. It is the height of the season. The West end hotels look for overcrowding at such a time. But this year there has been a vast influx of French visitors; the Americans in Lodon have been more numerous than ever at this time of the year, and Germany, Austria and Belgium are for some reason more numerously represented in town than usual.

The pressure on the hotels is relieved temporarily by the week-end departures for the seaside. The pleasure resorts around the coasts are already reaping in a large measure the harvest which the warm weather brings.

LARGER INCREASE.

Shown By Later Returns From Census Enumeraters.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—State census returns continue to improve. There is every indication that the great centers of population will make up the apparent deficiency shown by the first figures received.

A rough count of ten of the cities of the state, outside of the three largest, shows an increase of nearly 15 per cent. This is considered very good.

In the St. Paul district trouble is being had with the lodging houses. It is almost impossible to get any information from the keepers, and the inmates cannot be found when wanted.

Checks in payment for services rendered by 900 enumerators were sent out over the state today by the state census department. They ranged in amounts all the way from $10 to $50.

THE KING IS OPPOSED

To Placing a Swedish Prince on Throne of Norway.

Discussion of Disunion Occupies Entire Day In Riksdag.

Stockholm, June 28.—King Oscar has directed the court marshal to issue the following statement regarding the rumor that his majesty would be willing to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne of Norway:

"The king does not approve the idea and will not consent thereto. The only condition under which his majesty could reconsider this decision would be the unexpected expression of the wish of the riksdag that a prince of the house of Bernadotte should ascend the Norwegian throne."

Both houses of the riksdag yesterday elected extraordinary committees to which was referred the government bill looking to a settlement with Norway. The senate committee consists of nine anti-government and three pro-government members and the house committee of five pro-government, five anti-government and two independent members.

The debates on the secession of Norway, brought out fiery speeches in which the action of the Norwegian storthing was condemned and the Swedish cabinet severely criticized.

The tenor of the speeches throughout the debate in both houses leaves the impression that the majority of the speakers were of the opinion that a peaceful solution of the matter was extremely improbable.

In the senate, Judge C. A. Berg, who initiated the debate, said:

"We must not use force to sustain the union which is valueless to us under existing conditions, but the riksdag does not recognize the illegal and revolutionary breach of the union and does not recognize Norway as a sovereign state. Sweden's representatives must consider Sweden's safety and this can only be done through a cabinet having the full confidence of the riksdag."

Herr Hammarskjold said that the action of the Norwegian storthing was revolutionary, but it had raised such a storm of indignation in Sweden that all parties had risen to the support of King Oscar, assuring him that Sweden would remain faithful even though Norway had proved false.

Sweden, he said, had received a blow in the face which had awakened the people from their lethargy and they demanded different action from that taken by the cabinet. The people were dissatisfied with the cabinet's wavering proposals. The bill, he said, was much too moderate, and should have strenuously censured the storthing. It was unworthy of Sweden to commence negotiations with revolutionists, and parliament and the cabinet should propose conditions which Sweden would accept, telling Norway that as she had broken away from the union, Sweden would be willing to separate, but that Norway must agree to Sweden's conditions. If Norway did not accept, then Sweden should enforce her conditions by war.

The speaker said he preferred war to the sacrifice of Sweden's honor and if Sweden was not prepared to enforce her conditions, then she deserved the contempt of all Europe. Sweden's conditions should be moderate, but once they were offered they should stand. In conclusion Herr Hammarskjold said the cabinet and parliament must understand each other and the cabinet's proposals to open negotiations with Norway were not acceptable to the people.

Purdom Walstrom, speaking in the house, said he was willing to remit the bill in order not to cause hasty expressions in the debate, but the union with Norway amounted to nothing. He said in Norwegian schools in recent years the children had been taught to hate Sweden. Concluding, he said:

"I am against war, but it may have to come at least as a last resort. Norway's action amounts to revolution and should be treated as a deadly insult to Sweden. The government's proposition opens up the probability of war. Its weakness lies in the fact that Norway having broken the union, is liable to break treaties."

Baron Kennedy, speaking in the senate, said:

"If the king's message expresses his opinion, he has lost two crowns instead of one." This remark was greeted with laughter by the anti-government members.

Baron Kennedy said he opposed the idea of a conference with the rebellious storthing. Sweden must enforce her conditions and put behind the king all the resources of the country in order to protect Sweden's interest, by war if necessary.

The baron said every man in Sweden was willing to give his life to protect the honor and glory of the country.

Judge Kronlund attacked the speech of Baron Kennedy and said that the utterances were treasonable. He expressed his sorrow that a small nation like Norway had so little forethought, and urged the selection of a cabinet which would act promptly and in the interest of the whole Scandinavian peninsula.

Minister of Justice Berger in the house defended the cabinet and said Sweden did not wish to force Norway unwillingly into a union. Such action would mean a succession of rebellions which Sweden would have to suppress. It would be useless, he said, to submit the question to the Norwegian people, who more than ever were determined to break away from the union. If Sweden had at first laid down conditions and Norway refused to accept them, there would have been no recourse for Sweden but that of war.

The minister defended the action of the government and said it would have been feeble indeed if it had yielded to the popular clamor for war in such a cause.

S. Sacea said in the senate that the Norwegian frontier ought to have been blockaded and the army and navy mobolized. The riksdag should not allow little Norway to dictate. We desire peace, but not at any price. The negotiations should be accompanied by military preparations, thus showing Norway and the world at large, that Sweden was in earnest. Loud cheers greeted these remarks. Herr Beninks and Lars Berg spoke along similar lines.

Prof. Trygger said that Sweden's political union was bankrupt because even now her people feared to characterize actions by their proper names. The ministry should not propose such a bill. Sweden would be better off alone, but Norway ought to ask Sweden's assent, accompanied by the assurance of the storthing that it would accept Sweden's condition.

Premier Ramstedt then spoke. He said: "After June 7 Sweden had two alternatives one, that of force and the other to accept dissolution. Nobody openly advocated force, but sane persons advocate a procedure which would ultimately lead to war. The object of war would be to compel Norway to retrace its action, but anger must not blind us to our own interests, and our interests are against forcing Norway into any kind of union.

"A conquered Norway while of no advantage would forever be a source of danger. Add to this the horrors of war and their enfeebling results—all arguments against the employment of force. If not force, then it is best to assist in the dissolution of the union without harsher conditions than our future safety of the sepnsula demands."

In conclusion the premier declined to answer criticisms of the ministry, beyond saying that dynastical interests were not considered in the ministry program at present.

MESSAGE FROM MRS. EDDY TO CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS.

Concord, N. H., June 28.—Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy has issued the following to the members of the First Church of Christ, scientist:

"Hear, O, Israel, the Lord God is one Lord. I now request that the members of my church cease special prayer for the peace of nations and cease in full faith that God does not hear our prayers only because of oft speaking; but that he will bless all the inhabitants of the earth, and none can stay his hand nor say unto him what doest thou?" Out of his allness He must bless all with his own truth and love."

STRETCHED TWO INCHES.

Annapolis, Md., June 28.—Among those successfully passing the mental examinations for admission to the naval academy was Luther Welsh of Kansas City, who, finding during his preparatory work that he was too short to meet the requirements, which demand that those entering the academy must be at least five feet two inches in height, underwent a stretching process, in which a specially devised machine figured. Welsh gained the needed two inches.

WILL SEEK RELIEF

Park Point Property Owners Gradually Losing Dry Land.

Bay Shore Line Is Moving In Every Year.

A number of the owners of Park Point property on what is usually termed the bay side of Minnesota Point have under consideration the idea of bringing to the attention of the government certain conditions that exist with a view of determining whether they can look for any relief from that direction.

The relief desired is some form of protection from the action of the ice and the water in tearing up and wearing away the bay shore of the point.

For some years past the bay shore line of Minnesota point has been moving further and further in as the waters of the bay, effected mainly by the river current, it is claimed, has made its encroachments. The short line is claimed to be several feet further in now than a few years ago and it is claimed to be moving in about a foot a year in some localities where the erosive effect of the water is more noticed than at others. This gradual encroachment of the water on the bay side of the point has been noticed for miles along the point by uprooted young pine trees now at the water's edge that a few years ago stood many feet inland.

Since the Park Point street railway company has established a double track system, the second track laid this spring on the bay side, has cut off several feet from the space formerly used by cottage owners along the route, and west of the tracks. As the bay waters have gradually encroached, the cottages have been moved back until now they are in many cases within a few feet of the new track laid by the company. There are some cottages so close to the track that a person could practically step from the porch into the car. These cottages are now located on the extreme back end of the owners' lots and cannot be moved out on the street for the reason the car line utilizes the street. If the water continues to cut its way into the point the owner of the cottages will be up against a difficult proposition, for they will either have to put their buildings on piles, which is an impracticable scheme, or move them to lots on the east side of the car tracks.

They will still own Park Point property, but it will be under water, in fact it will be all riparian rights where now a portion is dry land or sand and the remainder of the lot is under water.

Ever since the building of the elevators and dock properties on the mainland side of the bay, both in Superior and Duluth, the freeze-up every winter has been followed by an upheaval of the Minnesota Point shore line, particularly at those points where the shore line is most abrupt. For hundreds of yards along the Point, every spring, the land along the bay shore line is heaved up, trees are overturned by the roots and buildings that stood close to the water's edge have been racked out of shape. It has been explained that this destruction is due to the expansive force of the water while making ice; that on account of the substantial barriers on the mainland side of the bay in the form of foundations and piling, the pressure is all felt on the Point side, and the force is such that it tears up large areas of frozen earth. Where the shore is sloping and the water is shallow for some distance out from the Point, this heaving effect is not so much noted, as there is not the resistance to the tremendous expansive power.

In order to save their property, a few of the owners who were able to go to the expense have employed contracting and dredging concerns to drive at the outer bay end of their lots, or very near the end, several rows of strong piling, to act as a buffer for the action of the current and waves and to offer resistance to the ice. Behind this piling the space has been filled in with sand dredgings to a height of two or three feet above the water level, some dark earth has been spread on top, and grass plots have been started.

Unless the piling is put down to quite a depth and the outer bulwark made very strong, it is claimed that the ice will at times fairly tear the big timbers from their place in the bed of the bay.

The property owners assert that this method of "making land" to save their property is far too expensive for general adoption by individuals, and they are desirous of learning whether the government has any jurisdiction in the matter in the way of taking some steps toward preserving the shore line where it is, and of preventing the waters from encroaching farther in the Point.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

James S. Keerl, a prominent Helena civil engineer, who was convicted of manslaughter for killing Thomas Crystal, a bartender in Helena, three years ago, was sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years by Judge Leslie. The case has been in the courts for three years.

Contested election cases involving the mayor, city attorney and police magistrate at Joliet, Ill., were concluded Tuesday. R. J. Barr, Republican, was declared elected mayor by 119 votes over William C. Crollius, Democratic, who inaugurated the contest. The other officers also remained unchanged.

"Big Frank" McCoy the famous old-time bank burglar and partner of the late "Jimmy" Hope of Manhattan bank fame, died at the Metropolitan hospital on Blackwell's island Tuesday of a complication of diseases. McCoy for some years past had lived a hand-to-mouth existence on the East side.

Pennsylvania train No. 2, the limited east-bound from Chicago to New York, ran into a switch engine with a number of cars in the Lima, Ohio, yards of that company at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night. Night Yard Master Kendrick had a leg cut off and he is believed to be fatally injured. The passenger train did not leave the track and no passengers were hurt, although they were all badly shaken up.

INSANE MEN

Seen Wandering Aimlessly in Death Valley.

Goldfield, Nev., June 27.—Prospectors coming into Bullfrog report that they found two men wandering aimlessly about in Death valley, down beyond the Funeral range. These two men were insane and nearly naked. Their tongues were black, swollen and protruding. Their limbs were also swollen. Their misfortune is but a repetition of the disasters of that section during the past week. The springs are drying up and the usual supply of water is lacking.

FIERCE FORESTS FIRES.

Denver, June 27.—Forest fires are burning fiercely on government lands in the mountains southwest of Denver. Since Sunday morning a fire has been raging ten miles northwest of Pine Grove, in Platte canyon. Government range riders have been sent out from different points to check the progress of the flames. The loss thus far is $50,000.

RECORD IS BEATEN

Of Ante-Bellum Days By the African Gold Fields.

Production of This Year Will Aggregate One Hundred Millions.

New York, June 28.—At last the production of gold in the Transvaal has passed even the high record attained just before the breaking out of the Boer war. The highest record prior to the war was 378,200 fine ounces for the monthly production, while the output for May, 1905, reaches 416,000 fine ounces. The production of the calendar year, 1905, in the Transvaal is expected to reach $100,000,000 in value; so far this will be the high-water mark, but none familiar with the conditions known positively to exist in the Rand and other parts of the Transvaal but believes this will be the lowest output for the twenty years to come.

Many well-informed parties believe that the production can be maintained at $150,000,000 per annum for at least twenty years. It is fully demonstrated that it is only a question of men and machinery to turn out that sum anually for the score of years.

Amid all the strife and the placing of half a million of her people on the fields of battle Japan has in the last year doubled her production of gold and has produced new metal from her own possessions approximating the very neat sum of $6,000,000 in twelve months' time.

These are the latest returns from South Africa and Japan, and the same class of statistics can be confidently relied upon to come from all gold-producing countries.

The returns of the Bank of France and the Bank of England for the week ended Thursday, June 22, show the piling up of the yellow metal in both institutions. Here are the figures that will gladden the hearts of business men and give renewed vim, vigor and activity in all business circles:

| Bank of England. | 1904. | 1905. |
|---|---|---|
| Bullion.. .. ..... | £35,167,161 | £38,860,816 |
| Reserve.. .. ..... | 25,527,291 | 28,389,000. |

Increase in gold coin and bullion for week ended June 22, 1905, £743,255.

| Bank of France. | 1904. | 1905. |
| Gold holdings .... | 2,795,424f | 2,843,531,000f |

Both England and France, it can readily be seen from the above financial statement, are in a splendid position to purchase and pay for the manufactured articles or agricultural productions that their people may desire, and in addition to finance the largest operations that require capital. England and France can, with certainty, count upon an additonal reinforcement of gold from South Africa, Australia and Madagascar of fully $12,000,000 in value every month, and that certainty makes their people eager for good investments in any quarter of the world.

Much French capital has lately gone into Mexico, and there are negotiations progressing favorably with electric traction managers looking to the placing of large sums of French capital in the electric roads of the United States. The steady flow of French money to Russia has received a decided check, and United States investments are being studied with care and will be readily taken when found satisfactory. Two sensational New York financial episodes have caused some hesitation in Paris toward our enterprises. The malodorous ship building trust deal was exploited in Paris as unscrupulously as in New York, and the Equitable scandal has been as fully aired in France as it has been in this country.

Enterprises controlled by the leading spirits of the late managements of either of these companies will find no support from the investors of France.

The practices and methods of the ship building trust promoters and of the Equitable officers and directors bear too close a resemblance to those of the DeLesseps canal officials to appeal to the confidence or to the pockets of the French people.

They know of old and to their sorrow the same type of directors and managers in Paris that the investors and savers of the United States are learning of in the daily press at this time. France has had copper syndicates, sugar syndicates, coffee syndicates and a Panama Canal company and has paid dearly for each and all of them.

"The burnt child dreads the fire," and the French people recognize the same old flame in the Ship Building trust and in the lavish, reckless, yet skillful, manipulation of policy holders' money by officers and directors of insurance companies in outside enterprises which afford opportunities for personal profits with all risk placed upon the funds employed belonging to other people.

The French people paid for such experiences years ago and want no more such enterprises. They will readily at this time take up with sound business properties, managed by trustworthy men, not by confessed violators of law or known violators of official trust.

Indeed, the people of the United States and the French people are agreed upon that point, and it is clearly to be perceived that public sentiment in this country is fully as strong against such practices by corporations, and fully as adverse to the individuals who, as officers, permit such practices as it was in France against the rings of the Panama canal, who squandered the savings of the French peasants.

Public sentiment does not grasp the fine distinction made in a recent publication showing a guilty corporation, yet an innocent officer, transacting the business. The public does not now recognize corporations without souls and officers without honesty, integrity or conscience.

The most severe blows to the highest standard of morality and honesty in business affairs of the Utined States, singular to say, come from the men who posed as the protectors and defenders of financial honor of the nation in 1896. It is now public property that many of them, while denouncing the men of the West and the South as favoring dishonest methods, were at that very time, and since that time, betraying their trusts, violating their official oaths and breaking the laws of the country.

The house cleaning in New York comes none too soon, and it is to be hoped it will be thorough and complete. The Equitable is not alone or singular in such practices.

It is evident that some others who are urging new lines of federal inspection and control are anxious to take up the future lest their past be examined as closely as that of the Equitable has been. Supt. Hendricks has done admirable work so far, but he is not yet through with the Equitable, and there are others that should be as carefully examined into as the Equitable. The work is in the interest of the people of the Unijted States and the clearing out of the dishonest elements may largely diminish the ranks of the prominent "honest money" men of New York, taking away some shining examples as it lately did in Milwaukee, but it will be for the good of the entire people of the country.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK.

Food Eaten Is Worthless Unless Digested—Some Stomachs Must Have Help.

Food taken into the stomach which, from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them, they must be given less work; in other words they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a-year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is, of course, not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

BETTINGEN WINS

Verdict For Defendant In St. Paul Breach of Promise Case.

Attorney Pierce Butler's Scathing Arraignment of Mrs. Toomey.

St. Paul, June 28.—Eleanor M. Toomey's $25,000 breach of promise suit against Dr. Joseph W. Bettingen is ended, and the doctor wins. The case went to the jury at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and at 7:30 p. m. a verdict was returned in favor of the defendant. When seen later, Mrs. Toomey said: "I am not weeping over the verdict. As far as the money is concerned I don't care a cent. All I wanted was justice. I wanted the blame placed where it belonged. I shall bring suit against Dr. Bettingen, charging him with slander, and will compel him to take back all the bad things he has said about me."

Fashion flaunted itself for the first time in the case yesterday. Women in gorgeous raiment were in court. The crowd, eager to hear the closing arguments, packed the corridor long before court opened, and inside the attorneys' railing handsomely gowned women stood beside the attorneys, eagerly awaiting Pierce Butler's closing address in behalf of the defendant.

Scathing was Attorney Pierce Butler's arraignment of Mrs. Toomey. For two hours he flayed with cutting phrases Eleanor Margaret Toomey's life, courtship, marriage and her divorce. Nor did he spare the husband, William C. Toomey, formerly James J. Hill's private secretary.

Mr. Toomey had not met his wife as did a man whose love was pure. He courted her in a house of sin, Mr. Butler declared.

From the slums he had lifted her and thrust her into the society of decent people. The living lie began when they walked down the long aisle of the church to repeat the words of the sacred marriage service, asserted Dr. Bettingen's counsel.

Masterfully Mr. Butler reviewed the testimony, picked out Mrs. Toomey's phrases, that conventional society would greet with an icy stare, told of the temptress laying siege to Dr. Bettingen, and how once in her snare, escape from her clutches seemed well-nigh impossible.

Again and again he punctuated his address with a single sentence that burned itself into the mind of spectator and juror.

"The fault was not entirely Mrs. Toomey's. Her husband, oh, shame, contemptible shame, had lifted her from the slums to the society of decent people," was hurled forth by Mr. Butler.

Across the attorneys' table, Eleanor Margaret Toomey sat in the seat usually occupied by Attorney Durment, Dr. Bettingen's counsel. Her head was half bowed. She faced the jury, but looked not at the jurors' faces. Her bosom rose and fell as her breath came in long, deep sighs. Sorrow and gloom were written on her face as she heard Attorney Butler's words.

But Mrs. Toomey bore the ordeal well. Despite the bitter arraignment, she maintained her composure, and once she laughed, a free, hearty laugh.

"She went riding with Dr. Bettingen from the French Catholic church," said Mr. Butler. "Did she take her little bottle of whisky along to keep them warm?" he asked the jury, and Mrs. Toomey joined in the general laugh.

But then came the reiterating damning sentence.

"The trouble was," shouted Mr. Butler, "that this woman was lifted from the slums to the society of decent people," and the look of sorrow returned to Mrs. Toomey's face.

Attorney Butler's peroration was short but virile.

"Now, gentlemen," he said, "I have talked longer than I expected. This woman is not entitled to $25,00 damages, not to 25 cents, not to one red copper. To give a verdict, even of 1 cent, would be a disgrace to the records of this court. If I were on this jury and gave this temptress a verdict even for a single cent, I should be ashamed. I would not dare look honest men in the face, because I gratified her desire for odious fame. I would never again look my daughters in the face. I would not let my sons again look upon their father, my wife should never see me again. It would be an insult to all decent people."

Attorney Stan J. Donnelly then closed the case for the plaintiff and the court charged the jury.

COURT ENJOINS

Hammond Company From Receiving Grain Quotations.

Chicago, June 28.—The Hammond Elevator company, an alleged bucket-shop, with headquarters in Hammond, Ind., has been restrained by an injunction granted yesterday afternoon by Judge Kohlsaat in the United States court from in any way receiving or securing the grain quotations of the Chicago board of trade, and also from pushing mandamus proceedings against the Western Union Telegraph company in the Indiana state supreme court, to compel the telegraph company to furnish the quotations.

The injunction, which is a temporary one, marks the culmination of a long struggle by the Chicago board of trade against alleged bucketshopping in Chicago. The suit was begun some time ago by the board of trade and has been on some features of the case carried to the United States supreme court.

The Hammond Elevator company is an organization growing out of the Central Grain and Stock company, formerly of Chicago, which was driven out of business, it is declared, by the board of trade. Since the formation of the new organization the concern has branched out all over the country and has a net work of wires, covering the entire Middle West.

LIABILITY IS LIMITED

To Value of Wreck and the Passage Money Secured.

New York, June 28.—In the suit brought by the survivors of the La Bourgogne disaster, eight years ago, a decision was handed down yesterday in the United States circuit court of appeals which ordered the United States district court, the tribunal below, to modify its opinion in conformity with the decision rendered yesterday. The principal feature of moment in the new opinion is that it orders the Compagnie Generale Trans-Atlantique to pay over to the trustee the sum of 113,319.57 francs, with interest from the date of the disaster, this representing the amount of freight and passage money received by the owners of the vessel on the voyage from New York on which she was lost. As to whether the defendant was responsible for the loss of life, the court holds that the owners were personally without responsibility. As to whether La Bourgogne was at fault, and therefore responsible for the collision, the court decides that the defendant was not responsible.

Claims for nearly $3,000,000 have been filed against the Compagne Generale Trans-Atlantique, the owners of the Bourgogne. The decision of the court of appeals confirms one of the oldest principles of admiralty law, that the owners liability is limited to the freight and passenger money received by the wrecked steamer for her last voyage, together with the value of the wreck, as was held recently in connection with the destruction by fire of the General Slocum. In the case of La Bourgogne, there was no wreck value, as the steamer was never raised.

GREATLY EXAGGERATED.

Nogales, Ariz., June 28.—The stories sent out from this place regarding the attack by Yaqui Indians upon the Buenos Ayres ranch, in Sonora, last Thursday, in which over twenty Yaquis and several settlers and their families were said to have been slain, were the grossest exaggerations. The only foundation for the reports was a fight occurring at the ranch, in which two Indians were killed and Luis Carranza was wounded. There was no attempt at a massacre, and no troops were sent out as reported.

HOLD LATE SESSION

Board of Review Aims to Accommodate the Workingmen.

Mayor Urges Taxpayers to Air Their Grievances.

In order that working men may be given an opportunity to be heard, the board of review will hold evening sessions tomorrow and Friday evenings from 8 until 10 o'clock or later.

The board will not adjourn this afternoon, as expected, but will remain in session until Friday evening at least, and longer if the occasion appears to demand it.

"We want every person who thinks he has been treated unjustly to come before the board and make a complaint," said Mayor Cullum this morning.

"The impression appears to have been spread in some manner that the board is unwilling to hear complaints, and treats the people who have applied for redress rather summarily. We have no such intention whatever, and every person who thinks the deputy assessor has placed too high an estimate on his personal property, or who has any kind of a protest to make, will be assured of courteous treatment at the hands of the board, and as fair a consideration of his case as the members are capable of giving it.

"We don't want to treat any person unjustly or raise the total assessment too high. The board is ready and willing to hear all protests, and evening sessions will be held on Thursday and Friday evening in order that the workingmen and others who cannot get away during the day may have an opportunity to be heard.

"I hope no one will be deterred from coming by the false impression that the board is somewhat impatient of hearing protests, and unwilling to lower assessments as fixed by the deputy assessors. As a matter of fact a large percentage of those who have applied to the board have convinced us of the justice of their claims and had their assessments lowered."

From 300 to 350 protests in all have been disposed of by the board. They were coming more slowly this morning, and it is believed that the majority of the claims have been dealt with, but the board will be in session for at least two days longer.

PETERMAN'S ROACH FOOD.

A BOON TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

The most improved method to free a house of large or small roaches is to use the contents of a box of "Peterman's Roach Food" at one time. Shake it on joints so some of it will penetrate and remain to keep the premises continuously free. Roaches eat it as a food; it is the most destructive remedy on this earth to them, and it will not scatter them to other places to live on and multiply.

BEDBUGS.—"Peterman's Discovery" (thick), a quicksilver cream, is invaluable to kill bedbugs. Apply lightly with brush on beds when apart, on backs of picture frames, mouldings, &c. It will remain permanent, and is the only remedy that they absorb and kills those that go over where it has been lightly brushed on. It will not rust iron, harm furniture or bedding.

"Peterman's Discovery" (liquid), in flexible cans, handy to force in joints for quick application, will kill bedbugs and their eggs instantly.

"Peterman's Ant Food"—A strong powder to kill and drive away ants.

"Peterman's Rat-mouse Food" makes rats or mice wild; they will leave and not return.

Take no other, as time may be even more important than money.

APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

To Keep Sweden and Norway From Going to War.

At the Midsummer day celebration of the Northern Minnesota Finnish-American association, held in Ely last Saturday and Sunday, the split between Finland's neighboring states, Sweden and Norway, was talked of generally, and on Saturday the following draft of a dispatch, to be sent to President Roosevelt, was read before the convention and unanimously and enthusiastically adopted; later it was wired to the president, being signed by Dr. John Jackola of Hancock, Mich.; John R. Heino of Duluth, and William Wuoti of Ely:

"To Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States: We, citizens of the United States, of Finnish birth or blood, are very deeply sensible of the critical condition created by the dissolution of union between the kingdoms of Sweden and Norway. We fear that this act may lead to an armed hostility, which would seriously disturb existing conditions in Northern Europe. Our native country, Finland, being adjacent to the two kingdoms named, would naturally suffer from open hostility in that region of the north. Realizing this, we have repeatedly urged our kith and kin, who have lived under the most trying circumstances, to refrain from committing any act that might plunge Europe into the deplorable state of war.

"Therefore, we do most earnestly hope, and do most respectfully petition and beseech that you, a sincere advocate of peace, will endeavor to keep the kingdoms of Sweden and Norway from doing anything that would disturb the peace of the world."

At the annual business meeting of the association, the following officers were elected: President, Hon. John Saari, Sparta; vice president, Matt Aho, Eveleth; secretary, John Isotalo, Hibbing; and treasurer, Jacob Penttila, Eveleth. Five directors were also elected, and it was decided to hold the next meeting of the association at Virginia.

Governor Johnson, Senator Clapp and Congressman Steenerson, who had been invited to attend, all sent regrets, being unavoidably kept away.

It should be mentioned in connection with the telegram sent to President Roosevelt that similar Norwegian and Swedish associations have sent the same kind of telegrams, and requested that the Finnish people do so.

POLICE TOO BUSY

To Find Wad of an Illinois Man.

New York, June 28.—Hezekiah Hawkins has encountered most of the eighteen local police "squads" in seeking relief for the loss of his wad. Hawkins reached town on Saturday from Mattoon, Ill., with $200. He registered at the Broadway hotel, checked his grip and started out to see the sights. He had seen about a sight and three-eighths when he was jammed into a doorway by two stout bravos, which same process and the securing of Hawkins' wad "was but the work of a moment."

Hawkins expected to lose his money, but he objected to having it go in one lump, so he sought out the nearest policeman and stated his case.

"Sorry," said the cop, "but it's none of my business. I'm a member of the traffic squad."

Hawkins spied another bluecoat, hurried to him and stated his case.

"Hard luck, Hawkins," said cop No. 2, "but, you see, I belong to the theater squad."

"This is a funny place," said Hawkins. "Ah, here's another cop. I'll ask him."

"Do?" said cop No. 3. "Why, how should I know? I belong to the sanitary squad.

The next three cops belonged respectively to the court, newsboy and shoofly squads, and they weren't helping folks find lost wads.

Finally Hawkins met a cop who directed him to the central-office squad, and there he went.

THE NORTH BUTTE

Company Preparing For Substantial Enlargement of Capacity.

New Hoisting Engine Ordered—More Claims Being Secured.

It has been said from time to time that the North Butte Mining company which recently bought the Speculator mine near Butte and a number of other claims, intends to at least double the output of the mine and make it one of the foremost mines of that district, and the following from the Anaconda Standard shows that steps toward that end are rapidly going forward.

"The North Butte Copper company, which recently acquired the property of the Speculator company, is preparing for substantial improvements. Among other things, it will equip the main shaft with a new hoisting engine, having a capacity of 3,500 feet, and probably use the one now running in the development of some of its other claims. The new engine has been ordered from the Nordburg Machinery company of Milwaukee and is to be an exact counterpart of the one now in operation on the Original and the one on the West Stewart, both of which were installed about a year ago. Several of the large engine manufacturers in the United States bid on the plant. The order was sent in double, for the Boston & Montana company intends to equip its new shaft, now being made, with an engine exactly like that of the North Butte. Both engines are to be delivered in Butte in five months. The engine in use at the Speculator is a good one, so far as it goes, but it will not go deep enough to suit the North Butte. It has a flat cable, while the new one will draw a round rope an inch and a half in diameter. With the advent of the new engine the present slow method of dumping ore in the bins will be done away with, for the company intends to use a new skip.

"While the new engine is being installed the company will continue to mine ore, but it will do its hoisting through the shaft of the High Ore, having made arrangements with the Anaconda company for it. The two mines are connected far below the surface and the two companies are on friendly terms, but otherwise there is no affiliation between them. The North Butte will likely pay the Anaconda company so much per ton for raising its ore.

"The Adirondack claim, owned by James A. Murray, is one of the properties which the North Butte has bought or expects to buy. It is located between the Speculator and Jesse and is considered valuable, not only as a mine, but as ground necessary in the successful and economical operation of the Jesse and other mines acquired by the company. When the announcement was made that the Speculator had bought the Jesse and struck in it a 16-foot vein of rich copper-silver ore it was surmised that the Adirondack had been tied up on a lease and bond, for in order to reach the Jesse it was necessary to drive a crosscut through it from the workings of the Speculator. The deeds filed by the North Butte company in the office of the county clerk last Monday, show that the Adirondack is practically one of the assets of the new company.

"Seventeen documents in all were filed, some of which were options and leases; some assignments and leases and bonds. The one relating to the Adirondack shows that on Dec. 22, 1904, James A. Murray and wife gave the Speculator company a lease and option on the property for one year, and another document shows that the lease and option was transferred to the North Butte company through M. S. Largey and Thomas F. Cole, the former acting for the Speculator and the latter for the North Butte.

"The other documents show that all the business transacted between the Speculator company and Mr. Cole was done through M. S. Largey, to whom the Speculator had assigned its property for the purpose of the sale. The deed conveying the property to the North Butte was executed by Mr. Cole on April 5, 1905. It shows that the Jesse, Speculator, Copper Dream, Edith May, four-fifths of the Miners' Union, or Great Eastern, and the lease and option on the Adirondack were transferred to the North Butte in exchange for $5,000,000. The remaining fifth interest in the Miners' Union is owned by the Noyes estate and has not been acquired by the North Butte.

"Another document shows that on Dec. 7, 1904, F. T. McBride and wife and Robert McBride transferred to the Speculator company a third interest in the Copper Dream for $6,666.66, and that on the same date T. M. Hodgens and wife sold to the company another third for a similar sum.

"According to the document relating to the Jesse, the lease and bond on the Jesse was obtained by E. M. Wood and James Humes of Butte, the lease being executed in the name of Eugene Carroll for eighteen months and the amount of the purchase price being $300,000. Mr. Carroll is the administrator of the estate of Jesse Lewisohn, which owned the property.

"The Miners' Union, or Great Eastern, was owned by George H. Casey, P. J. Brophy, George W. Stapleton, Miss Josephine M. Lyons and Alexander J. Johnstone as trustees for another interest, and the amount paid for it was $150,000. A like amount was paid for the Edith May, which belonged to Messrs. Casey and Brophy, T. M. Newton of Los Angeles and the estate of Clarence W. Newton, who died Dec. 21 last.

"The property of the new company is now yielding between 700 and 800 tons of ore per day, which is the capacity with the present hoisting engine. When the new engine is ready for work, however, it will be increased quite materially, probably to 1,000 tons per day. This is the intention of the company, and its contemplations will, no doubt, be fulfilled. The company is employing 350 men, the largest number in the history of the property, and is paying its miners $3.50 per day for eight hours' work. The property is in charge of Arthur C. Carson, one of the best mining men in the West. Mr. Carson has had it under his protection since W. W. Wishon left Butte a year ago, and has brought it to the front as a factor in ore production."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Old Man's Throat Cut at Hankinson By Stranger.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Hankinson—An elderly man had his throat cut by a stranger, employed in the Soo railway's steel gang here Monday night.

The stranger tried to pick a quarrel with the old man earlier in the day, but was struck on the head with a club and knocked down by a third man, who interfered.

At night, while the old man was sitting with his back turned to his assailant, the latter sneaked up from behind and cut his throat almost from ear to ear.

The injured man was taken to the hospital and has a chance of recovery. His assailant was arrested and taken to Wahpeton and placed in jail.

Fargo—There is some speculation among local Methodists as to whether Grand Forks will raise the $50,000 demanded by the trustees within sixty days to secure the Methodist university. At first it was claimed there was no stipulation as to time, but Presiding Elder Danford says there was a sixty-day provision in the official minutes. That time has about half elapsed and little has been done by Grand Forks, though the canvass is now starting. The Fargo and Minot districts passed resolutions indorsing the action of the trustees in having the institution transferred to Grand Forks. If that city fails to raise the sum required within the stipulated time there may be a renewed effort in Fargo to revive the union college plan with the Congregationalists, but nothing will be done till the results of the Grand Forks effort are known.

The completion of a "Y" between the Northern Pacific and the Soo at Rogers gives Fargo wholesalers direct shipment to points along the Soo in the northwestern part of the state. The announcement has just been made that shipments for Soo points can now be noted that way.

A hopeless cripple and thought to be insane, Custer Morgan, a former convict, is here in hard lines. He was sent to the state penitentiary for five years on the charge of stealing an overcoat in Fargo. On his discharge he was the victim of a serious and probably fatal spinal trouble, which interferes with his locomotion. He was sent to Fargo and by local officials sent to a brother in Illinois. The latter returned Morgan here and wants the state to provide for him. Morgan says his injuries were due to sleeping in a damp, cold cell. His actions are so queer that he has been taken in custody and will be examined by the insanity board.

Mrs. Bye of Fargo failed to win her $10,000 damage case against O. P. Enerson, a Barnes county farmer, for whom she was housekeeper. She alleges an attempted assault by Enerson. The testimony of the defense strongly attacked the character of the plaintiff and also that of her husband, who is an ex-preacher.

After serving time for petty thefts, William Mullen is again under arrest on a burglary charge. He is said to have entered a local greenhouse and stolen plants, which he endeavored to sell around town.

A special term of court will be held in Fargo by Judge Fish of Grand Forks for Judge Pollock to try some drainage cases.

Edmore—Through the death of his mother, in Missouri, Thomas Darnell, a blacksmith here, comes into possession of a snug sum. The estate amounts to $50,000, and is divided among four children.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—In several counties of the state organizations have been perfected by cattle owners to fight the dipping law of the last legislative session, passed for the purpose of wiping out scabies in the state. The owners claim that no scabies exist in their herds and that it is an imposition on them to demand dipping on their part.

If the disease is not stamped out by state action the government will act, and if the government officials take control the state regulations will appear to be mild when compared with what they will demand.

One animal in a herd can spread the disease to all others, and while it will not show in the summer, when winter comes the effects become apparent. The state regulations, if carried out, will eradicate the disease, and if it is not done by the state, government action will begin.

Reports filed with state auditor show that 157 telephone companies have reported this year. This is an increase of more than 50 per cent in the last year.

The horse sale last week resulted in the disposal of more than five hundred head and left a large amount of cash among the horse raisers. The highest price for car lots of rangers was $85 a head, and the highest price for a single horse was $197.50, which was paid for a driver.

Olivet—The early settlers of Hutchinson county held their first annual picnic at Langer's park, a beautiful spot in the valley of the James river. The speakers of the day were Governor Elrod, Senator Gamble and Major Dollard of Scotland. About 1,000 people were on the grounds by 10 o'clock to receive the distinguished guests and honor the early settlers, and had the weather been fair 5,000 would have been present.

Entertainment for the afternoon and evening was provided for, in the way of ball games, foot races, and a bowery dance, music being furnished by Menno and Parkston bands. The guests of honor were entertained by Mesdames D. D. Wipf and G. W. Murner at the home of the latter, which was beautifully decorated with the national colors, cut flowers and plants.

ADA REHAN SICK.

New York, June 28.—Miss Ada Rehan, the actress, is stated by private advices from London to be suffering in that city from an attack of appendicitis. While her condition is said to be quite serious, it is believed that an operation for the removal of the appendix will not be necessary.

GASSER NOW GOES AFTER BUTCHERS

Brings Suit Alleging Combination In Restraint of Trade.

Charges Conspiracy Exists Between Wholesale and Retail Dealers.

M. M. Gasser & Co., retail meat dealers, have now thrown down the gauntlet to the Duluth Retail Butchers' association and the branch packing houses by the instituting in the district court today of an action in which he charges the retailers association and the wholesale meat dealers with a conspiracy to control the meat business of this city in the handling of supplies and the fixing of prices, and in which he seeks to enjoin them.

This suit is independent of the action which M. M. Gasser & Co. have started against the Grocers' Retail association, and resembles in the charges outlined the case now pending of H. C. Frink against the butchers' association.

The defendants in the last action started include all the branch houses of the packing companies their managers, the Retail Butchers' association, its officers and members.

In his complaint Mr. Gasser alleges on information and belief that the wholesale dealers have an agreement and understanding among themselves and with each other to control and raise the prices of meat and other commodities which shall be sold at wholesale to the retail dealers in Duluth.

The action is also to include A. Booth & Co., which concern is alleged to have a monopoly of all fresh fish, oysters and shell fish.

Mr. Gasser claims that in order to carry on a retail business in this city it is necessary for the retail butcher to buy meats and other commodities from the wholesalers freely and without restraint, discrimination or preference in the regular course of trade. He alleges that he is solvent and has had sufficient money at all times to meet his bills in business dealings, and that no reason exists why the wholesalers should not sell to him in the future except by "conspirituous agreement."

It is alleged that the retail dealers have been combined for several years in an association with definite objects, whose meetings are held secretly at stated intervals. In this association it is alleged that each member has to deposit a large fee, to be considered as a forfeit if the member disobeys the rules and regulations, in addition to expulsion from the association.

Mr. Gasser claims an agreement exists between the Retail Butchers' association and the wholesale meat dealers, whereby the latter must not sell meats to any person not a member in good standing in the retail association. He alleges that it is understood and agreed that if any wholesale dealer disobeys the rules and objects of the butchers' association or sells meats to any one not a member of the association all the members of the butchers' association are forbidden to, and shall refuse to purchase from the offending wholesale dealer.

Mr. Gasser charges that the butchers' association and the wholesale dealers have entered into contract, conspiracy and combination in the nature of an alliance for offensive and defensive purposes, in the restraint of trade and to limit and monopolize the trade of the City of Duluth to the membership of the Retail Butchers' association only and to fix and limit prices at which meats shall be sold here and in this vicinity. Such a conspiracy was formed and is continued for the following stated purposes, according to the complaint:

"1. To fix and limit the prices at which meats and other commodities shall be sold and to enforce the price and limit so fixed.

"2. To prevent competion among the wholesalers and retailers of meats and other commodities in the City of Duluth.

"3. To monopolize the retail butcher business in the City of Duluth and that vicinity to members of the Retail Butcher's association.

"4. To determine and fix what persons shall be permitted to retail meats and other commodities in the City of Duluth and that vicinity and to confine it to members of the Retail Butchers' association.

"5. To force out of business all retail butchers at Duluth and in the vicinity of Duluth obnoxious to the combination and their representatives.

"6. To enhance the retail price of meats and other commodities, one of the necessaries of life, and to fleece the public generally.

"7. To levy a tax on all persons who desire to do business as retail butchers in the city of Duluth and that vicinity."

Mr. Gasser recites that he is and has been for a long time desirous of conducting a retail butcher business without regard to the dictates of the association and has, heretofore, on several occasions, between Jan. 2 1897 and the present date, tried to do so and was compelled to pay fines and obey the association in order to obtain meat and other commodities in open market and get goods to supply customers. He says the association members threatened, intimidated and compelled him to act under the wrongful agreement or go out of business.

He claims they still threaten to injure him in every way possible and that unless they are restrained by the court from putting in effect the agreement alleged he will not be able to run a retail butcher business in his own way and make prices in accordance with a reasonable profit on goods or to solicit business from the public except in the manner the officers and directors of the retail association desire.

Mr. Gasser further expresses fear that if not enjoined the butchers will boycott him, solicit, threaten and interfere with his customers, post hand bills and use the mails to notify customers that he is not acting in accordance with the wishes of the association. He fears they will picket his place of business and notify wholesale dealers not to sell him goods, or compel him to pay cash on delivery instead of the usual terms: that the wholesalers will resort to subterfuge and give members of the association precedence in the purchase of goods and delay and hinder him in making purchases or in getting supplies. It is also feared by Mr. Gasser that the wholesalers to avoid selling him will deny having the articles desired or will discriminate against him by giving him higher prices than to other retail dealers.

Mr. Gasser demands judgment for a writ of injunction restraining them from doing any and all of these things.

John B. Arnold appears as attorney for M. M. Gasser & Company.

HEARST TO BE A CANDIDATE

Lieutenants Now Preparing For Next Presidential Campaign.

Sioux City, June 28.—William Randolph Hearst has begun digging post holes for his presidential fence, and his chief fence builder, Charles A. Walsh of Ottumwa, national committee man for Iowa, is actively at work. Mr. Walsh was secretary of the national committee during two presidential campaigns, and only forfeited the position last year because he had identified himself so strongly with the Hearst campaign for the presidential nomination that the Parker managers wouldn't stand for him. He was employed by Hearst to carry Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri and Indiana, and came mighty near delivering the goods at the national convention.

Mr. Walsh spent two days during the past week in Sioux City, consulting with District Committeeman J. H. Quick and Judge A. Van Wagenen, who was the Hearst candidate for nomination for governor of Iowa two years ago on a government ownership plank. When asked concerning his mission Mr. Walsh shut up like a clam, declaring he was engaged in investigating the beef trust for Mr. Hearst's paper. He professed not to know whether Mr. Hearst would again seek the presidential nomination.

But Mr. Walsh did say that Mr. Hearst was preparing to launch a big farm journal designed to circulate extensively among Republican and Democratic farmers alike, and that Mr. Hearst would have two big dailies in two of the biggest cities in the United States not already thus occupied within the next six months. He indicated that other big cities were in line for similar treatment before the next presidential campaign.

Between the lines it was easy to read that Mr. Walsh was expecting Mr. Hearst to make the fight for president and was confident that he would have an enormous following in all parties, especially among the union labor and reform element irrespective of past party affiliations.

JUDGE DIBELL FILES ORDER

Denies Motion of P. H. Smith to Intervene.

Judge Dibell, this morning, filed an order denying the motion of Pearl H. Smith to file a complaint in intervention in the "Virginia Sliver" mineral lease case of the state against Mabel Evans and others.

The arguments were heard by the court last Saturday, O'Brien, Donelly & Haggard appearing for Mr. Smith, Judge W. B. Douglas for the state and Washburn, Bailey & Mitchell and D. G. Cash for the defendants. The court has also filed an order denying the petition of M. E. Richards, who occupies the land, to intervene in the same case, the defendants appearing, but interposing no objections. D. G. Cash represented Mr. Richards.

MONUMENTS TO BE PLACED

Count Beltrami's Route to Be Marked By Cement Slabs.

Bemidji, Minn., June 28.—The route of Count Beltrami, when the famous explorer made his portage from Lake Julia across the height of land to Little Turtle lake is to be marked by cement monuments that have already arrived in Bemidji.

The blocks are six by eight feet in width and twenty-four feet in length, and they will be planted on the trail of Beltrami from Lake Julia to Little Turtle lake, commencing at the point he landed at Lake Julia. They will be placed 500 feet apart, and the number that will be used is twelve.

Besides the monument that will be placed at the point of embarkation, a wigwam will be built of birch bark on the spot where the famous explorer sat when he wrote a letter telling of his experiences to his wife, Countess Julia, who was then in Italy.

After the monuments have been planted, a meeting will be held at Buena Vista, at which a map of the route will be presented to the State Historical society. It is expected that Judge W. B. Douglas, Attorney General E. T. Young and several members of the State Historical society will be in attendance at the meeting.

E. E. McDonald of Bemidji and J. W. Speelman of Buena Vista compose the committee that has in hand the work of placing the monuments in position and preparing the map.

WANTED TO DIE FIGHTING

Jap Torpedoists Willing to Go Down With Russian Ships.

Paris, June 28.—A Japanese gentleman residing in France has just received the following interesting letter written by a friend in command of a torpedo-boat in Admiral Togo's fleet. The letter was of course written before the recent naval battle. The Japanese gentleman only knows that the torpedo-boat which his friend commanded went down in the fight—he has not yet heard whether his friend was rescued.

"A thousand apologies for my lengthy silence. We have been and are still busy, busy preparing a royal reception for the guests from Baltic.

"When we of the Suiraidau (torpedo corps) meet ashore we discuss and often wonder if after all the Russians will come or if they will fail us. Do they know that we are ready? To the northwest lies the harbor of Masampho, to the south that of Sasebo, while Moji is on our east, and here we are waiting, waiting, waiting for the enemy. Will he never come?

"If you do not hear from me when a meeting has taken place take this as my farewell. I do not expect to see you again in this life, except perhaps in your dreams. When my boat goes down I shall go too, and a Russian ship with us.

"It takes her weight in shells to sink a torpedo boat—it's marvelous how they, the shells, do not hit.

"I have seen, not one, but many torpedo actions, and I know. With six compartments in the boat we ought to be able to close in within twenty yards of the target before she is sunk. If we hit, we shall go down with the Russians; if we are hit the Russians shall come down with us, for the last man alive will steer the spare torpedo in the water. What is life but a dream of summer's night? Can one choose more glorious exit than to die fighting for one's own country and for the emperor, who is a ruler and leader to the nation's heart? Does not many a worthy man end his life's chapter obscure for want of opportunity? Then let me uphold the honor and duty of being Japanese. By going down with them we shall in a measure pay the debt we owe for the slaughter of these poor innocent peasants. They too are fighting for their country, so shall Bushi honor Bushi. There are more torpedo-boats and torpedo-boat destroyers than the number of ships in the whole fleet of Admiral Rojestvensky, and if each of them destroys or disables one of the enemy's vessels it ought to do.

"Father Togo, now gray-haired, walks quietly to and fro on the bridge of the Mikasa, and keeps silence, so all will go well. Do you remember the story when he went up to Tokio for the first time since the commencement of the war? Some public school boys were determined to unharness the horses of his carriage, at the instigation of the Asahi, I believe, and themselves draw it to the gate of the Imperial palace. Well Father Togo got wind of this and so he sent his chief-of-staff in the carriage while he was seen but not recognized, to be quietly walking towards Nijubashi, with his little daughter's hand in his. Will he play another trick upon the poor unsuspecting Russians when they come?

"I bid you again farewell. Work, work and work for the coming Japan depends on you fellows."

COMMERCIAL AGENCIES

Beaten In an Interesting Case at Mankato.

Mankato, Minn., June 28.—Judge Cray has filed a decision that will be of interest to city recorders. The representatives of Bradstreet's and Dun's commercial agencies have been regular callers at the office of City Recorder Hodapp to get information for their agencies concerning chattel mortgages, etc.

Recently the recorder has imposed a fee for showing the books, and last week the two agencies, through their local representative, D. B. Williams, commenced a mandamus proceeding to compel the recorder to show his books without making charges. They said that they were accorded no such treatment elsewhere. The city recorder took the ground that the law which says that the books shall be open to the inspection of "interested parties" does not include those who inspect them as the paid representatives of commercial agencies.

The court declined to issue a mandamus and dismissed the proceeding.

An appeal to the supreme court probably will follow.

THE CABINET'S ATHLETES.

Nearly All Men Who Delight In Sports.

Washington, June 28.—Everybody knows that President Roosevelt is an all-round athlete, but it is not, perhaps, so generally known that he has gathered about himself a cabinet of men whose tastes are similar to his own.

Of the cabinet officers chosen by President Roosevelt, Messrs. Shaw, Taft, Morton, Moody, Metcalf and Cortelyou are men who delight in sports, and Moody, Metcalf and Cortelyou have each achieved distinction.

Secretary Metcalf is slightly over six feet in height, straight as an arrow, and is fond of almost all outdoor sports. He is a Yale graduate and as a freshman rowed stroke on his class crew. He played baseball, the old-fashioned type of football, rode the bicycle and was an expert swimmer. In his later years Mr. Metcalf has taken principally to shooting, fishing and golf.

Postmaster General Cortelyou, who was born and reared in New York city, played baseball until he entered college, and at Georgetown and Columbia was the crack pitcher for the varsity team.

Notwithstanding his 250 pounds, Secretary Taft's chief sport is horseback riding, with golf, yachting and boxing as diversions. He leaves the war department almost every afternoon about 5 o'clock accompanied by one or more of his bureau chiefs and mounted on a large gray horse. When Secretary Taft does not ride into the country he slips away from his desk about 4 o'clock and joins Mr. Justice Harlan of the supreme court, on the Chevey Chase golf links before dinner.

Tim Murnane, the baseball writer, declares that the profession of baseball lost a star catcher when, in 1876, William H. Moody, the present attorney general, with a Harvard sheepskin in his hand, turned to the law. Mr. Moody was captain and catcher of the famous Haverhill club, and when he entered Harvard in 1872 as a freshman was placed behind the bat on the varsity team.

Secretary Shaw of the treasury department finds that the horse fulfills all his desires for recreation and sport. In fact, the president on his Wyoming is perhaps the only equestrain who can follow the Iowa man on his famous mount Prince.

Secretary Morton of the navy department is very fond of shooting, yachting, golf, horseback riding and dancing. Before the trap he is a crack shot, plays better than an average game of golf, and has entertained the president at some very close games on the tennis courts. Mr. Morton finds himself unable to acquire the baseball or football habit.

IN GOOD HEALTH,

He Named Day of Death and Died.

Morganton, N. C., June 28.—Nothing has caused as much comment in this state as the passing away of Alexander Perry of Smoky Creek township. Mr. Perry was about 65 years of age and in apparent good health. A few days ago he insisted that he would die in a day or two and had his wife send for J. H. Huffman, with whom he wanted to consult as to some business matters. When Huffman reached Perry he found him in good health, but insisted he would die in twenty-four hours.

Early next morning Perry put out his best clothes and sent a second time for Huffman, went to his room, laid down on a bed and died before Huffman reached him.

SECRETARY WILSON

Convinced of Leaks In the Cotton Figures.

Washington, June 28.—It is stated that Secretary Wilson is now convinced, as a result of the investigation into the "cotton bulletin scandal," that there were leaks and that figures in connection with the cotton reports were juggled. Chief Statistician Hyde is said to have expressed great surprise when confronted with the evidence submitted to Secretary Wilson by Richard Cheatham, secretary of the Southern Cotton Growers' association.

Edwin S. Holms, Jr., assistant statistician, who asked to be suspended pending the investigation, is at his home awaiting the result.

Secretary Wilson had expected to make public this week his report of the investigation, but it will not be given out for some little time. Mr. Cheatham was in conference throughout yesterday with Secretary Wilson and special agents of the secret service. He left for Memphis last night on a mission connected with the investigation. Secretary Wilson has postponed his trip to the forest reserves until the investigation has been finished.

LITTLE BOY KILLED

In a Peculiar Manner at Northfield.

Northfield, Minn., June 28.—Joseph, the 4-year-old son of Henry Beckert, was accidentally killed in a peculiar manner.

Peter Somers and the boy were riding a horse. Somers caught the boy in his arms and swung off the animal, which took the opposite course from that expected, so that the little fellow's head came in contact with a telephone pole. The concussion was so hard that the lad lived but twenty minutes after the accident.

BURGLARS PROFANE TOMBS

Broke Open Coffins In Search For Treasure.

Paris, June 28.—At Colombes, outside Paris, burglars broke into a small chapel containing the tombs of six persons who belonged to old French families. It was currently believed in the district that the six tombs contained jewels, old medals and coins, and hence the cupidity of the burglars was aroused. The profanation was discovered this week by the gardner of a parish priest at Colombes, who was about to sweep the walks about the funeral monument which is near the local church. The gardener found the oaken door of the chapel broken. Inside the tombs and coffins were open, and their contents scattered. The burglars destroyed several family portraits. The bodies are in a fair state of preservation. One is that of a Capt. d'Etchegoyen, born in Paris in 1816, who is described as having been aide-de-camp to the marshal duke of Reggio. On another coffin is inscribed the name of Suzanne Drouillan, born in San Domingo in 1760, wife of Daniel O'Connell, former quartermaster in the king's army. The police have been looking for the burglars throughout the district, but to no purpose. Today the profaned remains were placed in new cackets and the repair of the chapel was begun. It has been ascertained that the living ghouls who perpetrated the outrage found nothing of value in the tombs. Not to go away empty handed, however, they carried off some chunks of lead from the coffin.

Part of the catacombs of Paris beyond the Luxembourg have also been invaded by burglars who were on the look out not for loot, but for skulls. The thieves, four in number, did not venture far into the subterranean place of the dead, as they were evidently afraid of the labyrinths of the catacombs. They attacked the first pile of bones which they saw after having effected an entrance and carried away several skulls. The four catacomb burglars were arrested and tried. They stated to the police court that they wanted the skulls to decorate the rooms of their lodgings. In reality they proposed to sell them to medical students. The four were sentenced to pay small fines, and were given light sentences of imprisonment in addition.

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

The propreitor of an advertising magazine, whose business is to exploit all forms of publicity, including billboards, booklets, circulars, street car cards and dozens of other devices for bringing the manufacturer and retailer in touch with the consumer may be deemed a competent judge of the relative value of different mediums. This is what White's Sayings, a Pacific coast advertising journal, says of newspaper space:

A newspaper that keeps abreast of the times and gives prompt knowledge of the places where whatever is desired may be procured on the best possible terms, that gets and holds the attention of the largest number of people who want things, and maintains for itself a character for honesty and intelligence, is the demand of the experienced advertiser and no other medium is one-half so effective.

Fourth of July Excursions.

July 1 to 4 inclusive the Northern Pacific railway will sell tickets to all points on its line in Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota and return at one fare for the round trip, except to St. Paul, Minneapolis and Stillwater. Tickets good returning up to and including July 5. For tickets and full information call at City Ticket office 332 Superior street.

HALF OF INCOME

Of Cleveland Church Comes From Mr. Rockefeller.

Cleveland, June 28.—When John D. Rockefeller reaches for that yellow wrappered roll in his left hand hip pocket, digs into the middle of it, exhumes a $5 note and deposits it in the plate at Euclid Avenue Baptist church he taxes himself $3.75 besides giving up the five.

The fiscal arrangements existing between Rockefeller and his Cleveland church stipulate that for every dollar of income received by the church through collections or other sources Rockefeller shall give 75 cents. This plan means that approximately 43 per cent of the cost of maintaining the church and its various institutions and benevolences falls on Rockefeller.

The revenue of the church last year was nearly $35,000, of which about $17,000 was spent in the support of the foreign missions and other benevolences. The other half went to the support of the church itself.

WIFE AND HIRED MAN

Arrested and Cyrus Pratt's Funeral Stopped.

Marshalltown, Iowa, June 28.—The funeral of Cyrus Pratt, who died last Saturday near Lake City, was stopped, and his wife and the hired man, Will Kersing, were arrested on the charge of murder.

Mrs. Pratt is said to have bought poison at a drug store in Yetter, a nearby town, and is said to be in love with the hired man.

The stomach of Pratt has been sent East for analysis.

FOOD IN SERMONS

Feed the Dominie Right and the Sermons Are Brilliant.

A conscientious, hard-working and eminently successful clergyman writes: "I am glad to bear testimony to the pleasure and increased measure of efficiency and health that have come to me from adopting Grape-Nuts food as one of my articles of diet.

"For several years I was much distressed during the early part of each day by indigestion. My breakfast, usually consisting of oatmeal, milk and eggs, seemed to turn sour and failed to digest. After dinner the headache and other symptoms following the breakfast would wear away, only to return, however, next morning.

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts food, I finally concluded to give it a fair trial. I quit the use of oatmeal and eggs, and made my breakfasts of Grape-Nuts, cream, toast and Postum. The result was surprising in improved health and total absence of the distress that had, for so long a time, followed the morning meal. My digestion became once more satisfactory, the headaches ceased, and the old feeling of energy returned. Since that time, four years ago, I have always had Grape-Nuts food on my breakfast table.

"I was delighted to find also, that whereas before I began to use Grape-Nuts food I was quite nervous and became easily wearied in the work of preparing sermons and in study, a marked improvement in this respect resulted from the change in my diet. I am convinced that Grape-Nuts food produced this result and helped me to a sturdy condition of mental and physical strength.

"I have known of several persons who were formerly troubled as I was and who have been helped as I have been, by the use of Grape-Nuts food, on my recommendation, among whom may be mentioned the Rev. ——, now a missionary to China." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

RICH MEN WHO EVADE THE LAWS A MENACE TO THE COMMUNITY

Says President Roosevelt In Address to Harvard Alumni.

People Should Frown Upon and Discountenance These Men.

Cambridge, Mass., June 28.—The second day of President Roosevelt's visit to Harvard college to participate in the celebration incident to the twenty-fifth anniversary of the graduation of his class, that of 1880, included a varied program. Today was Harvard's annual commencement, and the visit of the president to his alma mater lent additional interest to an event that is always interesting. The president was to deliver the principal address at the alumni dinner and in addition was to participate in a number of festivities, mostly of a private nature.

After breakfast at the home of Bishop William Lawrence the president was driven to Massachusetts hall in front of which ancient structure the commencement procession was formed. The president was accompanied by Lieut.-Governor Guild, who represented Governor Douglas, the latter being detained by illness at his home in Brockton. The National Lancers, garbed in their picturesque costumes with red tunics and uhlan caps formed the president's escort.

The commencement exercises included the granting of diplomas to the graduates in the various departments of the university and the bestowal of honorary degrees.

The day was beautiful. After the long and active day yesterday, the president had a restful night at the home of Bishop Lawrence. He did not arise until about 8 o'clock. Even at that hour a visitor was waiting to see him, in the person of Mary A. Taylor, the colored woman who did the president's washing while he was at college. Before going to breakfast President Roosevelt appeared on the veranda where the caller was sitting and shook hands with her and gave her a cordial greeting. The woman had a hard time to convince the police who were on sentry duty about the grounds that she was what she pretended to be. Finally they permitted her to take a seat on the veranda and submitted the question of meeting her to the president. As soon as he was informed of the episode, Mr. Roosevelt said that he would see her.

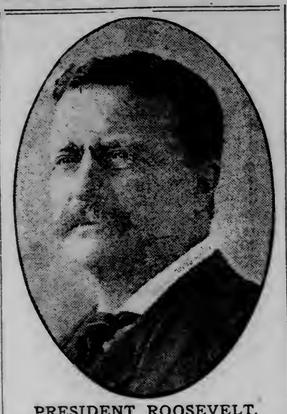
Breakfast was scarcely over when the Lancers, escorting Lieutenant Governor Guild, representing the commonwealth, arrived at the residence of the bishop. After the exchange of brief courtesies the president, accompanied by the lieutenant governor, proceeded to a carriage, and, with the Lancers leading, and the governor's staff and other dignitaries following, the procession moved to the yard at Harvard.

The streets were filled, and the cheering as the president's carriage passed, was continuous. As the party entered the yard the chimes on Christ church played "Fair Harvard," and as soon as the president was inside the gate every hat was removed. The party proceeded at once to Massachusetts hall. A few moments later they were joined by Secretary of War Taft, accompanied by Judge Francis C. Lowell, Charles J. Bonaparte and Former Secretary of the Navy John D. Long and the entire procession then started for Sanders theater.

At the theater the commencement parts were given as follows: Latin salutatory, R. A. Moore; "A Misunderstood Party," E. E. Brown; "Public Evening Schools," G. O. Hubbard; "The Italian in America," J. D. R. Story; "The Spirit of the Present South," W. A. Lamberth.

President Eliot then presented the honorary degrees.

Secretary of War Taft, Justice Edward D. White of the United States supreme court, and President James B. Angell of the University of Michigan, received the degree of doctor of laws. When the name of Secretary Taft was spoken, President Eliot was stopped by cheering. The audience would not be satisfied until the secretary had arisen and acknowledged the applause. Throughout the exercises President Roosevelt, who had not put on the doctor's cap and gown, to which he was entitled, occupied a seat to the left of the semi-circle formed by the distinguished persons on the platform, beside Lieutenant Governor Guild, Rev. Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United State's senate, and one of Harvard's most honored graduates, who was seated in the audience, was seen by President Roosevelt, and going to the side of Dr. Hale, greeted him heartily. The president and Mr. Guild then escorted Dr. Hale to the platform. In all 999 degrees were conferred, including 415 bachelor of arts, 137 master of arts, 167 bachelor of law, 67 doctor of medicine, and 37 out of course.



PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

The presidential party, including the aged mother of Secretary Taft, who had witnessed the conferring of degrees on her son, left the theater at 12 o'clock, and immediately after their exit, the doors were locked for ten minutes. From the theater the president went to the home of President Eliot, stopping on the way at the Germanic museum, where the president inspected the gifts of the German emperor.

The alumni dinner in Memorial hall began early this afternoon, and was largely attended. The president was the principal speaker. He said:

A great university like this has two especial functions. The first is to produce a small number of scholars of the highest rank, a small number of men who, in science and literature, or in art, will do productive work of the first class. The second is to send out into the world a very large number of men who never could achieve, and who ought not to try to achieve, such a position in the field of scholarship but whose endeavor to be felt in every other form of activity; and who should go out from our doors with the balanced development of body, of mind, and above all, of character, which shall fit them to do work both honorable and efficient.

Much of the effort to accomplish the first function, that of developing men capable of productive scholarship, as distinguished from merely imitative, annotative, or pedagogic scholarship, must come through the graduate school. The law school and medical school do admirable work in fitting men for special professions, but they in no sharp and way supply any shortcomings in the graduate school any more than does the college proper, the college of the undergraduates. The ideal for the graduate school and for those undergraduates who are to go into it must be the ideal of high scholarly production, which is to be distinguished in the sharpest fashion from the mere transmittal of ready-made knowledge without adding to it.

> If America is to contribute its full share to the progress not alone of knowledge, but of wisdom, then we must put ever-increasing emphasis on university work done along the lines of the graduate school.

We can best help the growth of American scholarship by seeing that as a career it is put more on a level with the other careers open to our young men. The general opinion of the community is bound to have a very great effect even upon its most vigorous and independent minds. If in the public mind the career of the scholar is regarded as of insignificant value when compared with that of a glorified pawnbroker, then it will with difficulty be made attractive to the most vigorous and gifted of our American young men. Good teachers, excellent institutions, and libraries are all demanded in a graduate school worthy of the name. But there is an even more urgent demand for the right sort of student. No first-class science, no first-class literature or art, can ever be built up with second-class men. The scholarly career, the career of the man of letters, the man of arts, the man of science, must be made such as to attract those strong and virile youths who now feel that they can only turn to business, law or politics. There is no one thing which will bring about this desired change, but there is one thing which will materially help in bringing it about, and that is to secure to scholars the chance of getting one of a few brilliant positions as prizes if they rise to the first rank in their chosen career. Every such brilliant position should have as an accompaniment an added salary, which shall help indicate how high the position really is; and it must be the efforts of the alumni which can alone secure such salaries for such positions.

> As a people I think we are waking up to the fact that there must be better pay for the average man and average woman engaged in the work of education.

But I am not speaking of this now; I am not speaking of the desirability, great though that is, of giving better payment to the average professor, I am speaking of the desirability of giving to the exceptional man the chance of winning an exceptional prize, just as he has the chance to do in law and business. In business at the present day nothing could be more healthy than an immense reduction in the money value of the exceptional prizes thus to be won; but in scholarship what is needed is the reverse. In this country we rightly go upon the theory that it is more important to care for the welfare of the average man than to put a premium upon the exceptions of the exceptional. But we must not forget that the establishment of such a premium for the exceptional, though of less importance, is nevertheless of very great importance. It is important even to the development of the average man, for the average of all of us is raised by the work of the great masters.

It is, I trust, unnecessary to say that I appreciate to the full the fact that the highest work of all will never be allotted one way or the other by any question of compensation. And much of the work which is really best for the nation must from the very nature of things be nonremunerative as compared with the work of the ordinary industries and vocations. Nor would it ever be possible or desirable that the rewards of transcendent success in scholarship should even approximate, from a monetary standpoint, the rewards in other vocations. But it is also true that the effect upon ambitious minds cannot but be bad if as a people we show our very slight regard for scholarly achievement by making no provision at all for its reward. The chief use of the increased money value of the scholar's prize would be the index thereby afforded of the respect in which it was regarded. No American scientist, the American scholar, should have the chance at least of winning such prizes as are open to his successful brother in Germany, England, or France, where the rewards paid for first-class scholarly achievement are as much above those paid in this country as our rewards for first-class achievement in industry or law are above those paid abroad.

But of course what counts infinitely more than any possible outside reward is the spirit of the worker himself.

> The prime need is to instill into the minds of the scholars themselves a true appreciation of real as distinguished from sham success.

In productive scholarship, in the scholarship which adds by its work to the sum of substantial achievement with which the country is to be credited, it is only first-class work that counts. In this field the smallest amount of really first-class work is worth all the second-class work that can possibly be produced; and to have done such work is in itself the fullest and amplest reward to the man producing it. We outsiders should, according to our ability, aid him in every way to produce it. Yet all that we can do is but little compared to what he himself can and must do. The spirit of the scholar is the vital factor in the productive scholarship of the country.

So much for the first function of the university, the sending forth of a small number of scholars of the highest rank who will do productive work of the first class. Now turn to the second, and what may be called the normal, function of the college, the function of turning out each year many hundreds of men who shall possess the trained intelligence, and especially the character, that will enable them to hold high the renown of this ancient seat of learning by doing useful service for the nation. It is not my purpose to discuss at length what should be done in Harvard to produce the right spirit among the men who go out of Harvard, but rather to speak of what this spirit should be. Nor shall I speak of the exceptions, the men to whom college life is a disadvantage. Randolph of Roanoke, he of the biting tongue, once remarked of an opponent that he reminded him of certain tracts of land "which were almost worthless by nature, and became entirely so by cultivation." Of course, if in any individual university training produces a taste for refined idleness, a distaste for sustained effort, a barren intellectual arrogance, or a sense of supercilious aloofness from the world of real men who do the world's real work, then it has harmed that individual; but in such case there remains the abiding comfort that he would not have amounted to much anyway.

> Neither a college training nor anything else can do much good to the man of weak fiber or to the man with a twist in his moral or intellectual make-up.

But the average undergraduate has enough robustness of nature, enough capacity for enthusiasm and aspiration, to make it worth while to turn to account the stuff that is in him.

There are, however, two points in the undergraduate life of Harvard about which I think we have a right to feel some little concern. One is the growth of luxury in the university. I do not know whether anything we can say will have much effect on this point, but just so far as the alumni have weight I hope to see that weight felt in serious and sustained effort against the growing tendency to luxury, and in favor of all that makes for democratic conditions. One of our number, the one whom I think the rest of us most delight to honor—Colonel Higginson—has given to our alma mater the Harvard Union, than which no better gift, no gift meeting a more vital need, could have been given to the university. It is neither possible nor desirable to try to take away all social differences from the student life; but it is a good thing to show how unimportant these differences are compared to the differences of real achievement, and compared also to the bonds which should unite together all the men who are in any degree capable of such real achievement; bonds, moreover, which should also knit these capable men to their brethren who need thir help.

The second point upon which I wish to speak is the matter of sport. Now I shall not be suspected of a tendency unduly to minimize the importance of sport. I believe heartily in sport. I believe in outdoor games, and I do not mind in the least that they are rough games, or that those who take part in them are occasionally injured. I have no sympathy whatever with the overwrought sentimentality which would keep a young man in cotton wool, and I have a hearty contempt for him if he counts a broken arm or collar bone as of serious consequence, when balanced against the chance of showing that he possesses hardihood, physical address and courage. But when these injuries are inflicted by others, either wantonly or of set design, we are confronted by the question, not of damage to one man's body, but of damage to the other man's character.

> Brutality in playing a game should awaken the heartiest and most plainly shown contempt for the player guilty of it; especially if this brutality is coupled with a low cunning in committing it without getting caught by the umpire.

I hope to see both graduate and undergraduate opinion come to scorn such a man as one guilty of base and dishonorable action, who has no place in the regard of gallant and upright men.

It is a bad thing for any college man to grow to regard sport as the serious business of life. It is a bad thing to permit sensationalism and hysteria to shape the development of our sports. And finally, it is a much worse thing to permit college sport to become in any shape or way tainted by professionalism, or by so much as the slightest suspicion of moneymaking; and this is especially true if the professionalism is furtive, if the boy or man violates the spirit of the rule while striving to keep within the letter. Professional sport is all right in its way. I am glad to say that among my friends I number professional boxers and wrestlers, oarsmen and baseball men, whose regard I value, and whom in turn I regard as thoroughly good citizens. But the college undergraduate who, in furtive fashion, becomes a semi-professional is an unmitigated curse, and that not alone to university life and to the cause of amateur sport; for the college graduate ought in every way to take the lead in putting the business morality of this country on a proper plane, and he can not do it if in his own college career his code of conduct has been warped and twisted. Moreover, the spirit which puts so excessive a value upon his work as to produce this semi-professional is itself unhealthy. I wish to see Harvard win a reasonable proportion of the contests in which it enters, and I should be heartily ashamed of every Harvard athlete who did not spend every ounce there was in him in the effort to win, provided only he does it in honorable fashion. But I think our effort should be to minimize rather than to increase that kind of love of athletics which manifests itself, not in joining in the athletic sports, but in crowding by tens of thousands to see other people indulge in them. It is a far better thing for our colleges to have the average student interested in some form of athletics than to have them all gather in a mass to see other people do their athletics for them.

So much for the undergraduates. Now for the alumni, the men who are at work out in the great world. Of course the man's first duty is to himself and to those immediately dependent upon him. Unless he can pull his own weight he must be content to remain a passenger all his life. But we have a right to expect that the men who come out of Harvard will do something more than merely pull their own weight. We have a right to expect that they will count as positive forces for the betterment of their fellow-countrymen; and they can thus count only if they combine the power of devotion to a lofty ideal with practical common sense in striving to realize this ideal.

> This nation never stood in greater need than now of having among its leaders men of lofty ideals, which they try to live up to and not merely to talk of.

"We need men with these ideals in public life, and we need them just as much in business and in such a profession as the law. We can by statute establish only those exceedingly rough lines of morality, the overpassing of which means that the man is in jeopardy of the constable or the sheriff. But the nation is badly off if in addition to this there is not a very much higher standard of conduct, a standard impossible effectively to establish by statute, but one upon which the community as a whole, and especially the real leaders of the community, insist. Take such a question as the enforcement of the law. It is, of course, elementary to say that this is the first requisite in any civilization at all. But a great many people in the ranks of life from which most college men are drawn seem to forget that they should condemn with equal severity those men who break the law by committing crimes of mob violence, and those who evade the law, or who actually break it, but so cunningly that they can not be discovered, the crimes they commit being not those of physical outrage, but those of greed and craft on the largest scale. The very rich man who conducts his business as if he believed that he were a law unto himself, thereby immensely increases the difficulty of the task of upholding order when the disorder is a menace to men of property; for if the community feels that rich men disregard the law where it affects themselves, then the community is apt to assume the dangerous and unwholesome attitude of condoning crimes of violence committed against the interests which in the popular mind these rich men represent. This last attitude, is wholly evil; but so is the attitude which produces it. We have a right to appeal to the alumni of Harvard, and to the alumni of every institution of learning in this land, to do their part in creating a public sentiment which shall demand of all men of means, and especially of the men of vast fortune, that they set an example to their less fortunate brethren, by paying scrupulous heed not only to the letter but to the spirit of the laws, and by acknowledging in the highest and manliest fashion the moral obligations which can not be expressed in law, but which stand back of and above all laws. It is far more important that they should conduct their business as fairly and decently than that they should spend the surplus of their fortunes in philanthropy. Much has been given to these men and we have a right to demand much of them in return.

> Every man of great wealth who runs his business with cynical contempt for those prohibitions of the law which by hired cunning he can escape or evade, is a menace to our community; and the community is not to be excused if it does not develop a spirit which actively frowns on and discountenances him.

HAS SHARP BULGE

Wheat Weak Early But Has Strong Advance Toward Noon.

Weather Is Controlling Influence and Conditions Excite Alarm.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 28.—The wheat market opened weaker this morning and in the first part of the session there was free selling and a decline of in the neighborhood of ½c from the opening. After 11 o'clock an advance began that added more than 2c to the price and the close was at a good advance. Reports of hail in the Northwest started the buying that put the price up. Grand Forks reported hail there with stones as big as eggs. It is a weather market. The general tone of the advice from the wheat fields is that it has been too wet and that warm weather and sunshine are needed at once to save the crop from serious loss. Minneapolis reported the receipt there of samples of wheat showing black rust on the stalks. The Liverpool market closed ¼@⅜d higher.

The September option gained 1c for the new and 1⅝c for the old in the Duluth market, 1⅜c in Minneapolis, ¾-⅞c in Chicago, 1c in New York, 1⅛-1¼c in St. Louis and unchanged at Kansas City.

Primary receipts of wheat were 161,182 bus., last year 212,871 bus. Shipments 190,999 bus., last year 195,404 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 53,089 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¾d higher, as the Chicago market September corn closed 1c lower. September oats closed ⅛c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 1,152,250 bus., last year 645,340 bus. Shipments 576,858 bus., last year 230,560 bus. Clearances were 364,308 bus.

The Duluth wheat market was fairly active. The new September option opened ⅛c lower at 86c, advanced to 86⅝c at 10:30, fell back to 85¾c at 11:15 and then bulged to 87½c at 12:20 and closed at 87¼c, a gain of 1c for the day. The old September opened ¼c lower at 91¼c, fell to 91c at 9:50, rallied to 91⅝c at 10:25, and then fell to 90⅝c at 11:17. It then jumped to 93c at 1 o'clock and closed at 92⅞c, a gain of 1¾c. July closed unchanged.

Flax was dull. July closed 1c lower at $1.45. September unchanged at $1.29 and October ⅛c lower at $1.26½.

Oats fell ⅛c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive—No. 1 northern, $1.11½; On track—No. 1 northern, $1.11½; No. 2 northern, $1.03½. Durum No. 1, 84c; No. 2, 83c; July, $1.11½; September new, 87¼c; September old, 92⅞c. Flax to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.45; Sept., $1.29; Oct., $1.26½. Oats to arrive, 32⅜c; on track, 32⅜c. Rye on track, 72c; Sept., 62½c. Barley—Feed, 29½@31c.

Receipts: Wheat, 5,782; oats, 1,960; barley, 5,156; flax, 2,736.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Bearish In Spite of All Influences.

Chicago, June 28.—In spite of a number of bullish influences, including firm cables and continued wet weather in the Northwest, sentiment in the wheat pit here today was quite bearish. Cash houses were free sellers of the July option, and this caused weakness in all deliveries. Weather in the Southwest was generally favorable to harvesting operations. July opened a shade to ⅛-¼c lower at 90¾c to 90⅝c and declined to 90¼c. September opened a shade to ¼c lower at 86¼c to 86⅜@⅝c and sold off to 86¼@⅜c. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 80 cars, against 110 cars last week and 208 a year ago.

In the last half of the day sentiment suddenly changed, the market becoming exceedingly strong. Numerous reports of damage were received, advices from Minneapolis claiming great damage had been done spring sown wheat by wet weather. On active demand from several prominent commission houses, September advanced 87⅞c, while July sold up to 91¾c. Part of the gain was subsequently lost on profit taking, but the market closed strong, with July up ⅜@⅝c at 91¼c. September was up ⅞@⅞c at 87½@⅝c.

A weak tone prevailed in corn as a result of general profit-taking. July opened ⅜@⅝c lower at 55⅝c to 56c, and held within the opening range. September opened ⅛c to ⅜@½c lower at 55⅜@⅝c to 55⅝c and declined to 54⅝c. Local receipts were 412 cars with 34 of contract grade.

An estimate of liberal receipts for tomorrow gave additional encouragement to bears causing still further weakness. For September the lowest point of the day was reached at 54⅜c. On covering by shorts July advanced to 56¼c, but quickly reacted to 55⅞c. The close was weak, with July off ⅜c at 55½c. September was down 1c at 54⅝c.

Oats were affected by the weakness of other grain, sentiment in the pit being inclined to bearishness. July opened ⅛c lower at 32⅜c and sold off to 32⅜c. September opened unchanged to a shade higher at 31¼c to 31⅛@⅜c and declined to 30⅞c. Local receipts were 89 cars.

September pork was off 2½c at $13.00. Lard was a shade lower at $7.45½. Ribs were unchanged at $8.

Close: Wheat—July, 91¼c; September, 87⅛@⅜c; December, 86¾@⅞c. Corn—July, 55⅝c; old, 56⅜c; September, 54⅝c; old, 55c; December, 49¼c; old, 51¼c; May, 49¾c. Oats—June, 32⅝c; July, 32⅜c; September, 31⅛c; December, 31¾@⅞c; May, 33⅜c. Pork—July, $12.77½; September, $13.12½; October, $12.15. Lard—July, $7.27½; September, $7.47½; October, $7.55; November, $7.35. Ribs—July, $7.85; September, $8.00; October, $8.02½@8.05. Rye—July, 66c; September, 63¼c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.43; Southwestern, $1.25. Timothy—June, $3.90; September, $3.45. Barley—Cash, 42@56c. Clover—June, $12.50. Cash wheat—No. 2 red $1.04; No. 3 red, 95@$1.00; No. 2 hard, $1.04; No. 3 hard, 95@$1.00; No. 1 northern, $1.15; No. 2 northern, $1.10@1.15; No. 3 spring, $1.06@1.10. Corn—No. 2, 55½@⅝c; No. 3, 56@½c. Oats—No. 2, 31½@32c; No. 3, 31@¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

State Grain Reports:

North Dakota—The past week was unusually cold and cloudy, with light to heavy rains in all sections. Hailstorms are reported from several places, but are not believed to have done a great amount of damage. Light frosts occurred at scattered points in the northern portion during the week, but were not heavy enough to do any damage at all. Wheat is still doing very well, except on lowland, where drowned out, and in some spots where it has turned yellow on account of too much moisture and lack of sunshine. The plant is generally strong, but is as a rule quite tender, and has stooled well. Early sown rye and barley are heading, with straw of average height and long heads. Oats are doing fairly well but are growing very slowly. The weather has been too cool and wet for flax, and it has made but little growth the past week; the entire crop is quite backward and considerably behind the season. Corn has made but little progress, on account of the cold, wet weather; the plant is small, yellow in color, and anything but promising in appearance.

Minnesota—The lowlands are very wet, and all meadows are flooded; crops on these soils are either suffering considerably from the excess of moisture, or they are already drowned out. On the uplands spring wheat, oats, barley, flax and rye are growing very rapidly, and on the rich soils there is a decided tendency to lodge. Early spring wheat, oats and barley are heading in southern portions. A little rust is reported on wheat in Chippewa, Lac qui Parle, Yellow Medicine, Lincoln, Lyon, Cottonwood, Martin, Blue Earth, Faribault, Lesueur, and Rice counties. Early potatoes are coming into blossom.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Market opened a shade easier and for some time ruled extremely nervous. Trade, however, again took the bull by the horns and from the low point the market scored almost a two-cent straight away advance in September wheat without any reaction. News was mostly bullish. Southwest millers are reported to be buying the July option fearing a possible wet harvest and again discouraged by the very evident reluctance on the part of farmers to become liberal sellers of new wheat. Outside markets were all strong and sharply higher. The conditions in the Northwest seems to be critical throughout the trade and appprehension from this source seems to grow daily. As yet we see no occasion, looking at conditions squarely to change our ideas on this market. It is strong and seems to gather strength each day. Setbacks are small but when they come we favor buying wheat.

Corn—The little easier feeling at the opening was followed by a sudden bulge which carried the market fractionally higher than yesterday's close, which point the bull leaders were liberal sellers. The large receipts seem to have taken the snap out of the bull side. Weather conditions are more favorable and indications are that temperatures will improve. It is still a market in which the cash demand, receipts and weather are all likely to be factors. We still favor caution in buying on the bulges.

Oats—Cash houses in a way were moderate buyers of the September oats. As in corn, we do not like to get too enthusiastic on the bulges.

• • •

New York Sun: Europe's wheat supplies are probably 100,000,000 bus less than a year ago, and her present crop prospects indicate that she will have to raise her bids for foreign wheat this season. No exceptionally large crops are looked for in any part of the world this year and there is every reason for believing that we will have a market at higher prices for all wheat we can spare for export. Whether we will greatly exceed our past season's small shipments of about 50,000,000 bus is doubtful. One-fifth of our flour sold abroad this fiscal year went over the Pacific.

• • •

Winnipeg wired the following estimate of crop prospects: "Some spots in the Red River valley had too much rain. The general feeling is that crop prospects are good. We want fair weather from now on."

CLOSE MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

Chicago, June 28.—The directors of the board of trade here have decided to close the exchange Monday and Tuesday, July 3 and 4.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

Middletown, N. Y., June 28.—James Horton, former president of the United States Leather company, died today after a protracted illness.

New York, June 28.—William J. Fielding, an actor quite well known about the country, is dead at his home in Richmond Hill, L. I. He was stricken with heart failure on board a train homeward bound.

RESTRICTIONS ON RUSSIA Which Japs Desire Incorporated in Peace Terms.

Tokio, June 28, 6 p. m.—A manifesto published today by the Progressive party is practically identical with the resolution adopted by the Constitutionalists. It contains, however, the following additional points which the party desired to have incorporated in the peace movement:

Forbid Russia to raise works for warlike use in localities where Japan's interests might be menaced. Compel Russia to relinquish the privileges she has enjoyed in Manchuria, refrain from future interference with the Manchurian question and pledge herself to undertake no measure deemed to be menacing to peace or to the frontiers of China."

Rise In Chicago Terminals Feature of the Opening.

Entire List Well Bought and Closing Was Strong.

New York, June 28.—The feature of the opening dealings was a rapid advancement in the Chicago terminal stocks. The common rose 2¾ and the preferred 8 points by intervals of 1 point between sales. Buying orders well distributed through the list lifted prices to a high level all around. Gains reached a point or more in Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Northwestern and Sugar and to a large fraction in Reading, St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, and Tennessee Coal. Realizing effectually wiped out opening advances in St. Paul and Union Pacific, but their reaction did not prevent some advances elsewhere. Northwestern and Sugar increased their rise to 2 points and Des Moines & Fort Dodge sold 3 higher. An extended list of stocks made gains of a point or more, including New York Central, Reading, Baltimore & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Erie second preferred, Illinois Central, Kansas & Texas preferred, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, New York, Chicago & St. Louis, Tennessee Coal, Pacific Mail, Union Bag preferred, and United Railway Investment preferred.

There was a reaction in Chicago Terminal preferred of 3 points, Chicago Union Traction preferred declined 3, Rubber Goods preferred, 1½, and Federal Mining 1. Near 11 o'clock St. Paul rebounded from 176½ to 177¾ and Union Pacific recovered to 158⅜. Reading meanwhile lost its point rise.

The rise of ½ in Baltimore & Ohio carried with it Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio and Reading second preferred to the extent of a point. Northwestern mounted 7 points, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha 3 and Northern Pacific 4, which had some sustaining effect on Western roads. Lead, United Railway and Investment, Wabash and Canadian Pacific gained 1 and Twin City Rapid Transit and New York Central 2. Realizing was continuous in some parts of the market. Bonds were firm at noon except for weakness in Japanese government's.

All of the stocks comprising the Pennsylvania group were bought with confidence and sold substantially above their earlier high prices. B. & O. figuring for a rise of 2 points, while Reading touched 100¼. The market generally showed a steadier undertone and there was more general interest manifested in a large number of usually neglected stocks. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha made a buoyant rise of 9 points, while St. Joe & Grand Island first preferred got up 3. Great Northern preferred and Realty declined 1 and 2 points respectively.

Stock that had shown some inclinations to lag were taken up in the afternoon especially Union Pacific and United States Steel preferred. Trading generally was much quieter, but the Pennsylvania group and all other earlier strong features held up well. Union Pacific, Erie first preferred and Manhattan gained a point each. Consolidated Gas lost 1½.

Southern Pacific rose a point before selling to realize on the day's profits made its effect on prices. There was a reaction of 5 in Chicago Terminal preferred. Wisconsin Central dropped 1½ and Pump 3. Wells Fargo Express sold at a decline of 15 points. Louisville & Nashville led a recovery with an aggressive rise of 3⅛. Atlantic Coast Line and Peoria & Eastern gained 3, Baltimore & Ohio 2⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio 2 and a number of minor stocks 1 to 2. There was some renewed realizing and the closing was below the best but was steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed strong and seems to give evidence daily that is a genuine bull movement based on good general predictions throughout the country. Baltimore & Ohio was one of the strong features of the day's session, but the entire list seemed well bought. Bullish talk on Reading, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Steels came from some of the best sources. Still think stocks are a purchase on the set-backs.

• • •

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: The Reading's May statement due this week is expected to be a good one. Reading actually carried to market 1,262,000 tons or 300,000 tons more than in the same month of 1904. The earnings will compare with figures last year about $400,000 below the best years, in the gross, and as net earnings they were still more below the normal, the forthcoming comparison for the month of May should be favorable.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Reading second preferred at a reasonably 4 per cent stock looks attractive to us. We have every confidence in the Reading property and believe that both prefered stocks will within a year be selling at par or over.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 28.—The cotton market opened strong at an advance of 7@10 points in response to higher cables. There was very heavy realizing, but there was also an active and excited demand which caused an advance to a net gain of 20@21 points. Spot advices continued sensationally firm and while the weather was considered favorable, the bulls still claim that prospects favor a small crop next season.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 40 points higher; middling uplands, 9.90; middling gulf, 10.15; sales, none. Futures closed firm; June, 9.34; July, 9.41; August, 9.46; September, 9.57; October, 9.61; November, 9.66; December, 9.72; January, 9.78; February, 9.81; March, 9.86; April, 9.90; May, 9.95.

SECRETARY MORONEY GOES TO WASHINGTON.

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—P. M. Moroney, secretary of the Eighth civil service district, with headquarters in this city, has been transferred at his own request to a position with the civil service commission at Washington.

Mr. Moroney's duties as district secretary have made it necessary for him to do a great deal of traveling over several states which has been a burden, since his large family was left motherless last February. Mr. Moroney will leave for Washington July 15. His successor will be John L. Shoemaker of Washington, who is expected in the city Saturday.

NOTICE.

The Steamer Newsboy will NOT make a trip to Fond du Lac on THURSDAY, JUNE 29, but will give a moonlight excursion on the bay and lake tonight and Thursday, leaving at 8:30, returning at 10:30. Fine music. Tickets, 25c.

LAST OF LECTURES

On Wireless Telegraphy About to Take Place.

The last of the lectures demonstrating how wireless telegraphy is used, will take place this evening at Steinway hall. These lectures have been well attended and much interest has been aroused over the demonstrations. It is understood also that quite an amount of stock has been subscribed for by Duluth people. Some excellent tests have been successfully made, the apparatus working well.

Last night's lecture brought a large crowd and it is believed that the success will be duplicated or surpassed this evening.

LIABILITIES GROWING.

Chicago Brokerage Firm Said to Owe $3,000,000.

Chicago, June 28.—The failure of the grain and stock brokerage firm of Knight, Donnelly & Co., which occurred several days ago, has assumed gigantic proportions. Although Receiver Potter has not yet finished examination of the books of the concern enough was learned today to approximate the liabilities. They will aggregate not far from $3,600,000. The assets may sum up to $2,500,000, although these may dwindle considerably owing to the character of many of the loans made by the firm.

Homeseekers and Settlers to the Northwest.

PAMPHLETS ARE PRINTED

Engineer Receives First Installment of Ferry Bridge Booklets.

Containing views of Duluth and of the aerial ferry bridge in all stages of construction, the first installment of the pamphlets issued by the city engineer describing the new bridge, were received yesterday afternoon from the printer.

The pamphlet is a very complete manual of the bridge, describing it in all its phases. The matter was compiled by City Engineer McGilvray and can be relied upon as accurate.

The pictures are also very clear and show every stage of construction from the time work was commenced on the towers.

About 4,000 of the pamphlets will be printed and distributed in answer to the innumerable inquiries which are received at the office of the city engineer, by the different city officials, the postmaster and the daily papers. The letters come from all parts of the world inquiring for the facts concerning the new bridge, and the little pamphlet will give all the necessary information.

A large number of copies will also be distributed among the coal dealers who are in convention in Duluth at the present time, and others will be mailed to the city officials of the principal cities in the country.

GOLD HEADED CANE

Presented to D. B. McDonald By His Neighbors.

Virginia, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—D. B. McDonald of the firm of Cole & McDonald, diamond drill contractors, was on Tuesday afternoon presented with a handsome gold headed cane by his neighbors. Mr. McDonald is about the only one who, in the last few years, has become wealthy through iron mining and remained a citizen of Virginia by choice, and he has shown his faith in the town by investing and pushing improvements of all kinds. Few, indeed, can boast of so many friends and admirers among the working classes as Mr. McDonald, and none can testify better to Dan's sterling qualities as a man than his close neighbors.

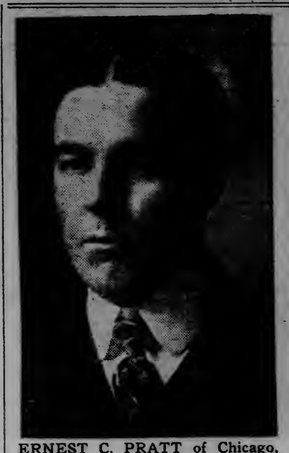
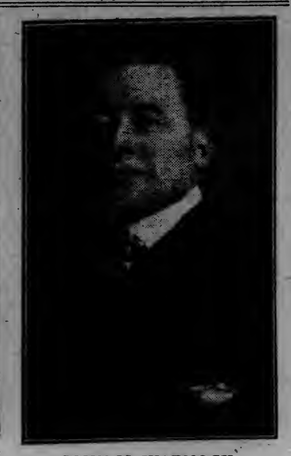
Banquet at Spalding to Be Given by Wholesale Companies.



ERNEST C. PRATT of Chicago, Editor of the Black Diamond, the Coal Trade Journal.



JOHN M. WARNOCK of Minneapolis.

Nothing special for the entertainment of the Northwestern retail coal dealers, now holding a convention in the city, was on the program for last night, but all of the visitors appeared to be enjoying themselves, nevertheless. The Spalding hotel is the headquarters for those socially inclined, although several were in evidence about the Commercial club, where all of the business meetings are held. The privileges of the club are free to the dealers while they are in the city.

At the Spalding hotel Parlor X has been engaged for the three days by Head of the Lakes wholesalers and placed at the disposal of the retailers. Here a waiter is in charge of a plentiful supply of good cigars and a mammoth bowl full of a beautiful red liquid, with cakes of ice and pieces of fruit floating about in it. It, with cigars, is dealt out with a lavish hand.

Many of the guests put in the early part of the evening sight-seeing, and the liveries did a good business. The aerial bridge was visited by many, while a large contingent was present at the theaters.

Tonight the dealers will not be left to their own resources, for there will be a big banquet at the Spalding hotel. The banquet is complimentary by the coal companies located at the Head of the Lakes to visiting delegates. About 400 plates, the full capacity of the diningroom, will be laid.

E. N. Saunders of St. Paul will act as toastmaster. He has been in the coal trade in the Northwest about as long as anyone in the association, or longer, and is generally well known and liked by the mebers. J. L. Washburn will respond to the toast, "Our Picturesque City," and "Our Growing Child," (the association), will be the subject of a toast by C. M. Morse of Winona. H. H. Rhodes of Chicago will speak on "Coal," and "Any Kind" is the subject alloted J. B. Cavanaugh of Chicago.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Discussions of Much Interest to Coal Trade.

F. C. Hanford of Milwaukee, who spoke at the afternoon session of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' convention yesterday, taking as a subject, "Refusing Coal In Transit and At Destination," occupied only a few minutes with his talk. He took the place of J. B. Cavanaugh of Chicago, who was to have spoken on that subject.

He said that the dealers frequently refused coal after it had been shipped them, giving as an excuse the fact that the shippers had been slow in making the delivery. In many cases, he explained, the delay was entirely the fault of the railroad company. He cited instances where coal had been turned over to the railroad the next day after it was ordered, and where it was not delivered to the purchaser for several weeks. This is not the fault of the shipper, and the retailer, he maintained, should take this fact into consideration and treat the wholesaler more liberally, helping him dispose of the coal, and not returning the shipment.

Again a big rush of orders will follow a cold spell in the early spring of the year. Orders will be coming in from every side, said the speaker, and the offices of the wholesaler will be literally swamped, where business may have been quiet for weeks. Every man wants his order attended to the very first thing. It is utterly impossible to attend to them all first, and so the shipments are sent out as fast as circumstances will permit. After a delay of a few days some of the retailers will begin to wire in to have their orders cancelled, when probably their order has gone forward before the receipt of the cancelation order. This puts the wholesaler up against a hard proposition, for he cannot well recall the car, which may already be hundreds of miles on its way.

"The retailers should meet the shippers half way," concluded Mr. Hanford.

• • •

One of the most interesting papers of yesterday's session was read late in the afternoon by Ernest Pratt of Chicago, editor of the Black Diamond. His subject was: "Co-operative Concerns, Should They Be Recognized by the Trade When Associated to Buy Coal and Distribute to Their Members at Cost?" Mr. Pratt spoke, in part, as follows:

"In considering this subject I would divide it under two heads, the good co-operative enterprise and the bad. The good co-operative enterprise is one which will not demand much of our attention. We are not here for that purpose and it stands as a monument of its own integrity. Briefly, it is the associating together of those having capital for the purpose of promoting a business, entirely legitimate in its character. It has back of it sufficient capital and from that fact alone has a recognized standing in the business world; it is managed by competent and experienced men in the line of commerce in which it is engaged; it sells merchandise or its product for the full market value, and the only advantage which it confers upon its various partners is the legitimate profit, earned on the money invested in the proper conduct of business. Such a business must be commended, because it is the foundation of all of our commercial growth. It exists under various names and in a number of disguises, such as copartnerships, stock companies, corporations, and wherever it exists nearly always is legitimate and respectable.

"The very antithesis of this co-operative business at every point is the one which I feel in duty bound to designate as bad. It has an existence among you in the northwest, and in fact in a great many communities throughout our country. Because of its vicious features I feel that the whole power and effort of the entire commercial world should be directed toward crushing it out, not only that the legitimate retailer may be protected in his proper rights, but that all our commercial enterprises shall be more safe and staple.

"The bad co-operative enterprise is one which is formed without a knowledge of the business in which the partners or those furnishing the capital are about to engage. Having no knowledge along these lines, they do not know how much capital will be required and consequently in nearly every instance, it has insufficient funds to accomplish the purpose for which it was organized, even though her conditions later on may favor its success.

"The third fatal mistake in connection with bad co-operative enterprises is in connection with their sales policy. Such a company induces small capitalists to invest money with the plausible statement that they will receive merchandise or the product at actual cost. Most often the price of the goods to be sold is fixed before anything else. We all know how difficult it is after years of experience to arrive at correct results in ascertaining the actual gross cost of a commodity in which we deal, and therefore as experienced business men we must have a keen appreciation of how difficult the task to decide upon the cost price before we engage in that business and before we have any knowledge of the various items which must be stopped before there is a profit. Try to establish a selling price before you know this feature of the business and ruin most certainly must stare you in the face from the outset.

"In one bad co-operative enterprise a blow is struck at legitimate retail interests, having thousands of dollars invested, from which the dealers will not fully recover in five years, yea not in ten years. What impairs the earning power of the retailer injures the earning power of the shipper and producer of coal. The retailer is the foundation of commercial prosperity wherever he is a factor, and in the case of the coal trade, he is most essential to the success of the industry, on account of its peculiar requirements, such as storage of the product, haulage and other details of business, which cannot be undertaken by the large producing factor as successfully as by the competent retailer.

"But there is still another feature. I believe in the protection of the retailer in every possible way to guarantee him a reasonable and legitimate livelihood, and if he can secure more than that we must have great confidence in his business ability, for there are not many dealers who do. It is our duty, however, to call the attention of the shipper to the protection he should not only guarantee the retailer, but to himself, for generally being a larger factor in the business world he alone can look out for his own best interests.

"It is to the interest of the producer and shipper of coal to see that the retailer is protected in a legitimate profit, because then the latter can meet his obligations when they become due, and the losses through bad accounts will be reduced to the minimum. If the dealer is obliged to compete either with a bad co-operative enterprise, or a shipping company selling at wholesale to consumers, he will make no profits. If he makes no profits he cannot pay his obligations. If he cannot pay his obligations the man who granted him credit sustains a direct loss. The retailer must be protected to insure the wholesaler or operator his profits."

J. K. Dering of Chicago, who was down for a response, was not present. H. E. Smith spoke interestingly of the need of the big majority of dealers for better business education. He said the many new towns through the West were continually bringing new retailers into the field who lacked experience. He did not believe in boycotting a man because he was slashing prices, until all possible reasonable means had been adopted to bring him to terms. He expressed a desire to see better feeling prevail between the shipper and the retail dealer.

THE MORNING SESSION.

Discussions Bring Forth Many Valuable Ideas.

Much of the time during this morning's session was taken up by a discussion of short weights in coal. Worrell Clarkson of St. Paul started the discussion, which was quite generally participated in, by a brief talk on the subject. He represented the shippers' side of the question.

Mr. Clarkson admitted that the weights of cars of coal were not always exactly right. He said the retail dealers did not expect them to be always correct, for to have them so would be practically impossible. He asserted that the operators did not care where or on what scale the cars were weighed, so long as the same scales in a certain territory were used every time. What he did object to was having one shipment of coal weighed on one scale, and the next shipment weighed on another scale. This would result in an unequal average being maintained. If the same scale is used all the of the time, he said, it would be more fair to all concerned. He pointed out the fact that it was to the operator's interest to give full weight, for if he did not do this he would displease his customers, and this would mean a falling off in trade. Recognizing this to be a fact, the shipper is just as anxious to give full weight as the retailer is to receive it. Mr. Clarkson argued that when the shortage was the fault of the railroad company, as is often the case, the corporation should be compelled to make good the losses. The speaker asked that when the dealers have complaints to make on the quantity of coal received, that they report the condition of the shipment on its arrival at its destination to the shipping company, so that the latter may better judge whether the railroad is at fault. When such a report is made, the condition of the seal and car in general should be given, with information as to whether or not the car has the appearance of having been tampered with.

Different dealers present told experiences of where their shipments had been short. Senator Myaanrd Crane of Cooperstown, N. D., said the dealer should be satisfied if there was no more than a 1,000-pound shortage in a car of forty tons of coal. It is to be expected, he stated, that sometimes there would be a shortage, and through no fault of the shipper. A shortage of more than this amount, the speaker thought, justified a complaint. He said that in twenty-one years' business experience he did not remember of finding a single shortage in shipments to Dakota from either Duluth or Superior. He thought the companies here were inclined to be fair, and to do everything possible to satisfy their customers. V. B. Roosevelt of Akley, Iowa, said the weights of the Western Weighing association, as given out, were not to be depended upon.

• • •

John M. Warnock of Minneapolis spoke for the retailers on "Abuse of Quotations and Shipments by the Producers to Consumers and Its Effect on the Regular Trade."

"To me one of the most pleasing features of the present convention," said Mr. Warnock, "is the fact that there are so many shippers present. That so large a number of them should be with us at this time is a distinct compliment. It indicates that the shipper is in sympathy with the retailer, and that he is glad to do what he can to promote more friendly relations and to help the other fellow along.

"Great improvements are noted in the manner of shipping coal in the last few years, and the matter of irregular shipments has been largely overcome. One abuse to which the dealer of today is subjected at the hands of the shipper is the indiscriminate sending out of price lists and circulars, giving the prevailing wholesale prices of coal. Many concerns send these circulars to men who have been out of the coal business for ten or fifteen years, keeping them in touch with the prices. This should not be done.

"The cost of coal in this manner becomes public property, and the consumer, not content to let the dealer make even a reasonable, living profit, and not understanding the expenses of the dealer in handling coal, enters vigorous protest against the prices charged for the commodity, and to prove that the prices are too high he tells the dealer what the wholesale price is. The fact that these price lists are sent to the regular dealers in circular form, in an open envelope, also tends to make public the wholesale prices, for it is an easy matter for a curious person to look inside the envelope and get the information he is after. This tends to force the retailer to sell at a lower price than he otherwise would. I know of no commodity that gives as small returns for the handling as coal.

"Retailers in every town should be on friendly relations with each other, and all agree upon and maintain the same scale of prices. As sure as one man gets to cutting prices he begins to lose money in a short time, and all the other fellows in the same town are getting a poor business because of his action. No dealer should try and go it alone. Unless the retailers have some understanding the business of selling coal is going to be a losing proposition all around. All of us are working toward a common end, to promote our business interests, and these interests will be best served by working together and doing nothing to impede the progress or in any way interfere with the business of our rivals."

E. E. Heiner of St. Paul, and W. S. Bogle of Chicago, were to have responded to this address, but neither was present.

C. W. Adams of St. Paul was down for an address on "Abuses Producers Are Subjected to by the Dealers." Mr. Adams was not present, but his place was taken by C. L. Swanstrom of St. Paul. Mr. Swanstrom's talk was brief. He said the field had been pretty thoroughly covered in previous talks, and that he had little to add to what had already been said. He had nothing particular to say regarding the abuses mentioned. He said the shipper always wanted to work in harmony with the dealer.

ITS ATTORNEY SPEAKS.

C. J. Traxler of Minneapolis Addresses Association.

The first number on the program for this afternoon's session was an address on "Association Work" by Hon. C. J. Traxler of Minneapolis, attorney for the association. He spoke in part as follows:

"This is an age of combinations. In these days the man who attempts to originate or maintain an independent commercial enterprise by his own private capital, is foredoomed to disappointment and sooner or later is either forced into some commercial combination with others similarly engaged, or into bankruptcy.

This fact is the logical result of the material development of the country; the greater the development, the greater the necessity and advantage of combination. In proportion as the population of a community incerases, the demands for the necessaries of life increase, and also directly in proportion as the population develops mentally and materially, the necessaries of life are multiplied and diversified so that what at one stage of the development were extravagant luxuries, at a later stage become absolute necessities.

"This process of development gives rise to the diversities in trade and business in a community and on a broader and grander scale gives rise to the diversity of trades and business throughout the entire civilized world, and the gerater the diversity of trades and business the closer becomes their mutual, dependent relations, and the closer those relations the sharper the competition.

"It appears to be the accepted theory of the civilized world that competition among all trades and business is essential to the common welfare of the people, and that without it the interest of the comunity must necessarily suffer.

"The familiar maxim, 'Competition is the life of trade,' appears to have been adopted by common consent as a fundamental principle of the age, and the highest legislative bodies in the land have directed their best efforts to the enactment of laws designed to protect and encourage free and fair trade in business as well as to provide severe penalties for the punishment of those who disregard the principles of business upon which the doctrine is grounded.

"Then it may be accepted as the settled law of the land that any association which has for its purpose the restraint of trade either by stifling competition, controlling prices or otherwise, or the natural, logical operations of which produces that result, is unlawful.

"There appears to be a popular impression that any organization or association of men engaged in a common line of business, has for its prime moving object, the evasion of the provisions of one or the other or all of these laws, and that, therefore, such organizations are inimical to the peace and welfare of the people.

"I have always had a theory that whatever the facts may be in actual practice, it was neither necessary to the successful operation of such an association nor desirable in the conduct of its affairs to conflict with the law in this respect, and I have a splendid proof of the practical working of that theory in this the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association.

"However true it may be that associations are, and must be essentially in restraint of trade, it is not true of this association, for it has adopted as part of its organization papers an article which reads: 'No rules, regulations or bylaws shall be adopted by this association in any manner stifling competition, limiting production, restraining trade, regulating prices, or pooling profits.'

"As the attorney for the association I am able to speak from personal information and I know that this association has religiously observed in every detail the requirement of the above section by a strict compliance therewith.

"I have also had a theory that no system of fines and punishments was necessary for the proper management of a commercial association and I offer you another splendid proof that my theory is not altogether visionary, this association, which I am told is the largest and strongest of its kind in the world), with its record of increase in membership of 129 per cent within the past year.

"The declared purpose of this association as set out in its articles is, 'to secure and disseminate to its members any and all legal and proper information which may be of interest or value to any member or members thereof in his or their business as retail coal dealers,' and its methods of operation are grounded upon the Roosevelttian doctrine of publicity, and the inborn principle and God given right of self protection.

"Its purpose is not in any sense to restrain the operation of law or to evade any of its provisions. On the contrary its operations are in exact conformity to the provisions of the laws of the United States and of the State of Minnesota, and are not in conflict with statutes or decisions of any other state in the Union.

"The duties of its officers consist chiefly in managing its financial affairs and, in compliance with the declared purposes of the association, of procuring and disseminating information of interest or value to its members.

"What the member does with these facts, whether he acts upon them or not, is left to his individual will. He may make any lawful use of them he chooses, or he may disregard them entirely. In no case is he subject to a fine or penalty of any kind or to a reprimand. He cannot even be expelled from membership except for failure to meet his business engagements with wholesale dealers from whom h purchases his supply, or for so conducting himself as to bring reproach upon the organization.

"The duty of the association to its members is performed when it furnishes the members with the information. The member owes no duty to any one, except perhaps to himself, to use the information, and if he uses it, he is expected to use it only in a lawful manner for a lawful purpose. If he makes any improper use of it, he alone is responsible for resulting damages.

"That this plan of organization is practical and has succeeded beyond the most sanguine expectations of its most ardent supporters is abundantly proven by all that you have seen and heard within the halls of this convention from its opening to its close."

• • •

W. L. McCauley of Chicago briefly touched upon Ernest Pratt's address of yesterday, and spoke of "The Association, Its Purposes and Its Benefits." He said: "I have been asked to reply to Mr. Pratt, better known to the Chicago coal trade as 'Brainy Bowers of the Black Diamond,' but it would be folly and suicide for me should I attempt to do so after listening to the brilliant and convincing remarks of my gifted friends, Mr. Pratt and Mr. Smith. I think Mr. Pratt has touched the keynote when he says the fatal mistake these bad co-operative enterprises have made is when they get in a lot of has-beens and small investors who are wholly ignorant of the business in which they are embarking.

"I have in mind a concern in Iowa which started an enterprise of this kind, and the one grave mistake they made was that they gave a credit to each small stockholder equal to the amount of his paid-in stock. The result was that each stockholder got goods enough on credit to balance up his amount of paid-in stock and quit, with the result that in a short time the co-operative company had no merchandise and no cash, and naturally went up in the air, so to speak. Therefore I say that the wholesalers and producers should not encourage or foster these enterprises by selling or soliciting their business, as there are plenty of legitimate and reliable coal dealers to deal with. They, and they alone should and must be protected.

"I will not dwell further on this subject, as it is unnecessary, and will confine my remarks to the association, its purposes and its benefits.

"I am more than pleased to note the evidence of continued growth and prosperity of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association. While it is comparatively young, in fact, I might say it is as yet in its infancy, what it has already accomplished is astonishing, and more particularly so to the older associations which have been organized for many years. Understand me, I do not mean to cast any reflections upon the older associations, but they are certainly astonished at the rapid growth of your organization. I attribute your great success and your achievements to the energy, forethought and hard work of

FARMS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Thousands of working men in the cities and elsewhere are at last realizing that the farmer is the most independent man on earth, and there is a corresponding rush for good land that is cheap. As a result, the fertile sections in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin are filling up with hundreds of sturdy men who in five years will be in better circumstances than ever before in their lives.

We have the finest land in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, and can sell it to actual settlers at terms that will surprise you. In fact, no other land company can offer the encouragement to farmers that we do in the way of payments.

We would be glad to send you maps and all other information upon receipt of a postal.

COMPLETE ANARCHY NOW REIGNS AT ODESSA; HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE SHOT DOWN IN STREETS

NOT ACTED FAIRLY

So Government Officials Think of Engineer Wallace's Resignation.

His Resignation Has Been Promptly Accepted By the President.

Oyster Bay, June 29.—The resignation of Chief Engineer Wallace of the Isthmian canal commission has been accepted. The resignation was tendered at a conference in New York between Mr. Wallace and Secretary Taft. Mr. Wallace while in Panama, was offered a position with a great corporation, the name of which is withheld, at a salary of $60,000 per annum. His salary with the Panama Canal company as chief engineer was $25,000 a year. Engineer Wallace suggested to Secretary Taft that he would remain with the commission two months longer, but after considering the matter President Roosevelt directed Secretary Taft to accept the resignation at once.

There is no concealment by the administration of its feeling regarding Mr. Wallace's tender at this time of his resignation. It is felt he has not acted fairly to the government in offering his resignation at a time which is regarded as crucial in the work of the canal.

A distinguished constructing engineer has been offered the position left by Mr. Wallace, but his name for the present is withheld.

HIGHER COURT WILL DECIDE

Whether the Sleeping Car Companies Are Common Carriers.

Willmar, Minn., June 29.—A case involving an important point of law was tried yesterday before the district court of Kandiyohi county in session in this city. The question raised is whether or not sleeping car companies are common carriers with the duties and responsibilities before the law pertaining to that function. The supreme courts of most other states, with the exception of Nebraska, have held that the sleeping car companies are not common carriers, and this view was sustained by the district court here. The case will now go to the supreme court of Minnesota, and the point will be authoritatively decided for this state.

The case in which the issue was raised was a suit brought against the Pullman Car company by Capt. Cushman A. Rice, formerly of the Fifteenth Minnesota regiment, later of the Thirty-fourth United States Volunteers in the Philippines, and now a ranchman in Puerto Principe, Cuba. He is the son of ex-Lieutenant Governor A. E. Rice of this city. Last fall while traveling on the Burlington route from St. Louis to St. Paul, Capt. Rice had his finger pinched in the door of a Pullman sleeper by the porter of the car. The member was crushed and will always remain stiff. He alleges that he suffered great pain as well as financial loss from medical expenses and long disability. He sues for $2,000 damages. The complaint stated that the Pullman company was a common carrier, and, whereas the injury to the plaintiff was caused by the negligence of one of its employes, the company was liable for damages. John W. Arctander, the noted Minneapolis jurist, is attorney for the plaintiff, and the company is represented by Senator H. H. Horton, of the law firm of Horton & Denegre of St. Paul.

Mr. Horton contended the the Pullman company is not a common carrier and the liabilities ascribed to it by the complaint do not exist. The suit for damages should have been brought against the Burlington Railway company and not against the Pullman Sleeping Car company. The point was argued at length by counsel, but Judge G. E. Qvale ruled the objection of the defense well taken, and on motion of Mr. Horton the case was dismissed. The plaintiff holds that the dismissal was not good, and will appeal to the state supreme court to have the decision of the district court revoked. The decision of that body will be important, as it will form the authority for all future cases of a similar nature arising in Minnesota.

WOODSMAN KILLED

By Minnesota & International Train Near Walker.

Walker, Minn., June 29.—Philip Nash, a woodsman, was instantly killed by the M. & I. passenger train No. 39 Tuesday night, three miles north of Walker, while the train was making its run north from Brainerd. The Cass county coroner was on the train at the time, and the remains of the unfortunate man were turned over to him. The train was backed to Walker, where the body will be held awaiting the arrival of relatives.

An examination of the clothing resulted in finding two bottles of whisky, one of which was partly emptied, and it is thought that the man was intoxicated and laid down to sleep.

Conductor Smith states that the man had been employed at Spur 69 on the M. & I. He is apparently 35 years of age.

BRINGS SURVIVORS OF BATTLE.

Port Louis, Island of Mauritius, June 29.—The Russian transport Anadyr has arrived at Diego Suarez, Madagascar, with some of the survivors of the Russian battleship Orel, which was captured by the Japanese during the battle of the Sea of Japan.

WIRELESS AHEAD

In Giving Press Report of Secretary Hay's Condition.

Marks New Era In Development of Wireless Telegraphy.

New York, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Newspapers have been put on their mettle by the recent scoop of the Chicago Tribune, which newspaper gave to the world fifteen hours in advance of all competitors a wireless telegraphic report of the condition of Secretary Hay who was returning to this country ill on board of the steamship Baltic. A wireless press association is being organized to maintain a corps of correspondents on all ships carrying the Marconi instruments and soon daily reports of doings on board ships in mid-ocean will be as common as the news of the day on land.

This marks a new era in the development of wireless telegraphy and demonstrates beyond question the superiority of the Marconi system. W. K. George, president of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' association, together with a large party of members of the association, during a voyage to Great Britain on the steamship Victorian, the new turbine of the Allan line, recently sent the following Marconigram:

"Victorian, via Marconi station, Cape Race.—John J. McGill, Merchants' Bank building, Montreal: Greetings to the Montreal branch from the Victorian; party all well and happy; trip smooth.

"W. K. GEORGE."

The Plant steamers running to Halifax, are being equipped with wireless instruments for the purpose of communicating with the stations at Halifax and other points along the Atlantic coast.

In a recent editorial, the Electrical Review, the leading electrical authority in America, devotes a page to the discussion of the Marconi system, in which it states that practical commercial wireless telegraphy is now in full operation, the genius of Marconi, and that from this date forward, as wonderful developments may be looked for as followed the introduction of the telephone, the cable and the electric light.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said recently that even as men had ridiculed the railroads, the cable, the telephone, electric light and the electric locomotives so they now deride the Marconi system, but as in the case of the other inventions, the Marconi system would surprise all the skeptics by the enormous profits that would result from its operation as the

As soon as the new station at Poldhu is completed, Mr. Marconi will proceed to Italy to complete the installation of the apparatus at the long-distance station near Pisa, and from there he will go to the Argentine Republic, where another long-distance station will be installed, thus completing a cricuit whereby messages may be transmitted from Glace Bay to three foreign nations simultaneously.

In the transmission of press dispatches, the superiority of the Marconi system over wire telegraph or cables is thus demonstrated: A news item transmitted from Glace Bay may be received simultaneously at Poldhu, at Pisa and at Buenos Ayres, and at any other point in the world where a wireless station is erected, by the simple adjustment of the apparatus any one of these stations may be cut out at will, and by further adjustment separate messages may be sent simultaneously to each and none of the others will receive them. The economy thus effected in the distribution of news will be seen. Cabling involves innumerable relays and a large corps of operators, whereas by the Marconi system this may be reduced to a minimum.

One of the recent startling accomplishments of the Marconi system was the receipt in New York of information that a trans-Atlantic liner had caught fire and was burning and summoning the aid of the fire boats. Fire boats were despatched from New York and met the burning steamship outside Sandy Hook. Before her arrival in New York the flames had been extinguished, and the cargo and perhaps the lives of the passengers saved. This incident is a demonstration to shipowners of the necessity of installing the system, and numerous applications are now being received for the equipment of steamers. The capacity of the company is overtaxed to turn out sufficient instruments to meet the demand.

WOULD RAISE BUFFALO.

Chicago May Have Herd of Five Hundred.

Chicago, June 29.—If the plans of Cy de Vry, head animal keeper at Lincoln Park are realized, Chicago in a few years will have a herd of 500 buffaloes, the largest in the world, besporting themselves on the banks of the Desplaines river.

The park commissioners have decided to sell ten of the twenty-five buffaloes in the enclosure at Lincoln Park, as the comparatively small area of the patch is a menace to the lives of the bison.

Cy de Vry declares that if 150 acres of land on the banks of the Desplaines river were set aside for the twenty-five animals, in a few years they would multiply to 500.

"All they need," said the animal keeper, "is running water, herbiage and plenty of room to roam. I hope to convince the commissioners of the practicability of my plan."

MOB EMPTIES A GEORGIA JAIL AND KILLS INMATES

Eight Prisoners Taken Out and Seven Shot to Death.

One Escapes By Feigning Death and Falling With Others.

When the Town Was Aroused the Mob Had Disappeared.

Watkinsville, Ga., June 29.—Eight prisoners were taken from jail here this morning and seven of them shot to death by a mob of masked men, within 200 yards of the center of the town. One miraculously escaped death by falling to the ground when the volley was fired and feigning that he had been killed.

The names of the prisoners who were killed are: Louis Robertson, Richard Robertson, Sandy Prince, Claude Elder, Bob Harris, Jim Yearly—all negroes; Lon Aycock, white. Joe Patterson, negro, feined death, and the mob left him, thinking he, too, had been riddled with bullets.

Four of the prisoners were charged with being implicated in the murder of Holbrook and his wife, several weeks ago, and one was held for an attempted assault. The others were in jail for minor misdemeanors. The mob formed quietly, just after midnight, and marched in order to the jail, where the keys were demanded of the jailer. The demand was made at the point of rifles, and the jailer realized that resistance was useless. With the keys in its possession, the mob opened all the cells, ordered the trembling inmates out, and then lined them up in single file, tying them with ropes.

The prisoners, eight in number, were marched to a corner lot, within 200 yards of the jail, and in the heart of the town, where they were bound to a fence, with their hands tied behind them. The work had been so quietly done that the sleeping residents had not been aroused. At a command by the leader, the mob stepped back a few paces, took deliberate aim and fired a volley from rifles, shotguns and pistols into the line of prisoners. Every man in front of the mob fell at the first volley. Believing its work had been made complete, the mob quickly dispersed.

An examination by the jailer who had been forced by the mob to accompany it to the scene of execution showed that seven of the men had been riddled by bullets. Patterson, was found to be only slightly injured. His escape from death was by a miracle for the post to which he had been tied was torn into fragments by the bullets. He possessed the presence of mind to fall with his ill-fated companions and remain motionless on the ground.

The rattle of the volley aroused the town. Scores of citizens sprang from their beds in alarm, to find the mob nowhere in evidence.

The strength of the mob has been variously estimated. The jailer declares that there were many armed men, all wearing masks. He said he delivered the keys to the men believing it better to do this than resist, which he was told would mean the dynamiting of the prison. Gaining admittance to the jail the mob first sought Sandy Prince, who was arested late yesterday afternoon by a posse from Oconee county and delivered to the jailer. At the time of his arrest, a lynching was narrowly averted. Prince was charged by Mrs. Weldon Dooley, who lives in the suburbs of Watkinsville, with having attempted to assault her Wednesday afternoon. No further trouble is anticipated.

KILL EACH OTHER.

Two Italians Fight Deadly Battle With Stilettos.

Scranton, Pa., June 29.—Lorenzo Lemongelli and Pietre Brounomota, Italians, were stabbed to death during a fight near Archbald last night. The men met in a saloon and Brunomota began taunting Lemongelli. The men walked out of the saloon, drew their stilettos and began slashing each other. The bloody fight soon attracted a large crowd but no one dared to interfere. Not until Lemongelli dropped dead, stabbed to the heart, did the combat end. Brunomota was so badly injured that he died today.

A MAN JUMPS INTO THE CHICAGO RIVER.

Chicago, June 29.—A man, believed to have been Thomas J. Meehan of Clayton, Iowa, throwing off his coat and poising himself on the highest point of the "Jack knife" bridge at Harrison street, plunged fifty feet into the river today. The body has not been found. Several cards showing membership in the International Association of Structural Iron Workers, were found. One had been issued in Cleveland, another in Cincinnati, and a third in Chicago.

HARVARD BEATS YALE IN FIRST TWO RACES

Crimson Takes the 'Varsity Four and the Freshmen Eight.

New London, Conn., June 29.—Harvard won in splendid fashion the first two races of the annual Yale-Harvard regatta on the Thames today, these being the 'varsity four-oared and the freshman eight. Both crews rowed magnificently, and Harvard had to use every ounce of her power and bring into play every muscle that her men had trained for this particular test of speed. The four-oared race of two miles went to Harvard, by what is officially declared to be a length, and the freshman race went to the same crew by an official length and three-quarters.

The official times of the races were as follows:

'Varsity four, half-mile, Harvard, 2:45; Yale, 2:48. One mile, Harvard, 5:30; Yale, 5:35. Mile and half, Harvard, 8:30; Yale, 8:40. Finish: Harvard, 11:22; Yale, 11:27.

Freshman eight, half-mile, Harvard, 2:12; Yale, 2:12. Mile, Harvard, 4:52; Yale, 5:00. One mile and half, Harvard, 7:25; Yale, 7:31. Finish: Harvard, 9:59; Yale, 10:04.

At noon expectations were that the 'varsity eights would row at 4:30, but the captains, at 3 o'clock, will meet and set the time and direction.

New London, Conn., June 28.—A perfect June morning, without a cloud in the sky and with a gentle breeze rippling the incoming tide was nature's greeting to the oarsmen of Yale and Harvard universities on this, the day of their annual regatta on the Thames. The northwest wind which for three days had white capped the river where the tide runs strongly and which last night threatened to cause a change in the plan of rowing the 'varsity eights, had entirely disappeared. The harbor was filled with pleasure craft and as soon as "colors" had been sounded, today, they ran up flags and bunting and moved up the river to anchorages above the draw bridge and began to form the long lines on either side of the course.

This is the twenty-seventh regatta day on which Yale and Harvard crews aa day on which Yale and Harvard crews have met in friendly rivalry. Eighteen times the sons of Yale have led the way over the finish line in more or less hard rowed races. Seven times the crimson has gone back to Cambridge as the victor and twice both universities have taken part with Cornell in triangular races. It is now six years since Harvard sent a winning crew to the Thames and prior to that it was way back in 1891 that Harvard broke Yale's string of five consecutive victories. The freshmen crews of the two universities have raced for nearly a generation and in these events Yale has also been more successful than Harvard. It is only since 1899 that the substitutes in the 'varsity crews have been given an opportunity in four oared sheils to show speed, and Harvard only once has been defeated.

The failure of friends of the crews to fill up the hotels and boarding houses as they have been wont to do in years past, and the early hour of the freshman and four-oared races, made the crowd which witnessed them the smallest ever known here. It was feared, also, that the attendance at the 'varsity race would fall far below that of any other year.

The oarsmen were astir early at their respective quarters. Capt. Filley of Harvard reported that his men had all had a refreshing night's sleep. The Harvard captain broke the quiet of the morning for his men by engaging in a little hand ball practice in front of the quarters, while afterward the oarsmen, keeping as far as possible from the sun's rays, lounged about on the piazza of their quarters.

Capt. Filley said: "My men are fit. I think we will be able to row a hard race. The conditions seem to be good for an excellent day of sport. I feel that Harvard will contribute her share towards a successful regatta."

The Yale men, like the crimson, lolled lazily on the piazza fronting their quarters. Every man had passed a good night, and the hopes at the quarters were decidedly optimistic. "It's a great day for a race," said Coach John Kennedy, "and Yale is ready for the contest. No, I am not saying as to the result, but I do feel that Yale is not badly handicapped by the loss of Daly from the 'varsity eight."

The first specials to come in from the West were three from New Haven, shortly after 9 o'clock. Then for the first time the railroad station presented an air of race day business, and the demand for observation train seats became brisk. Railroad officials said that few private parties had arranged for cars on the special trains this year, which was in marked contrast with conditions a year ago.

PRESIDENT ARRIVES AT HIS SUMMER HOME

Unusually Demonstrative Greeting by Oyster Bay People.

Oyster Bay, June 29.—President Roosevelt arrived in Oyster Bay today and was given an unusually demonstrative greeting by the residents of the village. The president made the trip from Bridgeport, Conn., on the naval yacht Sylph. By previous arrangement his neighbors greeted him at the dock of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian yacht club at Oyster Bay, the president landing from the Sylph in a launch. The passage from the landing to the decorated railroad station, where Mrs. Roosevelt awaited in a carriage with Quentin and Ethel Roosevelt, was lined by school children, dressed in white and waving flags. The president passed through this line to the station where he was greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt and his children and where a large crowd was awaiting him. Forming in line, the villagers passed the president and shook hands with him, after which the president drove to Sagamore hill grounds. The avenue from the station to the Sagamore hill grounds was hung at intervals with great American flags. The president expressed himself as deeply touched by the reception which his neighbors had extended him and as he drove homeward, remarked: "This is the best demonstration I ever saw in Oyster bay."

The president spent the afternoon quietly at Sagamore Hill with the members of his family. Secretary Loeb transacted some official business, but none of a very important nature.

Bridgeport, Conn. June 29.—After a short address to a crowd of several thousand people assembled at the railroad station here, President Roosevelt left Bridgeport today on the government yacht Sylph, bound for Oyster Bay. It was the termination of his New England trip, the principal object of which was to attend the reunion of his class at the Harvard commencement.

One of the first objects which met the president's eye, as he reached the temporary platform erected at the north end of the station was a trained bear which bore a placard marked "One you didn't get." As the president saw the bear he remarked: "It is a good thing you are not in Colorado," to the great amusement of the crowd. At the conclusion of his address the president was escorted to the dock about 500 yards away, where the government yacht Sylph was moored. Accompanied by the members of his party he boarded the yacht which immediately started down the harbor.

YOUNG BRIDE JUMPS INTO RIVER

Minneapolis, June 29—(Special to The Herald.)—Hopeless of her husband's recovery from an operation he had undergone at St. Mary's hospital, Mrs. Grace Adams, a bride of three months, is believed to have jumped from the steel arch bridge into the Mississippi river last night, after taking a drug. She has not returned to her boarding place, and her friends believe that she is the woman who leaped from the bridge. The body has not been recovered.

J. H. Martin, from the window of his room on the Third floor of the Commercial hotel, saw the woman leap from the bridge. He ran downstairs, calling to William Keefe, who was sitting in the office, to follow. They ran out on the bridge in time to see the woman's body rise to the surface. She made no struggle, and, after rising twice more, she rapidly floated towards the dam, where she disappeared from sight.

Mrs. Adams was heard to say that she did not wish to live if her husband did not survive the operation. He is said to be dying, and it is thought that his condition so preyed upon her mind that she killed herself.

MUTINOUS SAILORS OPPOSE THE TROOPS

Take Machine Guns From Battleship and Aid the Strikers.

Rumors Say Crews of Other Warships Have Killed Officers.

St. Petersburg, June 29, 4:50 p. m.—Shortly after noon an untimed dispatch was received reporting that complete anarchy reigned at Odessa. The people were panic stricken and were huddled together in the houses. The streets were filled with frenzied workmen fighting the troops. The warehouses, quays and some of the shipping in the harbor were in flames. The correspondent of the Associated Press, who forwarded this dispatch, had to make his way to the telegraph office through dense smoke which covered the city like a pall. He heard volleys every few minutes. In the darkness the mob was beginning the work of pillage and plunder, indicating that the dispatch was filed last night, but was delayed by the authorities. The correspondent added that blue jackets with machine guns had been landed from the battleship Kniaz Potemkine, in the hands of the mutineers, and then fought with the strikers behind barricades against the troops. Hundreds were killed and the hospitals were crowded with wounded. There were rumors, the correspondent also said, that some of the soldiers had joined the mutinous sailors in fighting against the troops, but he was unable to confir mthis report.

The correspondent said nothing about the arrival at Odessa of the warships commanded by Vice Admiral Kruger, but a dispatch from Sebastopol says the battleship Georgi Pobiedonosetz and the cruiser Griden have started for Odessa.

Libau, Government of Courland, Russia, June 29.—The Russian sailors here mutinied last night, attacked the government stores, seized the arms and fired into the officers' quarters. Infantry, artillery and Cossacks were brought to the scene of the fighting, but the result is not known. Intense excitement prevails here.

OTHER BATTLE SHIPS

Said to Have Been Captured by Crews.

Odessa, June 29.—Hundreds of rioters were shot and many killed by troops during last night's outbreak Martial law has been proclaimed. Fires are still burning at midnight, but there was a lull in the disorders at that time.

Practically the entire harbor was gutted by the fires started by the mob last night. All the warehouses with large quantities of merchandise, as well as four or five Russian steamers were burned. Probably 300 rioters were killed. Several Cossacks were also slain. The troops are rapidly restoring order.

The losses are estimated at many millions or roubles. The remnants of the wharves and warehouses set on fire last night are still burning today and the city is enveloped in a thick cloud of smoke.

Several explosions occurred in the port during the night and fierce conflicts took place between troops and rioters. The dead are now reckoned in the hundreds. The hospitals are overflowing with wounded persons and the medical aid available is quite inadequate. The shops are closed and business and traffic is suspended. The streets are occupied by troops. Many residents are leaving Odessa.

The body of Omiltchuk, the sailor executed on board the Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine is still exposed on the quay where it was landed by the crew yesterday. The dead man's comrades who demand that the remains shall be accorded military honors, actively fought on the side of the rioters against the troops.

St. Petersburg, June 29, 2:05 p. m.—The government is in a state approaching panic over the events at Odessa, and the gravest fears are entertained that the mutiny among the blue jackets may spread to the army. Should some of the troops at Odessa be won over to the cause of their comrades of the navy, other troops sent against them might throw down their arms or join the mutineers, and with the support of over 100,000 workmen, Odessa would become the center from which civil war would be waged against the government.

Gen. Kakhanoff, commander of the military district of Odessa, has been empowerer to declare martial law and Vice Admiral Chouknin, commander of the Black sea fleet, left St. Petersburg hastily during the night, either for Sebastopol or for Odessa, it is impossible to affirm exactly which. Beyond this no steps are taken to meet the emergency. Admiral Avellan was summoned to Peterhof at 8 o'clock this morning to discuss the situation with the emperor. Such advices as the emperor and the government have received are carefully withheld. The wires are in control of the authorities and appeals sent to the Associated Press correspondents at Odessa, to telegraph what has hapened since last night, have met with no response up to noon.

Rumors are rife in this city, however, that the officers on board the ships belonging to the squadron of Vice Admiral Kruger, which left Sebastopol for Odessa Tuesday, according to one report, and for practice cruise, according to another story, have shared the fate of the officers of the battleship Kniaz Potemkine, and have been murdered by the mutineers. It is added that the mutineers are in possession of the other warships of the fleet. If so the muntiny has control of more than half the heavy ships of the Black sea fleet, the other battleships said to be in the hands of the mutineers being the Tchesme, Sinope and the Tria Sviatitelia (three aposles). The admiralty, however, does not confirm the report of the mutiny on board Admiral Kruger's other ships. Admiral Wirenius, chief of the naval general staff, at noon today informed the Associated Press that he did not know whether Kruger's squadron had arrived at Odessa. Wirenius scemed at a loss to account for the mutiny, saying that the commander of the Kniaz Potemkine was a fine officer, having a most kindly disposition. Besides under the Russian naval regulations, the captain of a warship is obliged daily to sample the soup of the crew to see if it is suitable for them.

What appears certain from the reports received at the various embassies here is that Odessa was at least for a time practically in the hands of the strikers, who erected barricades from which the police and troops were powerless to dislodge them. Indeed, one consul at Odessa reports that the troops refused to fire on the rioters. Nickolieff, a neighboring town of the Littoral, is reported in possession of a mob.

St. Petersburg, in view of the developments at Odessa, is filled with stories of disaffection or sedition among the troops. Even the guard regiments, it is reported, say they will never again fire on the people. The Cossacks alone, according to these tales, are absolutely reliable. That disaffection and discontent among the soldiers is widespread admits of little doubt, but the situation is hardly as black as painted. Up to the present time there is no reason to believe that the vast bulk of the army is not loyal. What the effect would be of several regiments going over to the rioters is, however, problematical. Certainly a crisis seems to have been reached.

DECRIES ARTIFICIAL FEEDING OF INFANTS.

Chicago, June 29.—At the annual meeting here today of the American institute of homeopathy, papers were read by Dr. Frederick F. Teal of Omaha; Dr. M. O. Terry of Utica, N. Y., and others. Dr. Teal deprecated the artificial feeding of infants, and declared that nevertheless the natural feeding of infants "seems to be going the way of the Indian and the bison."

CLEMENT WAS THE WHOLE THING AT FARIBAULT BANK

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. A. C. Rogers, superintendent of the school for the feeble minded at Faribault, and president of the De Soto Fruit Agricultural and Manufacturing company, at the Clement trial testified that the company was indebted to Mr. Clement to the extent of about $70,000. Mr. Clement had been given bonds of the company to that amount, and he believed he used them to cancel obligations of the company held by the bank, amounting to considerably over $68,000.

Receiver Baird was also on the stand. He testified that at one time. Mr. Clement had the whole issue of $100,000 of bonds of the fruit company, but that part had been sold and that there now remained $79,400 of the bonds which he was now holding as an asset of the bank.

S. S. Crosset, assistant cashier of the bank, testified that Mr. Clement had made the entry marking as paid the various drafts and items mentioned in the indictment. The entry indicated that $70,000 had come into the bank and that $70,000 gone out. The entries indicate that one had paid the other.

The line of cross examination adopted with Mr. Rogers and Receiver Baird on this subject indicated that the defense would claim that Mr. Clement had a right to use the fruit company's bonds as he saw fit, so far as the obligations of that company were concerned. Two of the directors, Judge Thomas S. Buckham and F. A. Theopold were on the stand to testify as to what part the directors took in the management of the institution. Both stated that practically everything has been left to Clement, who was trusted implicitly by all directors.

PROMINENT MEN BURNED BY EXPLOSION ON STEAM YACHT

Menominee, June 29.—While returning from a reunion of veterans at Sturgeon Bay last night, the Bonita, the palatial steam yacht of Former Congressman I. W. Stephenson, blew out the end of a flue and the escaping steam scattered fire from the furnace all over the boat in a flash. Flames broke out everywhere as the burning coals struck the woodwork. Mr. Stephenson took command of the crew and quickly had the flames under control. The fireman was found to be severely burned and although many of the guests on board had singed faces and scorched clothing, none had been seriously hurt. Among those in the party were Former Governor Hoard, Congressman Jenkins, Col. Copeland, commander of the Wisconsin G. A. R., Captain Jack Crawford and many others. Two sons of Mr. Stephenson rowed six miles to get to shore, where a tug was summoned to tow the Bonita into port. The Bonita arrived here early today.

INJUNCTION ASKED TO COMPEL EXPRESS DRIVERS TO DELIVER

Chicago, June 29.—A new feature in the teamsters' strike was expected to develop today in the filing, by the employers' association, before Judge Holden in the superior court of an application for fourteen injunctions restraining express concerns from refusing to make deliveries to and from strike-bound houses.

The injunctions are asked for on the ground that the defendants have violated the city ordinance pertaining to public cartage by refusing to make deliveries to or from concerns involved in the strike. This ordinance provides that licensed expressmen shall be required to deliver loads to any part of the city and shall not discriminate against any person, firm or corporation. Violation of the ordinance may be followed by a revocation of the license of the expressman.

Nearly 500 express drivers are ready to strike the moment they are asked to carry goods to strike-affected firms. The union officials have notified their employers to this effect.

Several of the transfer companies were prepared to fight the granting of the injunctions, contending that it would be cetrain to precipitate a strike of their drivers.

TO HONOR HIM

Banquet For E. M. Ferguson at the Commercial Club.

Citizens and Others to Show Appreciation of His Efforts.

E. L. Millar, who is to act as toastmaster at the banquet to be tendered E. M. Ferguson at the Commercial club this evening, says that he has communicated with a number of those who will be asked to participate in the toasts and discussions and there have been no refusals. It is not definitely known by those in charge of the banquet just how many out-of-town guests there will be, but it is expeteed that several of the large cities will be represented.

Mr. Ferguson will be the guest of honor, the affair being given in appreciation and as a recognition of the fight that he has been conducting against the private car line practices and regarding which he is regarded as one of the best posted men in this country.

Rev. Roderick J. Mooney will respond to the toast "E. M. Ferguson," and Mr. Ferguson's friends are assured that they will hear something pretty good.

Mr. Ferguson, of course, is to respond to a toast and, during the evening, he will say something about the private car line practice and the ways and means of overcoming it, that is likely to be of mnch general interest.

Julius H. Barnes, president of the board of trade, will talk from the standpoint of the grower, and the shipper and others who have not yet been assigned their line of thought, will talk from the standpoints of the carrier and the consumer.

W. D. Dwyer, one of Superior's leading attorneys, will toast "The Press," touching upon the part that the press has played in giving publicity to the fight that has been inaugurated against the private car practice and the encouragement that it has given those who have been conducting the fight, also the value of the services of the press in acting as a medium of education to the general public in giving it an insight into the merits of the case.

Besides those named there will be speeches by Fred Mason of St. Paul, secretary of the National Grocers' association, John H. Norton, Senator George R. Laybourn and others.

It has been the idea of the originators of the banquet not only to make it a graceful mark of recognition of the valuable services of Mr. Ferguson, but at the same time, in accordance with his wishes, to make the affair something more than mere entertainment in the way of bringing out an expression of opinions from citizens in various walks of life as to the private car line practice and what they consider the best way to abate the same.

COAL MEN CONCLUDE THEIR SESSIONS

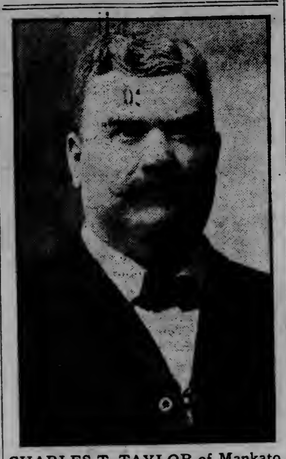
Charles T. Taylor of Mankato Chosen President of Association.

Secretary and Treasurer Are Re-Elected—Visitors Given Banquet.



CHARLES T. TAYLOR of Mankato, Elected President of Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers Association.

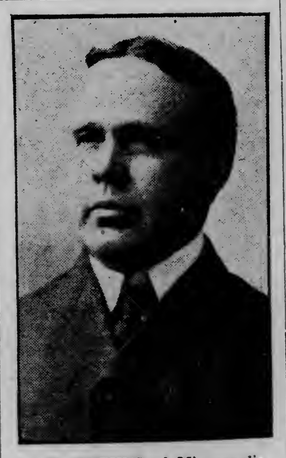
At the last business session of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' fifth annual convention, held this morning in the Commercial club rooms, Charles T. Taylor of Mankato, Minn., former vice president, was elected president of the association. A. J. Zingre of Mason City, Iowa, was elected vice president; G. J. Fullerton of Minneapolis, treasurer, and G. H. Reeves of Minneapolis, who has been so remarkably successful as secretary during his term of office, was re-elcted to the same position by unanimous vote. Mr. Fullerton also succeeds himself.

L. W. Gifford of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and C. M. Morse of Winona, Minn., were chosen directors, to serve in place of J. K. Lucas of Winona, and Van P. Roosevelt of Ackley, Iowa, whose terms have expired. Mr. Morse was former president of the organization, and the fact that he was selected as director is a very high compliment to him, for the position of director is a highly honorary one. Mr. Morse's selection was a recognition of his great popularity and efficiency while president.

The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that the Northwestern Retail Coal dealers, assembled in fifth annual convention, extend words of commendation to our worthy officers, and most particularly to our efficient secretary; congratulations to the membership on the marveious growth of our organization, and for the manifestation of interest in the work of the association, as shown by the large attendance at the annual meeting, and honor to the wholesaiers of the trade for their hearty co-operation in the efforts to bring about mutually profitable business relations and goodfellowship. We thank the citizens of Duluth generally, who, through the city's Commercial club, have so cordially given us the glad hand on this occasion, and particularly the operating companies, who have collectively and individually contributed so generously to our entertainment."

Outside of what business came up at the executive session, nothing of general interest was done at the morning session. This afternoon the delegates are guests of the Commercial club on a boat excursion. The steamer left the Fifth avenue west dock a few minutes after 2 o'clock, with a large crowd on board, and started out through the canal. Before returning it will go down the north shore, come back through the Superior entry, and pass spots of interest along the bay front, stopping at the Zenith blast furnace. Most of the delegates will return to their homes tonight. All express themselves as delighted with the treatment accorded them in Duluth, and have only words of praise for the city itself and for the people at the Head of the Lakes.



G. H. REEVES of Minneapolis, Re-elected Secretary.

AROUND FESTAL BOARD.

Visiting Coal Men Are Tendered a Banduet.

Nearly 400 members of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association were finely entertained at a complimentary banquet tendered them at the Spalding hotel last night by Head of the Lakes dock companies. Cut flowers and ferns decorated the tables, and each guest was presented with a white carnation as he entered the banquet hall. Muhlbaur's orchestra furnished music during the evening, and following the toasts several high class vaudeville features were introduced, a stage having been arranged at the end of the room.

E. N. Saunders, who has been given the title of dean of the coal trade in the Northwest, acted as toastmaster. J. L. Washburn was the first man called upon. In his usual happy manner he responded to the toast: "Our Picturesque City." Mr. Washburn said:

"Mr. Toastmaster, Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: A few days ago I received a letter from an officer of your association in Minneapolis, somewhat in the nature of an invitation to say a few words tonight on the subject "Our Picturesque City." It was not exactly an invitation either, for he said there was not time to wait for an answer and he had put me on the program anyway. Under these conditions, there seemed to be nothing left to do but to accept, nunc pro tunc. The subject is a picturesque one and, perhaps, calls for a picturesque response, but if it does, I cannot respond to the call.

"I once heard a young man eloquently describe a storm on the sea of Geneserct, which it is possible, although not probable, that a few of you may recognize as a little pond mentioned in the New Testament, being somwhere on the other side of the Suez canal; this will perhaps enable you to locate it. He took the waters of that little pond and pounded them up into foam and slung them into the air and left an dthrew them into the air and rattled the gravel and sand around and exploded electricity in the heavens until the angry Atlantic and a Kansas tornado dwindled into insignificance. The Augustus B. Wolvin, loaded with 12,000 tons of coal could no more have ridden that sea, as he described it, than could a butter bowl ride Lake Superior in the face of a northeaster. But I have no such powers of description.

"In loyalty to Duluth, however, I might say that this city is indeed a unique and picturesque one. It dips its feet into the waters of lake, bay and river and rears its head high over the hills beyond the shore line of the ancient immense sea that overspread this part of the continent in prehistoric times. You can drive around this ancient shore line and behold sperad out below and before you a magnificent panorama of mingled natural beauty, art, industry and commerce. As far as the eye can reach, you behold the great blue lake, not idle, for you may become as weary in an attempt to number the countless ships laden with the products of mine, forest, field and factory which are plowing its waters, as you would if you undertook to count the stars in the heavens above. In the other direction, toward the place where the great water power is being harnessed to do man's bidding, your view is intercepted by the smoke from an hundred stacks, the incense that thrift and industry and the combination of capital and labor when they work together, sends from earth to heaven; and in the hazy beyond you may distinguish Spirit lake and islands, the haunts of the original inhabitants, which have been idealized and rendered sacred by poetry and song.

"The city of Duluth is traversed by more than half a dozen watcr courses of rare beauty. The waters of these streams, in their haste to reach the embrace of the great lake, tumble over precipices, lash themselves into fury against rocks, now gathering into a narrow gorge with adamantine walls, now spreading out like an apron of gauze over flat tables of stone, then gathering up for a final plunge to be mingled and lost forever in Kitchi Gumml.

"I can take you, by five minutes' walk from the heart of the residence district of our city, to quiet shaded nooks, where you may rest in peace, unaware that there is so much as a hamlet within a hundred miles and where the stillness is broken only by the heraldry of the steamers entering the harbor. You may catch trout within the city limits; the moose from the forests, as well as the Elks from all over the country, visit us; the deer come out to greet tourists and sightseers as they pass by on our street cars.

"Those of you who may hold in loving remembrance the Palisades of the Hudson, the beautiful landscapes of the Alleghanies or the rockbound coasts of New England, may find their counterpart here upon the north shore, reaching from the heart of this city to the Canadian boundary, and may once more feel that you are in a land bathed with beauty by the favor of a gracious Providence.

"Mechanical art and skill have erected at the harbor entrance a span of steel, our new aerial bridge, at once a thing of utility and beauty, upon which the American eagle may perch and scream out the glories of Duluth and the price of coal. It stands as an exemplar of a moral lesson that what is necessary for one purpose may be constructed without hundrance to other interests also necessary to the progress of the city and the world.

"I have but mentioned a few of the things which make this a picturesque and unique city. Time and propriety alone demand that I should stop.

"We are glad that you have met here before; we are glad that you are meeting here now and we hope that you will meet here often in the future, for there is no more appropriate place for you to assemble than in this picturesque city at the head of this great natural waterway, reaching into the very heart of our great country; the place where water and rail tansportation meet and where are located the great docks for receiving and distributing the coal supply to the populations of the Northwest. As I was just saying to my friend Space, it is far more important for us to have come here a body of business men like this, with business ideas and business purposes, than to have a convention of wire pulling politicians.

"We love the ice man and we love the coal man; we love the coal man just as much as by his conduct he will allow us to love him; and if in the great future you find yourselves in a place where, without a supply of fuel from the Northwestern Coal Dealers' association, the eternal fires are nevertheless kept burning, you may dwell in fond recollection on your visits here and long to return to this picturesque city and bathe your brows in the waters of Lake Superior, and quench your thirst by the cooling concoctions from the buffets and soda fountains of Duluth."

"Our Growing Child" was the subject assigned C. M. Morse of Winona, Minn. Mr. Morse said the toast appealed to him because he loved children, and that he was filled with joy at seeing the association child seated at the same table with its old playmates, the shippers. The association, he asserted, has long since discarded its swaddling clothes, and is now looking forward to a silk hat and frock coat. The child is lovable, well-behaved and mild-mannered, and broken to eat out of the hand. Mr. Morse, who is president of the organization, spoke in very complimentary terms of Secretary Reeves and his work.

Senator Crane of Cooperstown, N. D.; Hon. C. J. Traxler of Minneapolis, attorney for the association, and Secretary G. H. Reeves were called upon, and each responded briefly, Mr. Traxler telling several funny stories.

TERRIFIC HAIL STORM

Grand Forks Visitation Severe--How It Affected Circus.

People who have reached here from Grand Forks since the great hailstorm in that city yesterday noon, give graphic descriptions of the icy downpour. Charles R. Baker, representative of the Adam Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' circus, which exhibited in the Dakota city yesterday, speaking of the shower of ice that came out of the skies said:

"The parade had just reached the big tents, on the return trip, when big, black clouds began to gather. Seven hundred people had gone into the side show, and the circus employes, officials, performers and workmen had scarcely seated themselves for the noon meal under the big dining room tent, when the storm broke. It was divined that there would be a heavy rain, and, perhaps, some wind. Suddenly a terrific roaring was heard, like the approach of a heavy freight train, for the show grounds were located immediately beside the Northern Pacific tracks. The roaring increased to such an intensity that every one arose to his feet and rushed to the entrance with a view to personal safety in case of a cyclone.

"Following a slight downpour came the hail—great chunks of ice two and a half inches in diameter, in a blinding sheet. Through the great canvas they came, as if the tents were made of paper mache. Some of the hailstones alighted in steaming soup, hot tea, coffee, in the butter dishes, splashing the edibles in every direction. One big icy ball struck one of the lady performers straight in the forehead, rendering her unconscious for half an hour. All began to realize that there was but one place of safety—under the long, well-filled tables of steaming meats and vegetables, and under they ducked.

"When the hailstorm had spent its geratest force, the immense tents of the show presented the appearance of a sieve, the sidewalls only remaining undamaged.

"Upon the approach of the roaring storm the cages of the wild beasts were closed tight. When the great chunks of ice began to play a tattoo upon the freshly-oiled backs of some thirty monstrous elephants, however, there was a period of wild disorder, and pandemonium reigned under the now perforated menagerie tent. The massive beasts wriggled and writehed at the strong chains that held them. The two immense African elephants—the most ponderous beasts in the big herd, succeeded in pulling their deeply driven stake pins entirely out of the ground, but a faithful keeper held them in check until, the danger had passed away.

"Meantime two big, new tents were being removed from the show train nearby and by 2 o'clock in the afternoon the white city took on a new appearance and the performance proceeded as usual.

"Nearly every pane of glass in Grand Forks was shattered and the sidewalks were strewn with broken bits of plate glass. Sixty windows in the sleeping cars of the circus were smashed in, and some twenty runaways occurred in the downtown streets."

"Luckily," said Mr. Baker, "the parade had just returned to the grounds, for had the storm broken during its passage, there is no telling of the fatalities that would have resulted from the runaways of our great six, eight, ten and twelve-horse teams."

IS BABY A PURSE LIFTER?

Five-Year-Old Boy Before Court as Pickpocket.

Chicago, June 29.—Ragged, dirty and trembling, Louis Wolkov, caught in the grasp of the law, appeared yesterday before the bar of justice to answer to his sins. The scene was the Juvenile court, the charge was picking pockets, and the prisoner had reached the mature age of 5 years.

"The probation officer tells me you have confessed to picking pockets in State street stores," said Judge Mack to this new Artful Dodger.

Louis nodded his head in happy assent.

"Why did you do it? Haven't you a father or mother?"

Louis grinned and again ducked his head affirmatively.

"Were you hungry?"

Louis admitted the fact cheerfully, in the same manner.

The child was then given into the hands of representatives of the Jewish Home for the Friendless and marched out of the room brisk and beaming. Later in the day he was photographed and interviewed at his new home, Fifty-second street and Ellis avenue, where he was busily engaged making 131 new friends among his comrade waifs.

He posed before the camera delightfully, but had to be bribed to talk. The only English words he knew were "Liberty street," where he had lived and "penny." His ignorance of the vernacular was discovered after he had nodded a blithe confession to murder at the sign of a nickel. Then an interpreter was secured.

"Did you ever take things out of people's pockets, Louis?" he was asked in Yiddish.

The infant made vigorous denial, and clamored for a cent.

"But you told the judge you did."

"It was a bad place. I wanted to get away. I'll never go there again."

"How do you like your new home?"

"Fine," said Louis in his native tongue, and waved a handful of small change.

"Now give me some more money."

When his avaricious desires had been rewarded Louis broke out into song. The interpreter translated the words thus: "I want to be a good boy, and obey God and love my mother, and make lots of money."

"No one can tell me that this little fellow was a pickpocket," remarked Superintendent Abe Kahn. "Well, we'll make him comfortable here."

The boy was brought to the juvenile court by Probation Officer Low, who discovered him living at 36 Liberty street, without parents or relatives, but with a host of friends. Two year ago he came from Russia with his father and mother, who died, leaving him, a sturdy and fearless orphan, in the care of the world at large.

PROMINENT MEN BURNED BY EXPLOSION ON STEAM YACHT

Menominee, June 29.—While returning from a reunion of veterans at Sturgeon Bay last night, the Bonita, the palatial steam yacht of Former Congressman I. W. Stephenson, blew out the end of a flue and the escaping steam scattered fire from the furnace all over the boat in a flash. Flames broke out everywhere as the burning coals struck the woodwork. Mr. Stephenson took command of the crew and quickly had the flames under control. The fireman was found to be severely burned and although many of the guests on board had singed faces and scorched clothing, none had been seriously hurt. Among those in the party were Former Governor Hoard, Congressman Jenkins, Col. Copeland, commander of the Wisconsin G. A. R., Captain Jack Crawford and many others. Two sons of Mr. Stephenson rowed six miles to get to shore, where a tug was summoned to tow the Bonita into port. The Bonita arrived here early today.

INJUNCTION ASKED TO COMPEL EXPRESS DRIVERS TO DELIVER

Chicago, June 29.—A new feature in the teamsters' strike was expected to develop today in the filing, by the employers' association, before Judge Holden in the superior court of an application for fourteen injunctions restraining express concerns from refusing to make deliveries to and from strike-bound houses.

The injunctions are asked for on the ground that the defendants have violated the city ordinance pertaining to public cartage by refusing to make deliveries to or from concerns involved in the strike. This ordinance provides that licensed expressmen shall be required to deliver loads to any part of the city and shall not discriminate against any person, firm or corporation. Violation of the ordinance may be followed by a revocation of the license of the expressman.

Nearly 500 express drivers are ready to strike the moment they are asked to carry goods to strike-affected firms. The union officials have notified their employers to this effect.

Several of the transfer companies were prepared to fight the granting of the injunctions, contending that it would be cetrain to precipitate a strike of their drivers.

Visiting Coal Men Are Tendered a Banduet.

Nearly 400 members of the Northwestern Retail Coal Dealers' association were finely entertained at a complimentary banquet tendered them at the Spalding hotel last night by Head of the Lakes dock companies. Cut flowers and ferns decorated the tables, and each guest was presented with a white carnation as he entered the banquet hall. Muhlbaur's orchestra furnished music during the evening, and following the toasts several high class vaudeville features were introduced, a stage having been arranged at the end of the room.

E. N. Saunders, who has been given the title of dean of the coal trade in the Northwest, acted as toastmaster. J. L. Washburn was the first man called upon. In his usual happy manner he responded to the toast: "Our Picturesque City." Mr. Washburn said:

"Mr. Toastmaster, Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: A few days ago I received a letter from an officer of your association in Minneapolis, somewhat in the nature of an invitation to say a few words tonight on the subject "Our Picturesque City." It was not exactly an invitation either, for he said there was not time to wait for an answer and he had put me on the program anyway. Under these conditions, there seemed to be nothing left to do but to accept, nunc pro tunc. The subject is a picturesque one and, perhaps, calls for a picturesque response, but if it does, I cannot respond to the call.

"I once heard a young man eloquently describe a storm on the sea of Geneseret, which it is possible, although not probable, that a few of you may recognize as a little pond mentioned in the New Testament, being somwhere on the other side of the Suez canal; this will perhaps enable you to locate it. He took the waters of that little pond and pounded them up into foam and slung them into the air and left an dthrew them into the air and rattled the gravel and sand around and exploded electricity in the heavens until the angry Atlantic and a Kansas tornado dwindled into insignificance. The Augustus B. Wolvin, loaded with 12,000 tons of coal could no more have ridden that sea, as he described it, than could a butter bowl ride Lake Superior in the face of a northeaster. But I have no such powers of description.

"In loyalty to Duluth, however, I might say that this city is indeed a unique and picturesque one. It dips its feet into the waters of lake, bay and river and rears its head high over the hills beyond the shore line of the ancient immense sea that overspread this part of the continent in prehistoric times. You can drive around this ancient shore line and behold sperad out below and before you a magnificent panorama of mingled natural beauty, art, industry and commerce. As far as the eye can reach, you behold the gerat blue lake, not idle, for you may become as weary in an attempt to number the countless ships laden with the products of mine, forest, field and factory which are plowing its waters, as you would if you undertook to count the stars in the heavens above. In the other direction, toward the place where the great water power is being harnessed to do man's bidding, your view is intercepted by the smoke from an hundred stacks, the incense that thrift and industry and the combination of capital and labor when they work together, sends from earth to heaven; and in the hazy beyond you may distinguish Spirit lake and islands, the haunts of the original inhabitants, which have been idealized and rendered sacred by poetry and song.

GEO. J. FULLERTON, Minneapolis, Re-elected Treasurer.

"The city of Duluth is traversed by more than half a dozen water courses of rare beauty. The waters of these streams, in their haste to reach the embrace of the great lake, tumble over precipices, lash themselves into fury against rocks, now gathering into a narrow gorge with adamantine walls, now spreading out like an apron of gauze over flat tables of stone, then gathering up for a final plunge to be mingled and lost forever in Kitchi Gumml.

"I can take you, by five minutes' walk from the heart of the residence district of our city, to quiet shaded nooks, where you may rest in peace, unaware that there is so much as a hamlet within a hundred miles and where the stillness is broken only by the heraldry of the steamers entering the harbor. You may catch treut within the city limits; the moose from the forests, as well as the Elks from all over the country, visit us; the deer come out to greet tourists and sightseers as they pass by on our street cars.

"Those of you who may hold in loving remembrance the Palisades of the Hudson, the beautiful landscapes of the Alleghanies or the rockbound coasts of New England, may find their counterpart here upon the north shore, reaching from the heart of this city to the Canadian boundary, and may once more feel that you are in a land bathed with beauty by the favor of a gracious Providence.

"Mechanical art and skill have erected at the harbor entrance a span of steel, our new aerial bridge, at once a thing of utility and beauty, upon which the American eagle may perch and scream out the glories of Duluth and the price of coal. It stands as an exemplar of a moral lesson that what is necessary for one purpose may be constructed without hundrance to other interests also necessary to the progress of the city and the world.

"I have but mentioned a few of the things which make this a picturesque and unique city. Time and propriety alone demand that I should stop.

"We are glad that you have met here before; we are glad that you are meeting here now and we hope that you will meet here often in the future, for there is no more appropriate place for you to assemble than in this picturesque city at the head of this great natural waterway, reaching into the very heart of our great country; the place where water and rail tansportation meet and where are located the great docks for receiving and distributing the coal supply to the populations of the Northwest. As I was just saying to my friend Space, it is far more important for us to have come here a body of business men like this, with business ideas and business purposes, than to have a convention of wire pulling politicians.

"We love the ice man and we love the coal man; we love the coal man just as much as by his conduct he will allow us to love him; and if in the great future you find yourselves in a place where, without a supply of fuel from the Northwestern Coal Dealers' association, the eternal fires are nevertheless kept burning, you may dwell in fond recollection on your visits here and long to return to this picturesque city and bathe your brows in the waters of Lake Superior, and quench your thirst by the cooling concoctions from the buffets and soda fountains of Duluth."

"Our Growing Child" was the subject assigned C. M. Morse of Winona, Minn. Mr. Morse said the toast appealed to him because he loved children, and that he was filled with joy at seeing the association child seated at the same table with its old playmates, the shippers. The association, he asserted, has long since discarded its swaddling clothes, and is now looking forward to a silk hat and frock coat. The child is lovable, well-behaved and mild-mannered, and broken to eat out of the hand. Mr. Morse, who is president of the organization, spoke in very complimentary terms of Secretary Reeves and his work.

Senator Crane of Cooperstown, N. D.; Hon. C. J. Traxler of Minneapolis, attorney for the association, and Secretary G. H. Reeves were called upon, and each responded briefly, Mr. Traxler telling several funny stories.

The banquet was tendered the retailers by the following dock companies:

Northwestern Fuel Co.
St. Paul & Western Coal Co.
Jones & Adams Co.
Lehigh Valley Coal Co.
Youghiogheny & Lehigh Coal Co.

TERRIFIC HAIL STORM

Grand Forks Visitation Severe--How It Affected Circus.

People who have reached here from Grand Forks since the great hailstorm in that city yesterday noon, give graphic descriptions of the icy downpour. Charles R. Baker, representative of the Adam Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' circus, which exhibited in the Dakota city yesterday, speaking of the shower of ice that came out of the skies said:

"The parade had just reached the big tents, on the return trip, when big, black clouds began to gather. Seven hundred people had gone into the side show, and the circus employes, officials, performers and workmen had scarcely seated themselves for the noon meal under the big dining room tent, when the storm broke. It was divined that there would be a heavy rain, and, perhaps, some wind. Suddenly a terrific roaring was heard, like the approach of a heavy freight train, for the show grounds were located immediately beside the Northern Pacific tracks.

The roaring increased to such an intensity that every one arose to his feet and rushed to the entrance with a view to personal safety in case of a cyclone.

"Following a slight downpour came the hail—great chunks of ice two and a half inches in diameter, in a blinding sheet. Through the great canvas they came, as if the tents were made of paper mache. Some of the hailstones alighted in steaming soup, hot tea, coffee, in the butter dishes, splashing the edibles in every direction. One big ley ball struck one of the lady performers straight in the forehead, rendering her unconscious for half an hour. All began to realize that there was but one place of safety—under the long, well-filled tables of steaming meats and vegetables, and under they ducked.

"When the hailstorm had spent its geratest force, the immense tents of the show presented the appearance of a sieve, the sidewalls only remaining undamaged.

"Upon the approach of the roaring storm the cages of the wild beasts were closed tight. When the great chunks of ice began to play a tattoo upon the freshly-oiled backs of some thirty monstrous elephants, however, there was a period of wild disorder, and pandemonium reigned under the now perforated menagerie tent. The massive beasts wriggled and writehed at the strong chains that held them. The two immense African elephants—the most ponderous beasts in the big herd, succeeded in pulling their deeply driven stake pins entirely out of the ground, but a faithful keeper held them in check until the danger had passed away.

"Meantime two big, new tents were being removed from the show train nearby and by 2 o'clock in the afternoon the white city took on a new appearance and the performance proceeded as usual.

"Nearly every pane of glass in Grand Forks was shattered and the sidewalks were strewn with broken bits of plate glass. Sixty windows in the sleeping cars of the circus were smashed in, and some twenty runaways occurred in the downtown streets."

"Luckily," said Mr. Baker, "the parade had just returned to the grounds, for had the storm broken during its passage, there is no telling of the fatalities that would have resulted from the runaways of our great six, eight, ten and twelve-horse teams."

IS BABY A PURSE LIFTER?

Five-Year-Old Boy Before Court as Pickpocket.

Chicago, June 29.—Ragged, dirty and trembling, Louis Wolkov, caught in the grasp of the law, appeared yesterday before the bar of justice to answer to his sins. The scene was the Juvenile court, the charge was picking pockets, and the prisoner had reached the mature age of 5 years.

"The probation officer tells me you have confessed to picking pockets in State street stores," said Judge Mack to this new Artful Dodger.

Louis nodded his head in happy assent.

"Why did you do it? Haven't you a father or mother?"

Louis grinned and again ducked his head affirmatively.

"Were you hungry?"

Louis admitted the fact cheerfully, in the same manner.

The child was then given into the hands of representatives of the Jewish Home for the Friendless and marched out of the room brisk and beaming. Later in the day he was photographed and interviewed at his new home, Fifty-second street and Ellis avenue, where he was busily engaged making 131 new friends among his comrade waifs.

He posed before the camera delightfully, but had to be bribed to talk. The only English words he knew were "Liberty street," where he had lived and "penny." His ignorance of the vernacular was discovered after he had nodded a blithe confession to murder at the sign of a nickel. Then an interpreter was secured.

"Did you ever take things out of people's pockets, Louis?" he was asked in Yiddish.

The infant made vigorous denial, and clamored for a cent.

"But you told the judge you did."

"It was a bad place. I wanted to get away. I'll never go there again."

"How do you like your new home?"

"Fine," said Louis in his native tongue, and waved a handful of small change. "Now give me some more money."

When his avaricious desires had been rewarded Louis broke out into song. The interpretor translated the words thus: "I want to be a good boy, and obey God and love my mother, and make lots of money."

"No one can tell me that this little fellow was a pickpocket," remarked Superintendent Abe Kann. "Well, we'll make him comfortable here."

The boy was brought to the juvenile court by Probation Officer Low, who discovered him living at 2? Liberty street, without parents or relatives, but with a host of friends. Two year ago he came from Russia with his father and mother, who died, leaving him, a sturdy and fearless orphan, in the care of the world at large.

GIGANTIC SKELETONS FOUND.

Baltimore, June 29.—A number of gigantic skeletons of pre-historic Indians, nearly eight feet tall, are reported to have been discovered along the banks of the Choptank river, in this state, by employes of the Maryland academy of sciences, and are now at the academys' building, where they are being articulated and restored.

INCREASE SHOWN

Every District in City Has Added to Its Population.

Estimated that Total Population Will Be About 60,000.

"Nearly every district in the city of Duluth will show an increase in population over five years ago," said R. D. Haven, the supervisor of the census for the Northern Minnesota district, this morning.

"The increase will be the smallest in the Third and Fourth wards of the city, but the city as a whole will show a substantial gain.

"But when you hear people say that the city will show from 29,999 to 30,000 increase for the five years, you may be safe in believing the statement absurd.

"If you will analyze the conditions a little you will see that such an increase is impossible. Try to figure out where those 29,000 or 30,000 people are. Figuring four persons to every bread winner, which is very liberal, that would mean that there must be from 5,000 to 6,000 more people in Duluth now than there were five years ago. If this is the case, where are they?

"It is true that there are some 10 people employed at the blast furnace who were not there five years ago, but estimate the number of men employed in the mills in West Duluth now and the number five years ago, and you will find a loss of about 600 men. There you have a loss of 590 men right at the start. In all the city west of Garfield avenue, it is hard to see where there are more men employed than there were five years ago. The kind of work has changed, and the mill men have to a more or less extent been replaced by factory workmen, but the number is not greatly increased.

"In the up-town district there has been a steady growth in the wholesale houses, the commission district, and the office district, and there has been a steady and substantial increase in the number of men employed over five years ago.

"But before you throw up your hands and say there is an increase of 20,000 or 29,000 or even 10,000, remember that you have to account for them, and show where the additional population is gaining its support."

The population of Duluth by the federal census taken five years ago, was 52,969. While Mr. Haven was unwilling to make any estimate of the number counted this year, it is likely that the population of the city will prove to be in the neighborhood of 60,000, judging from the tone of his remarks.

The directories of the last two years have estimated the population of the city at about 74,000, but this is generally believed to be a very liberal estimate, and the majority of citizens would place the figure some place between 60,000 and 70,000 in making a rough guess.

"While it is desirable that every person should be counted," said Mr. Haven, "it is certainly very poor policy to attempt to swell the figures by any means. The object is to get an honest census, and it leaves a very bad impression if it is found that efforts were made to boom the figures."

Tomorrow is the last day in which names will be added to the lists, and those who have not been counted before tomorrow night will not figure in the census returns.

BOYS ARE ARRESTED

Wood Peddlers from the Armory In on Disorderly Charge.

As a result of numerous complaints which have been received by the police concerning the disorderly manner in which the boys and men selling wood in front of the Armory conduct themselves, Capt. Resche, this morning, arrested Hugh Blair and Floyd Durke, whom he discovered scuffling on the sidewalk.

The people living in the vicinity have frequently complained of the manner in which the men and boys act while waiting idly for customers to put in an appearance, and the police have been waiting to catch some of them as an example.

Both boys pleaded not guilty to the charge against them, and their hearing was set for this afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Deals Leniently with a Farmer Fallen in Evil Ways.

He was a light-hearted son of a foreign clime who had come to the city, fallen among evil companions, and had imbibed too freely of Milwaukee's bid for fame.

"Where do you come from?" asked the court.

"Pike Lake."

"Do you get drunk often?"

"No, sir. There bane nothing to drink there but milk."

"Well, if you hustle back out to Pike Lake and climb on to the milk wagon I'll let you go," said Judge Windom, and the thankful prisoner scurried for the street car.

CRISIS PASSED

Between France and Germany on Moroccan Question.

Berlin, June 29.—Ambassador Bihourd, who was received by Chancellor Von Buelow today, made a further communication from the French government, which is regarded by the foreign office as another step towards an adjustment of the differences between the two governments. The official opinion continues that France will agree in principle to the Moroccan conference, and that secondary questions will ultimately be settled satisfactorily. The newspapers generally refer to the crisis as being passed and comment in a moderate tone on the French contentions.

Fort Dodge Boniface and Mrs. Allen United.

Dubuque, Iowa, June 29.—Leroy R. Chase, manager of the Logan hotel, Fort Dodge, and Mrs. Julia Allen, a wealthy widow of Berrien Springs, Mich., were quietly married in the parlors of Hotel Julien in this city yesterday. The circumstances were unusual. They were engaged, but the bride did not know of Chase's plans until she was introduced to the minister at the hotel yesterday morning and returned to change her gown for the marriage ceremony.

WHOLESALE GROCERS MEET.

Milwaukee, June 29.—A large number of wholesale grocers from all parts of the country gathered in Milwaukee today to consider matters of interest to the trade in general. The first session was devoted to matters of a routine character. William Judson of Grand Rapids, Mich., is at the head of the proposed national organization of wholesalers. Among the most important matteres to be discussed is the means of securing uniform food laws in all states.

FAST TRAIN IS DERAILED

One Passenger Killed and a Dozen or More Injured.

Cleveland, June 29.—A fast eastbound passenger train on the Cleveland & Pittsburg branch of the Pennsylvania road was derailed and wrecked, near Atwater, Ohio, today, causing the death of at least one passenger, while a dozen or more were injured.

The dead:

C. M. MUNHALL, Cleveland, commercial agent, Cleveland, Akron & Columbus railway.

The injured: Della Miller, colored; Pittsburg, back and legs hurt; R. March, Detroit, arm hurt; Mrs. W. K. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, back, arm and face hurt; C. L. Greggs, Akron, Ohio, back injured; R. A. Baldwin, engineman, legs and arm hurt; E. H. Green, Cleveland, slightly injured; C. W. Sawman, Cleveland, head hurt; Edward Riley, Johnstown, Pa., head and face injured; K. W. Busey, Cleveland, back hurt; C. W. Busey, Cleveland, back and head hurt; Clara M. Smith, Cleveland, leg hurt; Charles McCann, Cleveland, back injured; Baggageman, brakeman and fireman slightly injured. Engineer Baldwin's injuries are serious, and he will probably die.

The train is one of the fastest between Cleveland and Pittsburg, making the run of 140 miles between the two cities in three hours and fifteen minutes. When the accident occurred the train was probably running fifty miles an hour. A section gang was making repairs on the track and it is said, had removed a rail. A flagman was sent out, but for some reason he failed to stop the flyer and the wreck followed. The train consisted of a combination baggage and smoker, one day coach, a buffet car and two Pullmans.

All the injured passengers were in the combination car. The wreckage caught fire shortly after the accident occurred, but the flames were soon extinguished. Relief trains were promptly setn to the scene and the injured taken to Alliance.

NORWEGIAN OFFICER ESCORTED TO FRONTIER.

Stockholm, June 29.—A Norwegian officer whose movements excited suspicion, was arrested on the parade grounds at Trosa yesterday according to a Karlstad newspaper. The Norwegian, who was wearing plain clothes, was escorted to the frontier by a Swedish officer. It is reported that the suspect was attached to the Norwegian general staff.

LARGE ORDERS FOR RAILS

Steel Bars Command High Rate, Pig Iron Lower.

Cleveland, June 29.—The Iron Trade Review this week says: Orders for steel rails continue to add larger tonnage than do these for any other kind of finished material, although the demand for structural shapes and for plates is strong. The principal orders for ralls from steam railroads and electric lines are as follows:

Vanderbilt system, 25,000 tons; Wabash, 5,000; Toledo & Chicago Interurban, 5,500; Long Island, 2,500; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, 300; Trolley Lines in Cleveland district, 5,000; Trolley Lines in the East, 3,000. There is keen interest concerning steel bars. Most of the large firms made their contracts, which expire July 1, at $26 per ton Pittsburg, while some who came into the market later contracted at $28, and still others at $29. The present price is $30. The principal manufacturers have, however, declared that there will be no concession, and that $30 will be the price. Buyers are endeavoring to have old contracts extended, but sellers have positively refused to make any extensions of contracts at $26. Some extensions of contracts at higher prices may be granted, but the principal producer has not yet made even this concession, and is not yet ready to announce what it will do.

Pig iron has touched lower prices, and both Bessemer and basic are now selling at $14, Valley furnace. This price was made on a sale of 1,000 tons. It also has leaked out that at that, about three weeks ago, a sale of malleable was made, the iron to be shipped from the Valley to Detroit at the very low price of $13.80 furnace. Southern iron is now selling freely at $1.50, although it is rumored that $11.25 has been named.

The conference of representatives of the Amalgamated association and the American Sheet and Tin Plate company is now in progress. The employes are apparently of the opinion that the company is anxious for an excuse to sever all relations, and the prospect is that, on account of that opinion, t he deals of the company will be complied with.

SEAMAN'S BODY

Found In the Lake Off Knife River.

Two Harbors, Minn., June 29.—Fishermen at Knife River found the decomposed remains of an unidentified man floating in Lake Superior, about one mile from the mouth of the river, yesterday. Dr. John Pearson was at once notified and went to Knife River and brought the remains to Two Harbors.

A copy of the constitution and by-laws of the Lake Seamen's union, with a receipt for dues for April, 1905, issued to P. Flannigan, signed by "Curry," agent at Cleveland, leads to the belief that the man's name was P. Flannigan, and other papers give the address of James Flannigan, brother, Elmira, N. Y.

Sheriff Secures Order to Open the Vault.

Marshalltown, Iowa, June 29.—William Mueller, cashier of the Graettinger Savings bank, left there about a week ago, and his whereabouts are unknown. Sheriff Conkley has secured an order to have the bank safe opened, and until then the amount of his alleged shortage will not be known. Estimates run high as the bank had 10,000 depositors.

GROCERS MEET

Lively Session Is Held by Local Retail Dealers.

Members of Association Declare Themselves Acting Within Rights.

An interesting meeting of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association was held at Axa hall last evening, at which the grocers discussed at some length the pending action against them, by M. M. Gasser & Company on the charge of alleged conspiracy and steps were taken to employ counsel whenever such should be deemed necessary.

Thomas J. Wilton, a West end grocer and a member of the association, made an attempt during the earlier part of the meeting to break away from the association, but before the meeting was over he decided to stay inside the fold and asked that his previous remarks be regarded as unsaid.

The meeting was an open one and was well attended by the grocers, some of the wholesalers and jobbers and representatives of the retail butchers' association.

The concensus of opinion expressed last evening was that the grocers have been acting entirely within their own rights and that there has been no violation of the law. Strong denials were made of the existence of any boycotting system, also that any picketing has ever been done.

The discussion of the legal action brought against the members of the association was taken up after the preliminary business of the meeting was disposed of, the topic being broached by Secretary Burt Holcomb.

Mr. Holcomb explained that a complaint had been filed, but that no papers had yet been served on any members of the association. He said he did not regard the issue with any apprehension but that it would be necessary to take some steps in the matter. The directors held a meeting the other day but took no action as it seemed desirable to have the association take action as a whole authorizing the directors to employ counsel to defend the association.

Vice President G. H. Schulenberg moved that the directors be given the proper authority to act and the motion was seconded. T. J. Wilton interposed an objection to the price schedule of the association, but was held to be out of order.

W. B. Logan thought that the price card should be tested, adding that at the end of the chapter of the statutes under which the Gasser action was brought is a clause exempting labor unions from the operations of the act. He expressed belief that the courts would hold this to be class legislation. With reference to the prices Mr. Logan claimed that 15 per cent profit on sugar and 15 per cent on flour are only fair and reasonable. He claimed that plumbers fix their prices as well as many others and that no objection has been raised. Mr. Logan closed by saying:

"I believe in fighting this thing to a finish. Mr. Gasser was the prime mover in having the fine moved from $50 to a sliding scale of from $10 to $100 for any member breaking the price list or for unmercantile conduct."

M. Matheson, an East end grocer said he could not understand Mr. Gasser's motive in bringing the action, that he, Gasser, has always stood for 13 per cent as the cost of doing business and that he has been for the past two years chairman of the price committee.

At this point Mr. Wilton got up and said: "We are a trust. There is no use denying that. I do not believe in selling at a dictated price. I should have the right to buy and sell as I please."

Richard Dinham intimated to Mr. Wilton that anyone who so desired could withdraw from the association and Mr. Wilton declared that he would withdraw right away if he dared, but that if he did go out of the association the wholesalers and jobbers would refuse to sell him goods. He further asserted that if he could buy goods as an independent grocer he would become such.

The motion to authorize the directors to employ council when they deem such step necessary was then put and carried.

This vote was followed by a talk to the grocers from Fred. Mason, national and state secretary of the Grocers' associations.

Mr. Mason said:

"Gentlemen, I am glad that I am here at this crisis. I did not know of it until I arrived in Duluth.

"The man who brings this action will step short when he finds that there is nothing in the charges that he is making. I want to steady a few of you who are a bit weakened.

"The supreme court of this state has held in the John case, where a member of the Lumber Dealers' association brought an action against that body that what one man could legally do any set of men might also legally do. This is a decision of Justice Mitchell in the state supreme court.

"There is no law to compel any man to buy anywhere if he does not wish. There is no law to compel a wholesaler to sell to any man if he can prove that it will injure his business.

"Gasser was known as one of the highest priced grocers in St. Paul, as a high priced and fancy grocer at Seven Corners. Gasser himself has told me that the association was a good thing. He said it stood for pure foods and no retailing by jobbers, which were things which he said he supported.

"Duluth has one of the best organizations in the country. It is loyal to its members, to its wholesalers and to its public. The boot-black and the blacksmith educate the public to their prices which are fair and reasonable. It is the purpose of this association to educate the public to see that the grocer must have a reasonable profit.

"The doctors fix their fee at $2 a visit. You have now in your city a coal dealers' convention. These men fix their prices. It is right that they should. Nobody objects to a reasonable profit. The railway price on whatever road you choose is $4.20 between here and St. Paul.

"The retailers pay more taxes in this state than any other class of men. They should be accorded justice. The legislature represents and works for the interests of the taxpayers. You have nothing to hide. You are in the right and the right may be sidetracked but, in the end, it will arrive."

Mr. Wilton wanted to know how it came about that the Chicago supply houses are every month shipping thousands of dollars of supplies direct to the Duluth consumer at prices under those given by the home grocers.

Mr. Mason explained that the Minnesota merchant must abide by the pure food laws and the full weight regulations which he said is not the case with the Chicago concerns.

Mr. Wilton then expressed himself as satisfied, and that he was convinced the association is in the right. He asked that his previous remarks be forgotten.

Thomas Casserly, state organizer for the grocers, said that the organization was formed for the purpose of giving stability to trade on a fair and reasonable basis. He took occasion to remark that the parcel post is a most injurious thing to retailers, and, that if it were installed, many merchants will be driven out of business.

C. L. Twohy, who was present, was called on to speak as a representative of the wholesalers and jobbers. Mr. Twohy declared there was no ground for the Gasser action, and that if it should amount to anything, the jobbers will probably engage an attorney to help defend it. Mr. Twohy said is was a case where they must all stick together.

John Cox, representing the Butchers' association, when called on to speak, said that he was present to learn, rather than to take part. Mr. Cox explained that the butchers have a similar action on their hands, but that they maintain as do the grocers, that there is no trust or combination among the butchers and their association has the same objects as the grocers' association.

Mr. Cox was followed by Simon Clark, state president of the Retail Grocers' association.

Mr. Clark said Mr. Gasser was father of the resolution that raised the fine of $10 to a sliding scale from $10 to $100, the amount to be set by the directors.

"Mr. Gasser," continued Mr. Clark, "was the man, who, when the association was having trouble with the Duluth Wholesale Supply company, sent a woman to buy a sack of sugar. The association paid Mr. Gasser, afterward, $5.35 for the sack of sugar that was purchased at a cut price.

"If we are wrong then we want to know it," he said, "but I believe that we are right. Mr. Gasser is bringing this action in a forlorn hope. I do not believe we should expel him, and I understand that he has not resigned."

The discussions following were in a nature of messages to the public.

Richard Dinham declared that in his experience of fifteen years' membership in the association he had never seen anyone excluded from a meeting and that he had probably attended as many meetings as any one else present.

Secretary Holcomb said that during the five years he has served as secretary of the association he has been instructed by the association time and again to invite members of the press to be present with the idea of giving full publicity to the actions of the association, also that the wholesalers and jobbers had a standing invitation to attend the grocers' meetings.

W. B. Logan said it is the privilege and individual right of any grocer to say to the wholesaler "if you sell to that man you cannot sell to me."

Fred Mason, in answer to Mr. Clark's question said that it had never come to his knowledge in the history of the state or national organization of any attempt to picket or boycott any dealer.

Following the discussion, the following standing committees for the ensuing year were announced:

Finance—Simon Clark, T. W. Walker, A. H. Donald.

Price—Henry Folz, W. F. Logan, C. S. Olson.

Ways and Means—Burt Holcomb, J. G. Johnson, M. Matheson.

Legislation—G. H. Schulenberg, F. W. Erickson and J. E. Foubister.

The picnic committee was given full authority to make arrangements for the date and to appoint sub-committees. The grocers' annual picnic will be held this year at Fond du Lac.

TWO GREAT MENAGERIES

Forepaugh-Sells Circus Has Rarest of Wild Beasts.

No one competent to express an opinion of the subject ever questioned the claim that Adam Forepaugh's menagerie contained the largest and rarest collection of wild beasts ever moved by road or rail; with that of the Sells Brothers such a close second in cost and magnitude as to make the rivalry between them highly interesting. From the Madison Square Garden, New York, to Melbourne, Australia, the surpassing result of combining these two traveling zoological gardens is well known. It may be incidentally mentioned that in the last named city, value and interest were added to this living aggregation by the purchase there of the enormous tigers forming a notable feature of its public zoological garden. Among the recent additions are to be seen the extraordinary and unprecedented number of fourteen living, full-grown Polar bears, a single specimen of which has heretofore been regarded as an exceptionally rare feature. Another ponderous amphibious attraction is the biggest known living Nile hippopotamus, who was purchased with his late mate, twenty-five years ago, has grown from a blessed baby of five hundred-weight to tip the scales at four tons, and, strange to relate, though naturally a tender tropical creature, has become acclimated to live long and prosper in water whose temperature would just suit the ten Polar bears. The double herds of biggest, littlest and brightest elephants—whose united ages it has been computed would reach from the beginning of the first pyramid to the completion of the last sky-scraper—the Sultan droves of gigantic and sacred camels and dromedaries, the great double dens filled with an inter-continent congress of splendid specimens of everything worth seeing, will also be here on Monday next, and you will have a full hour in which to inspect them and enjoy the popular promenade concert by a fine military and arenic band before the brilliant circus and hippodromatic performances are announced.

A SPANISH VIEW

Of Cuba's Recent Progress Given In a Madrid Paper.

Comparisons Not Flattering to Spanish Colonizing Methods.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—A Spanish view of Cuba's recent progress is given in the Espana Economica y Financiera, published in Madrid, a copy of which publication has been received by the department of commerce and labor through its buerau of statistics. The article discusses the progress made by Cuba in her industries, commerce, public works, administration, finance, system of public schools, railways and sanitation, and contrasts the present improved situation with that prevailing under the old panish regime. A translation of the article in part follows:

"The progress that has been made will be best shown by a comparison of the state of the island before the proclamation of the republic and that which has prevailed since.

"From 1888 to 1893 the average budget of Cuba was $24,000,000. The budget for 1905-6 is $25,370,512. The difference is small, but it must be remembered that in colonial days $6,000,000 were expended on the army, $1,000,000 for the navy, $1,000,000 for sinecures, about $500,000 for ecclesiastical obligations and $11,000,000 for interest on the debt.

"The budget for 1905-6 is made up as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Executive branch | $ 68,300 |
| Department of— | |
| State and justice | 473,449 |
| Government | 6,029,215 |
| Finance | 2,253,003 |
| Public instruction | 3,901,994 |
| Public works | 4,813,854 |
| Agriculture, etc. | 262,347 |
| Judiciary branch | 1,265,513 |
| Debt contracted to pay the liberating army | 3,107,862 |
| Extraordinary credits | 3,124,546 |

"The projected increases in expenditures for this budget are caused primarily by the demand for improvements in what may be called the national 'mechanism' (outillage), and are justified by the expectation that the taxes will yield the amounts asked for in the estimates submitted to congress.

"In the fiscal year 1902-03 the total revenue was $17,767,046; in 1903-04 it had risen to $24,343,508. Thus from one budget to another there was an increase of more than $6,500,000, the larger part of which came from an increase of $3,622,711 in the customs receipts.

"When a country has natural resources with which to meet all the requirements of civilized life; when high taxes are regarded as a transient condition incident to the process of reconstruction; when they do not interfere with material prosperity, and when their employment is in large part reproductive, the increase in public expenditure is justifiable; instead of being a sign of an unhealthy state it is a sign of vitality, and so long as the administration is honest the taxpayers bear their burdens willingly.

"Like all people intent on their intellectual progress—the basis of all public activity—Cuba has paid special attention since its birth as a republican nation to its educational system.

"In 1894, under the colonial regime, there were in the island 904 public schools and 740 private schools. According to the recent message of President Palma there were in the republic in 1903-4, 3,472 primary schools and 72 special schools, a total of 3,544. This number subsequently rose to 3,605. In other words, independence has quadrupled the number of primary public schools, the increase having been particularly marked in the rural districts. In 1895, under colonial regime, the number of pupils in attendance was 120,000.

"Wagon roads had to be constructed on the island to make connection between points of production and points of shipment. For this purpose the republican budget appropriates $2,000,000; the Spanish administration left that work to the producer's machete.

"For a quarter of a century the Spanish administration kept planning a railway between Santa Clara and Santiago de Cuba. Under republican government a private company, the Cuba Railroad company, has established railway connection between the east and the west of the island in two years and a half. Without independence the 435 miles of the Central railway, the sure vanguard of a period of prosperity, would not exist.

"During the last period of our dismal rule the trade balance was regularly against the island. In 1903, under independence, the exports rose to $78,486,409, while the imports were $67,077,670. In 1899 the adverse balance was $22,000,000. Commerce between Spain and Cuba has of late somewhat expanded, though it has not yet reached the figures of 1899. Yet nothing has been done by our government toward a commercial treaty which might secure our future trade with the island.

"During the last insurrection, the number of taxpayers was 24,647. In 1901, at the time of the American intervention, the number had risen to 32,206.

"There has been an increase in the exports of mining products (principally iron, asphalt and manganese), as well as in the sugar production, which has once more passed the million-ton mark, which was exceeded only in 1894.

"In the second year of the republic, the increase in the quantity of sugar cane ground was 20 per cent over the preceding year; in sugar production 16 per cent.

"In the first year of the republic 8,877 Spaniards came to the island; in the second year 14,091.

"There is room in Cuba for ten times its population, and with the present prosperity it cannot fail to develop rapidly.

"The yellow fever was a chronic reproach to our colonial administration. A few months of hygiene and sanitation during the American intervention did more for the island than the power of Spain had done in four centuries.

"In 1880, under colonial regime, there were in Habana 7,942 deaths, or 39.94 per 1,000. Six hundred and forty-five deaths were from yellow fever, 446 from smallpox. In 1901, under Yankee intervention, the mortality had been reduced to 5,720, or 22.09 per 1,000. There were only eighteen deaths from yellow fever and none from smallpox.

"These comparisons are far from flattering to our colonizing methods and to our public men. In order that Cuba might liken herself to the great modern nations in hygiene, instruction, governmental mechanism, industrial development, etc., she had to escape from our sway. Had she continued subject to Spain, she would still be afflicted with the troubles from which she suffered before the revolution."

VIOLENT STORM KILLS EIGHT

Houses Destroyed at Philipsburg, Kas., and Occupants Perish.

Philipsburg, Kas., June 29.—A violent storm did great damage here and in the surrounding country late yesterday afternoon, eight persons being killed. The dead:

DANIEL WEAVER, farmer, Philipsburg.

MRS. ALEXANDER AND TWO DAUGHTERS, Philipsburg.

MR. MORGAN, farmer.

MORGAN'S HIRED MAN.

ELMER LAMB.

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN.

The houses of C. B. and L. Caswell were destroyed and the members of both families were injured. The body of Elmer Lamb was found in the ruins of his house.

SUSPECTED OF SECOND CRIME

Mrs. Pratt Guarded, and Her Hired Man in Jail.

Lake City, Iowa, June 29.—Upon the analysis of the contents of the stomach of Cyrus Pratt, whose funeral was interrupted Monday to investigate a charge of murder against Mrs. Pratt and their hired man, Will Persing, will depend not only the prosecution of these two for this offense, but perhaps investigation into the death of Mr. Pratt's father some five years ago.

It is well remembered here that Mr. Pratt's father died after a lingering, strange illness, during which he was treated by several physicians, none of whom could diagnose his case. The Pratt farm near Yetter is known throughout the county as one fully equipped with splendid buildings and all modern contrivances. The elder Pratt was termed wealthy. After his rather strange death, the family was broken up, the son Cyrus and wife remaining on the home place.

It has been a matter of neighborhood gossip that Mrs. Pratt was very friendly with Persing, who has worked in the community for many years. She was good looking and younger than her husband. Pratt was taken sick five weeks ago. Dr. Barry of Auburn could not diagnose the case, and Dr. Hull of Lake City was called in consultation. He was puzzled.

He says the patient seemed not sick enough to be in bed when he called, but always was worse just before. He thinks now it was the action of arsenic administered in small doses. Dr. Speaker, a Lake City physician, was present at death. No one was able to diagnose the case.

It is asserted that Mrs. Pratt purchased poison twice at a Yetter drug store recently, signing the poison register on both occasions. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt had two children, both girls. Persing is in jail at Rockwell City and Mrs. Pratt is guarded at her home.

It is believed that Persing will soon tell all he knows of the case. Dr. Speaker of Lake View was the last physician to call on Pratt last Friday afternoon. Pratt went into convulsions after he left. Mrs. Pratt retired early in the evening and was called at 2 o'clock. She took Persing's hand and stood with her head on Persing's shoulder while her husband died. She shed no tears. She was told to go back to bed.

Later men seeking clothing to dress the body went into the bedroom and found Persing with her. The next morning Persing went to the Bank of Yetter and asked about Pratt's life insurance and bank account. Then he went to Lake City with Mrs. Pratt and the next day the two went to Yetter together.

When the funeral was stopped Monday for an investigation, Mrs. Pratt was not apparently surprised. Persing denied knowing anything about the poison. Mrs. Pratt finally admitted she bought arsenic at McNichols' drug store in Yetter on March 7 and June 22, but said she used it on bread to poison mice, and when asked to produce some of it declared she had burned it.

PROCEEDINGS STARTED

To Oust Editor Dunnell of New Code.

St. Paul, June 29.—Some surprise was caused in political circles when it was announced that proceedings had been instituted with Attorney General E. T. Young to oust Mr. Dunnell of Owatonna from the editorship of the new code.

Complaints have been filed with the attorney general that since the Minnesota constitution places the power of appointment with the chief executive, the last legislature had no right to name Mr. Dunnell as the editor. Mr. Young refused to discuss the question further than to say that the authority of Mr. Dunnell to edit the code is questioned.

It is reported that a row between Mr. Dunnell and the commission which has charge of the publication of the code, the secretary of state, attorney general and governor, is responsible for the proceedings questioning Mr. Dunnell's right to serve. The commission has requested that Dunnell furnish specifications for the printing of the new code so that the contract can be let immediately and Mr. Dunnell has refused this request.

State officials wonder what will happen should Mr. Dunnell be ousted. The code goes into effect next March, and if the work of editing it is not finished there will be trouble.

ARMY ENGINEER CORPS

May Take Charge of Panama Canal Construction.

Washington, June 29.—It is believed in official circles that the time is not far distant when the engineer corps of the United States army will be designated to perform all duties pertaining to construction work on the Panama canal.

Chief Engineer Wallace's resignation is said to be the forerunner of another new deal in the conduct of the canal business. President Shonts of the commission and Mr. Wallace did not get along well, and there has been continual friction as to which was higher in authority.

If President Roosevelt does not order Gen. MacKenzie, chief of engineers, to take up the engineering work on the isthmus before congress convenes, it is certain that legislation looking to that procedure will be brought forward.

The engineer corps of the army is composed of high-grade men, and if the work is undertaken by the department there will be no bickerings and trouble as to who has the higher authority.

JUDGE HAS FAILED.

George Lindsay Refuses to Kiss His Wife.

New York, June 29.—"I am so glad that Magistrate Higginbotham told George he must kiss me. I would rather he did not have to be told, but it is so long since I have been kissed that any kind would be better than none. And may be he will turn sweetheart again if he does as the judge says. I am ready to help my husband obey orders.—"Statement of Mrs. George Lindsay, the unkissed wife.

"Kiss my wife because I must? Not on your life, Jail for me rather than lose my freedom to kiss when and whom I choose."—Statement of George Lindsay, who has been commanded by Magistrate Higginbotham to kiss his wife once a day.

These statements outline the situation in the Lindsay home, Brooklyn. It seems as if the magistrate's decision and well-meant efforts to bring back happiness to the Lindsay home are a dismal failure.

The wife spent the day with her mother, but returned to prepare her husband's dinner. The meal over, he disappeared.

WANTS A DIVORCE.

An Ending to the Crane-Chadbourne Romance.

Chicago, June 29.—Proceedings in divorce which will cause a sensation in society circles of Chicago and New York were begun yesterday in the circuit court, when Mrs. Emily Rockwell Crane Chadbourne, youngest daughter of Richard T. Crane, head of the Crane Elevator company, demanded her freedom from the bonds linking her with Thomas L. Chadbourne, Jr., of New York. Charges of desertion are made.

Mr. Chadbourne is a son of Thomas L. Chadbourne, who for many years lived at Houghton, Mich., and there acquired great wealth as a speculator in copper mining properties of Northern Michigan.

CARLSON WAS "ROLLED."

Story Comes Out In Trial at Butte.

Bute, Mont., June 29.—Before a jury in Judge McClernan's court yesterday John Carlson related the sad experiences of his first visit to San Francisco in August, 1902. The story was given as evidence in the trial of the case of John H. Sheehan against the State Savings bank to compel the bank to pay two certificates of deposit aggregating $550, and originally issued to Carlson, but now assigned by the indorsement of Carlson's name, which he claims is a forgery.

Carlson alleges that he was robbed of the certificates in San Francisco, and that his name was afterwards forged upon the paper, which was then presented to the Butte bank for payment. In the meantime he had notified the bank not to honor the paper when it was presented, and accordingly the certificates were protested when they were sent here for collection.

Carlson tells a story of being approached by a man who addressed him by name and appeared to be an old friend. Carlson says he could not remember the fellow, but he said so much and appeared so friendly that, for fear of hurting his feelings, he was persuaded to accompany his friend, who called himself Charles Henderson, to a room where several men were engaged in a game of poker.

Carlson says he refused to play, and shortly after he had been escorted to a lodging house he found his certificates had disappeared. Later he informed the bank, after a policeman had told him that he could do nothing for him, as the place he was in had a bad reputation.

The defense claims that Carlson entered the poker game voluntarily and lost all his cash and also a sum equal to the amount of both the certificates. It is said he assigned the paper to J. C. Manning, who in turn assigned it to John Sheehan, the plaintiff, who is a clothing merchant of San Francisco.

MOTHER DEMENTED.

Theory of Foul Play Respecting Sandstone Boy.

Sandstone, Minn., June 29.—Following the discovery by officials that Mrs. Benson, mother of the lost boy, has been unbalanced mentally for some time, has come a revival of the theories of foul play in connection with the disappearance of the boy.

The boy's father has returned to work and the search has been abandoned entirely.

The deputy coroner and sheriff are investigating on the theory that the little fellow was put out of the way.

A pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Johnson of Lemon street, Duluth Heights, when Miss Anna Bryson, daughter of J. F. Bryson of Minneapolis, became the bride of Norman Johnson of this city. The ceremony was performed under a horseshoe of ferns, and the Episcopal wedding service was read by Rev. W. J. Lowrie of the Highland Presbyterian church. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Rabina Bryson, and little Miss Anna Johnson was the ring bearer. The best man was George Destreich. The bride wore a pretty gown of brown silk and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, and the bridesmaid wore white organdy and carried pink carnations. The little ring bearer also wore white.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served the guests, who were only the immediate relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will be at home at 24 Lemon street.

CHANGE IN DRESS.

Baby's Apparel Not So Costly Now.

Baby's first expenses in the way of clothes should be somewhat less than they were a few years ago. That is a fact encouraging for large families. The reason for this is that the method of dressing the baby has changed altogether. At one time baby wore his or her little dresses very long, so long that they were a trial, if pride, to the nurse, and a grief to the laundress. Now they are much shorter, and are taken off many months sooner, says the New York Times. Baby goes into short dresses now perhaps by the time he is 2½ months old, and the clothes that he leaves off then he cannot use again, for he is growing like a weed. Some years ago he would have worn his long robes until he was 8 or 9 months old, would have had several sets of them, and they would have been cut for his short frocks. This not being the case now he does not require as many changes among his first appearing-out gowns, and the number may be several times less. As a matter of fact, it is not always, especially if the little fellow is the first arrival in the family, but his little brothers and sisters who follow will be received more economically.

A woman who is neither rich nor poor, as money matters average in New York, paid $200 for a layette for her baby a few years ago. That included a bassinet, hamper and entire wardrobe. However, it was a good deal of money to be called an average price, though the handsome little embroidered flannels, being of good quality, have been made over since for baby No. 2 and for baby No. 3.

Baby might have a pretty little layette that would do him very well which would cost $25, and it would include besides his clothes his little comb and brush and even his safety pins. But that is low and would mean few pieces of a kind. As a matter of fact a layette, as such, is seldom purchased. The absolute necessities for baby's wardrobe are bought outright and together frequently. These include his warm little flannels, etc., and $40 is considered a reasonable outlay. Little gowns and the other pretty parts of the wardrobe are picked up one at a time, for that is a labor of love, and cost sometimes goodly sums, being in the finest of hand work and lace. It is the lace that costs in the layette. If there is much of it and it is real the prices run up indefinitely. A handsome robe trimmed with a quantity of insertion and edges of real Valenciennes lace is now awaiting a purchaser who will pay $75 for it. It is not as pretty, really, as something simpler.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Night slips, each.. .. .... | $2 50 | $.... |
| Day slips, each.. ..... | 4 00 | .... |
| Flannel skirts, each..... | 5 00 | 5 00 |
| Dresses, each, ..... | 5 00 | 10 00 |
| Sacks, each.. .. ..... | 2 00 | .... |
| Wrappers, each ..... | 4 00 | 12 00 |
| Socks, per pair.. .. ..... | 75 | 1 50 |
| Total.. .... ..... | $23 25 | $29 50 |

Prices at the right are the higher ones to which the different pieces may run. So many of each article are bought, and some babies will indulge in sets of eight and others perhaps only six. The cost of the layette may be estimated. The wicker bassinet draped with muslin and lace will cost $50, and the price is higher if there is a little iron bed. A basket for containing baby's daily toilet articles costs $10 or $12 and a hamper $25. The flannels are the best, embroidered, and the other pieces all fine and dainty.

Counting up everything it makes the American baby an expensive luxury when it is considered that he will lay this wardrobe aside so soon. However, if a few little brothers and sisters share its use the cost is greatly reduced. Perhaps, anyway, if the baby is to be properly brought up, as an investment for old age, a paid-up policy, the price is not so high after all.

For Summer Travelers.

Courteous condescension is a language that belongs to every summer traveler, and which is spoken as much through looks as through words. There is no mistake so great as that of assuming when one is away from home a proud reserve and exclusiveness. This attitude is not a bit necessary in order to ward off dreaded familiarities, for it is easy to look about you with kindly eyes that do not invite others to attempt to take advantage of your good nature.

Above all things, be ready and glad to give information when it is asked of you and to offer it when it seems needed, as though you felt happy to be of use, and not in too much of a hurry to lend a hand to any one in difficulties, advises an exchange. There is absolutely no need of knocking about this good natured old world in a dread of being imposed upon or misunderstood. This is a fear and a mistake that makes one's way hard if you go along giving tips in a grudging fashion, and returning a brief answer with a cold glance to the stranger who asks you the shortest route to the next town, the hour at which the next boat leaves, or volunteers a word of friendly comment on the scenery or information concerning some historical spot.

A STRANGE VISITOR

By W. L. Lampton.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

I never believed in ghosts. I never believed in anything much except Margaret Vane. I didn't even have faith in my own courage. If I had I might have made a winning fight for her against that wild fellow, Tom Brent, whom she ran away with and married. I was such a man as she should have had for her husband, while he was such a man as no woman should have married. Yet he possessed that peculiar fascination over good women which seems to be present in every bad man.

Margaret Vane was rich and Tom needed money. So did I, for that matter, and I worked with my pen to get it, while Tom got his by any means which promised profit. I loved Margaret and told her so, many, many times. She loved Tom Brent, and I suppose he told her so, as I had done, although that was not necessary, for when the woman loves the man he need say little more than what must be said before the minister of the gospel to establish the woman's claim upon him.

Brent was handsome, unscrupulous and a drunkard, but Margaret overlooked the handicaps to happiness and became his wife. God knows, I tried my utmost to dissuade her, but I was neither handsome, unscrupulous nor a drunkard, and my prayers availed not.

For a year Margaret was blindly happy and Tom was unnaturally good. Then, as if fearful that she might not continue her affection for this reformed creature, he swung back into the old paths and began his old course by going on a prolonged spree. Margaret suffered much during this defection, but brightened again when he sobered. After this he divided his drunks and had them in less pronounced form, but with much greater frequency. He also began to gamble and to spend money in the hundreds of ways open to any one who has it to spend. Margaret, of course, was his chief source of revenue, and she furnished him with what he asked, foolishly hoping that her kindness would win him to her and hold him fast to better things.

For five years this continued, and at last Brent became involved in a disgraceful scandal, in which a man was shot, a family broken up and several thousand dollars were missing. Brent's connection was not well defined, but it was enough to compel his absence and he disappeared. Margaret went down with brain fever, and for weeks her life was despaired of, but she rallied in time, and once more was well. But how changed she was. We had always been good friends, and now she turned to me as the one who was nearest. She was an orphan, and no other had a better right to her guardianship than I had, now that her husband had proved unworthy of the trust she had reposed in him.

Six months after he went away a report came through the newspapers that he had been lost in a hotel fire in a Western town. Margaret insisted on my going to investigate. I found that several unrecognizable bodies had been taken from the ruins and buried, and among the baggage saved was a trunk containing effects which conclusively proved that Brent had a room in the hotel on the night of the fire, though he had registered under a different name. I claimed the trunk and took it back to Margaret with my story.

Her mind appeared to be at rest now, and she began to improve in health and spirits. But the cruel blows had been struck, and it was not possible that she could ever be the same again.

As the time passed and she began to lean more upon me, I took hope once more, and very gently led her back to the paths we had trod in other days. I must be very careful, as I could see, and I was. Margaret did not seem to realize at first that I was her lover still, but after many days she did, and when I asked her to marry me she consented. Not joyously, as one whose heart knew no other, but as one chastened by sorrow, who felt the need of a comforting presence.

We went abroad on our wedding journey and were gone six months. When we came back I went to live in Margaret's handsome home, and there I established a "den" in which I worked often far into the night. Off of this den I had my sleeping room, and Margaret had a suite of chambers across the hall. There were many times when she wished to be alone, and I respected her wishes and did not disturb her. Our lives moved serenely, with little of joy or sorrow in them, of our own making, and I was content to be near Margaret always and to be her friend, if I could not be quite all she wanted as a lover.

The Vane mansion, as the old house was called, had its own ghost stories, as nearly all old houses have, but it was so vague as to be scarcely worth considering. It never disturbed me in the slightest, and, though I was naturally timid, I never thought of ghosts haunting the place, no matter how late I worked. One night, however, I was made to think about the stories I had heard. It was very late and I was absorbed in a story I was writing. I had heard no sound to disturb me, but I felt a draft as if the doors were opened. My window was down from the top and I fancied the wind had changed. I closed it and sat down at my desk again. Presently I heard what seemed to be soft footsteps. They were passing down the hall. I thought of burglars and hesitated about going to see. I turned my light out and sat still. There was a faint light in the hall. All became quiet and I peered out. There was nothing in sight and I slipped down to the farther end. Nothing there but a door leading to a small balcony overlooking the backyard. Nothing had been taken and there was no sign of midnight marauders. I tried the door and it was locked. I went back to my den and a few minutes later I retired.

At breakfast I casually spoke to Margaret of ghosts. She laughed nervously and said they had been seen in the house and had been heard, but not for two generations. I asked her if she was afraid. She said she didn't know, but that she might be if the ghost came to her. Otherwise she was not inclined to give the matter any thought.

For two or three nights after this Margaret and I were out at the theater and social affairs, and if the ghost roamed then I was not there to hear. But it came again during the following week. This time its soft tread moved up toward Margaret's room. My first thought was of her, and as soon as I could gather my strength, for I confess that I was so frightened that I could not pull myself together at once, I hurried up the hall to her door. I called to her softly, once or twice, and went in. She was not fully awake and asked what was the matter. I told her I had heard the ghost again, and it had come to her door. She laughed then and became my comforter. Margaret, you know, was always stronger than I and had really more of physical courage than I had. She sent me back to my room with the promise that she would lock her door and the ghost could not get in. I went away, and as I did so, I heard the key turn in the lock. Then I searched the halls and found nothing, as before.

The next morning at breakfast Margaret teased me so about my ghost that I was ashamed of myself and resolved not to speak of it again. Several weeks passed, and at intervals I would hear the footsteps of the mysterious visitor, and I had become accustomed to his ghostship and gave no heed. Now and again, after I had heard it moving along the hall toward Margaret's room, I would go there just before going to bed to see if her door was locked. It was always secure, and I smiled at my fears and went my way.

But as I became careless of the ghost I began to notice that Margaret was becoming nervous and was losing color and spirits. I thoughtlessly chaffed her as she had teased me, but she showed such unmistakable signs that it was no trifling matter, that I resolved to see for myself what this ghost might be. I said nothing to her of my purpose, for I knew it would not improve matters any for her to think I was disturbed. The next night I had attended a dinner at the club and did not get in until midnight or perhaps an hour later, as one is apt to do after club dinners. Probably I had taken more wine than usual. In any event I felt brave enough to meet any ghost that walked, and I went into my den to wait for it, if this should be its night to visit the haunts of men. I waited so long that I dozed, and, waking with a start, I heard the well-known footsteps. This time they were going down the hall in the direction I had pursued them the first night I had heard them.

Gathering my wits as quickly as I could, I went into the hall, and in the light, so dim that only the merest outlines were visible, I saw a tall figure in a misty gray wrap of the olden time. I started after it, but before I had taken a half dozen steps it stopped, turned and waved me back warningly. As I have said, I am not a brave man, and I came no nearer. Slowly the ghost turned again and in its stately fashion passed on to the end of the hall.

Instead of following it, I hurried to Margaret's room. She was awake and very nervous. I told her I had seen the ghost. She laughed and said I had been having too much wine, and it would be better for me to go to bed and let the ghost pursue the even tenor of its way. But I was brave now, seeing that she was safe and inclined to tease me, and I left her, notwithstanding she pleaded with me not to go, and went back down the hall. Only a very short time had elapsed since I had seen the ghost, and when I got to the door leading out to the balcony I found it was open. I ran to the front of the balcony, and in the yard below I saw the figure of a man crouched in the shadow. In the alley just beyond were two policemen. I called to them to catch the burglar, and as I dashed back into the hall to go out the back way, I met Margaret at the door of the balcony.

"Go back to your room!" I exclaimed. "The ghost is a burglar," and hurried on down stairs. As I went I heard several pistol shots. When I reached the alley the two officers were standing over a man lying on the ground.

"He's done for," said one, "but he got two shots at us before he went."

"Who is it?" I asked, horrified at the tragedy before me, and turning away so as not to see the dead man.

"Why," replied one of the officers proudly, "it's that Tom Brent that ran away. We only heard yesterday that he was in town, and while we were spotting him he slipped in here to do a robbery, I guess. Anyhow, he won't do any more soon."

I could scarcely walk, but I managed somehow to get back into the house and to Margaret's room. She was not there, and I staggered out to the rear balcony. I found her lying on the floor unconscious.

The newspapers told only of the burglar caught in the act. They did not know what I knew; what Margaret knew. Very soon afterwards we went abroad and there our paths separated forever. She died a year later, leaving all her property to me as "an atonement," according to the wording of her will.

The Pollard Lilliputian Opera company gave its first production of "A Runaway Girl" in Duluth at the Lyceum last evening. The large audience was delighted with the performance. The work of individual members of the cast, and of the company as a whole, was excellent, and greatly pleased the many admirers of the little people, who are meeting with fine success in this city.

Master Teddy McNamara as Flipper, the jockey, was again one of the great favorites of the evening. A coon song as sung by McNamara and Miss Daphne Pollard was a decided hit. Miss Irene Finlay, Miss Leah Leichtner, Miss Lily Bull and Miss May Fraser were all very clever, and the work of the remainder of the cast was good. Master John Heintz, as a member of the band, carried a bass drum which appeared considerably larger than himself. Johnny is one of the most diminutive members of the cast, and likewise one of the most popular. His work with the drum last night called for so many encores that when he came out for the last time on the stage in answer to the demand of the audience he was fairly staggering, and the drum appeared to be the master.

Jack Pollard was exceptionally good as Lord Coodle. Willie Thomas was excellent as Prof. Creel, and Fred Pollard and Oscar Heintz were also very good.

The performance will be repeated tonight, and tomorrow "The Geisha Girl" will be the attraction.

SHOE STRUCK DRIVER

And the Bride and Groom Were Hurt.

New York, June 29.—Courtplaster and arnica prevented a merry wedding supper for Dundas R. Campbell and his bride Tuesday night, and instead of a wedding trip to Boston both were compelled to go to a surgeon's office because of a collision between their carriage and a trolley car.

Mr. Campbell married Miss Jennie Miller, daughter of Mrs. Mary D. Miller at Holy Trinity church, late yesterday.

The bridal couple, with Mrs. Miller and two bridesmaids, entered a carriage to go to the Harlem Casino, where supper was to be served. One of the wedding party, having an old shoe, struck the driver, James Hall, on the head. He whipped up his horses and just as he started across the car tracks at the corner, a Lenox avenue car struck the carriage. The carriage windows were shattered, showering the wedding party inside with broken glass.

All were taken into the office of Dr. F. O. Virgin, who found that Mrs. Miller was most seriously injured. She had a long scalp wound which had to be sewed up. The others of the party had minor cuts and bruises.

THE STATE CENSUS.

Tomorrow is the last call for the 1905 census in the state of Minnesota.

Under the law providing for the census, it has to be taken during the month of June, and if you are not enumerated by tomorrow night you will have to wait until Uncle Sam takes his census in 1910.

The appeals The Herald has published asking people to make sure they were enumerated and that their friends were enumerated have been quite generally heeded, according to R. D. Haven, superintendent of the census for this county. But it may be that some did not notice the others. Therefore,

If you are not sure you have been enumerated, make sure. It is important to you not only as a citizen but as an individual whose prosperity depends upon the prosperity of your home community, that the count should be full and complete. If you have been left out it is not complete. If there is any doubt about it, go to the nearest telephone and call up No. 1493. Then tell the man that answers the 'phone about it, and he will make sure that if you have not been enumerated you will be. You can easily remember the number, because it is one more than the year Columbus discovered America in.

And then, after you have made sure that everybody you know has been counted, and when you sit back to await the result, remember that population guesses are the wildest things afloat, and make none that you cannot base upon something tangible. Do not base it on directory estimates. They show Duluth to have something like 75,000 people. We should all like to see it show up that way, but it is too much to expect in five years. Directory estimates are notoriously exaggerated and inaccurate, being based upon forced rules without proper foundation.

If Duluth can show 65,000 people, an increase of over 12,000 since 1900, it will be able to throw up its hat and make a noise about it. If it shows anything above 60,000 it will be able to throw bouquets at itself for such an increase in five years when many other parts of the state have gone backward.

And whatever it does show, there will be no padding to make the showing, and in the people enumerated practically all are employed and satisfactorily paid. It is a town full of contented, working and wellpaid people, with exceedingly few unemployed and dissatisfied.

AN UNTIDY FRONT DOOR.

In the interests of decent municipal housekeeping the city should pave Fifth avenue west at once.

The condition of the three blocks from First street south to the railroad tracks is a disgrace to the city. There is no place in the city of similar length that is used so much and that is so greatly in need of paving, yet there are several other places the city authorities are talking about paving, and if they are talking about doing anything with Fifth avenue they are not making themselves audible.

It would be bad enough if this piece of street were back where it could be concealed from visitors to the city. But it is located directly in front of the eyes of the visitor when he comes from the train. Even if he should take a closed carriage and not look out he would be informed of the condition of the street by the manner in which the carriage would bounce him about as it rattled over the inequalities of the paving.

Furthermore, Fifth avenue affords the only outlet from the wholesale district, and it is one that is fast becoming impassable. No single business interest in the city is doing more to advertise and build up Duluth than the jobbers, and laying all other reasons aside they are entitled to a navigable passage-way from their places of business to the main thoroughfares of the city.

From First street down to the beginning of the sandstone paving below the railroad tracks, Fifth avenue is paved with cedar blocks. Rather, it once was paved with cedar blocks. In the center of each block is a wide area from which the blocks have all been worn away so there is nothing but the foundation left. On the sides, where a few blocks are left, they are worn down to half their former height. Scattered about is a filthy muck composed of the crushed fibers of the old blocks mixed with mud.

The condition of these three blocks is deplorable. They are an eye-sore that cannot fail to give new-comers a poor impression of the city. First impressions are lasting, and instead of showing the arrivals the very worst there is in all the city, they should be shown the best.

Incidentally, it may be said that Fourth avenue west is in much the same condition, though of course it runs only to Michigan street. Both avenues should be paved at once with some suitable material.

THE POSTAL DEFICIT.

The fact that the postoffice department will show a deficit of something like $15,000,000 for the current fiscal year is exceedingly prolific of discussion and theorization.

One publication blames it to the cheap second-class rates, another to the franking privilege, another to the exorbitant rates paid the railroads for carrying mail, and another to the cost of the rural free delivery extension. All are more or less right.

The abuse of second-class mail rates is prolific in useless expense to the government, but it is being pruned down, and if the rate were restricted to the publications for which it was intended it would cut but a small figure in the total result. In this connection, as The Herald has before pointed out, it is impossible to avoid the fact that the express companies are glad to accept magazines, for instance, at the same rates charged by the government. True, they only pay the railroads a fraction of what the government pays for the same service, and this enables them to make money at it.

The franking privilege is abused grievously, and it should be restricted. The rates paid railroads for carrying mail are ridiculously high, and they should be reduced to somewhere near a reasonable basis.

The comparatively new feature of rural free delivery is also conducted at a loss, and the question has been raised whether it is right that this service should be extended to communities not able to pay for it, at the expense of the rest of the country. On this same basis all of the fourth class offices should be abolished, for the postmaster gets as his pay the entire receipts from the sale of stamps, and as this is the sole income of many of them the cost of carrying mail to and from such an office must be a loss. Yet nobody would think of abolishing postoffices that do not pay for themselves and maintaining only such offices as are self-supporting.

Rural free delivery is an expensive institution, but it has become a necessity, and it is impossible to suspend it or to greatly curb its extension. If the postoffice department is to be made self-sustaining, and first class rates reduced from 2 cents to 1 cent, it will have to be in some other way than through the abolition of rural free delivery.

ON THE BRINK.

Beaten, battered, discouraged, threatened within and without, Russia's situation seems to be getting worse every day.

In her war with Japan, brought on by encroachments she never would have attempted if she had dreamed the little country contained such formidable possibilities, she has been defeated at every point and has seen her army and navy go down before the irresistible prowess of the Japs.

With her home territory seething with discontent, with her people groaning under the burden of a tyrannous government, with her stupid leaders crying for the continuance of the war to distract attention from anarchy within the borders of the country, her victims of Poland and the Caucasus choose this moment for an uprising, and the streets run with blood.

Now comes the most terrible sign of all—the revolt of her sailors, which may lead to the revolt of her soldiers. More bitter than all the defeats at the hands of Japan, more terrible than all the revolts in conquered territory, was the action of the sailors on the most powerful ship of her Black Sea fleet. For some reason, they rose up and murdered all their officers, cast their bodies into the sea, and then sailed back to the port of Odessa, where they ran to the masthead the red flag of revolution and hurled a defiance into the teeth of the government. It is said that the revolt came because a sailor who came to complain of the food provided on board was shot. What the incident was that started it is not so material as the grim, fearful prospects of the future that are thus opened up.

The officers of the remaining ships of the Black Sea fleet are sailing to engage the rebel vessel, the officers not knowing at what moment their own crews may revolt and toss them into the sea.

It looks very much as though the czar and his family and his government were tottering into the abyss of anarchy and revolution, and what the end will be no man can tell.

In the meantime, such conditions as these are letting a flood of light in upon the victories of the Japanese army and navy, which have heretofore been almost inexplicable. How can a nation win victories either on land or sea, with the rank and file of her soldiery permeated by the bitterness that led to the mutiny on the Kniaz Potemkine?

In view of the developments of the past few days, it seems altogether probable that the laurels of the Japs will be decreased somewhat when the full story of the battle of the sea of Japan is told. It will probably be shown that against the united front Japan presented, with her officers and men inspired by patriotism, Russia had to contend with a fleet that was a seething mass of rebellion and mutiny.

A house divided against itself cannot stand. Greater than the bravery, skill and discipline of the Japs among the conditions that confront Russia is the disorganization and disintegration of her own forces, poisoned as they are by the spirit of discontent and mutiny.

Hotel Gossip.

At the Lenox hotel there is a coal dealer who was unusually mad yesterday, and he has not yet learned that his anger was the result of a joke played upon him by his friends. When he entered his room the previous evening he found it in a badly littered up state. Several empty beer bottles were strewn about the floor in an unartistic manner. Cigarette stubs and half-smoked cigars were scattered over the table, carpet and window sills, and a general spirit of disorder prevailed. When last he had seen the room it was in no such condition, and he knew that it was through no fault of his that it was not tidy.

He immediately started down stairs with the intention of roasting the clerk. Before accomplishing this purpose he encountered two of his friends, who occupied an adjoining room, connected with the other by means of a bath room. They appeared surprised and hurt. They informed him that while loking for him they had entered his room a few minutes before, finding it in the condition described. They expressed sorrow that he should have had so good a time without letting them in on it, and admonished him to show more consideration for their rights next time. This did not quiet his feelings any, and in a wild burst of eloquence he told of his wrongs, and of his intention to call down the clerk, the manager, or whoever was responsible for the disorder. The friends said the course he had mapped out was a wise one, and advised him to follow it. He was too much put out to notice anything out of the ordinary in their actions, and unless he reads this, may never suspect that they were at the bottom of the trouble, which really was the case. They had fixed it up with the manager, told him to expect a storm, and then invaded their friends room with their varied assortment of articles. The manager having been warned of the impending storm, took the heated remarks of his guest in good part, and seemed in sympathy with him, promising to do all he could to hunt down the offenders, and denying that he had let the room to other parties for the afternoonn. Meantime the friends, with other friends, stood in the back ground and helped the fun along whenever opportunity offered. The coal dealer in question did not become quieted down until he had tired himself out talking, and ever since then he bursts out occasionally when the others touch upon the subject.

"A new idea in cigar manufacture, just patented by a German manufacturer, comprises a ring for securing the covering leaf," said A. G. Remington of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "The ring is made of tinplate and is compressed after its application to the covering leaf, so that it takes the shape of the cigar tip. The cigar is first rolled in the usual manner and then wrapped in a covering loaf, so that the finished cigar does not appear different from the usual shape. The covering lead, however, is not gummed or the like, but is held fast by means of the ring. The creased tinplate ring is intended to be secured by friction alone, and when the tip of the cigar is cut off, as usual, it is easily released and the cigar can be smoked in an agreeable manner and without occasioning a ragged, loose covering leaf.

"Similar means of securinug cigar tips have been proposed from time to time, but all of these employ hooks or projections, adapted to engage in the leaf, perforating it, which, of course, is objectionable.

"Such a device as this will do away with an objection raised by sanitarians, who claim that the present method of fastening the end of the wrapper is most unclean, and often the means of conveying disease. Persons who have investigated the manufacture of cigars claim that the consumption is usually prevalent among the workers in this line and that the paste used at present for fastening the end of the wrapper leaf often becomes tainted with the germs of disease, and in this manner the disease is conveyed to the smoker. When the sanitary tip is used the sanitarians will urobably find something else about the cigar to object to, but the men will go on smoking them just the same. The house I am traveling for is enjoying a good trade this year, and from the fact that there is a lively demand for the weed we infer that the country generally is in a fairly prosperous condition."

"We retail coal men hear some strange complaints every now and then," said John M. Warnock, a Minneapolis coal dealer, at the Spalding. "Last winter one of my men came to me saying that a customer had kicked because the coal we had delivered to him was too black. He wanted a reduction in the price on this account. I told the man to tell the customer that if he had any kick to make on the color of the commodity he should go to a higher authority with it, for we were not responsible.

"Every coal office might easily, by writing up the various complaints and queer experiences their men meet with prepare a readable book on the subject. A person never imagines how unreasonable some people can be until he goes to work in a coal office."

The Weather.

Up from the southwest came a storm last night that threw down the gage of battle to that northeast wind which has been persistently blowing for several days. That the southwest storm came out the victor, and that its entrance paved the way for a return of summer, is a suitable subject for celebration.

Today it was warm, as June days should be, for the wind that came freshly from the southwest brought a genial temperature that made everybody happy again. The rain was not needed, but there was not a great deal of it, less than half an inch—.36 of an inch, to be exact—but since it came with the southwest wind that drove the lake breezes back to Canada, where they came from, it is well.

Conditions are favorable, according to the weather man, for a continuation of today's pleasant weather. It will be fair tomorrow, though there may be showers tonight, and there will not be much change in temperature. The winds will be fresh to brisk, and mostly from the westerly quadrant.

Showers fell over Gulf states, the Mississippi valley and the northwest, heavy at Cairo, Little Rock and Winnipeg. It was warmer this morning over the Upper Mississippi and Red River valleys and New England states. Pressures are low over Saskatchewan and Arizona. In the lake region the winds are light to fresh, southerly with cloudy weather on Superior and Michigan, and easterly and southerly with clear weather on Huron and Erie.

Following were the maximum temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

PREMIUM PAYMENTS.

Mr. Lawson's "Forty Cents on the Dollar."

Thomas W. Lawson is appealing to all policy-holders in the three great life insurance companies of New York city to rally around him while he makes war on the "system." One of his great aims, as he sets forth, is: "The reduction of future premium payments to 40 cents on the dollar of what you now pay."

It is to be hoped that no policy-holder will so much as send his name provisionally to Mr. Lawson before he looks into this question of the "40 cents on the dollar." The information he needs is available in any book or encyclopedia article on life insurance.

The policy-holder will learn that life insurance is not a charity or a gamble, but a business based on mathematics and cold statistics.

He will learn that mortality tables are in existence which show the probabilities of death of men at each age, based on the actual experience gathered in the insurance business.

He will learn that the "net premium" that must be paid for insurance is calculated directly from these tables; that this "net premium" is the amount that must be paid on the average to meet death claims, entirely without regard to expenses of conducting the business, and that if these net premiums are not saved up penny for penny for exclusive use in paying death losses the company is bound straight for bankruptcy.

He will learn that to cover the expenses of the business these "net premiums" are "loaded" by adding a percentage of their amount. The net premium, plus the load, gives the gross premium which he pays for this policy.

Finally he will learn that the loading rarely, if ever, exceeds 40 per cent, even in the classes of policies that must pay the highest rate. The New International Encyclopedia says in summing up the pertinent facts. "Of the gross premiums, therefore, from 16 2-3 to 30 per cent is loading."

Now, if the current premium rates in this country are loaded only to the extent of 30 per cent, so that on the average at least 70 per cent of the premium money must be set aside to meet losses, how can any man honestly propose a scheme which will reduce premiums to 40 per cent of their present size? Is not such a proposal a deliberate bid for bankruptcy?

Whatever opinion people may hold of Mr. Lawson in his role of a "voice crying in the wilderness," they should judge him in this case on a basis of incontestable figures and act accordingly.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Twenty-two Years Ago

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers of This Date 1883.

•••At a meeting of the village council a communication from Rudolph Hering on the sewerage question was read, and K. P. Corbyn and Village Engineer Patton testified that $1,000 to $1,500 was none too much to pay for proper plans of a system for Duluth. Aldermen Ensign, Eaton and J. R. Carroll were appointed a committee to accept the proposition of Engineer Hering. The gas and water company was granted an extension until Sept. I for having gas and water on Superior street.

•••The store in Dr. Austin's new building has been rented to McKenzie & McGregor who will open a clothing and gents' furnishing goods store. They have bought the stock of McKinley & Merrill.

•••Mrs. J. H. Upham entertained a number of young people at her home on Tuesday evening.

•••Miss Montague, daughter of Capt. R. B. Montague of the steamer St. Paul is visiting Mrs. J. W. Miller.

•••George G. Barnum is home again on a visit.

•••Galvanized iron cornices for the opera house are being put into position. The words "Munger—Grand Opera House—Markell" are to be put on the front.

•••A team of horses belonging to James Forsyth ran away Tuesday afternoon. The driver, John Goyran, was thrown from his seat and severely injured.

•••Miss Edith Bostwick started on Tuesday evening for a month's visit at Fargo and Glyndon.

•••Among the grocers whose advertisements appear in the newspapers are: Stone & Ordean, wholesale; A. J. Miller & Co., James Farrell, H. G. Noble, Henry Truelsen, Coulter & Fray and E. O. Sherwin. The hotels advertising are: American House, M. Carroll, proprietor; Norris House, Michael Norris and Abbott & Bailey announce the A. & B. restaurant, "meals at all hours."

POINTED PLEASANTRIES.

Philadelphia Press: "Do you believe that we will have a chance to repent after death?"

"Sure I do. But it won't get us anything."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "I believe in a rational celebration of the Fourth."

"What is a national celebration, pa?"

"The kind that your mother permits me to enjoy, my son."

Chicago Record-Herald: "Your little girl seems to take after her father?"

"Oh, dear, no! She takes after me. You ought to see the way she eats pickles!"

New York Sun: Cato was demanding that Carthage be destroyed.

"Why not celebrate the Fourth in it?" they suggested.

Appalled by the fiendishness of the scheme, the senate voted to send the ships instead.

Washington Star: "Smithers is one of those people who manage to shift the blame whenever anything goes wrong."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "I observe that he always has to be coaxed to sing."

Detroit Free Press: "Now that you have received your diploma, how do you feel?" inquired the old alumnus.

"To tell the truth," answered the graduate, "I feel as if the whole bottom had suddenly dropped out of the earth!"

Yonkers Statesman: Patience—The season is approaching when men will lie by the cool streams and fish.

Patrice—I'm not so sure about the cool streams and the fish, but the other part of the statement seems to be all right.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Interntional Falls Border Budget: The Beaver Bay Advocate has started a boom for ex-Mayor Hugo of Duluth for governor. Hugo, at least, would not be a "filler in."

Northome News: Several good names have been mentioned as available gubernatorial timber for the next election, but the promoters should remember that "the good die young."

Grey Eagle Gazette: For this week only we will accept firecrackers on subscription.

Bertha Headlight: Chicago is unquestionably the worst town of its size in God's universe. It will be honestly governed, decently regulated and safe to live in about the time that Macauley's naked savage takes up his position on London bridge.

St. Vincent New Era: Tuesday and Wednesday nights ice formed at St. Vincent, but winter will soon be over.

Pillager Leader: A Cleveland minister is building a nine-story church. Why should not a sky-pilot have a sky-scraper?

Faribault Journal: A contemporary compliments the government upon the speedy prosecution it metes out to bank offenders. But if the government would only take more precautions to prevent these misdeeds by bankers, it would gain still higher compliments.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The man who is looking for a chance to do good as he goes along this life will be more of a success than he who wins great wealth but is damned by his fellow-men.

Hawley Herald: They are now trying to work up a fight between Norway and Sweden at least such are the tactics of the newspaper head lines. Those countries have about as much cause for fighting each other as an old hen would whose dignity was hurt by the cackle of a neighbor' hen.

Fergus Falls Globe: We beg to reiterate our belief that Socialists must quit quarreling over party tactics and discipline. Freeborn men do not like the word discipline.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York News: Content is a small part of satisfaction and a large part resignation.

It is better to be a servant of some one else than to be the slave of yourself.

There is a lot of satisfaction in being dissatisfied with what people expect to satisfy you.

There is so much charity to do that if people did it somebody would have to do it for them, it would make them so poor.

Had Her Kimona Cut Out.

New York Sun: The other evening a young man rushed into a Brooklyn hospital, asked excitedly for Mrs. Brown.

"Mrs. Brown? Mrs. Brown?" repeated the puzzled official. "We haven't any Mrs. Brown here."

"Why, you must have, for I just got home and found this note from my wife on the table."

The physician took it and read:

Dear Jack: I'm so sorry not to be here when you get home. I have gone around the corner to have my kimono cut out. Come around when you get home. ALICE.

How He Married Them.

Boston Herald: A couple desirous of being married, went in a pouring rain to the clergyman's house, which was a long distance from the village. The reverend gentleman was abed and asleep, and came to the window in nightcap with his candle and asked what was wanted. Being told he said: "Well, I can't bother to dress now, and I won't keep you waiting in the rain, so stand out there and take hold of right hands." Which they did, and he married them thus:

Out of the window, this stormy weather,
I join this man and woman together;
No one but He who rules the thunder
Can break this man and woman asunder.
Amen.

A Shade Off Color.

Denver Times: Prof. Hart of Harvard, classmate of President Roosevelt, wanted to adopt twins a few years ago, and inserted an "ad" in the Boston papers. He stipulated that they must be of American parentage, good and healthy, and not have a spot or a blemish of any description; the parents must be of good standing and must surrender all claim.

He was surprised at the number of replies he received. One day he was called to his front door by his maid to look at the twins in a baby carriage. They fulfilled all requirements, but, unfortunately, were little colored babies.

Anticipated His Hose.

Denver Post: The Paris friends of the sick Paderewski enjoy an anecdote brought back from the United States.

At one time the pianist was invited to the house of an American millionaire, with some fifty or sixty of the "400" in attendance. After the coffee the host approached Paderewski and suggested that he play a bit—the other guests would be delighted.

"Sorry," replied the pianist, "I never play in private.

"But—" insisted the host.

"My dear sir," interrupted Paderewski, "I know what you are going to say, but I have purposely starved myself at your table. I haven't eaten fifty cents' worth, and, as each of my notes must bring me at least seventy-five cents, I must be excused this time."

This From Boston!

Boston Herald: Slow is Storthing—the Norwegian republic.

Not True to Nature.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Mark Twain was visiting H. H. Rogers, who led the humorist into his library.

"There," he said, as he pointed to a bust of white marble, "what do you think of that?"

It was a bust of a young woman coiling her hair.

Mr. Clemens looked at it a moment and then said:

"It isn't true to nature."

"Why not?" Mr. Rogers asked.

"She ought to have her mouth full of hairpins."

The Quickest Way.

Washington Post: Edmund Russell gives a long set of rules on "How to Get Rid of a Lover." The quickest way, girls, is to marry him.

His Miserable Luck.

Windsor (N. Y.) Standard: A citizen of this village had a bad streak of luck one night last week. He was just about to step into his new $10,000 automobile, when three bed slats broke and he woke up.

Taft's Greatness.

"How big is Mister Taft, papa,
That people call him great?
Is he as big as Abner Brown,
Who has to go as freight?"

"Not quite, my child, yet he's so great
Most men he overtops;
The platform that he stands upon
Will need a lot of props!"
—Cleveland Leader.

Nepotism Again.

Boston Globe: Another awful case of nepotism to embarrass the administration! A. W. Cortelyou, who is a cousin of the postmaster general, has just secured from Governor Hoch an appointment as justice of the peace for Chikaskia township out in Kansas.

His Lazy Days.

Portland Oregonian: The country editor, like all editors, is gregarious. Despite a grievously common opinion to the contrary, he loves to eat, drink and be merry, to lard over attenuated ribs with the substance, and not the shadow, of earth's good things, to refresh a jaded mind by attrition with other bright intellects, and to revive drooping spirits by the inspiring annals of the year's successes. Thus we always find that about this time of year sanctums are deserted, scissors are rusting in unaccustomed idleness, the pastepot is surrendered to the blue-bottle fly and "Pro Bono Publico," "Veritas," "Citizen" and "Subscriber" are turned over to the tender mercies of the office devil. The editor is off on his annual junket.

That's the Question.

Tit-Bits: "I know, old chappie," said Dobbs, "she has her faults, and a temper, and all that; but I—I love her and can't live without her."

"Just so," calmly replied his friend; "but the question isn't that. Can you live with her? That's it, old fellow—can you live with her?"

Work Worth While.

To plant a hope in a human heart,
To bring a smile to a weary face
Where care and sorrow have left their trace,
Is truest work and the sweetest art.

THE "BAYHA SYSTEM" of Selling Stoves

Has made hundreds of new friends for us and has cemented the old friendships more closely. It has eliminated all "dickering" from stove buying, and has made our prices so far below competitors that there is no argument left. To see our stoves and their prices is to fully realize that fact. Under this system all stoves are marked in plain figures at their lowest possible cash price (or money value) which is from $5 to $15 less—grade for grade—than the lowest price that can be obtained in any of the "trade back" stores. If you wish to purchase on EASY PAYMENTS, you may do so at the cash prices on the most LIBERAL TERMS for which we charge you NOT ONE CENT.

GOVERNMENT RATE-MAKING

Should the Interstate Commission Be Granted This Power?

Burlington, Iowa, Hawkeye: Long before congress meets next December every manufacturer and every merchant in Iowa—and everywhere else, for that matter—ought to make up his mind on the question of government railroad rates. There is nothing more important to the whole industrial fabric than this question. Senators and members of congress want to do what their constituents want them to do, and the voice of the farmers and business men is what will determine the action of congress next winter. It will not do to put off to the last minute the consideration of the subject by the people, because it takes time to think it out, and time for public opinion to make itself felt. The proposition is that the power of fixing rates shall be conferred upon the interstate commerce commission or some other government commission. This power has been demanded by the interstate commerce commission for many years. Walter Bagehot, in commenting on the English constitution, says that "a bureaucracy is sure to think that its duty is to augment official power, official business or official numbers, rather than to leave free the energies of mankind." Our interstate commerce commission is an apt illustration of the truth of this remark. If there is a serious evil to be corrected, we ought to be able to find out what it is and the magnitude of it, before making laws to cure it. Where, then, is this evil? As a matter of fact, no serious evil exists, but certain busybodies, like E. P. Bacon of Milwaukee, have managed, by joining with the interstate commerce commission, to make a good many people think an evil might exist, that railroad owners might unjustly discriminate between persons or places, and the fact that they have not done so counts for nothing!

The interstate commerce commission was created in 1887. On the 16th of January, 1905, the United States senate passed a resolution directing the commission to furnish the senate as soon as practicable, various facts and figures. The commission took from Jan. 16, 1905, to May 1, 1905, to make its report, which is in great detail. The total number of formal complaints made to the commission from April 5, 1887, to March 1, 1905—the lifetime of the commission—was 770. Now, here is a very extraordinary fact. In all the lifetime of the commission, which is a little short of eighteen years, in the whole United States, out of millions of daily transactions in the transportation business, there were only 770 formal complaints made. Is there any other business approaching in magnitude the railroad business where, if there were a special commission organized to hear complaints, there would not have been more than 770 in eighteen years? Of these complaints the commission states that only 400 have come to a final hearing; 200 have been settled or discontinued, 74 indefinitely postponed, 20 heard but not decided, 27 partially heard, 43 no hearing. Next the commission states that there were 45 cases of all sorts appealed to the courts, and that of the 45 cases so appealed the commission was sustained in 8 only; in 37 it was not sustained. Here, then, is the extent of the evil. Four hundred cases decided in eighteen years; only 45 of these cases important enough to be taken into court, and of the 45 only 8 cases decided against the railroads. It would be impossible to believe so much fuss could be made over so small a matter if we did not have the report of the commission before us, and had not seen with our own eyes the last house of representatives stampeded into passing a bill designed to cure—what?

They did not know what. But since then the commission has told us. In eighteen years, with millions and millions of transactions in transportation, there were 400 formal complaints decided—about twenty-two a year. And out of the 400 only forty-five important enough to take to court—two and one-half a year; and of the forty-five, only eight decided against the railroads—less than one case every two years. Truly, the mountain labored and brought forth a mouse! But absurd as it may seem, the mountain is still laboring. We all know that a few men, intent on doing a definite thing, will accomplish more than a thousand times their number who are only vaguely and indefinitely interested on the other side; and in this lies the danger of the country today. We have shown that the evil complained of is so small that it may be called imaginary—it amounts to nothing, and yet, in order to cure this imaginary evil, it is seriously proposed to change and upset the basis of rate-making in this country.

In desperate cases, doctors are justified in taking chances, but to try dangerous experiments when nothing is the matter, or even in the case of a mild toothache, would be criminal.

Since the beginning of railroads in this country, interstate railroad rates have been made on business or commercial principles. In other words, they have really made themselves, just as much as the price of wheat makes itself; that is to say, they are the result of the natural law of supply and demand. Under this system, the country has expanded with wonderful rapidity, and we have the lowest railroad rates in the world. Now it is proposed to change all this by giving the power to make rates to a commission. The commission says, and its friends say, that they do not ask the power to make rates generally, but only to fix rates where complaint is made of an existing rate which has been made by the natural law of business. But it is obvious that if the commission had the power, every individual and every community, thinking he or it could gain an advantage over a rival by going to the commission, would at once make complaint, and so the commission would become involved in endless controversies. The most essential thing which the American railroads have done to develop and build up the country has been to almost annihilate distance, so that Iowa and Nebraska grain and produce of one kind and another have been put into New England in competition with local products, greatly enhancing the value of lands in the West and reducing the value in New England. The New Engalnd land owner has suffered, but consumers generally have been greatly benefited. Somebody suffers whenever a labor-saving macine is invented, but the people on the whole are better off.

When congress had under discussion the interstate commerce law in 1885 and 1886, John H. Reagan, who was at that time in the house of representatives from Texas, tried to have incorporated into the interstate commerce law a mileage basis of rates the effect of which would have been to drive the business of the country west of the Missouri river, through his state of Texas, to the Gulf of Mexico, as against the North Atlantic seaports. Fortunately, Mr. Reagan failed and the railroads were left to fight it out, with the result of lower and lower rates and increasing general prosperity. Now it is proposed, eighteen years afterward, to confer upon a commission the power to fix rates—and they would be forced to do practically what Reagan advocated. Can it be doubted that Galveston and New Orleans would at once apply to the commission for mileage rates from Nebraska and Kansas, and how could the commission do? The theory of the pending proposition to give power to a commission is that railroad rates are not commerce, that they are made arbitrarily by the railroads, and that they are unjust to persons and places. The city of Spokane, in the state of Washington, for example, complains because the rates from Chicago and New York to Spokane are higher than they are to Seattle, which is 400 miles west of Spokane. Spokane demands a mileage basis. Now, what is the commission to do when confronted with this situation? The lumbermen of Louisiana will demand mileage rates against the lumbermen of the state of Washington, and under government rate-making they will get them. The commission and its friends say they will fix rates just as the railroads fix them now, only they will be entirely just, and therefore more just; but a moment's reflection shows the absurdity of this position. A government commission cannot, in the first place, force the railroads to carry anything for less than cost, but railroads themselves often do this in the interest of their general business. In the next place, a government commission would be bound to put everybody on an equality, which means the same rates for the same mileage. A man within 200 miles of the market would be entitled to a lower rate than a man 400 miles away. This would inevitably lead to the mileage basis of rates and to a revolution in the existing business methods all over the United States. Undoubtedly congress could repeal the law, but there would always be a certain number of individuals and communities benefited by it, and probably before any repeal could be carried, incalculable damage would have been done.

The utter absurdity of the ground taken by the interstate commerce commission is made plain by its own showing. It demands the power to fix rates as being necessary to the ends of justice. But its report, in response to the senate resolution of Jan. 16, shows that the powers now possessed by the commission have enabled it to settle every complaint which has been made, save and except forty-five cases only in eighteen years' time; and that out of the forty-five cases the courts have said the commission was wrong in thirty-seven of them. This leaves eight cases in eighteen years, in which the end of justice would have been reached with less delay if the commission had possessed the power it seeks; but, at the same time, injustice would have been done in thirty-seven cases.

It all sounds incredible, but it is true, and the report of the commission ought to end discussion.

TWO MINERS KILLED.

Smothered Under Ore at the Franz Mine.

Hibbing, Minn., June 29.—Peter Olson and John Lamb, miners, employed in the Franz mine at Buhl, lost their lives yesterday while working in a drift when the ore caved in on them. An alarm was immediately given and the fellow miners hurried to the rescue, but the two men were smothered before they could be uncovered. The bodies were brought to Hibbing yesterday afternoon for burial. Deputy Coroner G. N. Butchart inspected the scene of the accident and pronounced an inquest unnecessary. Neither of the dead men were married.

A fracture of the right clavicle, three fractures of the right arm, a dislocated spine, half a dozen broken ribs, dislocated hip, the flesh cleaved from the left side of his face, and internal disorders and several minor bruises about the body are the injuries sustained by Herman Besarth, in an accident at the Glen mine Monday afternoon. He is considered to be in a critical condition. Besarti came here from Tyrol, Italy. He was working underground where he was caught beneath one of the ore cars.

FINE RESIDENCE BURNED.

San Francisco, June 29.—The three-story residence of John F. Merrill, at Washington street and Van Ness avenue, was destroyed by fire at midnight. The fire originated in a dumb waiter shaft and was caused by the explosion of gas. The house contained many rare paintings and valuable antique furniture, all of which was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

Superior Is Celebrating Opening of Northern League Season.

Rain Stops All Games—Lambert Signed with Fargo.

No games yesterday.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Grand Forks.
Fargo at Winnipeg.
Crookston at Superior.

Emil the Barber and his faithful followers in Bugville Fandom are in the throes of a belated season opening, across the bay this afternoon.

The Wisconsin suburb will assume its role of an orphans' home today, and welcome the homeless waifs that have been chasing around the country with the double barrelled name. Hereafter the players will struggle along as representatives of Superior, which cannot be worse than belonging to two towns.

"Better late than never," is the watchword of the Superior fans, and the team will be given a royal welcome home this afternoon. Mayor O'Hare has asked the business men to observe a half holiday in honor of the occasion, and Manager Patterson talks of a crowd of 5,000 people at the opening contest.

The team will start the season on a sound financial basis. Instead of soliciting subscriptions to give the team a start, the management placed a number of tickets on sale at $1 each, and quite a block of them have been disposed of. Mayor O'Hare will pitch the first ball across the plate, and the usual ceremonies will be observed. It has not been made public whether the ceremonies will include the opening of a grave and the lifting out of a coffin, although this would be quite appropriate.

Crookston will be the opposing team, and the newly adopted ones hope to give their foster parents an exhibition of what they are planning to do to Duluth a little later in the season.

• • •

No games were played in the Northern league yesterday, owing to wet weather in all the cities where games were scheduled. The mid-week shift takes place today. Duluth goes to Grand Forks for a series of four games. Fargo moves along to Winnipeg and Crookston comes to Superior.

This will be the first series that Duluth has played with Grand Forks. Rain stopped all but one of the three games which should have been played with the Tigers in Duluth, earlier in the month, and that game has recently been thrown out by Prsident Kent.

Following the series with Grand Forks, Duluth will return home for another long series, opening here Monday with Crookston.

• • •

"Bill" Lambert, who played center field for Duluth two years ago, is said to have signed a Fargo contract. According to the Fargo Forum, Lambert is going to take a vacation from his duties on the road, during the remainder of the summer, and will play center field for the Farmers.

Other changes in the Fargo team include the signing of Dolan of the Bismarck team to play first, and the taking in of Stripp, a new catcher. Aronson, a pitcher with the Bismarck team, may also be given a trial.

• • •

Erick Edward Erickson, the little featherweight slinger of the Duluth team, came home yesterday with a badly injured leg and went to St. Mary's hospital for repairs. He got tangled up with Catcher Rogers of the Winnipeg team, while sliding home in the game Tuesday, and twisted his leg out of joint. Just what happened to Rogers is not known.

Erickson's absence leaves the team with only two pitchers to work during the Grand Forks series, and only nine men in uniform. Miller, who was in the hospital with rheumatism here, has gone back to his home in Cincinnati.

• • •

Third Baseman McShane, after roaming about the circuit for a brief period, has finally brought up with the Superior team, and will hold down the third bag for the adopted suburbanites. Crookston did not live up to the agreement with the Duluth club regarding him, and he was moved on to Superior, where a third baseman was badly needed. The truth of the matter, according to the claims of the other club managers, was that the Duluth team was perilously near the salary limit, and McShane had to be replaced by another man.

• • •

The automobile, for which tickets have been sold by the fans, will be raffled on July 5, according to the announcement made by the management this morning.

CORNELL IS WINNER

Of 'Varsity Eight and Freshmen Eight at Poughkeepsie.

Wisconsin Finishes Last In All the Events It Entered.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 29.—Cornell regained her prestige in intercollegiate rowing affairs yesterday by winning with utmost ease the 'varsity eight-oar and freshman eight-oar races in the inter-collegiate regatta. Syracuse was given the decision in the 'varsity four-oar race, after a sensational and exasperating "mix up," in which even the judges' boat gave out conflicting decisions, the victory being given first to Cornell, although Syracuse came in first. The hesitation over the decision was due to two facts; first, that some of those on the judges' boat were in doubt as to the identity of the leading crews as they passed the finish mark; second, that at the outset of the race Syracuse is declared to have passed out of her course in front of Columbia, and there was claim of a disqualifying foul against her. After a long delay the decision was reversed and declared in favor of Syracuse.

In the 'varsity race, the feature of the day, Cornell, never pressed after the first quarter-mile had been covered, rowed across the finish a dozen lengths or more in front of the crew from Syracuse, which surprised the aquatic world by winning this event last year. Thoroubhly beaten, but struggling to the last limit of endurance for the honors of third place, Georgetown and Columbia swept by the judges' boat almost together, Georgetown having the slightest of advantages. Back in the ruck came Pennsylvania, and last of all finished Wisconsin, whose chances had been favorably considered by the rowing experts.

Cornell won the freshman race for eight-oared shells almost as easily, again having Syracuse as her nearest competitor. The order of the finish in last year's freshman race was just the reverse, Syracuse having won, and having been considered a strong factor in the two-mile sprint.

In the four-oared 'varsity race Syracuse won, with Cornell second, Cornell and Syracuse almost evenly dividing the honors of the day, the former getting two firsts and a second and the latter one first and two seconds. Wisconsin furnished a big surprise by finishing last.

Columbia's crews redeemed themselves to a degree by their fine effort for third honors in the 'varsity. Georgetown rowed much better than was expected and Pennsylvania lived up to the predictions that had been made concerning her crews.

Syracuse by her clever work yesterday, following the two victories of last year, has firmly established herself in the rowing affairs of the intercollegiate association and is undoubtedly to be reckoned with in all future regattas. The Syracuse victory in the four-oared race was notable in setting a new time mark for the event, the time being 10:15 2-5, as against 10:31 1-5 made by Pennsylvania in 1900.

Summaries:

Four-cared 'varsity race, without coxswains, two miles, for the Kennedy challenge cup, presented in 1899 by Davidson Kennedy of Pennsylvania: Syracuse, first, time, 10:15 2-5; Cornell, second, time, 10:17 2-5; Pennsylvania, third; time, 10:33 2-5; Columbia, fourth; time, 10:45; Wisconsin, fifth; time, 10:52.

Freshman eight-oared shells, two miles for the Stewards cup, presented in 1900 by Francis S. Bangs, Columbia: Cornell, first; time, 9:35 2-5; Syracuse, second; time, 9:49; Columbia, third; time, 9:53; Pennsylvania, fourth; time 9:58 4-5.

University eight-oared shells, four miles for the 'varsity challenge cup, presented in 1898 by Dr. Louis L. Zeaman, Cornell: Cornell, first; time, 20:29 2-5; Syracuse, second; time, 21:47 2-5; Georgetown, third; time, 21:49; Columbia, fourth; time, 21:53 4-5; Pennsylvania, fifth; time, 21:59 4-5; Wisocnsin, sixth; time, 22:06 1-5.

ARTFUL WINS RACE AT SHEEPSHEAD EASILY.

New York, June 29.—Artful, H. H. Whitney's filly and winner of last year's futurity, made her first appearance of the year at Sheepshead bay yesterday. She picked up 116 pounds and was made a prohibitive favorite at 2 to 5 and after laying in second place into the stretch, moved out and won by two lengths. Three-quarters of a mile was run in 1:13¾.

Memphis, Tenn., June 29.—Tartan defeated the odds on favorite Spencerian in the Commercial Appeal handicap, at a mile and an eighth at Montgomery Park yesterday.

Cincinnati, June 29.—In the last event at Latonia yesterday, Starter Brown sent the field a way without Ethel Day, which was slowly galloping to the post, a sixteenth of a mile away. After the race was run Starter Brown stated that he had overlooked the filly and the judges ordered all bets off and money refunded. Athlone, the favorite, easily won the race.

St. Louis, June 29.—Handbooks were the species of financial speculation at Delmar track yesterday. The track was in the best condition it has been for a week.

EXCITING RACE.

Eighteen Footers Cover Course In Stiff Breeze.

With a stiff breeze from the East, the five yachts of the eighteen-foot class of the Duluth Yacht club, sailed the first race of the mid-week series yesterday afternoon.

The boats sailed twice around the triangular course, and finished well together, Spray winning from Frolic by but fifteen seconds.

The summary was as follows:

| | Start. | Finish. | Elapsed Time |
|---|---|---|---|
| Spray, F. Smith | 6:30 | 7:17:45 | 47:15 |
| Frolic, J. A. Roth | 6:30 | 7:17:30 | 47:30 |
| Thistle, C. S. Haig | 6:30 | did not finish | |
| Florence, F. Smith | 6:30 | 7:17:40 | 47:40 |

A TERRIFIC HAIL STORM

Visits North Dakota and Does Immense Amount of Damage.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 29.—This section of the state was visited by a terrific hail storm yesterday and great damage has resulted. Hail stones as large as hens eggs fell for a period of from ten to fifteen minutes. No reports are obtainable from the country. In this city many thousands of dollars worth of windows were broken, every window on the south side of the five-story St. John block being demolished, while unprotected windows in other sections of the city were demolished. Shade trees were stripped of foliage and garden truck was cut to pieces.

A circus parade had just reached the tent on the return trip when the storm struck and there was a scene of wild disorder, hundreds of persons having gathered there. Hail tore through the canvas of the tents, which were badly damaged. The wind came from the south and after the heavy stones had fallen for ten minutes rain followed and another downpour of smaller hail fell for several minutes until the streets were filled from curb to curb with six inches or more of hail. Mekinock, twenty-five miles west of here, reports hail fall there, but little damage. Telephone wires are rendered useless in several directions and any estimate of damage done to crops at present is mere guess work. Hail fell with sufficient force to flatten grain to the ground and it is feared most of it has been cut off.

POPE LEO'S BODY

Is to Be Translated From Its Temporary Tomb.

Will Rest In Church of St. John at the Lateran.

Rome, June 29.—For the first time since 1870, the year of the occupation of Rome by the Italian government, the feast of Corpus Christi was celebrated with a solemn procession of all the dignitaries of the church, the pope himself carrying the host and giving the blessing to the assembled people. Of course, the procession did not march through the streets of Rome, as it used to forty years ago, but was held within the walls of St. Peter's, but the magnificence of the pageant nearly equaled that of times past, when the Corpus Christi celebration used to attract to Rome visitors from all parts of the world.

The prelates who took part in the procession assembled in the Sistine chapel, and from there the pageant went by way of the royal staircase to the atrium of the basilica, and thence into the great church. Representatives of the religious orders, carrying lighted candles, formed the advance guard, and these were followed by delegations from the ecclesiastical colleges of Rome in their multi-colored uniforms. Next followed the secular clergy and all the bishops present in Rome, each wearing the cope, and with a cleric carrying his miter. All the cardinals in Rome, wearing the purple, preceded the pope, each being attended by his private secretary and a gentleman at arms.

The pope's portable throne, that constructed at the time of Pius VII., was carried on the shoulders of fourteen bearers, dressed in scarlet, and was surrounded by the noble guards in full uniform. Cardinal Rampolla, the archpriest of the church, held a canopy over the pope's head.

Admission to the church was by ticket, and more than 50,000 people knelt at the entrance of the pope, who was carried to the altar of the cathedral, from which he imparted a solemn blessing to the people. In special tribunes erected for the occasion were the members of the diplomatic corps, the Knights of Malta, several families of the Roman aristocracy, and the pope's own relatives. The magnificence of the celebration was something long to be remembered.

Another procession will soon take place here, but of an entirely different character. It will be on the occasion of the translation of the body of the late pope from the temporary tomb at St. Peter's to the church of St. John at the Lateran, where the monument erected to Leo XIII. by the cardinals whom he created is rapidly nearing completion. Pius X. has given orders that the translation of the remains be made within a few weeks, and special arrangements have been made with the Italian officials, in order that there may be no repetition of the disorder which took place when the body of Pius IX. was removed from St. Peter's to the church of San Lorenzo. By order of the present pope, the transfer of the remains of Leo XIII. will be made in the day time, so that the police will be able to prevent disorder. All the cardinals will first witness the official identification of the remains in the church of St. Peter's, and they will then proceed in their carriages to St. John's, where they will await the arrival of the funeral party. This latter will be composed of a number of religious and secular clergy, carrying torches, and of the canons of St. Peter's, who will make formal delivery of the body to the canons of St. John's. The whole route, nearly two miles in length, will be lined with troops, affording safe transit for the procession. It is stated that the officials of the Italian government have expressed themselves as determined that the horrible scenes witnessed at the time of the transfer of the remains of Pius IX. shall not be repeated on this occasion.

Pius X. has ceased to worry about the attempted separation of church and state in France because even the authors and upholders of the scheme seem of late to have lost their ardor. As a matter of fact nothing further has been done in the matter by the French parliament for several weeks, while the long vacation of the chambers begins in less than four weeks. It is the intention of the pope to continue his policy of dignified silence in the face of French aggression, and it is the general opinion here that this policy is the best possible. It is the vatican's intention never to admit to abolish the concordat in France, as it assumes that the concordat is a contract entered into by two parties and that it can not be invalidated except by the mutual consent of the two. This explains why Pius X. has never sent a formal protest to the French officials in the matter, but has waited with dignity the outcome of the bill now before the French parliament. Some prelates, however, claim that a little more active opposition would have been more useful to the church, but in inner vatican circles such opinion is scoffed at, and it is asserted that the policy pursued for more than twelve months will prove victorious in the end.

The victory of the Catholic element in the recent municipal election in Florence, mentioned in these letters last week, and the pending election in Rome has been in preparation for several months. In it he clearly departs from the policy of his predecessors, in that he asserts the right of Catholics in Italy and all over the world to enter public life and take part in the political elections of their countries. Pius X. is looked upon in Italy as an experienced leader of Catholics in political matters, having proved his ability as such when patriarch of Venice, when he was able by his tact to live in perfect accord with the municipal and state authorities. Much is expected of him as an organizer in the political elections of this country, and the time is not considered far distant when there will be formed in the Italian parliament a powerful Catholic party.

Gratifying information has recently been received at the vatican from Russian Poland, where, since the ukase issued by the czar granting religious liberty to his subjects, thousands of the population, who had joined the orthodox church in years past because of persecution on the part of Russian officials, have now returned to the church of Rome. Nearly thirty thousand are said to have thus deserted the orthodox church, some towns, like those of Seldtz and Lubin, going over to the Catholic faith en masse.

Another source of gratification has been the decision of the Maronite leaders in Egyptian territory to seek reunion with the church of Rome. The Maronites number several thousands and they recently instituted negotiations with the vatican for the reception in Rome of a special delegation headed by their Patriarch Hevaeck. These delegates will arrive here in a few days and then the details of the reunion will be discussed. There are already some Maronites who enjoy union and recognition with the church, but the majority had thus far declined to come to an understanding with the vatican authorities, notwithstanding many efforts in that direction made by the late pope. The decision of the Maronite leaders, just made, is considered a great victory for the conciliatory spirit of Pius X.

COLLIDE IN FOG

Steamers Richardson and Woodruff Come Together This Side Sault.

Latter Rams Former, and Both Are Damaged Considerably.

The steamer W. C. Richardson, belonging to W. C. Richardson of Cleveland, is lying at the Northwestern coal dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west unloading coal and with a gang of men at work on her replacing six broken plates on the starboard side of her stern.

The break was caused by the steamer Woodruff of the Gilchrist line ramming her off Whiskey Island, just this side of the Sault. The accident occurred in a fog, the officer in command of the Woodruff failing to see the Richardson until it was too late to avoid hitting her. However he had time to check his boat or the accident would doubtless have been worse.

The Woodruff's stem is knocked out of gear but she is not seriously damaged.

BOATS WELL TAKEN.

Chicago, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grain offered for shipments today was mostly in small lots, and vessels were well cleaned up, and there was nothing being forced on the market. Rates were steady at 1⅞ cents.

TO RAISE STEAMER.

Cleveland, June 29.—The Gilchrist Transportation company closed a contract with W. H. Baker of Detroit for raising the steamer City of Rome, sunk in the St. Clair river. The boat is to be delivered at Detroit, but the terms of the contract are not given out. Work will be started at once and Baker expects to have the vessel afloat in two weeks.

THE SHAMROCK LIBELLED.

Detroit, June 29.—Papers in the libel suit against the steamer Shamrock which was picked up on Lake Huron and towed to Alpena by the steamer City of Holland after having been abandoned by her crew were prepared here and will be sent to United States Marshal Tobias at Bay City, who will take them to Alpena. A "reasonable amount" is mentioned in the claim for salvage and this will be determined by appraisal later. The Thompson line owning the City of Holland, will ask that the owners of the Shamrock give a bond for $5,000. Both the Shamrock and cargo were insured. It is said there was 175,000 feet of white pine lumber in the hold besides a quantity of lath.

DIRECTORS NOT AWARE

Of the Investments Being Made by President Clement.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the trial of Thomas B. Clement, the aged president of the failed First National bank of Faribault, Minn., on twenty-seven counts, charging him with embezzlement, which is in progress before Judge Morris in the United States district court here, George W. Batchelder, the oldest of the directors of the bank, today testified, as have the others of the board, that he was not aware of any of the transactions of which Mr. Clement is accused of wrongfully entering into, until the doors of the bank were closed.

The first intimation that he or any of the other directors of the institution had of Mr. Clement's investment in the bonds of the De Soto, Florida, fruit farm enterprise, was in the report of the comptroller of the currency of March, 1904.

In that report an entry appeared referring to "bonds and securities" held by the bank. Previous to that report the entry had always read "stocks and securities."

He (witness) went to Judge Buckman and asked him to see Mr. Clement about these entries, and it was then discovered that the bonds were those of the De Soto company, which had always been considered Mr. Clement's private investment.

Unofficially, Mr. Batchelder informed Mr. Clement that he did not consider these bonds a good investment and suggested that it would be a good thing to reduce the bank's holdings of them.

When the next report came out it was noticed that the holdings of bonds had been reduced by $50,000. Nothing official was done about the bond matter until December, when each director received notice from the comptroller of the currency that a letter had been sent to Mr. Clement, concerning which it would be well to see Mr. Clement. Two meetings of the directors were held and at the last it was proposed to have an expert examine the bank. Mr. Clement demurred to this saying it would cause a suspicion. He said an employe was making a list of the notes held by the bank and would serve the same purpose. A list was submitted and then it was decided to close the doors. On cross examination the witness admitted that during the last two decades the bank had carried some firms too long.

COULD NOT FIND BODY

Searchers Fail to Get Trace of Polzin's Remains.

A thorough search was made of Lester river yesterday in the hope of finding the body of Joseph C. Polzin, who was drowned on Sunday, but without result. At an early hour in the morning a crew of men, under the direction of Supt. Lawrie of the National Iron works, began the work and kept it up until late in the evening. The men were armed with peavies, axes and pike poles and went about their work in a systematic manner. A raft was built and the men dropped down to the big log jam. A thorough search was made, the jam being entirely cut away, but the body was not found there, which was the expectation and hope of the searchers. The hunt was then continued down the river, every obstruction being inspected and logs and debris cut away clear to the lake, but without avail.

The searchers are satisfied that the body went out into the lake in the mad rush of waters, and may never be found. Arrangements have been made for a close watch to be kept along the shores as there is a possibility that the remains may rise and come ashore.

BRITISH STEAMER ASHORE.

Constitucion, Chile, June 29.—The British steamer Tropic is ashore fifteen miles north of Constitucion. It is feared she will become a wreck. Ten of her crew have been landed, two were drowned and the remainder are on board the steamer.

ADVERTISE CITY

Pamphlets Issued By City Engineer Disappear Like Magic.

Citizens Sending Them to All Parts of Globe.

If any person doubts the advertising value of the aerial bridge, he would be convinced by a visit to the city engineer's offic today.

The pamphlets that were printed by the city engineer, describing the bridge and showing views of it in various stages of construction, went like the proverbial hot cakes. When they first arrived from the printer's, the city engineer commenced passing them out in bunches of two or three, to persons who applied for them.

This number was quickly cut down, as the pile began to fade away as if by magic, and now they are being doled out one at a time.

The little booklets are being forwarded to every corner of the globe. Requests have been received from New Zealand, Australia, England, China, Japan, South America, and from nearly every city of importance in the United States.

One man who applied for a pamphlet this morning, stated that he wanted it to send to his daughter who was teaching school sixty miles from the railroad in Dakota She had heard of the bridge and wanted to tell her pupils about it.

Several college professors in the various large universities of the country have sent requests for information, saying that they wished to use it in their engineering lectures.

From the number of these requests, and from the far distant points from which they are received, it is evident that the fame of the bridge has spread through the daily papers and the magazines to all parts of the civilized world.

Duluth people are assisting greatly in the work of advertising the city in this way. They are sending out copies of the little pamphlet to friends in this country and in foreign nations. The little souvenir postal cards, and the trinkets of various kinds which have been prepared, all advertising the bridge and the city, have greatly aided in the work, and it is doubtful if the cost of the bridge, expended for advertising Duluth in the papers and magazines of the world would have purchased the amount of space that has been devoted to descriptions of the bridge.

Only 4,000 of the pamphlets were printed, and the first installment of 500 was exhausted within a few hours after it was received from the printer's hands. In future they will have to be distributed in a more niggardly manner.

COUNTING MONEY.

China Would Be the Frinzied Financiers' Paradise.

Heaven help the man who aspires to the reputation of a financial genius in China! If he is not driven insane before he learns even the rudiments of monetary affairs in one locality of the empire, he must be a wonder, according to a report just received at the state department from United States Consul Anderson, at Hang-Chow, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Times.

Considering the tremendous difficulties laid in the path of every business man, Mr. Anderson says, it is no wonder that even the children have through generations of financial gymnastics become natural born money sharps. "Heredity must have a share in the education of the people," Mr. Anderson writes. "As any one must confess who watches a celestial baby crumple his palm and hold the slippery cash for counting exactly as his father did before him. The stress of business methods is so severe that no one could endure it and emerge without faculties sharpened to the last degree and a capacity for dealing successfully with any business problem, however complicated.

"Take a case at random: A villager in buying has to reckon with an ideal dollar of 0.70 of a tael and an actual dollar varying from 0.73 to 0.68, if they are intact, and to much lighter weight, if the former owner has extracted from them the material for an earing or finger ring. In dealing with subsidiary coins he must remember where and when the dollar exchanges for ten 10-cent pieces, plus 15 cash, and when for eleven of these pieces. He must also carry in his mind that a 10-cent piece is worth 120 cash when he is buying fish, 105 when he wants oranges, 115 for pork and only 97 good cash when he come down to the port. His strings of cash, too, will vary in number, according to the number of spurious coins inserted in a nominal hundred. He must keep three balances in his house for production, according, as he is buying hay, or pork, or cakes, and if he is engaged in business he will buy on one balance and sell on another. He will measure capacity by 3 different parts. A, B and C, in which A is 1.6 of B and B is 1.2 of C. He will also have three footrules, as he is dealing with wood, or cloth, or coffins. And the acreage of his field will vary with the distance at which it is customary to plant the cuttings of his sweet potato vine. After he has mastered the intricacies of these standards, he will find himself still a novice if he should go to the nearest market place without a knowledge of its standards, and so on for an indefinite number of other places at which he must buy or sell."

Mr. Anderson says that although China is under pledge to adopt a modern system of coinage, there is no prospect of this being done, for the sentiment of the influential men is against the plan, and they are putting all sorts of obstacles in the way of the innovation.

PEOPLE'S SOVEREIGNTY VICTORY IN DELAWARE

First Step To End Machine Rule By Establishing In the People a Right To a Direct Vote.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Boss-ridden Deleware has enacted a law for the people's sovereignty, and did so with practically no pressure from the people. This remarkable victory is due to a strategic campaign, the chief features of which can be duplicated in other states and in cities and villages.

A little over a year ago there assembled at Wilmington a number of reformers who decided that the first step should be the termination of machine rule by establishing in the people a right to a direct vote. With the improved system of government in operation the way would be open to secure the needed changes in the laws. They organized, therefore, the Delaware Initiative and Referendum league, and elected as president Francis I. Dupont, a wealthy business man of Wilmington.

Literature on the initiative and referendum was systematically distributed in every house in Wilmington, and almost every house in Dover and in a less thorough manner throughout the state.

During this time there was considerable difference of opinion as to how the political end of the undertaking should be managed. To get some facts on which to base conclusions it was decided to canvass a certain street in Wilmington, a fair sample of the city. This showed 30 per cent of the voters willing to vote for more power in the people through the initiative and referendum, even though it became necessary to scratch the ticket. In addition to this 20 per cent favored the reform, but were not willing to vote independently. The balance either would not express an opinion or could not be reached for an interview.

These returns indicated an interest sufficient to make it worth while to go ahead.

The campaign agreed upon and carried out was that Mr. Dupont, president of the league, should call upon the newspaper editors preparatory to writing letters for their papers, and that the other league members should refrain from writing for the press, the object being to connect the movement with Mr. Dupont's personality as opponents of the existing order of things. The ruse worked. The movement became fashionable among business men and the professional classes. They approved the democratic ideas and contributed funds.

Early in the movement an initiative and referendum banquet was tendered to many of the prominent people of the state, including the mayor and members of the city council of Wilmington. The speaker of the evening was Hon John Z. White, the popular lecturer. His speech and the names of the principal guests were published in the papers of the state. Many of the guests, it was found, who did not expect to take an interest in the initiative and referendum system were convinced of its importance.

Another shrewd move was to agree that the measure to be introduced in the legislature should provide for submitting to an advisory ballot of the voters of the state the question: "Shall the legislature establish the advisory initative and advisory referendum—a system whereby the people can instruct by direct vote?"

And it was decided, too, to conduct a non-partisan campaign and question candidates.

During the campaign the labor unions and grangers helped but little, and therefore only 20 per cent of the candidates replied. Of these all were in the affirmative except one and he was defeated. Throughout the campaign the principal work done was to write letters to the newspapers and with good effect.

When the legislature assembled the measure was introduced in the senate and by a Republican. Hon. John Z. White, who had spoken so effectively at the banquet, was asked to visit Dover and address the members of the legislature. An appointment was made and he addressed the members of both houses just after one of the sessions, speaking about fifteen minutes. The members were pleased, several expressing regret that he did not speak longer. The following day the bill was brought up in the senate and passed by a vote of 11 to 4. In the house the measure was introduced by a Republican, and when brought to a vote was passed unanimously. The Democrats were among the strongest supporters of the measure. The bill was signed by the Republican governor.

The measure will be balloted upon by the voters next year. Preparatory to this a campaign of education will be conducted and the candidates for the legislature questioned "If elected, will you obey the will of your constituents as expressed by referendum vote?" Signed pledges will be secured from practically every candidate elected, and there can be no question but that the people will vote overwhelmingly for the establishment of their own sovereignty. And a practically unanimous vote will insure instructions which the pledged candidates will heed.

Reviewing this remarkable success in Delaware, there are several features which every reformer should recognize

1. That the busines and professional men and women as well as other leaders recognize the existence of machine rule, and if approached properly will admit that the system can be terminated by establishing in the people a right to a direct vote.

2. That the line of least resistance is to work for the advisory initiative and advisory referendum, for its establishment requires but a majority-vote in the legislature and can be secured in a single campaign. In cities and villages the system can be established by merely pledging the candidates for aldermen and mayor to install certain rules of procedure.

3. That at the beginning of the movement in a state or city there should be secured the names of some of the most influential business and professional men. To do this, however, it must be shown that Representative government, the distinguishing feature of Anglo-Saxon civilization, is to be improved.

4. That the non-partisan program, including the questioning of candidates, is the means whereby the people's sovereignty is being established. The only value of the third parties is that they hold up economic and moral ideals while their platforms pledge their candidates to the initiative and referendum.

GEORGE H. SHIBLEY.

A GOOD EATER.

"I have read," said the retired waiter to the New York Sun, "a good many stories about champion eaters, men who could eat so many pounds of beefsteak, or so many pies, and all that, at a sitting, but I don't believe there was ever one of them that could come within a million miles of a man I saw once, who was just only an amateur and didn't pretend to be any champion at all.

"I was waiting then in a regular dinner restaurant, a good one, where we kept clean tablecloths on the tables all the time and gave everybody a clean napkin, and served a good square meal for a quarter of a dollar. One day one of our regular customers, a man who always sat at one of my tables, brought in to eat there this amateur who turned out to be a wonder.

"He had met this man in the street, and the man had given him the usual song and dance about how he hadn't eaten anything for four days, and he was hungry, and he didn't want any money, but would our man take him to a restaurant and feed him, that was all he asked. And he wasn't a bad looking man; he wouldn't queer the restaurant, and so our man took a chance and brought him in.

"And he ate one of our regular dinners, taking to it very kindly, as was easy to see; and when he'd finished off the pie—

"'Well,' says our man, 'how did you find it?'

"'Mighty good,' said the stranger, 'but, you know, I haven't eaten anything for four days.'

"'Then eat some more,' says our man.

"'Thank you,' said the stranger, and he began again on soup, and ate straight through another dinner to pie again, inclusive.

"'How about it now?' said our man.

"'Why, I'm beginning to feel now,' said the hungry man, 'that I'm getting somewhere within reaching distance of the last time I ate; and at that our regular passed me the nod, and I started in again, bringing in the soup and the regulation bread and butter, and after that the beef a la mode and the vegetables and then the pie as usual, the man eating everything and evidently enjoying it all. And when he got through the third dinner—

"'Are you getting nearer to it?' says our man.

"'I think that one more square meal like that,' said the stranger, 'would connect me us all right.'

"And I brought it to him, his fourth dinner, and he ate it to the last crumb and sat back contented. Said he hadn't felt so good in four months, and he was ready now for anything.

"And that man, you understand, was only an amateur, a man never heard of. I'd be willing to bet what little money I've saved up that with any sort of suitable preparation he could eat any of those champions that we read so much about right under the table."

REPORTER NEVER "DISCHARGED."

To fathom the meaning of common expressions in New York is like learning to swim from a book. It is almost impossible, says the New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch. They both come by contact and an understanding of local conditions. For example, a New Yorker is never discharged from his position. Sometimes you get a hint of what happened to him when he sinks to the commonplace of saying that he was fired. This is not often. Along Park Row a reporter is never discharged. He is "hit by the iron ball." If you look puzzled and press an inquiry he will say impatiently: "Oh, got mine today!" or "I was lifted!" or again, "I hit the ceiling." Should these expressive verbal shafts fail to penetrate your opaque intelligence he will look steadily at you for a moment and say: "My dear boy, I was let out—I was divorced from the pay roll, and the next time the canonized bones burst their cerements I will not be on guard to see the ghost walk!" This, of course, makes the situation plain.

FARM LAND SALES

Deals with Actual Settlers Being Made Right Along.

One Duluthian Making 50 Per Cent on Investment.

Farm land transaction in St. Louis and Carlton counties continue quite active, dealers in that class of land reporting a much stronger inquiry than there was a year ago this summer.

The Boston and Duluth Farm Land company, which has been disposing of a large area of lands, particularly in Carlton county, to buyers from the southern part of this state or from other states who intend to go on their new lands and clear them up and develop them.

Within the last week the company has sold the west half of section 33-50-21, a tract of land lying south of Prairie lake, near Floodwood, to Charles J. Cornell and his son, Carl V. Cornell, both of whom are making arrangements to begin developing the land. Another good sale just closed was that of the southeast quarter section 13-14-18, near Holyoke, Carlton county, to Earl S. Cunningham, Brookings, S. D. The deal was on a cash basis and Mr. Cunningham will become an actual settler.

The new lands in the vicinity of Holyoke, where Mr. Cunningham purchased have been going into the hands of actual settlers at a rapid rate, especially so since the endorsement given the locality by Bishop McGolrick, who, after sending a man to carefully examine the conditions made a report that the country offered splendid opportunities to those seeking farm homes at low prices.

With an abundance of rain the crops on the already developed farms in the Duluth district are claimed to be in splendid condition, and the prospects all point toward a prosperous season.

A number of Duluth men, who while residing in the city have purchased and developed large farms in different parts of the two counties, have been carrying on development work on an extensive scale and have now hundreds of acres under cultivation.

Loeb Bros., who have a 1,400 or 1,500 acre tract of land a few miles out of Carlton, are now employing from thirty to thirty-five men regularly during the summer season in clearing and developing the place. A large number of substantial buildings have been erected on the farm and there is said to be building at the present time a good ten-room house. One of the interesting features of the thing is that every building is constructed of lumber made from timber cut off the lands owned by Loeb Bros.

A. C. Jones, the well known coal man, has a large farm developing in Carlton county not far from Wrenshall where he is said to have a crew of about fifty men regularly employed in clearing, developing and caring for the land. Mr. Jones has started out in the dairy business on quite a large scale at his farm and it is understood that this business alone is paying him at the present time from forty to fifty per cent on his original investment.

Edward Hazen has also a fine 160-acre farm near Wrenshall, the crops on which are said to be in excellent condition, the fields of grain presenting an especially pleasing appearance.

One of the interesting features noted with the development of the new agricultural districts near Duluth is that the people doing the developing are turning their attention largely to stock raising and the dairy business. It is claimed that there is not a time during the whole year that there is not a strong demand for dairy products in the Duluth market alone to say nothing of the demands from the other cities along the various railroad lines though not so large in point of population as Duluth.

Duluth owns a lot of considerable of this outside farming land claim that the dairy production in this district has increased at least fifty per cent in the past year.

LAND OFFICE

At St. Cloud Is Likely to Be Abolished.

Washington, June 29.—Important changes in the boundaries of Minnesota land districts are under consideration. George F. Pollock, chief of the special agents' division in the general land office, will leave for Duluth, Crookston and Cass Lake within a few days, and although the exact object of his trip cannot be ascertained at this time, it can be said on good authority that the consolidation of the land office at St. Cloud with the other three districts has been decided on.

The available public lands of Minnesota lie so far north that there is really very little business left for the St Cloud office. It is understood that when it was first proposed to merge the land office districts vigorous protests were made from St. Cloud, and there was some sort of showing made relative to several contested timber and stone entries in that district. But all opposition to the change will be unavailing.

OHIO TICKET COMPLETED

Purchase of Canal Supplies In Open Market Approved.

Columbus, Ohio, June 29.—After a continuous session of six hours, the Ohio Democratic convention yesterday named the following state ticket to be voted on at the state election in November:

For governor—John M. Pattison of Clermont county.

Lieutenant governor—Louis B. Houck of Knox county.

Supreme judge—Hugh T. Mathews of Shelby county.

Attorney general—James A. Rice of Stark county.

State treasurer—Charles F. Mason of Butler county.

Member of the board of public works—Patrick C. McGovern of Muskingum county.

In the way of demonstrations, the greatest came at the close of Chairman Daugherty's speech, when an impromptu tribute to William J. Bryan as the party leader in the nation brought out a storm of cheers that lasted fully a minute, and it was repeated later in the convention when other speakers referred to Bryan.

The platform follows:

We note with satisfaction the determination of the national administration to purchase supplies for the Panama canal in the markets of the world and not pay tribute to our protected monopolies. We trust that the day may soon come when the common people of this country may enjoy the same privilege and not be compelled to pay the manufacturers for the necessaries of life a higher price than these same articles are sold for by the same manufacturers to foreign purchasers. We demand of our representatives in congress to aid in the enactment of such laws as will prevent all rebates and secret contracts by railways and will guarantee the same service to every citizen.

We favor the conferring upon the interstate commerce commission the power, when it finds a rate unreasonable, to fix a reasonable rate. The Democratic party pledges itself in this state election, if successful, to use its utmost endeavor to eliminate the graft and political corruption that has been nourished and fastened upon the state by the Republican party in the last few years. We have seen the blighting influences of boss rule in one of our cities, and we call upon the voters, irrespective of party, to unite in preventing its permanent lodgment in control of our state.

We declare that the present laws for assessing the property of steam railways and other public-service corporations should be so changed as to compel the assessment of these properties at not less than their saleable value and to prevent their evasion of just taxation.

We believe in free and unqualified home rule, free from state interference; each city, town and village should be allowed to decide for itself all matters of local policy, especially as between public or private ownership of all public utilities. Such public ownership should be safeguarded by the merit system of appointment and tenure of office, so as to prevent the building up of political machines and the perpetuation of boss rule.

The resolutions continue:

We favor legislation which will make unlawful the giving to or accepting by public officials of railroad passes.

We favor the election of United States senators by the direct vote of the people.

In conclusion, we ask the people of the state in this election which involves no national issues to join with us in relieving our state of the triumvirate that has it in control, who have grown arrogant and corrupt, who have refused to save the money of the people by substituting salaries for fees in county offices, who have swollen the expenses of the administration of the government of the state to double what it was under the last Democratic administration. They have abolished spring elections for a like purpose and placed restrictions on the official ballot. They have gerrymandered the judicial districts, in fact they have hesitated at nothing which would aid their devilish ingenuity which has so successfully enabled them to maintain their hold on certain municipalities and which they now propose to apply to the state.

EXERCISES HELD

Graduates from Grade Schools of Western Section of City.

Program Contains Many Features Attractive and Interesting.

About two hundred and fifty strong, the eighth grade students from the western part of the city held their final exercises in the high school auditorium last evning, before a crowd that tried the capacity of the hall.

The exercises were both interesting and attractive, consisting of dialogues, recitations and drills. They showed careful training and much preparation on the part of both teachers and students. With the exception of those who were specially clad for the drills, the girls wore white dresses and the boys were clothed in black.

The program opened with a patriotic chorus, "Hurrah for Our Banner," after which Rev. F. G. Clark asked the invocation. The Jackson school then gave an Indian club drill, in which those performing wore a combination of white and black. This was followed by a recitation by Norman Peterson of the Lincoln school, and then Charles Di Marco gave a declamation, "The Wives of Weinsberg." For the Bryant school Bert Wilson and Miss Jarda Olsen gave an excellent dialogue entitled "The Happy Little Wife," and the whole class sang a humorous part song, "Where Are You Going To?"

The Irving school then presented one of the finest of club drills, with a grouping of the class. Those who swung wore white, with ties of scarlet, and combined with their club work some very pretty foot work. As a finish they raised a diminutive little maid of about ten years into the air above their heads on a circle of clubs.

This was followed by a dialogue from the Madison, "Aunt Sophronia Tabor at the Opera," the parts being taken by Miss Eva Sullivan and Miss Hilda Olsen. Two recitations from the Fairmount and the Adams followed, both of which were of a high order. The former was represented by Miss Esther Berglund and the latter by Miss Ruth Marguerite Hanson.

The Longfellow school then presented what was one of the best numbers on the program, a minuet by twenty girls. They wore long flowing robes of pink and white, which combined with a beautiful effect with the grace of their movements as they repeated the motions supposed to represent the sateliness of the olden time.

The graduating class then assembled upon the platform to sing "The Cossack's Song," after which Supt. Denfeld presented the diplomas with a few appropriate remarks, saying in part:

"It is needless to tell you that this is the largest class that has ever graduated into the high school. Those assembled here tonight represent about 50 per cent of the 500 who are leaving the eighth grades this year. If the population increases in the same proportion in future years, as it has in the past two, we shall need a much larger auditorium to accommodate those who are leaving the eighth grades together with those who wish to witness their program.

"The object of the public schools is not only to develop the students in intellectual lines, but also to render them sound in body. The purpose of the work is to give the students attending them an education that combines the physical, the moral and the intellectual. They learn the value of truth, integrity and justice, and are rendered able to do the work they may be called upon to perform with credit.

"You must do something for yourself from this time forward. Do not stop studying, but go ahead in whatever you attempt to win for yourself some degree of success. Those of you who are going into the high school, remember to work there as hard as you have done in the grades. There is no other way to accomplish anything than by hard work."

After the exercises were finished, the high school boys gathered outside the entries and coralled a few of the prospective freshmen who were so indiscreet as to leave the portecting care of their guardians. Some of them were stripped of their Indian clubs, flowers or caps, but further than a good scare they received no injury.

RESIGNATIONS ARE ACCEPTED

Twenty-one Directors Are Dropped from the Equitable Society.

New York, June 29.—Grover Cleveland, Morgan J. O'Brien and George Westinghouse, the trustees of the majority stock of the Equitable Life Assurance society, took the first step in the reorganization of the society yesterday by accepting the resignations of all the directors who had tendered them, and in forwarding to the board of directors the names of nine prominent citizens, representing the interests of the stockholders, with the recommendation that they be at once accepted. The recommendation of the trustees was immediately complied with.

The board also accepted the resignations of all but one of the directors who had resigned, the one exception being James B. Forgan, who withdrew his resignation, which is held in abeyance, the other twenty-one directors, whose resignations were accepted, were:

Cornelius N. Bliss, George H. Squire, Charles Smith, Brayton Ives, M. E. Ingalls, A. J. Cassatt, E. H. Harriman, Jacob H. Schiff, James J. Hill, T. Jefferson Coolidge, John Jacob Astor, Marvin Hughitt, Henry C. Frick, M. Hartley Dodge, John A. Stewart, Fred Vanderbilt, August Belmont, D. O. Mills, Robert T. Lincoln, John Sloane, and Joseph T. Low.

Of the gentlemen whose resignations were accepted, all had been made known except those of Messrs. George H. Squire, James J. Hill and Alfred Vanderbilt. That these genetlemen had sent in their resignations was not known until the fact of their acceptance.

The names of President James W. Alexander and Vice President James H. Hyde, and Messrs. Tarbell, Wilson and McIntyre, are not in the list of the resigend directors, they having only resigned as officers of the society.

All of the new directors are to serve out unexpired terms of the directors whom they succeeded, the trustees to name later just whom they succeed. All of the new directors are policy holders in the society, and they become members of the board as representatives of the policy holders. They constitute the first nine members to be elected out of twenty-eight by the policy holders, the other twenty-four to be elected by the stockholders of the society later.

The trustees also issued a long statement to the policy holders, urgently inviting their co-operation in the work of reorganization.

At the conclusion of the meeting of the trustees, Mr. Cleveland left for Buzzards Bay, where he will spend a fortnight fishing with Dr. J. D. Bryant and E. C. Benedict. It is not likely that there will be another meeting of the trustees for a fortnight.

Foreigner Adopts Drastic Measures to Get Into States.

Immigration Inspector William H. Dean conducts a pretty serious business for most people who come under his observation, but now and then there is a gleam of humor in the situations which present themselves. A few days ago he ran across a peculiar situation. When the steamer America drew up to the dock from Port Arthur one or two messengers were waiting for her with dispatches for one of the passengers. Another dispatch arrived for Manager Coventry of the Booth line, telling him to have John So-and-so returned to Port Arthur by the first boat. The wanted gentleman, it turned out, was the same that the messengers were waiting for with a sheaf of telegrams. When the gang plank was out and the immigrant inspector went aboard, he found that John, the much-sought man, was a foreigner and that there was nothing about his financial or physical condition which would bar him from admission to the country. The inspector asked him:

"Why all these telegrams?"

John protested that there was nothing wrong, but circumstances were so suspicious that the inspector insisted upon a thorough understanding in the matter, so John unbosomed himself in broken English, which made the story excruciatingly funny. He told the inspector that the reason he was wanted back in Port Arthur was because he left his board bill unpaid. He said that when he got his wages, if he had settled his board bill he would not have had enough to get to Duluth and would at least not have enough left to land.

"How much money have you?" asked Mr. Dean.

"Sixteen dollar and a half."

"I passed him," said Mr. Dean in telling the story. "There is nothing in the immigration laws which makes it necessary for an immigrant inspector to collect board bills or hold a man because he had not paid his."

NINETY-FIVE LEASES

For Iron Ore Prospecting in Cass County.

St. Paul, June 29.—Another new prolific field of iron ore has been discovered in Northern Minnesota. This is located in Cass county, about thirty miles southwest of Grand Rapids, and it is believed to be an extension of the Mesaba range.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson yesterday issued 95 prospecting leases to William P. Lardner of Duluth. They are located in township 140, 141, 142 and 143 of range 25, township 139, 140, 141 and 142, range 26, and townships 139 and 140 of range 27. The total sum paid by Mr. Lardner was $2,375.

Heretofore little or no ore has been discovered west of Grand Rapids, and it has been generally supposed that the Mesaba range terminated at that point. It is reported, however, that valuable finds have been made in Cass and Crow Wing counties.

DYNAMITE KILLS NINE

Terrific Explosion at Powder Works Near Emporium, Pa.

Emporium, Pa., June 29.—Nine men were killed and twelve to fifteen injured by an explosion of dynamite last night at the plant of the Emporium Powder company, three miles west of Emporium. The dead men were all employed at the works. Although some of the injured were seriously hurt, all are expected to recover.

About a ton of dynamite exploded from some unknown cause and wrecked the mixing plant, the packing house and several other buildings belonging to the company. Thousands of persons hurried to the place, but were afraid to venture close to the burning buildings, as there were 7,000 tons of dynamite packed in boxes in a storehouse nearby.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER GIVES YALE ANOTHER MILLION.

New Haven, Conn., June 29.—President Hadley announced at the alumni dinner last evening that a gift of $1,000,000 had recently been made by John D. Rockefeller. President Hadley also said that $2,000,000 in all had been given to the university within a comparatively short time, the other million having been subscribed by graduates in sums varying from $50,000 to $250,000. The names of the latter donors were not made public.

President Hadley said the "only condition of any kind underlying Mr. Rockefeller's gift is that the money is to be invested in income-producing securities and preserved inviolate as an endowment for the institution, the annual income only to be used for current expenses." He added that the $2,000,000 already subscribed were to be considered merely the beginning of an endowment fund which might at least be doubled in the next year if Yale is to maintain her position in the university world.

The announcement of the gifts was received with loud applause.

THE NAVAL RULES

Important Changes Made By the Bureau of Navigation.

Wearing of Swords Aboard Ship Is Practically Abolished.

Washington, June 29.—Important changes which have been made in the naval regulations by the bureau of navigation with the approval of the president and secretary of the navy and were made public at the navy department. In the revised regulations the general board of the navy is given a prominent place by the incorporation in the first chapter of a paragraph giving the composition of the board and a section defining its duties. The board is to have a membership of seven, as at present, with the admiral of the navy at its head. The duties of the board as given are to devise measures and plans for the effective preparation and maintenance of the fleet for war; to advise the secretary of the navy as to its disposition and distribution, and of the enforcements of ships, officers and men of the navy and marine corps; to prepare and to submit to the secretary plans of campaign, including co-operation with the army, and the employment of all elements of naval defense, such plans to be constantly revised in accordance with latest information received. It is to consider the number and the types of ships proper to constitute the fleet, the number of officers and men required to man them, and to advise the secretary as to estimates therefore to be submitted to congress as well as to the location, capacity and protection of coal depots, naval stations, reserves of ordnance and ammunition and supply depots. It is also required to co-ordinate the work of the naval war college, office of naval intelligence and board of inspection and survey, and to report on naval operations, maneuvers, tactics, organization, training and such other subjects as the secretary may lay before it.

The wearing of swords aboard ship on ordinary occasions has been practically abolished by the new wording of the regulations respecting their use, a woven service revolver belt and revolver taking the place of the sword. It is explained by the department that a sword is an unhandy weapon under modern conditions on board ship or in boats and that it serves no useful purpose on occasions other than those of ceremony. The sword will be worn, however, at ceremonies and at infantry and artillery drills on shore.

The regulations governing visitors going aboard vessels under construction have been revised so as to give such permission only to those known to the senior officer present as American citizens of good standing and repute. Visitors representing foreign governments or known to be other than American citizens, it is provided, shall not be permitted to go aboard such vessels except by permission of the navy department, and then shall be accompanied by a naval officer on duty at the navy yard or works where the vessel is building.

The ships to which captains may be ordered in command are limited to battleships and armored cruisers, while commanders have had their duties afloat extended to the command of protected cruisers of the first rate, and lieutenants are made eligible for the command of destroyer or torpedo flotillas.

Articles defining the rank and titles of officers of the line and staff of the navy have undergone revision, and in a memorandum issued at the navy department noting the changes which have been made in the regulations, this explanation is made:

"Up to the year 1900 there was little or no trouble about titles of line and staff officers, but during the past four or five years much friction has been created by officers using titles which do not pertain to them or to their duties in the navy. The amended regulations regarding titles are based upon statute law, as interpreted by attorney generals."

New provisions made in this connection require that "except when otherwise provided by law or regulation, every commissioned officer of the navy when designated by title shall be given the title borne on the face of his commission that indicates his office," and that all officers of the navy shall be addressed officially by the titles prescribed in the regulations. The article giving the rank and titles of chiefs of bureaus, which has been recast, provides that an officer below the rank of rear admiral filling the office of chief of bureau shall, while holding such office, have the rank and, except as otherwise provided by law or regulation, the title of rear admiral. It then prescribes that the chiefs of the bureaus of medicine and surgery, supplies and accounts, steam engineering and construction and repair, while holding these offices, shall have respectively the titles of surgeon-general, paymaster-general, engineer-in-chief and chief constructor, a staff officer serving as chief of the bureau of yards and docks to retain his title in the corps to which he belongs, and the judge advocate general to have the rank and title of captain in the navy or colonel in the marine corps. Officers retiring while serving as chiefs of bureaus or as judge advocate general retain the rank and titles held while serving. Staff officers on the retired list have the titles appropriate to the corps from which retired.

ESCAPE WAS MIRACULOUS

Stillwater Man Suffers From Exposure In Bering Sea.

Stillwater, Minn., June 29.—Harvey Sullivan's miraculous escape from death in the Bering sea early in May is graphically told in a letter to his brother, George H. Sullivan, city attorney of Stillwater, which was received yesterday.

The former is in Nome, Alaska.

Mr. Sullivan and three other men started in a kerosene launch from Nome to go to Bluff City and after being out a few hours, the machinery was disabled and the launch was buffeted about for six days by the pack ice that comes down from the polar regions. After trying to make the machinery work, they abandoned the project and took to the dory, crossing the pack ice with the dory.

Two or three days passed without hearing any word from the missing people and it was finally decided to send out searching parties.

Five searching parties were organized and each day one went out, but each returned without giving any hope.

Several men kept watch on different points where it was possible the missing people might be sighted.

Last week Deputy Collector of Customs Garfield wired the treasury department at Washington, asking for permission to equip and send out a steamer to the rescue. A favorable reply was received from this message Tuesday and steps were being taken to secure a speedy tug, when the news of their safe arrival was received.

The "North Coast" left Nome about 4 o'clock on a Wednesday afternoon. The engine broke down once off Cape Nome, but was repaired and the tug proceeded until about three miles of Solomon, when the engine again refused to perform its duty.

The boat weighed anchor during Wednesday night, and all day Thursday the crew was busily engaged in an endeavor to repair the machinery. In the meantime, a fierce off-shore wind came up, and the craft, being helpless, drifted seaward about thirty miles, and got into an ice-pack. It was found impossible to repair the engine, and on Sunday morning it became necessary to abandon the "North Coast," which was then fifteen miles in the ice pack, and take a dory.

Then began a trip of innumerable hardships, dragging the dory over heavy ice-packs and pulling her through thin ice, which would not carry her weight. Sixty-eight hours were consumed in the making the trip from the abandoned "North Coast" to Solomon.

During the time the passengers were out, they had practically no sleep. They had ample provisions, however, and no privation was felt in this regard. Captain Storey had the toes of both feet frozen quite severely, and Harvey Sullivan had one of his limbs nipped.

A WONDERFUL PISTOL.

Claimed Only the Owner Can Discharge It.

New York, June 29.—President Roosevelt will shortly be the recipient of a superbly-mounted 44-caliber Colt's revolver. The weapon will be given him by Adjt. Gen. Nelson H. Henry of the National Guard of New York, acting for Van Buren Allen, the inventor. The revolver is fitted with a patented safety device, which Mr. Allen asserts will make it impossible for the weapon to be discharged until the safety lock is freed.

"The crying need for a safety lock for firearms was discussed by the superintendent of prisons, Mr. Collins, and myself recently," said Mr. Allen. "Mr. Collins discussed the possibility of a safety device that would effectually lock a revolver unless in the hands of the party owning it and asked me to make the attempt to invent such a clutch. I claim that with my combination device attached to a revolver, exploits like those of Tracy, the outlaw, will be impossible, for the simple reason that even if the weapon of a keeper is secured by an escaping criminal, he will not be able to fire it, as there are at least 2,500 different combinations on the composite safety device.

"The revolver I have secured to give to President Roosevelt, has a simpler, yet just as effective safety lock. By the mere pressure of the thumb, the president will be able to either lock or unlock his weapon, and when locked it is absolutely impossible to discharge it. Not only can the safety devices be used on revolvers and other small arms, but it is perfectly feasible to attach them to guns of large caliber and to rapid-firing machine guns. With the device attached, captured artillery can be made absolutely useless by those who have lost the battle. I believe this invention will be the means of saving hundreds of lives, as it will prevent the accidental discharge of shotguns, rifles and revolvers."

YOUNG PARIS WOMAN'S

Effort to Prevent the Ruin of Peasants.

Paris, June 29.—A rich and beautiful young woman whose name is Mlle. de Marnier, has suddenly acquired fame by a deed of disinterested charity unlike any which has ever been seen in Paris. Mlle. de Marnier comes from the Jura, where the peasant's principal means of support is derived from the manufacture of lace.

All of a sudden there was a fall in the price of lace. A syndicate of Parisian dressmakers decided to declare war upon the lacemakers and reduce them by famine to accept infamously low prices for the product of their labor.

Mlle. de Marnier saw the danger which threatened her compatriots. She had an income of $6,000 a year. She headed a strike movement among the lace makers; she taught them to resist the tyranny of the lace merchants, and meanwhile bought from them in advance for two years all the lace they can make, paying them double the price they have been used to getting from the Parisian buyers.

The Parisian dressmakers saw themselves forced, just as the season proclaims the triumph of lace in the fashions, to purchase their goods at the prices dictated by this young woman or go without. Mlle. de Marnier has sacrificed her entire fortune in the execution of her generous impulse, but she has saved a whole district from ruin and preserved for France one of its most prosperous industries.

Right or wrong, she has distributed $100,000 in aid to the lacemakers of the Jura, and all Paris looks on and, wonders at the courage shown by this young girl.

ARGUMENTS LENGTHY.

Mitchell Case Not Yet Gone to Jury.

Portland, Or., June 29.—The case of United States Senator Mitchell will not go to the jury before tonight at the earliest, and probably not until some time Friday. Yesterday was consumed by District Attorney Henry in finishing his argument for the prosecution, and when he completed it court adjourned until today. Judge Bennett commenced to speak in behalf of Senator Mitchell this morning, and will be followed by ex-Senator Thurston. Mr. Henry will then make his final argument. If time remains Judge Dehaven will give his charge. This, however, seems unlikely, unless the lawyers for the defense consume much less time than it is believed they will.

Mr. Henry, in his argument to the jury, said the transactions of the firm in relation to land matters, from the time the senator asked for a copy of the firm's books, covering the period from November, 1901, until June, 1902. His arraignment of the defendant, who, he said, had been the cause of the perjury of Judge Tanner and himself, and whom he charged with an attempt to suborn his private secretary, Harry Robertson, to testify in accordance with the false defense outlined, was merciless and caused the face of the defendant to flame and pale with passion.

OFFICERS SEIZED

Crew of a Transport Mutiny and Capture the Ship.

Warships Are Being Rushed to Odessa With All Speed.

Odessa, June 29.—The crew of a government transport which arrived here today from Nickolieff, mutinied, seized their officers and joined the crew of the Knlaz Potemkine, to whom they turned over the captain and other officers of the transport. It is reported the foreign consuls have applied to their respective governments to send warships to Odessa.

Sebastopol, June 29.—A battleship and a cruiser left here during the night with orders to steam at full speed for Odessa.

Reval, Russia, June 29.—Railroad employes here to the number of 400 have struck work. A squadron of Cossacks has been dispatched to Gapsal to suppress rioting. Details are lacking. All telegraph and telephone communication with the place is severed.

Washington, June 29.—The state department has received a cablegram from Mr. Meyer, ambassador to St. Petersburg, saying that extensive mobilization has been ordered in the districts of Kieff, St. Petersburg, Warsaw and Moscow, because of the necessity of immediately increasing the forces in the Far East. It is expected that under these orders that between 160,000 and 200,000 men will be called into service.

Lodz, Russian Poland, June 29.—About 15,000 additional troops have arrived here and the city is again quiet. In response to a deputation of Jews, the chief of police today promised to protect them and their co-religionists.

GREAT DAY NEAR AT HAND

Longing of the Small Boys Soon to Be Realized.

Last year circus came on the Fourth of July. This season the elephant makes his annual visit to Duluth on the third, and Superior will entertain the White City on the day the eagle screams. All eyes are on the weather man, and the local prognosticator will have serious times squaring himself if sunny skies and pleasant zephyrs do not prevail on the two most important holidays of the year—circus day and the Fourth. Schools have dismissed for the summer vacation, and the youth of the city, who can be seen in groups standing with feverish expectancy before the gaudy bills, where the wonderful performances of the Forepaugh-Sells Bros.'s show are portrayed, realize that their weary wait is nearly at an end. But a few days more remain until he can see, in living, breathing reality, that great encyclopaedia of the earth's strange beings, about which he has studied in the class room, but of whose forms, habits and characteristics he knows comparatively little.

Only one big circus for Duluth this season, say the wiseacres of circusdom, but fortunately for Duluth it is to be the Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' show—the main-pin in the great triad in the circus world, and now acknowledged to be the dominant giant in the list of tented shows.

Old Adam Forepaugh, when he died, left a great show behind him, bearing his name. In course of time it was consolidated with the Sells Brothers' show, also a great one. And now the entire outfit is owned by a combination, consisting of the Ringling Brothers and James A. Bailey. It is a sort of "trust," but a beneficent one, and it is to be seen here on July 3, in all its new splendor.

Many have seen the Forepaugh show in the past, but those who have will scarcely recognize it as it stands today. The enormous circus has been added to in the size of the great tents, number of people employed, horses used, animals collected, and in many other ways, until it would seem that the limit of human endeavor has been reached. All of the acts under the big arenic tent are new and novel, direct importations from the greatest amusement centers of the old world. The exception, perhaps, is the Royal Roman speed contests, which take place on the spacious race course which girdles the three big rings and two elevated stages.

The parade is said by those who recently witnessed the spectacle in Minneapolis, to be the grandest, longest and most lavish out-door exhibition ever seen in that city.

Locates in Duluth.

Dr. Louis E. Daugherty, son of Former Senator F. B. Daugherty, who was for many years a resident of Duluth, though now in Chicago, has taken offices in the Phoenix building and will engage in the practice of his profession. Dr. Daugherty graduated from the university of Minnesota medical school a year ago, for a year served as interne in St. Luke's hospital at St. Paul with a view to fitting himself for surgical work and has elected to practice in his home city. He comes from there with the warm endorsement of such surgeons as Dr. Charles A. Wheaton, Dr. John T. Rogers and Dr. McLaren.

VON KOESTER PROMOTED.

Kiel, Germany, June 29.—Emperor William has promoted Admiral Von Koester to be grand admiral of the main fleet. Von Koester has long held high commands and has the complete confidence of the government as an exceptional administrator. He has now barely recovered from an injury to his leg, which was crushed in a gun accident on the flagship.

TO REFORM FUNERALS.

Governor Hoch Suggests Changes In Customs.

Topeka, Kan., June 29.—Governor Hoch sounded a note of funeral reform in an address before the annual convention of Kansas undertakers in session here. He said:

"I think that every man or woman wishes in the future to appear at his or her best, and one of the afflictions of disease is the consciousness that one must appear in public in a wasted and emaciated condition. When the luster is gone from the eye, when the bloom has departed from the face, when I appear in death, I hope that I will not be exposed to view.

"I am simply asking that you lend your influence to the discontinuance of an old custom which I believe to be a relic of ages. Then I have some other ideas. Black crepe is not the proper emblem or sign of death, and the wearing of a large black veil is not the proper sign of sorrow for one who thinks that death is not the end of all, and that there is an immortality beyond the grave.

"Death should not come to one with the somber shades of night. If we have an emblem at all, it should be white—the emblem of justice, of hope, of light and of heaven, and not of darkness and despair. While I believe that it would be better for us to leave off the habit of advertising our sorrow, if we must have an emblem, it should be white—symbolic of light and of hope."

TWO KILLED IN SANTA FE WRECK.

Kansas City, June 29.—An Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe limited passenger train, bound for Chicago, collided with a train on the Belt Line railway at Troost avenue, two miles from the center of the city, today. Two persons were killed and three injured.

The killed and injured with one exception were employes of the road. Blame for the collision has not been fixed. The limited train apparently had the right-of-way. Thomas Fitzmorris, engineer of the stock train, which collided with the passenger train, jumped and escaped injury. He could not be found immediately following the wreck.

TO LEARN THEIR FATE

Lenich and Longer Will Be Sentenced For Manslaughter.

About 4 o'clock this afternoon Frank Lenich and Frank Longer, who were convicted during the present term of district court of manslaughter in the first degree, were to be taken before Judge Ensign and given terms in the state penitentiary which will range somewhere from five to twenty years, as the court may fix in his discretion.

Lenich and Longer are the two Austrain miners who were accused of murdering Peter Kracovitch, at Eveleth, Easter Sunday last, following a drinking bout and a quarrel. Lenich was claimed to have done the stabbing and Longer was accused of being equally guilty as an accessory.

Lenich fled the country following the murder and for some weeks wandered about in the swamps and forests of Northern Minnesota with a companion, who was also supposed to be implicated in the trouble, finally being captured at the home of a settler on the Miller Trunk road, twenty-five or thirty miles from this city.

Lenich and Longer were defended at the trial by L. H. Corcoran, the jury returning a verdict of manslaughter in the first degree. The statutory limitations for punishment is not less than three or more than twenty years in the state penitentiary at Stillwater.

Both are young men so that if the court deems best to give them the full term of twenty years, which will be somewhat reduced by good conduct, they will be under forty-five years of age when the prison gates open to allow them freedom, providing they survive their terms.

At the proceedings before Judge Ensign, the county is to be represented by C. E. Adams, in the absence of County Attorney J. M. McClintock, the accused men will be represented by Mr. Corcoran, while Rev. Fr. Kosmert will act as interpreter.

Some days ago Mr. Corcoran, gave notice of a motion for a new trial for his clients on the ground of newly discovered evidence, but this did not materialize and Monday he notified the court that the motion would not be pushed and the sentence could be rendered any time.

JULY'S WEATHER BRAND.

Fairly Well Behaved Month on the Average.

The normal temperature of July, according to the records in the weather office for thirty-four years, is 66 degrees, quite comfortable, by the way. The warmest July on record was in 1878, when the average was 74 and the coldest was in 1871 with an average temperature of 61. The warmest July day on record was July 1, 1883, when 99 degrees was reached, and the coldest July day was the 2nd of 1895, when the thermometer dropped to 45 degrees.

The average precipitation for the month in the time mentioned has been 3.72 inches and the average number of days on which it rains during the month is 12. In 1879 the rainfall was the greatest, reaching 10.42 inches and the least rainfall in the month was in 1875 when only 0.47 inches fell. On July 2-3, 1897, the greatest precipitation in any consecutive 24 hours fell, the precipitation being 4.20 inches which beats any rainfall of this year.

Weather conditions for the month show the average number of clear days to be 9; cloudy days, 7, and partly cloudy, 15. The prevailing winds are northeast and the average velocity is 7.5 miles an hour.

ADA REHAN ILL.

Report that Actress Has Appendicitis Alarms Friends.

New York, June 29.—According to a private cable received here, Miss Ada Rehan, who is spending the summer in Europe, is ill with appendicitis at the home of friends in London. The message, which was signed by Miss Rehan, contained no further facts, and did not say that an operation had been performed, but it was sufficient to fill her friends with alarm. An attempt was made to ascertain her condition, but without success.

Miss Rehan is visiting Lord and Lady Barrington at their house in London, and the report that the actress had been taken to a hospital is probably untrue.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

TO SHOOT FOR TROPHY

Regular Events of Highland Gun Club Start Sunday.

The Highland Gun club will hold the first of its tournament shoots of the season next Sunday. Members may either shoot in the morning or in the afternoon, suiting their own convenience. Members of the organization have been divided into five classes for the events, and there are six trophies, cups and medals, to shoot for. There will be one trophy for each class, and the sixth trophy will be shot for by the ladies, who will also shoot for the class prizes. The sixth will be shot for on the percentage basis. At the close of these events the contests for the two guns to be awarded as prizes to the best shots in the club will be begun.

GOVERNOR GETS BUSY

Asks Capitol Commission About Approaches to the Capitol.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rumors of a prospective clash between Governor Johnson and the capitol commission were rife about the state house today. It was said that Governor Johnson had written a letter to the commission asking for information regarding the possible recommencement of work on the east and west approaches to the capitol, and also calling attention to the complaints being made regarding their present condition.

That the letter has been written or was in contemplation was verified by one of the state departments which had interested itself in the matter but nothing could be learned from the executive department. Governor Johnson was out of the city but his private secretary, Frank A. Day, as much as admitted that the governor intended to get busy.

At the office of the commission, those in charge said they knew nothing of any letter from the governor though they admitted there was some complaint. They said there was a reason for the delay and that the work would be completed in good time.

MAY ESTABLISH SCHOOL.

English Lutherans to Consider One For Duluth.

At the session of the English Lutheran synod of the Northwest today at Racine, Wis., a plan for the establishment of a Lutheran college in the old Craggencroft school at Glen Avon is to be submitted. A committee of the synod will present a report and recommendation that the school be established by the synod and suggesting the method of government.

The building must be given by Duluth people and placed in repair and it is understood that this has been provided for.

If the synod should look upon the matter favorably a school that should have a bright future will be established.

YOUNG GATES

Beats His Way on An Ocean Liner.

New ork, June 29.—Charles G. Gates, son of John W. Gates, more than paid for the passage home of himself and wife on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which arrived here yesterday, by winning two pools on different days' runs, the profits aggregating $1,500. Gates said he did not exactly need the money, but rather enjoyed the experience of beating his way on an ocean liner.

Five pools were organized on the ship's run of different days. Gates acted as auctioneer. Two pools were won by a syndicate composed of Pembroke Jones and Henry Walters, netting $900. Marcus Braun, special commissioner appointed by the president to investigate European emigration, won another amounting to $900. Gates captured the other two.

A Valuable Book.

By order of congress a book has just been published giving an illustrated history of the Declaration of Independence, with the biographies and portraits of the signers. From a historical standpoint it is considered very valuable. The most valuable medicine before the public today for ailments of the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Thousands of sufferers have been cured by resorting to it promptly. Its fifty years' record proves its worth beyond all doubt. When you overload the stomach, the bowels become clogged and you feel half-sick all the time. In such cases use the Bitters exclusively and the trouble quickly disappears. AN EASY TEST.

Senator W. Murray Crane, at a Thanksgiving celebration in Dalton, talked about turkeys, says the New York Tribune.

"From November on through the winter season," he said, "it is important to know how to tell a good turkey from a bad one—a young and tender from an old and tough bird.

"A farmer once examined his chore boy in this grave matter.

"'Roger,' he said, 'can you tell infallibly a young from an old turkey?'

"'Yes, indeed, I can, sir,' Roger answered.

"'How do you tell?'

"'By the teeth,' the boy replied.

"'Oh, rubbish, nonsense!' said the farmer. 'I am ashamed of you, Roger. Turkeys have no teeth.'

"'No,' said Roger, grinning, 'but I have.'"

SLUGGED SHARKEY.

Result of a Joke on a Drummer.

"A man I know introduced me to the members of the Washington ball club the other night," said an old-time fanatic, to the Washington star, "and it took me some time to get my fingers ironed out straight after that assortment of handshakes. They're a strong lot of colts, and there isn't any absence of heartiness in their way of gripping your paw. The power in their fingers reminded me of an incident that I once witnessed in connection with a bit of too-hearty handshaking. It occurred in the cafe of the Palace hotel, San Francisco, and Tom Sharkey, the pug, was one of the central figures.

"A traveling man from the East met a big gang of ham-listed sports in the Palace cafe on this night. He was introduced to the dead-games by the clerk of the hotel. The drummer was a small man, and the first dead-game who took his mitt gave it a squeeze and a shake as if trying to crop out a manicure set at a county fair tightest-grip contest. The traveling man winced and turned a bit pale under the pressure. The sport tipped the thing along to the rest of the bunch, and they all gave the drummer's paw a bone-crushing squeeze. The drummer got paler and paler and madder and madder as each of them took his hand and tried to knead it into a meat cake, but he didn't explode until the last man to whom he was introduced, a noted middle-weight fighter, got a vise-like clasp on his right duke and came near macerating to pulp. Then the drummer snatched his hand away, threw back his chest, and blurted out:

"'Say, this is too blamed much of a good thing! I've got some use for this hand yet awhile, and the next low-forehead that comes along and tries to break it off has got to fight, and he's got to know how to fight! I'll knock the block off of him, I don't care if he's 11 feet high, and you hear me a-talking.'

"The sports let out a roar over the funny wrath of the dapper little traveling man, in which at length he had to join, but he repeated what he'd said, all the same, and declared that he wanted to go on record as to that point.

"'The very next mug that tries the bone-crushing game on me,' he said again, 'is going to get one right in the nose, and that's no airy persiflage, either.'

"One of the dead-game sports slipped out to the rotunda of the Palace, where Tom Sharkey was holding down a leather chair.

"'Hey, there, Tom,' said the sport to the pug, 'I want you to come into the bar to meet a good fellow. He's one of our kind, and he wants to know you. And, say, Tom, give him the right kind of a grip—he was just saying a while ago that he always judges a man by his handshake, and that he's got no use for a guy that pushes him a dinky, jellyfish handshake.

"'Oh, Ol'll attind t' that, all roight,' said the Dundalk pug, who was a pretty square on the left eye.

"'Why, ye Proteshtant blaygard, yeez!' yelped the enraged Sharkey, and he led off with right and left for a rough house.

"'Ye murtherin' runt, Ol'll tache yeez—'

"The swings he aimed didn't land or the drummer would have had taps sounded over him a day or so later. One of the sports threw his arms around the pug from behind and another yanked the frenzied little drummer out of harm's way.

"After the tumultuous hoot there were explanations and Sharkey and the drummer got together all right, but without any more hand shaking."

THE PREACHER LAUGHED.

Seattle Times: "Only once did I ever laugh in the pulpit of my church at the act of any person in my congregation," said the late favoriate Methodist preacher, the Rev. J. B. Wakely, "and that was while I was preaching a sermon, which made the uncontrollable sin much greater. Now, this story is about a red-headed lady and a small boy, and no one who has his eyesight can doubt the fiery color of my hair. Perhaps this fact may atone to some degree for my sinfulness.

"In a seat in the front row of the center aisle of the church, immediately in front of me while preaching, sat a young lady with auburn tresses, and immediately behind her sat a small boy, who was quiet and orderly until wearied, when he looked about him for something to occupy his mind. It was not long before he espied the flaming hue of the lady's hair, and with a smile that showed that he had discovered what he was in search of, he put the index finger of his left hand in the hair for a moment; then taking it out quickly, as a blacksmith might a piece of red hot iron, he placed it on his knee for an anvil and beat it smartly with his right fist many times. This operation he repeated at intervals. The first time my sense of humor was too great for me and involuntarily I smiled; the second time I grinned and lost the thread of my discourse; the third time I caught myself laughing in the pulpit. It was the funniest thing I ever saw.

"The funniest story I ever heard," continued the reverend gentleman, "and they tell me I am full of funny stories, was about a brother clergyman, a mother and her baby girl. It was during the ordinance of baptism one Sunday morning, and my brother minister stood behind the font when the mother and her infant came before him. 'What name shall I give this child?' asked he.

"Now, the lady lisped very badly under ordinary circumstances, and with the minister in front of her and the whole congregation behind her, she was greatly perturbed, and blushingly replied, 'Luthy, thir.' 'What!' exclaimed he, and the lady repeated, 'Luthy, thir,' and let fall her modest gaunce from his penetrating eyes. 'Lucifer! Never will I baptize a child Lucifer! George Washington, I baptize thee,' and so on, and the girl wore that name until she died."

TO DELAY AGE.

"Petronius arbiter elegantioe," said a physician the other day to the New York Sun, "was not the only one who knew how to ward off the ravages of old age by having his body kneaded by slaves every morning before he started out on his daily round of galeties. Hundreds of old men in New York today make daily visits to physicians who do nothing else but administer this sort of treatment with the aid of masseurs. They employ baths and mineral waters, too, but the principal treatment is this kneading."

WHEAT IS STRONG

Market Opens Weaker, but Turns Bullish Before Noon.

Southwestern Weather Is Bad, and Russian Situation Excites Alarm.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 29.—The wheat market opened lower and with the sentiment bearish this morning. The weather in the Northwest had cleared and with it came a feeling of relief that brought sellers into the market. During the morning, however, reports of heavy rains in the Southwest came in and with them a renewal of the bullish sentiment. Strong buying developed, and shortly after noon prices were considerably higher than yesterday, and they closed with good gains.

The Russian situation is also bringing new strength to the bull side of the market. The trouble in the Black sea may cause a cessation of shipments from there, and a general revolt in the empire, which many now fear, would greatly reduce the crop of that country.

The Liverpol market closed ⅛@¼d higher, Paris ½c lower to ½c higher and Antwerp unchanged.

The September option in Duluth closed ¾c higher, in Minneapolis ⅝c higher, in Chicago ⅞@1c higher, in New York ⅞c higher, in St. Louis ⅞@⅞c higher and in Kansas City 1⅝@2c higher.

Car receipts at Duluth were 22 against 16 last year, and at Minneapolis 141 against 191 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 163 against 207 last year. Chicago received 44 against 12 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 239,000 bus, last year 294,000 bus. Shipments 226,000 bus, last year 131,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 48,069 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅜c lower. September oats closed ½c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 887,000 bus., last year 257,000 bus. Shipments 764,000 bus., last year 356,000 bus. Clearances were 131,000 bus.

Trading in the Duluth market was quiet. The opening of the new September option was ¼c lower at 87c and it fell to 86¾c at 9:35, rallied to 87¼c at 9:50, fell to 86⅞c at 10:40 and then bulged to 87⅜c at 11:30 and held at that price for some time, bulging later to 88¼c at 12:25. The close was at 88c, a gain of ⅝c for the day. The old September opened ⅜c lower at 92⅛c, and advanced to 94⅜c, falling back then and closing ⅜c up at 93⅝c. The July closed ½c lower at $1.11.

Durum wheat was advanced 4c.

Flax was very dull and closed unchanged all around, although a trade in July was made at $1.46, which was 1c above yesterday's close.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.11; No. 2 northern, $1.03. Durum No. 1, 88c; No. 2, sellers July, $1.11; September new, 88c; September old, 93⅝c. Flax to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.45; September, $1.29; October, $1.26½. Oats to arrive, 32⅝c; on track, 32⅜c. Rye on track, 72c; September, 62½c. Barley: Feed, 39½@41c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 22; last year, 16; oats, 14; rye, 1; barley, 10; flax, 6; last year, 24.

Receipts: Wheat, 20,127; oats, 9,766, barley, 6,317; flax, 415.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Clear Weather Prospects Give Wheat Bearish Tone.

Chocago, June 29.—Prospects of clear weather in the Northwest created bearish sentiment in the wheat pit despite higher prices at Liverpool. July opened unchanged to ⅜c lower at 90⅞c to 91¼c. After touching 90⅝c the price rallied to 91⅝c, but eased off again to 91¼c. September opened a shade higher to 1/16@⅛c lower at 87¼c to 87⅝c, sold at 87⅜@87½c and then reacted to 87¼@87⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Cnicago reported receipts of 167 cars against 150 cars last week and 231 a year ago.

Later the market became exceedingly strong, the principal cause being numerous reports from the Northwest of damage to the spring crop. The internal situation in Russia, however, contributed considerably to bullish sentiment. Shorts were active buyers during the last half of the day and prices made sharp rallies. July advanced to 92⅝c, and September, after touching 87⅛c rose to 88¼c. Some reaction occured on profit-taking, but the close was strong, with September up ⅞@1c at 88½c. July was up 1c at 92¼c.

Under renewed liquidation, the corn market was again weak. September opened 1/16@¼c lower, at 54⅝c to 54½c and for a time held within the opening range. July was off ½c to ¼c at 55½c to 55⅜c at the start, selling off later to 55¼@⅜c. Local receipts were 589 cars with 184 of contract grade.

The market continued weak the entire day as a result of persistent realizing. For July the lowest point of the day was reached at 54⅝c and September at 53⅜@⅝c. The market closed weak, with July off ⅝c at 55⅛c. September was down ⅜c at 54⅛c.

The tone of other grains had a depressing effect on oats. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 32¾c to 33⅛c and held within the opening range. September opened ⅛c lower at 31c and sold at 31⅛@¼c. Local receipts were 107 cars.

September pork was off 7½c at $13.50. Lard was down 2½c at $7.45. Ribs were off a shade at $7.97½@8.00.

Close: Wheat—July, 92¼c; Sept., 88½c; Dec., 87⅜@7⅝c. Corn—July, 55⅜c; old, 55⅝c; Sept., 54¼c; old, 54½c; Dec., 49¾c; old, 51@51¼c; May, 49c. Oats—June 32½c; July, 32½c; Sept., 31⅜c; Dec., 31⅞c; May, 33½c. Pork—July, $12.67½; Sept., $13.00; Oct., $13.02½. Lard—July, $7.27½@7.30; Sept., $7.46@7.47½; Oct., $7.52½. Ribs—July, $7.75@7.77½; Sept., $7.92½; Oct., $7.97½. Rye—July, 66c; Sept., 63½c. Timothy—June, $330; Sept, $350 Barley—Cash, 42@60c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.25. Clover—June, $12.75. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.04; 3 red, 95c@$1.00; 2 hard, $1.06; 3 hard, 95c@$1.00; 1 northern, $1.20; 2 northern, $1.16@1.15; 3 northern, $1.05@1.10. Corn—2, 56@¼c; 3, 55⅝@⅝c. Oats—2, 31½@¾c; 3, 31@¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Our market took on an easier feeling at the start and for some time after ruled extremely nervous. The improved weather throughout the Northwest and prospects of its continuance invited profit-taking by the local talent and some catching of stop orders, but it was very evident that wheat went into strong hands and offerings quickly dried up. Many things contributed to today's very strong market. Foreign news was of a helpful kind as the situation in Odessa might develop into something really alarming. That the domestic cash situation is of the most urgent kind is very evident from the prices obtained for cash wheat in Kansas City and St. Louis, where wheat in store is bringing sharply higher premiums than their July option. Better weather is predicted for the Northwest today and tomorrow and as we approach week-end profit-taking may cause some setback from present prices. The situation, however, is a strong one. On setbacks we still favor the purchase of wheat, but on sharp sudden bulges also favor taking profits with a view of buying back on little setbacks.

Corn—The pronounced strength in the wheat market most assuredly saved corn from a sharp setback today. Trade in the pit was extremely nervous and subject to quick sharp changes. Receipts are liberal and the cash demand, while strong, scarcely takes care of the receipts. We still feel would avoid buying on the bulges. On sharp quick jumps in price we would suggest sales, but it is advisable to have stop loss orders back for protection.

Oats—Much will depend on the weather for the immediate future. With favorable conditions prevailing, we shall undoubtedly raise a big crop of oats. In view of this fact the futures look like a sale.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: "Sales of No. 2 corn were made today to net ¾c under July in store," said J. A. Patten. "We cannot afford to sell at such prices, so will have to make it up into contract and deliver it out. Public sentiment in corn is now as bullish as it was bearish when prices were 10c lower. The argument is the small stock in public elevators. This can be remedied to some extent by transferring the private elevator stocks to the public warehouses. The country acceptances today, footing up 750,000 bus. indicates that receipts will keep up a little while at least. If we have good weather next month July oats will sell at the same price as September no matter who it is that is supporting them."

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Those who parted with long wheat early in the week, tenants, stage hands, orchestra and their former lines at the advance. But little attention was paid to statistics and the crowd was more interested in the weather conditions and damage reports. Clear and warmer weather prevailed in the Northwest and Ohio valley. But general rains were reported in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois. Fair weather is forecasted for tomorrow. The Price Current is rather bearish. That black rust exists in the spring wheat section is unquestionably true. Southwestern advices today were bullish. We note that all offerings are well absorbed and we believe moderate purchases of the September will yield good returns.

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: All leading crops have maintained previous indications. Corn advancing favorably in growth. A large crop of oats progressing well. Winter wheat harvest attended with but little disappointment. Spring wheat making good growth generally.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The copper market relapsed into dullness today. Alloutez continued to show good buying, closing strong at 26¼. Copper Range sold up easily in the morning, but later on sales of 1,500 shares by one house dropped to 65¼. The balance of the list was very quiet and unchanged in prices. The metal prices is a trifle stronger, and the floor traders are beginning to feel more bullish on the situation.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul: Barrett & Zimmerman report slight improvement in general tone of market. Summer consignments light, but of an unusually high grade. Outside buyers numerous for heavy drafters. Local trade fairly active, and all classes moving fairly steady. Values:

CONDUCTED POOL ROOM IN JEWISH SYNAGOGUE.

New York, June 29.—Charged with conducting a pool room in a synagogue in Grand street, of which he told the police he was the rabbi, Henry Jacobs has been held for trial. It was alleged by the police that after having been refused admittance on the ground that religious services were going on, they broke the door. The walls of the synagogue was, they said, adorned with racing charts and other paraphernalia used in pool rooms.

Crops Are at a Standstill

There is Every Indication of a Very Strong Demand for Wheat.

There is no doubt that the crops are late. Hard rains have caused an excess of moisture in the Dakotas and Minnesota and there is already considerable rust on the lower leaves. Even with a continued period of fair weather, the fact still remains that the crops are late. The days are creeping on and the weather is not at all propitious. Unfavorable reports are continually coming in and with them many samples of poor wheat. Excessive moisture has caused stunted and backward wheat and many of the samples are not only very small but of very poor color.

The hope all along has been that the weather would turn better, but right up to today at noon, our private wire advices from the Red River valley tell of rain and hail at Grand Forks and Hunter and other points. How much damage this has done, or how serious it is with reference to crops we cannot say, as reports are only just in, but it illustrates the state of the weather—great uncertainty and conditions very erratic.

There is not the slightest hesitation in saying what everyone knows—that the crop of the Northwest is in a very critical condition.

There was a time when the Northwest stood to raise a bumper crop, and views and opinions of values were based on this. With the past week of bad weather the hope of a bumper has gone. How much wheat the Northwest will raise no one can tell yet, but any observing man can see the situation.

Wheat, on a commercial basis, should not be worth less than present prices even with a good crop, and with a poor crop no one can say how high the price will be a little later on.

We do not believe in taking alarm unnecessarily, and have been conservative all along against damage reports, because always there was a chance for the crop to recover with improvement in the weather, but anyone can see that at this date, with the wheat so backward, red rust very general, and a weather outlook still uncertain, it is time to abandon all old notions of a big crop and consider rather whether the Northwest is going to produce even a satisfactory crop or not.

Ortonville, Minn.—We are having entirely too much rain and conditions are becoming serious. Fields are thoroughly soaked; the ground is soggy and cold.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Big hail storm which has destroyed hundreds of acres of wheat in this territory.

Marshall, Minn.—Severe hail storm of Saturday night destroyed several hundred acres of wheat.

Yankton, S. D.—Rust threatens big damage to the crop in this section.

Watson, Minn.—We have had too much rain in this section, and wheat is turning yellow. Farmers are discouraged, because wheat must have some sunshine, and this has been lacking all spring. Situation very critical.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Market Irregular Throughout the Session, and Closed Easy.

Practically All Stocks Showed Net Losses for the Day.

New York, June 29.—Fractional gains over last night predominated in the opening prices for stocks, but there was a sprinkling of losses in influential stocks. Union Pacific lost nearly a point and Baltimore & Ohio and United States Steel ½. Chesapeake & Ohio rose ¾ and Louisville & Nashville ⅝.

Trading continued variable until the aggressive buying of Amalgamated Copper, People's Gas, the local tractions and the Southern railroad stocks instilled a further tone into the market. The continental stocks moved narrowly aside from Union Pacific. The decline of 1⅛ in that stock was largely made up, but it did not hold. Enameling rose 3 points and Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Amalgamated Copper, Metropolitan Street Railway, Brooklyn Transit, People's Gas, Pacific Mail, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Dock preferred 1 to 1½. Realizing sales got the upper hand in the market around 11 o'clock and the active stocks weakened, Canada Southern losing 1⅜.

The effect of the few advances, including a gain of a point in Norfolk & Western, was lost in the pressure to realize elsewhere, and prices gave way. Union Pacific fell 1½; St. Paul and Northern Pacific 1¼ and Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Cleveland, C., C. & St. L., Smelting and Tennessee Coal a point or more. Northwestern lost 3½ and Louisville & Nashville and Reading lost their early gains. Special stocks showed gains. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. and New York, New Haven & Hartford rising 1, Chicago Terminal preferred and Pullman 2. United States Reduction preferred 2½ and Havana Electric preferred 6. The market was dull and steady at noon. Bonds were irregular.

Stocks proved to be in an abundant supply after the market had rallied a trifle, and the Western leaders, New York Central and Copper fell back to the lowest. The local traction stocks, however, were lifted sharply.

The renewed operations on the long side in Reading advanced it to 100¾, but the movement did not extend to any decided extent elsewhere, most stocks holding barely steady. Southwestern stocks recovered 2 points from the lowest. Ontario & Western moved up above 53, while Central of Jersey yielded a point and United States Steel ⅞.

The rise in call money rate checked operations for the advance except for a rise of ½ in Pipe preferred and allowed prices to slip back again. New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Atchison, Denver & Rio Grande, Canadian Pacific, Sugar, and United States Rubber declined 1 to 1⅜, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, Northern Pacific 2¼ and Great Northern preferred 2½. Louisville & Nashville broke to a point below last night. The closing was easier at the lowest.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 29.—Money on call stronger and higher 2¼@3¼; closing bid, 3; offered at 3¼ per cent. Time loans dull and steady; 60 and 90 days, 3 per cent. 6 months, 3½@3¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3½@4¼. Sterling exchange heavy with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87@4.87.10 for demand and at $4.85.10@20 for 60 days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.85. Bar silver, 58½c; Mexican dollars, 45½c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market is closing a little soft due to profit taking. Market throughout the session ruled very irregular. Profit taking was much responsible for the irregularity and final easing in prices, but it was noticeable that stocks did not decline at all rapidly, supposition being that resting orders were found on the way down. A little reaction from these prices does not necessarily mean that the market has had its advance. Aside from remote possibilities of international complications to come out of the Odessa incident, there seems nothing in sight to warrant lower prices or much of an extended decline from present level. On fair reactions we would buy stocks.

• • •

Dow, Jones & Co. to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: There are grounds for saying that the pool in Brooklyn Rapid Transit has been quietly distributing stock throughout the week. They had hoped that the quotation would have been near or 75 at the end of the half year, but have done well, all things considered, as the stock was all accumulated in the neighborhood of 60.

Japanese issues developed early weakness on the expected new loan. The movement is, of cours, largely sentimental, as all the issues quoted here are specially secured. The 6s have their independent lien on the customs and the 4½ per cent bonds on the tobacco monopoly. New financing cannot directly affect their security. There were substantial profit-taking sales in the Steel issues at the opening, largely through Western houses and for foreign account.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The mrarket all day was rather professional, and in view of the holidays, traditional, and in view of the holidays, traditional, and in view of the holidays, tradit

TROPHY GIVEN

Powder Company Donates Prize to Gun Club For Shoot.

Regular Practice Being Held and Good Scores Made.

In a short time the West Duluth Rod and Gun club will have some cause outside of the fun of the thing for shooting. The Laflin & Rand Powder company has agreed to put up a trophy for the club to shoot for, and it is likely that other trophies will follow. Just what kind of a trophy the powder company will hand the club, and what the rules for the pulling down of the same will be have not been announced as yet.

The club members are getting into the expert class these days, and are holding regular shoots at least once, and sometimes oftener, each week. Frequently of an afternoon or evening, when the weather is not scandalous, two, three or more members of the club go to the shooting grounds and break a few birds.

Last night there was one good 15-bird event, and it will be noticed that Moore broke every bird that arose in front of him. E. Zauft and Almstead missed only two. The scores follow:

E. Zauft, 13; Moore, 15; Fancett, 11; Hanson, 11; Jacoby, 9; Almstead, 13; Johnson, 9.

Record Train Load.

The storyof a record trainload of logs comes from Missoula, Mont., and Engineer Clem Henry, formerly of West Duluth, had charge of the operations when the record was made. The train was on the Big Blackfoot railroad. Forty-five cars were loaded in eight hours with a steam log loader and a crew of seven men. There were 1,265 logs in the load, scaling in all 210,150 feet. Some of the cars had as many as forty-seven logs.

Fine Degree Work.

The degree team of West Duluth lodge, No. 145, A. O. U. W., gave an exhibition last night in its hall for the benefit of the brethren present. George Frame, captain of the team, expects the uniforms by the next meeting, at which time another exhibition will be given. Capt. Frame expects to have the best drilled team in the state by the last of September.

James Kirkwood, Jr., will leave Saturday for Boston, where he will remain for about two months.

J. H. Lauermann will leave today for Kansas City, and other points in Missouri, Colorado and New Mexico. He expects to be absent about a year.

Sumner Smith who has been attending Harvard college, has returned home for the summer.

Tooth brushes from 8 cents up at Spencer's.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Rustler Whose Bonds He Signed Tries to Defraud Rowe.

Pierre—Some time ago Charles O. Bjelkstrom was sentenced to the penitentiary from Stanley county on a charge of horse rustling. On application of a rehearing was granted and he was brought back and given his liberty on bonds, the principal bondsman being Fred S. Rowe. After giving the bond Rowe discovered that some one had been "working" brands on his cattle, and an investigation indicated that Bjelkstrom was the guilty person. He was arrested on that charge, and gave bonds for his appearance in justice court for a preliminary hearing. Rowe then went before the circuit court and surrendered the prisoner and secured a release from the bond which he had signed.

The attorney for Bjelkstrom then raised the question of the right of a justice of the peace to demand his presence to answer for the branding charge, as he was in custody of the circuit court, a superior tribunal. Bjelkstrom is in the Hughes county jail under charge of the sheriff by order of the circuit court, where he will probably stay until the question of jurisdiction is settled.

Huron—Sailor Jean, who is on a trip from Augusta, Me., to every state capital in the United States, pushing a trolleyette, left here Tuesday for St. Paul. Up to this time he has visited thirty-two capitals, and traveled 16,000 miles, every inch of the journey being made on foot. He arrived here from Pierre, and declared the trip from that city to Huron the hardest yet encountered. He has worn out twenty-one pairs of shoes, and is three months in advance of schedule time. The journey was begun April 1, 1903; from Augusta, Me., and must be completed not later than Oct. 1, 1906, by his arrival in Boston. The trolleyette and baggage carried weighs about forty pounds. From St. Paul he will go to Bismarck, making the capitals of the Northern states before cold weather. He is to receive $5,000 if he succeeds in completing the journey on schedule time. His expense money is derived solely from the sale of medals.

Milbank—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Farmers' Elevator company, a dividend of 6 0per cent was voted, amounting to $2,322, leaving a net balance in the treasury of $3,265.96. The company was formed seven years ago and including this dividend has paid 195 per cent to date, besides spending several thousand dollars in improving property. The officers elected were William Schafer, president; F. B. Roberts, secretary; G. C. Middlebrook, treasurer.

Aberdeen—The assessed valuation of the city was raised from $1,858,930 to $2,005,090. Most of the increase is on real estate, the valuation of choice 25-foot lots in the business center of the city being raised from $2,000 to $2,400. The tax rate under the new valuation will be 4 mills for municipal purposes. The present rate is 5½ mills.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—The grand lodge, A. F. and A. M., elected officers at the forenoon session and they were installed this afternoon at the closing session by J. W. Foley, past grand master, as follows: L. A. Jacobson, Hope, grand master; Grant S. Hager, St. Thomas, deputy grand master; John Reissbeck, Dickinson, senior warden; S. J. Hull, Fargo, junior warden; Frank J. Thompson, Fargo, grand secretary; O. D. Lord, Park River, grand treasurer.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Marked Scarcity of Labor In the Michigan Lumber Districts.

Calumet—There is a marked scarcity of labor in the upper peninsula lumber districts. The unusually large amount of railroad construction and other new work, in addition to the prosperity in the iron and copper mining towns, has taken a large portion of the men who usually find employment in the mills and logging camps in the summer season.

The Northern Lumber company, which is operating near Sauks Head, Marquette county, wants more men at once. Bark peelers and cedar workers are wanted badly. Hugh Boutler, senior member of Boutler & Yilrs of Eckerman, is searching for men. He says never in his experience have men ben soe scarc at this time of the year.

A deed has just been recorded by which the Marinette Lumber company has disposed of about 12,000 acres of pine timber in Oconto and Marinette counties to the Peshtigo Lumber company for $8,000. The timber alone was sold and the pine will have to be cleared from the lands before May 1, 1909. The sale includes all timber.

The J. W. Wells Lumber company has purchased the old mill site of the Bay Shore Lumber company lying directly south of its location at Menominee.

At the annual meeting of the Tyoga Lumber company at Marquette the following officers were elected: President, L. L. Bailey; secretary, G. M. Spaulding.

Sault Ste. Marie—The title of "king fisherman of the St. Mary's valley" has formally been conferred upon Moses Valostein, a local clothier, in consequence of his success in catching the biggest rainbow trout ever pulled from the rapids. The fish was 28 inches long, 7½ inches through and weighed 7¾ pounds. It was hooked with a No. 8 fly, and the pole with which the deed was accomplished weighed 1½ ounces. It took Valomstein twenty minutes to land the trout.

Crystal Falls—After an idleness of four months, the Crystal Falls woodenware plant is again in operation, turning out clothespins and butter-dishes. The shutdown was occasioned by the condition of the woodenware market, which has been suffering from overproduction and is still in an unsatisfactory state.

Bessemer—The remains of John Buesko, a graduate of the 1902 class of the high school here, were brought here today for burial. He had worked as an engineer on the logging road of the John Stearns Lumber company in Kentucky and was run over by his own engine. The funeral was held in the high school auditorium.

Railroads.

CUTS THE RATES

Great Western Keeping the Chicago-St. Paul Lines Guessing.

Railroad Construction Is Delayed All Through the Country.

The Great Western road refuses to agree with the other Chicago-St. Paul lines on an excursion rate between the two cities during the St. Paul automobile carnival. The rate it has fixed is way below that the other roads appear to want to offer, for it has acted independently in the matter.

The Great Western has made a special excursion rate of $8 for tourist car passengers from Chicago to St. Paul and return, and of $6 for travelers between the same points during the carnival. As yet none of the other roads has announced that it would openly meet this low rate, and neither has any of the other lines appeared ready to follow the first named road with its corresponding reductions on round-trip tickets from Dubuque, Des Moines, Omaha and Kansas City, so far as the tourist car and the coach car excursionists are concerned.

Practically all of the Chicago-St. Paul lines advertise that they will meet the rate of $12 for the round trip for patrons using the Pullman sleepers. This rate is $12. While the Great Western sells the tickets from July 1 to 6 inclusive, the other lines sell them from July 1 to 4.

DELAYS WORK.

Weather Conditions Not Right For Railroad Building.

Chicago, June 28.—The Railway Age says: Although there are upward of 7,000 miles of new railroad under construction in United States, the mileage of track laid during the first half of the year is less than that for any similar period since 1898. This does not indicate that the total for the year will be correspondingly small for the first half of the year has been devoted largely to grading, which work was delayed first by severe snow storms of late winter and later by rains of early spring. There has been no track laid thus far in the New England states, although one line sixty-five miles in length and several shorter extensions are under construction in that region. In other sections construction ranges: South Atlantic states, 251.87 miles; Gulf and Mississippi valley states, 242.98 miles; Southwestern states, 297.22 miles; Northwestern states, 138.6 miles; Pacific states, 213 miles.

Superior Depot.

The first car load of brownstone for the new union depot at Superior, arrived on the grounds yesterday, and is now being cut. David Hood of Duluth, who has the contract for erecting the building, is making good progress with the work. A large part of the foundation has been completed and is ready for the upper course of brownstone.

Railroad Personals.

James Sharpe of Chicago, agent of the Ontario Dispatch, is in the city today.

G. W. Shute of Minneapolis, general northwestern agent of the N. J. O. & W. railway, is in the city today.

H. R. Ballard, traveling agent for the Merchants' Dispatch, was in Duluth yesterday.

A. R. Malcolm, traveling freight and passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific lines, with headquarters at Milwaukee, was in town yesterday.

Schygielsky-Schubisky.

The wedding of Miss Mary Schygielsky and Edward Schubisky took place this morning at the German Catholic church at Third avenue east and Second street. A large number of friends were present for the ceremony which took place at 9 o'clock. The bridesmaid was Miss Rose Schubisky, and the best man was Frank Schubisky. The service was read by Father Kosmerl. A reception will be held this evening at 9 o'clock at Odd Fellows' hall, and Mr. and Mrs. Schubisky will be at home at 916 East Second street.

Dancing every evening at Oatka Beach.

ALLEGED SHORTAGE

In Colorado Guard Accounts to Be Investigated.

Denver, Colo., June 29.—The prolonged absence and reported shortage of former Paymaster General Frederick W. Gross has caused Governor McDonald to order an accounting of the expenditures which aggregated $750,000 during the Cripple Creek strike, while Brig. Gen. Sherman Bell was in command of the Colorado militia. Adjt. Gen. Burkeley Wells will have charge of the investigation.

A board of survey has been appointed and will begin work at once on the fragments of records which Gross left behind. There are rumors of irregularities by Major H. M. Randolph, an intimate friend of Gross, who, it is said, also has disappeared.

It is believed that under the Dick bill the federal government will ask for an accounting for the arms and ammunition, large quantities of which are said to be missing. Friends of Gross are highly indignant at the intimation of a possible shortage in his accounts, but Governor McDonald has decided an investigation is necessary.

GRANT GILLETTE

Pays the Debts That He Fled From.

Denver, Col., June 29.—Grant G. Gillette, known as the "cattle king," who fled from Woodbine, Kan., in November, 1898, after having raised money by mortgaging thousands of cattle he held for others, came to Denver three days ago and paid local creditors all he owed them —$150,000. Previously he had satisfied the claims of his Kansas City creditors. During the eight years he was in hiding in Mexico, Gillette is said to have made $7,000,000 from gold, silver and lead mines in the Parral district, state of Chihuahua.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint; her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

FARMS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Thousands of working men in the cities and elsewhere are at last realizing that the farmer is the most independent man on earth, and there is a corresponding rush for good land that is cheap. As a result, the fertile sections in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin are filling up with hundreds of sturdy men who in five years will be in better circumstances than ever before in their lives.

We have the finest land in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, and can sell it to actual settlers at terms that will surprise you. In fact, no other land company can offer the encouragement to farmers that we do in the way of payments.

We would be glad to send you maps and all other information upon receipt of a postal.

EIGHT THOUSAND IMPERIAL SAILORS JOIN MUTINY; REVOLT SPREADS RAPIDLY TO ALL PARTS OF RUSSIA

OIL KING GIVES TEN MILLION DOLLARS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

Rockefeller Donates Vast Fortune to Education Board.

Income to Be Distributed to Institutions of Learning.

New York, June 30.—Ten million dollars as an endowment for higher education in the United States has been given to the general education board by John D. Rockefeller. The announcemetn was made by Dr. Wallace Buttrick of the board at a meeting today. The following letter to the secretaries and executive officers of the board, from F. T. Gates, Mr. Rockefeller's representative, was given out:

"I am authorized by John D. Rockefeller to say that he will contribute to the general education board the sum of ten million dollars ($10,000,000) to be paid Oct. 1 next, in cash, or, at his option, in income-producing securities, at their marekt value, the principal to be held in perpetuity as a foundation for education, the income, above expenses and administration, to be distributed to, or used for the benefit of such institutions of learning, at such times, in such amounts, for such purposes and under such conditions, or employed in such other ways, as the board may deem best adapted to promote a comprehensive system of higher education in the United States. Yours very truly,

"T. F. GATES.

With the letter the following statement was given out:

"John D. Rockefeller, Jr., with other gentlemen of this city, was instrumental in forming the general education board in February, 1902. A very broad and admirable charter was secured from congress and signed by President Roosevelt on Jan. 12, 1903.

"A gift of $1,000,000 dollars from John D. Rockefeller was immediately passed over to the board, especially designated for educational work in the South. Other funds have been added by other philanthropists since that time and the board has confined its work hitherto mainly to educational work in the Southern states.

"The present gift differs from Mr. Rockefeller's first gift to the board in the following particulars:

"The principal sum of the gift of $1,000,000 made on the organization of the board, could be distributed. The present gift of $10,000,000 is held as endowment, the income being mainly available for distribution. The first gift was designed to be used exclusively in the Southern states. The present gift is for use not only in the Southern states, but throughout the United States without distinction of section.

"The first gift could be used for common schools and secondary education. The second gift is confined to higher education, and is designed especially for colleges as distinguished from the great universities, although there is no prohibition in the letter of gifts against making contributions to universities.

"Both gifts are alike available for denominational schools as well as for those which are non-sectarian. While the funds may be employed for denominational schools, they will be employed without sectarian distinctions. No special denomination will be particularly favored, but the funds will be open to approved schools of all denominations, although, they cannot be employed for giving specifically theological instruction.

"In distributing the funds the board will aim especially to favor those institutions which are well located and which have a local constituency sufficiently strong and able to insure permanence and power. No attempt will be made to rescuscitate moribund schools or to assist institutions which are so located that they cannot promise to be permanently useful.

"Within these limits there are no restrictions as to the use of the income. It may be used for endowment, for buildings; for current expenses, for debts, for apparatus or for any other purpose which may be found most serviceable.

"It is known that Mr. Rockefeller has had this gift in contemplation for a long time and Mr. Gates has been studying the subject in his behalf for many months. If the fund proves to be as useful as is now anticipated, Mr. Rockefeller will undoubtedly make large additions to it in future years.

"The present members of the board are as follows:

"Robert C. Ogden, chairman; George Foster Peabody, treasurer; Wallace Buttrick, secretary and executive officer for the states south of the Potomac and Ohio rivers and Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas; S. T. Murphy, secretary and executive officer for the states of the North and West; Frederick T. Gates, Daniel O Gilman, Morris K. Jessup, Walter H. Page, Albert Shaw, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Hugh H. Hanna, William R. Harper and E Benjamin Andrews.

"There are four vacancies in the board which are expected to be filled later."

NEW YORK ANARCHISTS EXCITED

New York, June 30.—News of riots and pillage in Odessa has stirred the anarchists who hold forth on the East side as they have not been stirred before in years. At a mass meeting which packed Clinton hall, funds were freely subscribed for Russian revolutionists and the speakers predicted that the present uprising marks the wane of the present governmental system in that country.

A numerous relief band of police agents was scattered around the hall and forty officers were kept on reserve at the nearest station in anticipation of an outberak at the meeting, but nothing out of the ordinary occurred to make thei rservices needful.

Herr John Most was the principal speaker. He said the news from Russia was the most glorious that the revolutionists of the world had ever heard, and that the movement would go on until Russia was trampled in the dust.

JOHN F. STEVENS IS TO SUCCEED WALLACE

Was at One Time Vice President of the Great Northern Road.

Washington, June 30.—Secretary Taft today appointed John F. Stevens of Chicago chief engineer of the Panama canal commission, with residence on the isthmus. Mr. Stevens succeeds John F. Wallace, whose resignation was accepted yesterday, and his appointment takes effect at once. Mr. Stevens also will be made general manager of the Panama railroad. He will not be a member of the isthmian canal commission. His salary will be $30,000 a year. Mr. Stevens is now in the service of the Philippine commission, as government railroad expert in the construction of 1,000 miles of Philippine railroads about to be built under government aid. He was to have accompanied Secretary Taft today to the Philippines, but has been transferred to the Panama canal work.

Mr. Stevens was, until recently, vice president and general manager of the Rock Island system, and formerly was chief engineer and general manager of the Great Northern road. He constructed the Rocky Mountain division of the latter road. He has had extended experience in the projection, construction, operation and management of large enterprises.

St. Paul, June 30.—John F. Stevens was chief engineer of the Great Northern railroad from 1895 until 1903, with the exception of one year, from 1898 to 1899, during which time he went into private business. On leaving the Great Northern he became second vice president of the Rock Island system. Mr. Stevens' principal work, which made for him a record with the Great Northern, was done while he was engineer of construction in 1899, when, with two Indian guides and a pack mule, he started from Assiniboine to lay out the western extension of the Great Northern to the coast. The Indians deserted him and his pack mule died. He persevered in his work, and after much hardships, completed the task, locating the line as it now runs. Stevens pass in the Cascade mountains was named after him.

Chicago, June 30.—John F. Stevens was formerly connected with the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad as second vice president. He resigned that position and was appointed as an expert for the United States government, to go to Manila with Secretary Taft and his party, to make a report on the feasibility of the construction of about 1,600 miles of railway in the Philippines. Prior to his connection with the Rock Island system, Mr. Stevens was vice president of the Great Northern road.

SITUATION THE MOST SERIOUS SINCE INSURRECTION OF 1825

Water Front and Nine Ships Are Burned at Odessa.

Mutinous Sailors on Kniaz Potemkine Bombard the Town.

British Ships In Port Said to Be Safe Thus Far.

St. Petersburg, June 30, 3:25 p. m.—A sensational report is current that 8,000 imperial sailors together with the workmen at the yards and docks of the naval post of Cronstadt have suddenly refused to work and that practicaly a state of mutiny exists there.

4:55 p. m.—The mutiny of sailors at Cronstadt is confirmed. One officer was killed. The situation was reflected by an all around slump on the bourse today. Imperial fours were sustained by the government, but, nevertheless, they fell almost a point.

Odessa, June 30.—Up to the present time nine ships have been burned.

St. Petersburg, June 30, 2 p. m.—Not since the unsuccessful insurrection in December 1825, when a portion of the guard regiments joined in an attempt to set up a republic in Russia, has the situation of the autocracy and the Romanoff dynasty been so serious. Nevertheless the crisis may be passed in a few days. Either the open revolt will by that time be stamped out or the flames will have spread possibly beyond the hope of control. At the admiralty it is said that Rear Admiral Kruger's fleet is expected to arrive at Odessa today. No explanation is offered for the delay of his sailing from Sevastopol nor of the nature of Kruger's orders. It is admitted, although great reticence is manifested, that at 9 o'clock last night the Kniaz Potemkine, was firing on the city. The admiralty thinks the mutinous crew were probably drunk. The officials consider it possible that the crew were supporting the strikers and revolutionists ashore against the troops. Throughout the day the soldiers and police had evidently refrained from attempting to interfere with the strikers, under the threats of the mutineers of the battleship to use heavy guns against them. Although it is possible quiescence of the soldiers was due to fear, the authorities think they are unreliable and a regiment of dragoons and a brigade of artillery have been sent to Odessa from Karson. These troops should have arrived at Odessa this morning. With these reinforcements and the city under martial law it is believed the military governor will be strong enough to attempt to suppress the rioters by force. The plan is believed to be for the troops to crush the disorders in the city while Kruger's fleet holds the entrance of the harbor. It is apparently questionable whether Kruger will engage the Kniaz Potemkine if she refuses to surrender, as firing on the vessel might be too dangerous a test for the sailors on board his ships. Besides it would involve necessarily the destruction of the battleship costing several millions and damage to the city. Admiral Skryduloff's plan of starving out the mutinous crew is more likely to be followed.

At Libau, the mutinous sailors to the number of about 5,000 were finally corraled by troops and artillery in a wood near the port and by this morning a thousand of them had already surrendered. Their comrades possibly will be starved out. Whether there was any great loss of life is as yet unknown.

Great precautions are being taken to prevent the possible spread of the mutiny to the sailors of St. Petersburg and Cronstadt.

The newspapers are not allowed to print a word of the dispatches regarding the revolt of the sailors, but several of them in a roundabout fashion have succeeded in hinting at startling developments. The Novce Vremya, with seeming innocence, announced that the Viedamoski Gradonashalstawa (Gazette of the Prefecture) of Odesa had requested the inhabitants of that city to keep off the streets so as to avoid accidents when the troops are firing. Other papers remark on the massing of troops in South Russia. Considerable nervousness prevails among the upper classes at St. Petersburg. Many of those who have not already left town for the summer are hastily preparing to go abroad.

Ambassador Meyer's family leaves St. Petersburg tomorrow for the United States, where they will spend the summer.

THOUSANDS OF SAILORS

Who Mutinied at Libau Surrounded In Woods.

Libau, June 30.—About 4,000 mutinous sailors are surrounded in a small wood near the port by infantry and reinforced by machine guns.

One thousand of the mutineers already have surrendered and given up their arms.

The mutiny started Wednesday night when the sailors of the first equipage, as the naval units are known in Russia, revolted because the food was bad. They were joined immediately by the sixth, ninth, thirteenth and fiftenth equipages—5,000 bluejackets in all.

The guard at first tried to oppose them, killing one and wounding seven, but the sailors got the upperhand. They seized the guard house, broke open stores, securing arms and ammunition. Pandemonium followed throughout the night. The mutineers wrecked the barracks, attacked the quarters of the officers and fired volleys at random until morning. The city was terrorized when troops and artillery arrived Wednesday morning. All entrances to the city were closed and gradually the sailors were driven into the wood which they have since held.

Much firing mingled with the humming of machine guns has been heard, but as every one is forced by the police to keep off the streets and away from the ports some distance below town, nothing is definitely known except that 1,000 mutineers have surrendered.

The revolutionary agents have seized the opportunity to distribute proclamations from house to house.

STRIKE AT VOZNESENSK.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The strike at Voznesensk, province of Vladimir, continues. The town resembles a military camp. Infantry and cavalry are quartered in the streets. The governor of the province has arrived at Voznesensk from Vladimir, capital of the province.

RUSSIAN STEAMERS

Held at Odessa By the Kniaz Potemkine.

London, June 30.—A dispatch to the Evening Standard from Odessa today says: "Since midnight the Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine has established a blockade of the port in regard to all steamers flying the Russian flag. Not one is allowed to enter or depart. Six of these steamers are now anchored in the roads under the battleships guns. The port thus is in the extraordinary position of being blockaded on the seaside by warships, and the landside is unpassable, owing to a military cordon, which seals up every approach to the harbor."

STATE OF WAR

Declared By Czar at Odessa and Vicinity.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The emperor has issued the following ukase, addressed to the ruling senate:

"In order to guarantee public safety and to terminate the disorders at Odessa and neighboring localities, we have found it necessary to declare a state of war in Odessa and district, and to invest the commander of the troops in the military district of Odessa with the rights of military authority and special rights of civil administration for the defense of order and public tranquility."

REPORTS FROM CONSUL.

Washington, June 30.—A dispatch received at the state department over night from Consul Henan at Odessa says in substance:

"Six officers of the Potemkine killed, eight liberated, remainder prisoners. The fleet has not arrived at Odessa. Harbor largely destroyed by fire. Five hundred rioters killed and many Russian steamers burned."

Another dispatch from the same source, timed Odessa, 6:11 p. m., says:

"Boat firing on town. No fleet."

A cablegram also has been received from Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg which says:

"Information from Odessa that 500 rioters have been killed. The harbor largely destroyed by fire, and a battleship firing on the town. Fleet not arrived."

ABSOLUTE RUIN

From Mole to Steamship Docks In Odessa.

London, June 30.—The Odessa correspondent of the Daily Mail sends the following, timed 6:25 o'clock Thursday evening:

"Intermittent firing has been going on all day long. Artillery has arrived and is in hiding near the boulevard, out of sight of the Kniaz Potemkine. The battleship landed fifteen men to attend the funeral of the sailor, Omiltchuk, and threatened to bombard the town if any of them were arrested.

"The mutineers liberated nine officers, but killed twenty-two.

"The port is an absolute ruin, from Platowsky Mole to the Russian Steamship company's docks.

"People are only allowed in the proximity of the harbor by the guards when furnished with written permission from the commanding general."

A telegram from Sevastopol says that the Kniaz Potemkine has only ammunition for small guns.

THE CITY IS QUIET.

London, June 30.—A dispatch from Odessa to Lloyd's dated today says the city is quiet.

Three steamers of the Russian Transport company have been burned and the thoroughfares leading to the ports are closed.

A telegram sent from Odessa at 10:09 o'clock this morning to a ship owner, says the bombardment which commenced yesterday evening was not serious. A renewal was threatened this morning.

Another telegram sent at 11:34 a. m. says the British ships are thus far safe.

CHIEF IS MURDERED.

Vienna, June 30.—A dispatch received at Bucharest from Kishineff says Gen. Czernotucki, chief of the Bessarabian gendarmerie, has been found murdered in his residence at Kishineff.

A general strike has broken out at Kishineff. The town is occupied by Cossacks.

COUNTERFEITER CONFESSES.

Honolulu, June 30.—J. T. Cooper, one of the four soldiers of the Twenty-fourth regiment of coast artillery arrested on charges of counterfeiting, passing and possessing spurious gold coins, has confessed his guilt. He said the coins were made here and when it was found that they would not pass readily he became frightened and destroyed the cast. He also says he threw away 250 of the counterfeit coins made.

ANOTHER WARSHIP RAISED.

Tokio, June 30.—The Russian battleship Peresviet, which was sunk at Port Arthur, was successfully floated by the Japanese yesterday.

BURNED "FAKIR" ON IMMIGRANT

New York, June 30.—Charged with burning the word "fakir" across the chest of an immigrant while administering the semi-cautery treatment for neuralgic pains, Dr. Dubois Hunt, an interne in Gouvernor hospital, has been dismissed from the institution. Investigation of a complaint made by Pas Chaves, recently landed in this country, that he had been "branded" while at the hospital, resulted in this action. Dr. Hunt admitted that he had almost involuntarny formed the letters on the man's skin after one of his fellow physicians had passed through the opearting room and stated his belief that Chaves was a "fakir." The treatment consists of searing the skin with a white hot needle and the authorities of the hospital state that it was the proper method of treating Chaves ailment.

MAIL WAGON DRIVERS TO STRIKE

New York, June 30.—A strike of mail wagon drivers, which has been hanging fire here for some days, now appears likely to occur at midnight tonight. More pay and shorter hours are demanded by the drivers, but the new contractor who has just secured the job declares that he cannot meet the men's request.

For the last ten years the mails have been transported from the postoffice and the sub-stations to the ferries and depots by the New York Mail company. Now the contract has been awarded to C. H. Kolcott, who takes charge of the business at 12 o'clock tonight. Postmaster Wilcox declares that, should the drivers quit, they will not be permitted to interfere with the service and arrangements already have been made by the United States marshal to protect the mails. Co-operation by the police of Manhattan, Brooklyn and Jersey City has been obtained by the marshal.

AIRSHIP FLIES LIKE A BIRD AND ALIGHTS ON HIGH BUILDING

A Remarkable Flight Made In Toledo By A. R. Knabenshue.

Claims He Has Solved Problem of Aerial Navigation.

Toledo, O., June 30.—One of the most remarkable flights ever made in an airship was performed, today, by A. R. Knabenshue, who sailed through the air, a distance of three miles, landed on top of a ten story office building in twenty-five minutes from time of starting and then returned to the spot from which he started.

The day was ideal for the daring feat. A light wind was blowing from the east and Knabenshue sailed his aerial craft directly in the face of the wind. Two days ago he declared he would sail down town and alight on the top of a ten story building.

When he left the starting place he directed the ship straight for the city. When half the distance had been covered an upper current of air carried him up to a distance of 3,000 feet. But the nervy director did not lose control of his machine for a moment and steered it directly for the heart of the city.

Business was entirely suspended and the entire population gathered in the streets to witness the course of the ship. When directly over the skyscraper, Knabenshue directed his craft downward and alighted on the building with the ease and grace of a bird. A round of applause greeted the daring navigator who was less excited than any of the spectators. After examining the ship to see that it was all right and receiving the congratulations of friends, Knabenshue started on his trip back and going with the wind, he made the return voyage in ten minutes. He declared that his present ship is far superior to others he has navigated; that it is easier manged and that he has solved the problem of aerial navigation.

THE AMERICAN SQUADRON IS WARMLY RECEIVED IN FRANCE

Cherbourg, June 30.—The American squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Sigsbee, consisting of the armored cruiser Brooklyn (flagship) and the protected cruisers Chattanooga, Tacoma and Galveston, which is to convey the body of Admiral Pual Jones to the United States, arrived here at 9 o'clock this morning and was greeted with the roar of guns from the land forts and warships and the dipping of flags on board all the vessels in the harbor. A thick mist overhung the sea, preventing the semaphores from registering the approach of the American ships until they were near the outer harbor. The squadron presented a handsome appearance as it approached with the Brooklyn leading the line. The batteries at the arsenal fired a welcoming salute of twenty-one guns, to which the four American vessels answered gun for gun. The fleet anchored in the inner harbor at a point designated by Admiral Besson, commander of the port.

The aspect of the harbor was strikingly beautiful as the sun came out, and the many merchantmen, steam yachts and other pleasure craft in these waters strung out their full complement of colors, in which the American flag predominated.

The Brooklyn was soon the center of a flotilla of small craft, while the quays were quickly lined with people, and the houses fronting the harbor were made brighter with bunting, including many American flags.

Much regret was felt at the fact that the division of the French northern fleet, assigned to participate in the ceremonies of the transfer of the American admiral's body to the Brooklyn, next week, did not arrive here in time to participate in the welcome to the American ships.

CHICAGO AUTOISTS START FOR ST. PAUL

Fifty Enthusiasts Begin Trip of 500 Miles to Saintly City.

Chicago, June 30.—After weeks of preparation, the great Chicago-St. Paul automobile carnival tour is on. The cars did not start on their long trip promptly at the scheduled hour, but a few minutes after 9 o'clock today, the procession of autos started down Michigan avenue for what promises to be the greatest tour ever held in America.

Though the number of cars that started on the trip did not come up to the expectations of the Chicago Automobile club offieers, the procession was an imposing one. The fifty machines which left the club house this morning ,decorated with pennants and banners bearing different mottoes, looked more like a parade than the beginning of a grind of 500 miles across country roads.

The machines were well cleaned and many of them looked as though they were just from the shop. At the end of today's run, however, the cars and their drivers will look like anything but fit objects for parade.

N. H. Van Sicklen preceded the regular body of the tourists in the scout car, to strew the roads with confetti, in order to mark the route for the drivers, most of whom have never been over the roads.

The first night's stop will be at Rockford, Ill., where the tourists will be the guests of the Rockford Automobile club. The local autoists will entertain the Chicago tuorists, and many of them will join the procession. Early tomorrow morning, the trip will be resumed and the second day's stop will be made at Dubuque. No effort will be made to hand up new records for the trip and five days will be taken for the 500 miles. The main body of dust-begrimed autoists is expected to arrive in St. Paul Tuesday morning.

Governor Charles S. Deneen of Illinois and President John Farson of the Illinois Automobile association have sent letters to Governor Johnson of Minnesota introducing the Chicago automobilists. Following is the letter from Governor Deneen to the chief magistrate of Minnesota:

"Hon. John A. Johnson, governor of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minn.: Dear Sir.—This will serve to introduce to you members of the Chicago Automobile club, who have made the journey to your capitol city overland to pay their respects to the governor of Minnesota. They are types of our enterprising citizens and fitly represent the capable men who have made the name of Chicago a household word throughout the world, and I cordially commend them to your courteous consideration. Yours truly,

CHARLES S. DENEEN."

Seventy-five cars are scheduled to make the trip from Chicago. A few cars are expected to start tomorrow and the non-stop contingent will follow on Monday morning. Just how many will be in the latter class is uncertain, but those who start intend to make the long trip a race and the progress of these machines will be watched with interest. Certificates will be issued to the cars making all the regulation stops, which are scheduled as follows:

Friday, Rockford; Saturday, Dubuque; Sunday, Charles City; Monday, Austin and Tuesday, Faribault. At Faribault the tourists will assemble and proceed into St. Paul in a procession, arriving there on the afternoon of July 4th.

RAIN SPOILS PARADE.

London, June 30.—The trooping of colors, the main feature of King Edward's birthday celebration had to be postponed today owing to inclement weather. The representatives of the Seventh regiment of the New York State National Guard, however, proceeded to Buckingham palace, where they were received by the king.

IT HAD A HEART.

Locomotive Would Not Work Till Promised Something.

The boys at the roundhouse don't know yet what was the matter with No. 804. Some are inclined to scoff at "Billy" Wetmore's explanation that the big engine's heart was almost broken, but the undercurrent of sentiment is that there is something in it and that No. 804 at least was a sulk, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Little No. 1761 had been suffering from a chonic hot box on the rear right wheel of the pony truck. Several times No. 1761 had barely but gamely pulled through with the Aurora way train. She got in shrieking and smoking from the injured bearing. New brasses hadn't cured the ailment, and when No. 1761's stall in the roundhouse was empty all the other engines knew she had been sent to the shop.

It was a severe shock that No. 804 received when she heard the roundhound boss tell the head hostler to fire her up Tuesday morning to take the Aurora way train. It was a terrible indignity, for No. 804 is a big engine of the 800 class, six-wheeled connections, designed for the fast through passenger runs and capable of slipping off seventy miles an hour with six Pullmans, a baggage and mail car. She kept quiet when the cordwood was piled into the cold firebox, but as she thought it over, half an hour later, sputtered viciously from the loose packing on the air pump, and when Tom Selfridge gave her a hint of better manners with a monkey wrench she grumbled like a surly sailor.

"Hanged if I go, hanged if I go," she snorted as Selfridge tested the steam on the brake pump, but she responded through force of habit when the links were heaved up and the throttle was opened a notch, and she backed out to the turntable and down to the waiting way train.

"It's too-o-o-o bad," ending with a vicious puff, complained No. 804, and the others in the roundhouse, hearing her complaint, shickered, for No. 804, with her new paint, had the reputation of being a proud, stuck-up thing, and all were glad at her taking down.

But No. 804, by a telepathic process known to locomotive engines, was conscious of what was going on and shut down with a grip on the throttle valve so that Selfridge could scarcely move it. Then she sulked hard, and when called upon to start to the main track, with her insignificant load of three empty passenger coaches and a combination baggage, balked and wouldn't turn a wheel. She held her steam gauge at 80, refusing to let it budge a point, and with a spiteful spitting from the cylinder cock on the engineer's side, intimated as plainly as an angry cat or an equally angry type 800 locomotive could indicate that she was on a strike.

Billy Wetmore shook the grates, raked off the suspicion of a forming arch in the firebox, and scattered a couple of scoops of coal artistically and coaxingly over the fire, blazing up fiercely under the forced draft. Reluctantly No. 804 responded, slowly picked up the train and started for the main track again.

A puffy little switch engine, dirty, greasy and about as high in the stack as 804's injector valve, ran down and, laughing in its pop valve, coupled on and started the train out of the yard with a hoarse "Come, come, come, come!" that even No. 804 couldn't resist. But no sooner was the switch engine out of sight than No. 804 balked again, and all through the twenty-five miles to Western avenue, tooks fits and starts, now absolutely refusing to pull a ton, and then making a shying, skittish run for another station.

"What's the matter?" asked the assistant master mechanic at the roundhouse at Western avenue as the train pulled in almost an hour late.

It wouldn't do to repeat all Selfridge said, but the gist of it was that he didnt' know; that No. 804's flues were tight as drums, and there was nothing wrong that he could see.

"I wish you could get her started; I need her for No. 4 tonight," replied the assistant M. M., No. 4 being the Denver limited, the crack train of the road. "If you can get a move on her I'll send you in a dinky until 1761 is out in a day or two."

Maybe an engine hasn't ears to hear, but Billy Wetmore won't believe it. When the throttle opened No. 804 sprang forward like a sprinter at the pistol shot and made the Union depot three minutes under schedule time in spite of yard rules, puffing and hissing as lively as a cricket assoon as the stop was made. There was no more trouble with No. 804, and she took No. 4 out last evening in the old-time manner.

"Just sore at this dinky run," explained Wetmore, and while Engineer Selfridge and the rest of the train crew don't admit their belief in the theory, there is no other explanation of No. 804's queer conduct.

A DOG DRINKS SODA.

A regular patron of a West side soda fountain is a big shepherd dog, says the New York Sun. Nearly every afternoon his young mistress leads him to the candy shop, and while she drinks from a glass on the counter "Shep" has a tin cup filled with the beverage on the floor. His coming is watched by all the children in the vicinity, and as soon as he turns the corner and catches a glimpse of the shop window he begins to bark joyously.

HIS ANSWER.

A young lawyer of New York city was recently asked to deliver a lecture on "What a Business Man Should Know About Bankruptcy." His reply was a model of conciseness. "Gentlemen," he wrote, "I am much flattered by your request, but I should hate to take the money. Any lecture that I could deliver on the subject mentioned would consist of six words, as follows: The address of a good lawyer."

In Case of Sailor Found Dead Off Knife Island.

Two Harbors, Minn., June 30.—At the post mortem examination of the body of the sailor found floating in Lake Superior, off Knife Island, a contusion, or partial fracture, was found at the base of the skull, and also one on the forehead. No water was found in the lungs, which indicated death before going into the water.

In one of his pockets was found a book of the Lake Seamen's association, indicating him a member of that order, an ordinary seaman named Pat Flannigan, his place of birth and residence, Elmira, N. Y., and his nearest relative to have been James Flannigan, of that place. He was a man five feet seven inches in height, black hair, blue eyes and round, full face. On his person was found $2.45 in cash.

The condition of his eyes and the fracture indicate a couple of hard blows on the head, and the absence of water in the lungs that death was not caused by drowning. The branch of the seamen's union have been notified, and are making an investigation.

JULY'S SHINE HOURS.

Statement of What Is Coming Next Month.

Of course, everybody knows that after June 21 the days, so far as shine hours are concerned, begin to shorten, not so perceptibly at first as a little later on; but during the month of July the total possible number of shine hours per day will have shortened by almost a full hour by the end of the month. The actual decrease of shine hours as shown by the weather forecaster's prediction just issued amounts to 51 minutes. July is entitled to 479.11 hours of sunshine. The statement of sunrise, sunset and total possible sunshine per day is given in the following table, the columns running in the order mentioned:

FOR EDUCATORS' MEETING.

Program Preparing For Gathering at Christmas.

When the Christmas holidays come around, Principal C. A. Smith of the Duluth high school will have charge of the high school section of the program of the Minnesota Educational association. At that time it will meet in St. Paul for its forty-third annual session, and educators from all parts of the state, and in fact, from outside of the state will be present. Mr. Smith is president of the state organization.

Eric Ericson of Olivia will have charge of the county superintendent's section, and will have many interesting subjects up for discussion. In fact, each section will have many things of interest to discuss and review.

WILL WED ELSEWHERE.

Pouts at Indiana's New Marriage Law's Catechism.

Logansport, Ind., June 30.—Refusing to answer the catechism provided under the new Indiana law for applicants for marriage licenses, Miss Fern Tolley, a prominent young society woman will leave the state to secure a license.

Her fiance, A. R. Shriner of Johnstown, Penn., came here and applied for a license. He filed out his application, giving the required information as to occupation, health, age and parentage, but when Miss Tolley was asked to fill out similar blanks, she refused point blank. She agreed to go with Shriner to Pennsylvania, where "the law is not so inquisitive," and be married there.

Under the law enacted by the last legislature the marriages contracted outside of Indiana to escape the provision of the marriage law enacted by that body, are invalid in this state.

BY A MANIAC

An Indiana Girl Was Wooed and Won.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 30.—Wooed and won by an insane man without knowing he was insane and subsequently so cruelly treated by him that she had to leave, was the substance of a strange story related to Judge Leathers by Nellie Eckstein, who was suing for divorce from George Eckstein.

The latter courted her in 1898 when he was out of the Central hospital for the insane on a furlough. She says she did not even suspect he was mentally unbalanced and no one told her. After the marriage ceremony was performed Eckstein told her a wonderful story of his wealth and a fine position at Peru. He took her there. The disillusion was speedy for he had neither wealth nor position. She says he began to treat her cruelly, choking and beating her till she left within a short time.

Two weeks after her departure he was recommitted to the asylum and is there yet. She has called on him, but he fails to recognize her. The Indiana laws do not recognize insanity as grounds for divorce, but the judge annulled her marriage inasmuch as Eckstein, when the ceremony was performed, was insane.

PUZZLE TO ALL THE SLEUTHS

Is a Man Caught Passing Bad Money In Indiana.

Washington, June 30.—It is seldom the United States secret service bureau is stumped on the identity of an individual who has fallen into its dragnet, but just now it has a mysterious prisoner on its hands. About a week ago a man was taken into custody at Warsaw, Ind., on the charge of passing a counterfeit $10 gold piece. He refused to give his name or tell anything about his place of abode or his social status. He is now in jail at Indianapolis, whither he was taken the day following his arrest. Captain Halls, who is in charge of the secret service office in that city, and the shrewdest detective connected with the police department, tried in vain to get some information from him and establish his identity. No papers were found in his possession which would throw light on the subject, the prisoner having gone to the extent of removing the usual tailor marks from his coat and vest, so as to confuse the authorities. Captain Halls reported the mystery to Acting Chief Moran in this city, and the latter is now engaged in an effort to determine who the mysterious prisoner is.

There are thousands of photographs of counterfeiters in the private gallery of the secret service bureau here, but thus far the collection has not been of avail in establishing the unknown's identity. Captain Halls has sent a photo of the man, but it does not seem to correspond with any in the collection. The prisoner seems to be about 38 years old, is of slender built, and 5 feet 10 inches in height. His face is long and cadaverous and his eyes gray. He has the appearance of a man who has been sick or been confined in prison, and Moran suspects he has served time for counterfeiting. He has directed Halls to measure him according to the Bertillion system, in the hope that the measurements may be found to correspond with those of some man whose photograph is in his gallery. Photos of the prisoner have been sent to the prison and police authorities of Columbus, Cincinnati and neighboring cities.

BRIDE AND GROOM

Rode on Bumpers and Both Were Arrested.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 30.—Mary and William White, of Pittsburg, bride and groom of 18 and 23, were arraigned in court here. They were charged with riding on a freight train.

Blushing with shame at their predicament, the girl bride explained to the judge how they came to be in Cleveland.

"We have been married eight months," she said. "Will thought he could make more money in Cleveland, and so we came as regular passengers. Work was scarce, and we decided to go back. We had no money so we had to ride on the bumpers."

The couple were discharged, with a warning to keep off the bumpers.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

Chicago and Return $16.80.

From July 1 to 4, the Northern Pacific will sell round trip tickets to Chicago and return for $16.80, good returning July 6. For full inforamtion apply city ticket office, 332 West Superior street.

Fourth of July Excursions.

July 1 to 4 inclusive the Northern Pacific railway will sell tickets to all points on its line in Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota and return at one fare for the round trip, except to St. Paul, Minneapolis and Stillwater. Tickets good returning up to and including July 5. For tickets and full information call at City Ticket office 332 Superior street.

THE FINAL CHAPEL

High School Has Last Gathering of School Year.

Supt. Denfeld, Principal Smith and Class Presidents Speak.

At noon today the members of the senior class, together with the rest of the school, gathered in the Assembly hall for the last chapel, where they listened to a few words from their superintendent, their principal, and the various class presidents.

Principal Smith opened the exercises by reading Corinthians i, 13, after which teh choir sang, "Praise Ye the Father." Supt. Denfeld spoke to the school for a few minutes, saying in part:

"As I look into your records I find that you have done well, most of you. If at the end of your four years in this high school you can say that you have done your work faithfully and independently, that should be sufficient, and it is hard for me to say much of anything else at this time, the last chapel of the year.

"Last year at this time we said that we were going to have a new gymnasium, but it has not come yet, although we have great expectations. I believe that an education in the public schools should combine with the mental education a training in physical lines. Until the physical is developed no person's education is complete, and we hope that the new building will soon be erected.

"This is a work-a-day world, although it may not seem so to some of you, as you look at those who have attained to high positions, and see them having apparently a very easy time. But in order to reach thees positions they have at some time worked hard and long, and I assure you that success is to be obtained in no other way than by hard work. Set your shoulder to the wheel, push constantly forward, never think of looking back."

Principal Smith then welecmed those of the old graduates who occupied the gallery, saying that he was always glad to see them back and to hear of the work that they were doing. He went on to thank the members of the faculty for the cordial support that they had rendered him in carrying on the work of the school, and wished those who would not be back the greatest of success.

He added that he hoped that all those who were not graduating would return next fall, commended the seniors upon the splendid enthusiastic spirit that they had shown during the past year, and said that if they made as excellent a record in the future as they had in the past, they would accomplish great things, and concluded by wishing the seniors the heartiest "godspeed" in whatever place or in whatever way they might be engaged.

Each of the class presidents then made a short address. Edward Furni spoke for the graduating class, and in a few short words expressed the regret felt by the class in leaving the school in which four such happy years had been spent. He was followed by Charles McLennan of the junior class, Elmer McDevitt of the sophomore class and by Roger Spencer, who represented the freshmen.

ACTIVITY ON VERMILION

Outlook For Doing Considerable Work During This Season.

Considerable activity is developing in mining lands on the Vermilion and prospects are good for considerable exploratory work up there during the present season. While the location of ore bodies upon that range is a different proposition from what it is on the Mesaba, there are practically no iron men who believe that all of the ore deposits on the Vermilion have been uncovered. The rewards for the discovery of ore on the Vermilion are proportionately greater, too, for higher royalties are paid, and the inducements to search for it are therefore keen.

The White Lake Iron company has a drill at work in section 2, 62-12, and it is said that the Calumet Iron company is required to have one at work by July on section 7, 61-15. There is a report that the Longyears are to work a drill at Robinson lake. There is also talk of a drill being installed in section 15, 62-14, on lands belonging to A. Ebmer of this city.

Another rumor has it that McKenzie & Mann, the Canadian Northern magnates, are getting lands on the Vermilion.

DOORMAN SUFFOCATED IN N. Y. THEATER FIRE.

New York, June 30.—Henry Baker, a doorman employed in Keith's theater in East Fourteenth street, was suffocated while fighting a fire in a building occupied by that theater today. His body was found in the basement. Only the dressing rooms of the theater were damaged and only by smoke and water. There was no audience in the theater. Loss $75,000.

COMPANY'S DUTY

To See That Scaffold at Peavey Elevators Was Safe.

Supreme Court Reverses Decision of St. Louis District Court.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Peavey Duluth Terminal company, of Duluth, will have to face some damage suits, as a result of the reversal of the St. Louis district court in the suit of Charles Carlson against the concern. Litigation grew out of the collapse of a scaffolding, used in the construction of several massive concrete elevators, erected by the Peavey corporation, in which five men were killed.

Besides the five men killed, several were injured, and Carlson was one of the number. He brought suit for heavy damages and got a verdict, but the court gave the company a judgment.

It was practically held in the lower court that the company was not responsible for the bad construction of the scaffolding, which collapsed at a height of seventy-five feet. To this the supreme court takes exception, and says it was the company's duty to see that everything was safe.

Aaron Berman, who was arrested on the grounds of the Minnesota State Fair association, sued the association for false arrest. The supreme court, today, affirmed the lower court, which dismissed the action, holding that the association, as a part of the state government cannot be sued. Further the court holds the law making the society a part of the state government, is constitutional and the society's officers not open to attack in a private action for damages.

The explosion which wrecked the plant of the Northwestern Star Oil company of Minneapolis in 1903, and blotted out several lives, was brought before the supreme court, and today the supreme court filed an order affirming the judgment of the lower court in the case of Mary J. Davis, administrator, appellant, against L. B. Hancock, respondent.

When the explosion occurred, W. H. Davis, the owner of the plant, and C. H. Durren, and Michael Kelly, two of his office employes, were instantly killed. When the Davis will was probated it was found that it contained a provision giving Durren, Kelly and L. H. Hancock $2,000 each. Durren and Kelly were also executors. The bequests in each case were specified because of faithfulness. Hancock, happily, was absent when the explosion occurred.

Mary J. Davis, a sister, was made administratrix, and she contested the bequest to Hancock. The Hennepin county court sustained the will, and today the supreme court affirms that finding. The estate was valued at nearly $200,000.

Because John E. Hanson slapped her in the face, the district court of Grant county gave Helen Bulbertson a verdict of $300. The defendant claimed the amount excessive, and appealed. The supreme court holds that the verdict was supported by the evidence, and that the amount was not excessive.

DOES NOT TAKE SERIOUS VIEW

Of Chinese Boycotts Threatened Against American Goods.

Detroit, June 30.—Charles Denby, diplomatic adviser to the viceroy of North China, who is visiting relatives here, does not take a serious view of Chinese riots or boycott against American goods. Mr. Denby, who was for several years in close touch with political and commercial life in China said:

"The Chinese government is not back of this agitation and it is not supported by the merchants. It is probable that Chinese students are making the trouble. The students of China like those of Russia, are a factor in politics, young hotheaded fellows, educated abroad and with advanced refor mideas.

"China is satisfied with the present exclusion laws. I believe that if we repealed those laws, China would pass an act forbidding the coolies to come to this country. The government has a contract with the big mine owners in South Africa to supply them with labor. The government gets a royalty on all the labor furnished and cannot get men enough. It has recruiting agents all over China now. The Chinese don't want their laborers to come to America. All China wants is a fair, just administration of laws that students and merchants be allowed to come in undisturbed and no discriminations."

TOWNS OPENED FOR TRADE.

Washington, June 30.—The state department has been advised by the American minister at Tokio that the Japanese military commander has by proclamation, opened to the Japanese merchants for trade and travel, the following Manchurian towns: Pashikao, Old Newchwang, Haicheng, Anshantien, Lyaonoang, Kalping, Seng, Wangcheng, Satmachi. The information was given the American minister that this action was purely a military measure.

GOOD LOVE STORY.

Iowan Wins Bride By Long Distance Phone.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 30.—Courted and engaged over a telephone wire, during which time the two principals had never seen each other, Miss Edith Lowdere of Aberdeen, S. D., and Charles E. Cole of Sheldon, Neb., met here for the first time to be married. And, true to their troth, plighted over chilly copper wires, the wedding ceremony was promptly performed.

The young man, in the operation of his grain-buying business at Sheldon, had occasion to call up Aberdeen over the long-distance telephone several times. Miss Lowdere was the operator there, and from this beginning their marriage resulted.

NOTICE

On account of inclement weather, the Annual Picnic of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste of Duluth, and L'Union Canadienne Francaise of Superior, to be held at Fond du Lac, Minn., June 25th, has been postponed to Sunday, July 2nd.

IOWA "STANDPATTERS"

Select Col. Palmer as Candidate For Governor.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 30.—Col. D. J. Palmer of Washington, Iowa, now serving his third term on the Iowa board of railroad commissioners, will be the "standpatters'" candidate for governor of Iowa. While this is true, it is also in the program to fall back upon George D. Perkins of Sioux City if the known radicalism of Palmer as a "standpatter" apparently will injure his prospects.

With the "standpat" crowd in Iowa must be considered the influential railroad interest. And this interest is entirely in accord with this program. The railroads will spare no efforts to put in the governor's chair a man who will be entirely friends to them.

Disclosures two weeks ago of the fact that Cummins and his friends would undertake to put forward John R. Lane of Davenport, a highly influential politician in Iowa, as gubernatorial nominee, has caused some alarm in the opposition camp. In the latter quarter it is being asserted that Lane will not allow the use of his name. The railroads realize that Lane is so high in the favor of Senator Allison that he could not be openly opposed in fair politics. But Lane has not indicated that he would not run. Neither he nor any other candidate will make a formal announcement for some time, but those who are interested in his candidacy are decidedly hopeful.

TWO MEN HAVE FLED.

One Leaves Moorhead and the Other Felton.

Moorhead, Minn., June 30.—P. August Eklund, secretary of the Clay County Land company of this city, has disappeared and it is reported that he is short in this accounts from $4,000 to $7,000.

It appears that three separate loans had been negotiated for Clay county farmers by Eklund with Ellsworth & Jones of Iowa City, Iowa, and Chicago. The money was forwarded by Ellsworth & Jones in December and February last, but the papers were never completed and after endeavoring for several months to secure a final settlement of the loans the Iowa company sent its attorney, Nagle & Nagle of Clarion, Iowa, to this city to investigate.

A brief investigation revealed a bad tangle in the affairs of the Clay County Land company, so bad, in fact, that Mr. Eklund lost heart and decided to leave rather than face a further investigation.

Friends of Mr. Eklund stoutly maintain that if he would return his affairs could be satisfactorily settled.

J. C. Evans, cashier of the State Bank of Felton, has left for parts unknown in company with a woman whom the citizens of Felton had once driven from the village on account of the alleged scandalous doings of the pair.

When driven from Felton the woman went to Fergus Falls, where she remained for a short time. On Monday evening she came to Fargo on the flyer, and between 11 and 12 that night Evans slipped away from Felton and drove to Fargo, and it is presumed they left on the early morning train for Winnipeg.

Mrs. Evans came to Moorhead today to consult Sheriff Boyer. Evans' accounts at the bank are reported as being perfectly straight.

NORWEGIANS MOBILIZING

Infantry Said to Be Moving Toward Swedish Boundary.

Stockholm, June 30, 4:15 p. m.—A telegram from Trondhjem to the Jamtlands Posten announces that almost the entire Norwegian army has been mobilized, and three classes of conscripts are armed and in training. On Tuesday night it is added, 2,000 infantry were moved towards the Swedish boundary. Sixty-five cars and two engines were sent south from Trondhjem to assist in the movements of troops.

SWINDLE AT LA CROSSE.

La Crosse, Wis., June 30.—Adolph Frederick, an officer of a local lumber company and a former member of the Minnesota legislature, committed suicide today by shooting. Frederick, who was 61 years old, was infatuated with a young saleswoman and to the ill success of his love affair is attributed the suicide.

Frederick was past grand chancellor commander of the grand lodge of Minnesota, Knights of Pythias.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

The following testimonial from an aged lady, near the century mark, shows the wonderful curative powers of SAFE CURE.

"I NEVER HAVE A PAIN."

"Gentlemen: I had a great deal of backache and sickness, and did not know that it was caused by the diseased condition of my kidneys and liver. As soon as my doctor found I had kidney trouble he prescribed WARNER'S SAFE CURE, and a few bottles completely cured me, and I feel like a woman thirty years younger. My kidneys, liver and bladder are in a healthy condition since I used 'SAFE CURE,' and now I never have a pain in my back. I am 92 years old, and enjoy the very best of health."

Rebecca Smith, Westfield, N. J.

Kidney disease, if neglected, quickly spreads and causes serious complications, such as Bright's Disease, Gravel, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, Indigestion, Urinary, Liver and Bladder troubles.

TEST YOUR KIDNEYS.

Let some morning urine stand twenty-four hours. If a sediment forms, or particles float about, or it's cloudy, your kidneys are affected and unable to perform their work, and no time should be lost in getting a bottle of SAFE CURE, the only absolute cure for all these diseases. If taken in time it will cure any case, no matter of how long standing.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is purely vegetable, contains no harmful drugs, is free from sediment and pleasant to take. It is prescribed and used by doctors themselves in the leading hospitals as the only perfect cure for all forms of disease of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood.

Sold by all drug stores, two sizes, 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

ANALYSIS FREE.

If after making this test you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine to the Medical Department, Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS

They are worthless, and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

AITKIN COUNTY FARMERS

Want Bede to Look Over Flooded Country.

Aitkin, Minn., June 30.—Congressman J. Adam Bede will be invited to come to Aitkin as soon as possible to hear the grievances of the people of Aitkin and the adjoining country against the management of reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi river, with a view of bringing the question of obtaining relief in the flooded districts to the attention of the federal government.

This was decided on yesterday at a mass meeting of the residents of Aitkin county. The meeting was not as largely attended by farmers as was expected, the reason assigned being they are engaged in moving their families and stock to high ground the district being inundated for miles around. Some of them had to swim their stock for half a mile, while rafts were used to move the women and children and household effects to safe places.

There was considerable discussion at the meeting as to what action to take to obtain relief, and various measures were sugegsted. In the end, however, a committee was appointed to invite Mr. Bede to come to Aitkin and look over the flooded country. Another committee was appointed to go before the county commissioners at their next meeting for the purpose of urging an investigation of the proposed cut-off ditch from Waldeck to Pine Knoll, nine miles across as the crow flies.

COURSE IS CLOSED

Graduates From Graded Schools Present Their Closing Program.

Those From Eastern Part of City Entertain Their Friends.

Gathered on the platform, singing "Hurrah for Our Banner," about 250 young students opened the program of yesterday evening which marked the graduation of the eighth grades of the public schools of the eastern part of the city into the high school.

The large high school auditorium was crowded to the doors by the friends who came to witness the exercises. The program was excellent, showing much careful drill and preparation. For the most part the girls wore white dresses, while the boys were cloathed in black suits.

The second number was a piano solo, "Nocturne," rendered in a very pleasing manner by Miss Madeline Miller of the Glen Avon school. Then followed three recitations, the first being by John Irvine of the Whittier school; the second, "The Parson's Conversion," by Elsie Mildred Wall or the Jefferson; and the third, "A Tribute to Columbus," by Marie Johnstone McDowell of the Lakeside school. Then came two Irish songs by the entire chorus, "Minstrel Boy" and "Killanrney."

Charles Bayard Cannon spoke for the Washington school, giving the declamation, 'The March of the Flag," in a convincing and forceful manner, and Helen Hawkes gave "Mrs. Lathrop's Love Affair" for the Endion school in a way that brought forth much applause. Miss Helen Clothier sang "Should He Upbraid," in a clear, soprano voice, and was very well received.

The pupils of the Jefferson school then filed upon the platform, the girls all in white and the boys in white shirt waists, black trousers, and wearing black ties, and presented an Indian club drill that, for precision and skill, could not be excelled. This was the only drill on the program.

Miss Edith Beatrice Herington of the Washington school gave a violin solo, that called forth the only encore of the evening. She has excellent execution and showed great proficiency. Leon Willard Cooley, representing the Franklin school, then spoke "Rubenstein's Piano Playing," keeping the whole house in laughter, and the chorus sang "Spring's Bright Glances" and "A Merry Life."

Supt. Denfeld presented the diplomas with a few words, saying in part:

"The school population has increased greatly during the past five or six years, being now about 12,000, and next year we expect that we shall have a still larger class.

"And now a word to the boys and girls. Take for your motto the words suggested to me by one of the speakers this evening, 'Sail on.' Continue striving and sail on, and on, and on, looking at the light ahead and seeking for more light. Success comes to the one who is faithful, true and just, and always independent in his or her work. If you can say when you have finished your four years' course in the high school that your work has been done independently, then will you be better fitted than ever to sail on."

ALASKA TOWN BURNED.

Seattle, Wash., June 30.—The town of Metlakahtla, on the southeastern coast of Alaska, has probably been destroyed by fire. Officers of the steamer Cottage City arrived from the North yesterday report that the place was burning the night of June 26. Metlakahtla is situated on an island near Ketchikan, and had a large number of buildings.

AMERICAN TO BECOME HEAD

Of the Guatemala Police and Is Now Studying Spanish.

Washington, June 30.—Albert Lamb, who was recently selected as the director general of the police of Guatemala, is busy every spare minute studying Spanish, so that he may be able to carry on the work of his new office.

Mr. Lamb sent in his resignation as hack inspector of the Metropolitan police department to Maj. Sylvester yesterday. His service in keeping Washington's cabbies within the law as regards license, etc., ends on June 30, and the next day, July 1, he will start for New Orleans, whence he sails for the new scene of his labors.

"I have formed no definite plans as to the reforms to be instituted in the police department of Guatemala," said Mr. Lamb yesterday, "nor can I do so until after arrival on the spot has given me an opportunity to study conditions. I have no intention of starting in from the beginning and upsetting the whole establishment, but will first secure records and the history of the Guatemala police department, and from that make a study of past conditions. That, with added knowledge gained from observation of the present conditions of affairs, will give me the necessary groundwork from which reorganizations, wherever necessary, can be ordered."

As his title would indicate, Mr. Lamb will be director general of the police of all Guatemala, including not only the capital, Guatemala City, but the whole country. His reports are to be made directly to the secretary of the interior.

Whether to have his family join him on the scene of his new labors Mr. Lamb will not determine until several months of life in the tropics have given him an opportunity to judge for their safety under the new climatic conditions. His wife, 6-year-old daughter and still younger child, now a baby of 3 short weeks, will probably remain in their present home at New Jersey avenue and R street northwest until early in the winter.

Mr. Lamb does not expect to return to Washington for two years, which is the life of his present contract, and probably not then if the contract is renewed.

After arrival in Guatemala he will endeavor to learn the present whereabouts of Gustave Joseph, who six years ago left the Washington police department to assume the position which Mr. Lamb will now hold. One rumor has it that Joseph resigned his position and returned to the states, and another that he is still in the country and is proprietor of a large coffee plantation in the interior.

MIGHTY TUNNEL

To Go Through the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Reno, Nev., June 30.—Work on the construction of eight miles of tunnel through the Sierra Nevada mountains from a point near Truckee is to begin the first thing next month. The final survey is now being made by a corps of engineers camped near Donner lake. This authoritative statement was made by a Southern Pacific official.

"You can state positively that the tunnel is a certainty," said the railroad man.

"There are to be five tunnels in all, and the main one will be five miles in length. The first one will start a short distance northwest of Donner lake and will strike directly into the mountains. The end of the series will be at the foot of Blue canyon, on the American river, and from there on the line of the road will follow its present course. Electric or compressed air engines are to be used to haul trains through the tunnels, as the stretch is too long for coal engines on account of the poisonous gases that are apt to accumulate.

"Just what distance this will save I cannot say, but it will be approximately forty miles. It will cut out thirty-two miles of snowsheds, and reduce the grade nearly 2,000 feet.

"The Southern Pacific has accepted the Western Pacific as an assured fact and is preparing to secure a crossing through the Sierras that will not be second in any particular to the famous Beckwith pass.

"No expense will be spared. It has been repeatedly stated that the expense of the Sierra tunnels will be not less than $25,000,000."

TRIAL ENDED

Of Case Started Twenty-Two Years Ago.

Media, Pa., June 30.—One of the oddest cases in the history of Delaware County court was on trial here for a debt of $20 contracted twenty-two years ago. In 1883 Samuel Montgomery contracted to build a house for William McCafferty for $1,400. The house was built, but Montgomery alleged that he had received only $1,380, and suit was brought for the balance with interest. Owing to the great length of time the interest amounted to much more than the principal debt.

The two old men caused much amusement by their efforts to talk against time and each other.

After occupying the entire afternoon the jury found a verdict of only $2.32 for the plaintiff.

CRIMINALS INCREASE

At State Prison at Very Rapid Rate.

St. Paul, June 30.—Some surprise was caused at the capitol yesterday by the announcement that the number of criminals at the state prison is increasing more than four times as fast as the population of the state. The population of the prison incerased 40.2 per cent since 1900, whereas the census officials say the increase throughout the state will be less than 10 per cent.

There are 707 prisoners at Stillwater, as compared with 634 a year ago, 553 in 1902 and 486 in 1900. All the cells at the prison are full and prisoners are compelled ti sleep in the corridors.

State officials wonder whether the marvelous incerase in the population of the prison is due to an increase in crime throughout the state or to a more efficient system of police protection in the various cities and villages.

"The fact that there are more inmates at Stillwater does not necessarily mean that crime is on the incerase in Minnesota, although the natural inference is that it is," said a state official. "There is no question that the system of detecting criminals is more efficient than ever before. This means, of course, that a larger percentage of the criminals are caught."

YOUNG BRIDE

Found By Detectives In a Coal Car.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 30.—Erie railroad detectives found a young bride in a coal car and took her to the police station.

"I'm going to my home in Conway, Penn., she sobbed. "My mother is dying. I did not have any money to buy a ticket, so I thought I would steal a ride."

She says she is 18 years old; that she had been married, but that her husband had deserted her. The railroad detectives got a pass for her and sent her to Conway. She refused to give her name.

BROKER NEEDED MONEY,

Swam Ohio River and Was Nearly Drowned.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 30.—"I wish I had $50," said William Bradburn of this city, who has been a broker all his life, and whose brother was one of the famous brokers of Chicago. "I want $50 so badly I'd swim the Ohio river for it," he continued. There was a hurried consultation among a number of friends to whom he had addressed the remark, and in a jiffy the amount of money was in the hands of John Newell, the well-known sporting man.

Not a bit daunted, Bradburn, accompanied by the entire crowd, went down to the bank of the river, disrobed and jumped in. He weighs 250 pounds, and he floundered around like an elephant. Then he started for the opposite shore. After dodging the river craft, he managed to land on the south side. He was completely exhausted and had swallowed about a gallon of water. He was rolled on a barrel for an hour before it was all out of him, then he was brought back in a boat, received an ovation, and was given the money.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

The following testimonial from an aged lady, near the century mark, shows the wonderful curative powers of SAFE CURE.

"I NEVER HAVE A PAIN."

"Gentlemen: I had a great deal of backache and sickness, and did not know that it was caused by the diseased condition of my kidneys and liver. As soon as my doctor found I had kidney trouble he prescribed WARNER'S SAFE CURE, and a few bottles completely cured me, and I feel like a woman thirty years younger. My kidneys, liver and bladder are in a healthy condition since I used 'SAFE CURE,' and now I never have a pain in my back. I am 92 years old, and enjoy the very best of health."

Rebecca Smith, Westfield, N. J.

Kidney disease, if neglected, quickly spreads and causes serious complications, such as Bright's Disease, Gravel, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, Indigestion, Urinary, Liver and Bladder troubles.

TEST YOUR KIDNEYS.

Let some morning urine stand twenty-four hours. If a sediment forms, or particles float about, or it's cloudy, your kidneys are affected and unable to perform their work, and no time should be lost in getting a bottle of SAFE CURE, the only absolute cure for all these diseases. If taken in time it will cure any case, no matter of how long standing.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is purely vegetable, contains no harmful drugs, is free from sediment and pleasant to take. It is prescribed and used by doctors themselves in the leading hospitals as the only perfect cure for all forms of disease of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood.

Sold by all drug stores, two sizes, 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

ANALYSIS FREE.

If after making this test you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine to the Medical Department, Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS

They are worthless, and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

AITKIN COUNTY FARMERS

Want Bede to Look Over Flooded Country.

Aitkin, Minn., June 30.—Congressman J. Adam Bede will be invited to come to Aitkin as soon as possible to hear the grievances of the people of Aitkin and the adjoining country against the management of reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi river, with a view of bringing the question of obtaining relief in the flooded districts to the attention of the federal government.

This was decided on yesterday at a mass meeting of the residents of Aitkin county. The meeting was not as largely attended by farmers as was expected, the reason assigned being they are engaged in moving their families and stock to high ground the district being inundated for miles around. Some of them had to swim their stock for half a mile, while rafts were used to move the women and children and household effects to safe places.

There was considerable discussion at the meeting as to what action to take to obtain relief, and various measures were sugegsted. In the end, however, a committee was appointed to invite Mr. Bede to come to Aitkin and look over the flooded country. Another committee was appointed to go before the county commissioners at their next meeting for the purpose of urging an investigation of the proposed cut-off ditch from Waldeck to Pine Knoll, nine miles across as the crow flies.

COURSE IS CLOSED

Graduates From Graded Schools Present Their Closing Program.

Those From Eastern Part of City Entertain Their Friends.

Gathered on the platform, singing "Hurrah for Our Banner," about 250 young students opened the program of yesterday evening which marked the graduation of the eighth grades of the public schools of the eastern part of the city into the high school.

The large high school auditorium was crowded to the doors by the friends who came to witness the exercises. The program was excellent, showing much careful drill and preparation. For the most part the girls wore white dresses, while the boys were cloathed in black suits.

The second number was a piano solo, "Nocturne," rendered in a very pleasing manner by Miss Madeline Miller of the Glen Avon school. Then followed three recitations, the first being by John Irvine of the Whittier school; the second, "The Parson's Conversion," by Elsie Mildred Wall of the Jefferson; and the third, "A Tribute to Columbus," by Marie Johnstone McDowell of the Lakeside school. Then came two Irish songs by the entire chorus, "Minstrel Boy" and "Killarney."

Charles Bayard Cannon spoke for the Washington school, giving the declamation, 'The March of the Flag," in a convincing and forceful manner, and Helen Hawkes gave "Mrs. Lathrop's Love Affair" for the Endion school in a way that brought forth much applause. Miss Helen Clothier sang "Should He Upbraid," in a clear, soprano voice, and was very well received.

The pupils of the Jefferson school then filed upon the platform, the girls all in white and the boys in white shirt waists, black trousers, and wearing black ties, and presented an Indian club drill that, for precision and skill, could not be excelled. This was the only drill on the program.

Miss Edith Beatrice Herington of the Washington school gave a violin solo, that called forth the only encore of the evening. She has excellent execution and showed great proficiency. Leon Willard Cooley, representing the Franklin school, then spoke "Rubenstein's Piano Playing," keeping the whole house in laughter, and the chorus sang "Spring's Bright Glances" and "A Merry Life."

Supt. Denfeld presented the diplomas with a few words, saying in part:

"The school population has increased greatly during the past five or six years, being now about 12,000, and next year we expect that we shall have a still larger class.

"And now a word to the boys and girls. Take for your motto the words suggested to me by one of the speakers this evening, 'Sail on.' Continue striving and sail on, and on, and on, looking at the light ahead and seeking for more light. Success comes to the one who is faithful, true and just, and always independent in his or her work. If you can say when you have finished your four years' course in the high school that your work has been done independently, then will you be better fitted than ever to sail on."

ALASKA TOWN BURNED.

Seattle, Wash., June 30.—The town of Metlakahtla, on the southeastern coast of Alaska, has probably been destroyed by fire. Officers of the steamer Cottage City arrived from the North yesterday report that the place was burning the night of June 26. Metlakahtla is situated on an island near Ketchikan, and had a large number of buildings.

AMERICAN TO BECOME HEAD

Of the Guatemala Police and Is Now Studying Spanish.

Washington, June 30.—Albert Lamb, who was recently selected as the director general of the police of Guatemala, is busy every spare minute studying Spanish, so that he may be able to carry on the work of his new office.

Mr. Lamb sent in his resignation as hack inspector of the Metropolitan police department to Maj. Sylvester yesterday. His service in keeping Washington's cabbies within the law as regards license, etc., ends on June 30, and the next day, July 1, he will start for New Orleans, whence he sails for the new scene of his labors.

"I have formed no definite plans as to the reforms to be instituted in the police department of Guatemala," said Mr. Lamb yesterday, "nor can I do so until after arrival on the spot has given me an opportunity to study conditions. I have no intention of starting in from the beginning and upsetting the whole establishment, but will first secure records and the history of the Guatemala police department, and from that make a study of past conditions. That, with added knowledge gained from observation of the present conditions of affairs, will give me the necessary groundwork from which reorganizations, wherever necessary, can be ordered."

As his title would indicate, Mr. Lamb will be director general of the police of all Guatemala, including not only the capital, Guatemala City, but the whole country. His reports are to be made directly to the secretary of the interior.

Whether to have his family join him on the scene of his new labors Mr. Lamb will not determine until several months of life in the tropics have given him an opportunity to judge for their safety under the new climatic conditions. His wife, 6-year-old daughter and still younger child, now a baby of 3 short weeks, will probably remain in their present home at New Jersey avenue and R street northwest until early in the winter.

Mr. Lamb does not expect to return to Washington for two years, which is the life of his present contract, and probably not then if the contract is renewed.

After arrival in Guatemala he will endeavor to learn the present whereabouts of Gustave Joseph, who six years ago left the Washington police department to assume the position which Mr. Lamb will now hold. One rumor has it that Joseph resigned his position and returned to the states, and another that he is still in the country and is proprietor of a large coffee plantation in the interior.

MIGHTY TUNNEL

To Go Through the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Reno, Nev., June 30.—Work on the construction of eight miles of tunnel through the Sierra Nevada mountains from a point near Truckee is to begin the first thing next month. The final survey is now being made by a corps of engineers camped near Donner lake. This authoritative statement was made by a Southern Pacific official.

"You can state positively that the tunnel is a certainty," said the railroad man.

"There are to be five tunnels in all, and the main one will be five miles in length. The first one will start a short distance northwest of Donner lake and will strike directly into the mountains. The end of the series will be at the foot of Blue canyon, on the American river, and from there on the line of the road will follow its present course. Electric or compressed air engines are to be used to haul trains through the tunnels, as the stretch is too long for coal engines on account of the poisonous gases that are apt to accumulate.

"Just what distance this will save I cannot say, but it will be approximately forty miles. It will cut out thirty-two miles of snowsheds, and reduce the grade nearly 2,000 feet.

The Southern Pacific has accepted the Western Pacific as an assured fact and is preparing to secure a crossing through the Sierras that will not be second in any particular to the famous Beckwith pass.

No expense will be spared. It has been repeatedly stated that the expense of the Sierra tunnels will be not less than $25,000,000.

TRIAL ENDED

Of Case Started Twenty-Two Years Ago.

Media, Pa., June 30.—One of the oddest cases in the history of Delaware County court was on trial here for a debt of $30 contracted twenty-two years ago. In 1883 Samuel Montgomery contracted to build a house for William McCafferty for $1,400. The house was built, but Montgomery alleged that he had received only $1,380, and suit was brought for the balance with interest. Owing to the great length of time the interest amounted to much more than the principal debt.

The two old men caused much amusement by their efforts to talk against time and each other.

After occupying the entire afternoon the jury found a verdict of only $2.32 for the plaintiff.

CRIMINALS INCREASE

At State Prison at Very Rapid Rate.

St. Paul, June 30.—Some surprise was caused at the capitol yesterday by the announcement that the number of criminals at the state prison is increasing more than four times as fast as the population of the state. The population of the prison increased 40.2 per cent since 1900, whereas the census officials say the increase throughout the state will be less than 10 per cent.

There are 707 prisoners at Stillwater, as compared with 634 a year ago, 553 in 1902 and 486 in 1900. All the cells at the prison are full and prisoners are compelled ti sleep in the corridors.

State officials wonder whether the marvelous incerase in the population of the prison is due to an increase in crime throughout the state or to a more efficient system of police protection in the various cities and villages.

"The fact that there are more inmates at Stillwater does not necessarily mean that crime is on the incerase in Minnesota, although the natural inference is that it is," said a state official. "There is no question that the system of detecting criminals is more efficient than ever before. This means, of course, that a larger percentage of the criminals are caught."

YOUNG BRIDE

Found By Detectives In a Coal Car.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 30.—Erie railroad detectives found a young bride in a coal car and took her to the police station.

"I'm going to my home in Conway, Penn., she sobbed. "My mother is dying. I did not have any money to buy a ticket, so I thought I would steal a ride."

She says she is 18 years old; that she had been married, but that her husband had deserted her. The railroad detectives got a pass for her and sent her to Conway. She refused to give her name.

BROKER NEEDED MONEY,

Swam Ohio River and Was Nearly Drowned.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 30.—"I wish I had $50," said William Bradburn of this city, who has been a broker all his life, and whose brother was one of the famous brokers of Chicago. "I want $50 so badly I'd swim the Ohio river for it," he continued. There was a hurried consultation among a number of friends to whom he had addressed the remark, and in a jiffy the amount of money was in the hands of John Newell, the well-known sporting man.

Not a bit daunted, Bradburn, accompanied by the entire crowd, went down to the bank of the river, disrobed and jumped in. He weighs 250 pounds, and he floundered around like an elephant. Then he started for the opposite shore. After dodging the river craft, he managed to land on the south side. He was completely exhausted and had swallowed about a gallon of water. He was rolled on a barrel for an hour before it was all out of him, then he was brought back in a boat, received an ovation, and was given the money.

WALLACE SCORED

Secretary Taft Bitter Against Chief Engineer of Isthmian Canal.

Says He Regards Money Above All Honor and Ethics.

Washington, June 30.—Charging him with changing his position over night "for mere lucre," and with being influenced "solely by personal advantage," Secretary Taft, in his conference in New York on June 16 with John F. Wallace, chief engineer of the Panama canal, after administering a severe rebuke to him, requested his resignation on the ground that "public interest requires that you tender your resignation at this moment and that you turn over the records of your office to the chairman of the commission."

This fact is disclosed in an official statement issued from the office of the secretary of war last night, reviewing the relations of Mr. Wallace with the war department and the commission since the latter body's reorganization last spring, quoting the several expressions of the chief engineer of his satisfaction with the entire arrangement, and then gives a verbal account of the conference between Secretary Taft and Mr. Wallace in New York, which concluded with the submission to Secretary Taft of Mr. Wallace's resignation. The statement issued last night concludes with the president's letter to Mr. Wallace, dated Cambridge, Mass., June 28, which reads:

"Your resignation as member and chief engineer of the isthmian canal commission, tendered in accordance with the request of Secretary Taft, which request under the circumstances had my entire approval, is hereby accepted, to take effect immediately. Very truly yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The statement shows that Mr. Wallace made no complaint against any of his associates.

Secretary Taft returned to Washington yesterday and went at once to his house, where he summoned Mr. Shonts, chairman of the isthmian canal commission, and Nelson Cromwell, secretary of the commission. They entered on the preparation of the statement, which was not ready for publication until late last night, the secretary meantime talking with the president over the long-distance telephone at Oyster Bay.

The statement was issued by direction of the president, its main features having been agreed on when Secretary Taft saw the president at Harvard university earlier in the week. Secretary Taft begins with the statement of Mr. Wallace to Chairman Shonts at the organization of the commission that he would be ready to accept the position of chief engineer at $25,000 a year and a residence on the isthmus, and enter on his duties on June 1. When the reorganization of the commission was under consideration in December, Mr. Wallace wrote Secretary Taft, suggesting that "if the president and yourself should decide at any time to reduce the commission to three members resident on the isthmus, the governor of the zone and the chief engineer should be members of this commission ex officio," adding that "an organization of this kind, with the chairman of the commission resident in Washington, to look after general and departmental matters, would no doubt work satisfactorily and be much less cumbersome than the present one."

In March Mr. Wallace asked for a personal interview before any radical change should be made in the governmental management of the commission, disclaiming that he wished additional emoluments, but "simply that no condition of affairs be created which will not necessarily interfere with my efficiency here."

Secretary Taft accordingly submitted to Wallace by cable the detailed plan of reorganization of the commission and received this reply by cable:

"Plan excellent. Satisfactory. Thanks."

The statement says Mr. Wallace expressed his unequivocal approval of the distribution of duties and powers as defined in the executive order, "especially those relating to the office of chief engineer," and during his subsquent stay of six weeks in the United States, he daily participated with his associates in carrying out the same. To the president and secretary of war and members of the commission and its counsel, he frequently expressed his unqualified approval and acceptance of the distribution of duties and powers as in the order embodied and particularly relating to himself, which required the performance by him of the duties of construction engineer on the isthmus.

Twelve days after his arrival on the isthmus, Mr. Wallace sent the following dispatch to Secretary Taft:

"Important complicated business matters which cannot be arranged by correspondence and which may affect my relations as chief engineer of the commission, necessitate immediate return to the United States to confer with you and others. An order from you to return for official consultation will prevent suspension on the part of the employes. Suggest Shonts remain until my arrival. Please answer."

Secretary Taft replied: "Secretary of war and Shonts in accordance with your request and without knowledge of circumstances that justify, approve your return for consultation with them at Washington."

Just before sailing Mr. Wallace wrote a letter to the secretary in which he referred to his intended visit to the United States, but gave no explanation of his personal plans.

When they met in New York the statement says Mr. Wallace said part of the interview would be personal to himself and part would concern the general canal work on the isthmus, to which Secretary Taft agreed.

The statement continues: "Mr. Wallace then said that a few days before he sent the cable to the secretary he received a cable dispatch from prominent business men in New York, asking him if he would consider a proposition for an important position in New York, and that he replied 'it was simply a question of terms and conditions,' and that the particulars came and it proved to be a definite offer of a position as president of a large holding company, controlling several other corporations, with certain stock benefits and other advantages to himself, which with the salary, made it equivalent to $50,000 a year; that he did not at once accept the offer but delayed it for a few days, in order to cable the secretary of war, during which the parties increased their proposal between ten and fifteen thousand dollars a year, making it equivalent to $60,000 or $65,000.

He stated that the position was an especially attractive one, and such as he had only hoped to obtain after the completion of the canal, and this only after years of further service on the isthmus; that the duties of the new position were especially agreeable and afforded opportunities to make money through investments, etc.; further, that the position was such a good one that he did not consider that he could decline it; that life on the isthmus was lonely and accompanied with risk to himself and wife, and was another reason for accepting a better offer; but that his new duties would not require all of his attention for the next two months, and that the parties had agreed that he could close up his canal work in the meantime, always provided it did not take him from New York to the isthmus. He referred to the president's order appointing the original commission and in which the president had stated that the commissioners would hold office subject to the due fulfillment of their duties, and he stated that this made the office subject to the termination of the president and that consequently he (Mr. Wallace) considered that the holder of the office had an equal right to retire from it at his option at any time.

Concluding, he stated that while he was thus severing his connection with the canal work, he was willing to make up his annual report and he would, if desired by the government, continue to serve as a commissioner; but not as chief engineer in charge of the construction work on the isthmus.

Mr. Wallace said that this was all he had to say in regard to his personal relation to the work and that he would then proceed to discuss generally the conditions on the isthmus if the secretary desired. Secretary Taft said he wished Mr. Wallace would continue his general statement. Mr. Wallace followed his personal statement with a discussion lasting half an hour regarding conditions on the isthmus and the work on the canal. When he finished Secretary Taft thus addressed him:

"Mr. Wallace: I am inexpressibly disappointed, not only because you have taken this step, but because you seem so utterly insensible of the significance of your conduct. You come with the bald announcement that you quit your task at a critical moment, on the eve of important work and in the midst of reorganization plans under which you accepted your position, with your department unperfected in organization and when you know, too, that my public duties call me to the Philippines for several months. I must be allowed to remind you that when you were employed by the commission a little over a year ago you were only receiving $15,000 per annum under your former position and that your salary was fixed at the sum demanded by yourself, $15,000. That was for constant service on the isthmus, where the construction work was to be performed and your services were required. You knew the risks to yourself and to your family, if they went with you, in the work you assumed an obligation to do. If you had not desired the position you need not have sought nor accepted it, but I understand that quite the contrary was the case. I can refer more positively to recent events within my own knowledge.

"When the president found it necessary to make a reorganization of the former commission, you were consulted in the frankest manner about every feature of the reorganization and were encouraged freely to express your opinions. Indeed, your voluntary suggestions from the isthmus embraced the proposal that you, yourself, be made a member of the commission and chief engineer on the isthmus. The substance of the plan of reorganization, as afterward embodied in the president's executive order of April 1, was cabled to you by me and you cabled me your fullest approval of it and your thanks for it included the appointment of yourself as a commissioner as you had solicited, and a member of the executive committee. The new plan of organization was warmly accepted and endorsed by you when you arrived in Washington, and you expressed your hearty approval of it in the most unequivocal manner, not only to the president and myself, but to members of the commission and its counsel, and just before sailing for the isthmus, you called upon us and voluntarily thanked me in the warmest terms for what had been done in the reorganization of the canal work and in the positions which had been given you.

"You co-operated for all these weeks in the work of reorganization and accepted the position assigned you under the president's order of April 1. The president and myself relied upon this fact in making up the plans, and the other members were selected with that in view.

"Now, within twelve days after your arrival upon the isthmus you send me a cable, which, read in the light of what you say today, signifies your practical acceptance of an offer of another position inconsistent with the performance of your duties on the isthmus. I am astonished that you should be so disregardful of the splendid opportunities of the position which would have made you famous the world over by the honorable performance of your duties of chief engineer.

"For mere luere you change your position over night without thought of the embarrassing position in which you place your government by this action, when the engineering force on the isthmus are left without a real head and your department is not perfected in organization; when the advisory board of engineers is to assemble under call of the president within two months and when I am departing for the Philippines on public duty. All this you know as well as I know it, but it has not had the least influence upon your action; you have thought of yourself and yourself alone. I consider that by every principle of honor and law you were bound to treat the subject differently. You have permitted the president and all of us to proceed in full confidence that you would perform the functions of chief engineer and now, in an hour, you drop your great duties and throw them back upon us as if it were a matter of no consequence, and all this for your personal advantage solely.

"Mr. Wallace, I do not agree with your ideas of your rights, nor with your ideas as to your duties. I do not agree that the president's original order giving him the right to discharge an unfaithful commissioner gave you the right to abandon your duties at a critical moment; but independently of that original order, you accepted the duties of chief engineer on the isthmus under the recent order of April 1, which was made in co-operation with you and to suit your views. More than this your duty in the premises are not measured by your legal contractural rights. It should be measured by the high obligation of a public officer with a sacred allegiance to the government it should be his honor and his pleasure to serve. You were, therefore, in honor bound by all that has preceded to continue to perform your duties upon the isthmus until such time, a year at least as would have afforded us reasonable opportunity to select a competent successor and prepare him for the great duties of that office.

"You make not the least complaint against your associates—superior or inferior—(I know of no possible ground for any). You are influenced solely by your personal advantage.

"Great fame attached to your office, but also equal responsibility, and now you desert them in an hour. Even from a standpoint of policy, you are making a profound mistake. If you could withdraw from your new arrangements, which I do not suggest, I could have no confidence (since I know now your conception of duty) that you would not in the future repeat the same at a moment even more critical when the consequences might be even more embarrassing and injurious to the government.

"Under these circumstances, Mr. Wallace, and with great personal pain and disappointment, I am bound to say that I consider the public interest requires that you tender your resignation at this moment, and turn over the records of your office to the chairman of the commission."

Mr. Wallace replied that, "he was deeply disturbed at the view taken by the secretary; that he had considered that he had a right to retire when he chose, but that he was desirous of talking it all over and making some arrangement whereby the government could use his services in some capacity."

The secretary answered: "Further talk is useless. It would be to dicker. I cannot dicker on such a grave subject. I have assumed that you had given this subject the greatest consideration and you have approached it deliberately and stated to me your action in set and definite terms."

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK.

Food Eaten Is Worthless Unless Digested—Some Stomachs Must Have Help.

Food taken into the stomach which, from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them, they must be given less work; in other words they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a-year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is, of course, not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

REMARKABLE SCORE

In Trap Shooting Made By Barber of Iowa.

Indianapolis, June 30.—With only Burton Call of Montpelier, Ohio, who has broken 79 of 80 targets in a position to dispute his title, to the diamond medal in the grand American handicap, the principal event of the National Trap Shooters' tournament which is being held under the auspices of the Indianapolis Gun club, R. R. Barber of Pawlina, Iowa, who completed his 100 targets with a score of 99, was high gun when the contestants were called off the field on account of darkness. In the event that Call has a perfect score in the remaining series of twenty targets the score will be tied. Barber's shooting was the feature of the day.

PECULIAR FIGHT

Between Editor and Chief of Police of New Orleans.

Claimed Thieves Were Imported to Get Reform Evidence.

New Orleans, June 30.—The fight now on between the chief of police and the police force on one side and Dmoinic C. O'Malley, editor and owner of the Daily Item, on the other, is, perhaps, the most peculiar and extraordinary that has ever been waged in the United States.

The newly-elected chief of police, E. S. Whitaker, is a personal enemy of O'Malley. O'Malley has attacked him in print ever since he owned a newspaper.

Once Whitaker, wounded to the quick by an editorial, met O'Malley in the street and shot him down, but as he lay on the ground granted his supplication to spare his life.

Afterwards one of O'Malley's reporters went into Whitaker's office and shot him in the left arm and side. The reporter alleged an objectionable attitude on the part of Whitaker towards his sister.

The jury acquitted the reporter, as is an established custom in such cases in this city.

O'Malley has been arrested twice during the past month, once on the charge of conspiracy to assassinate Chief of Police Whitaker and to import and protect pickpockets and thieves, and once for criminal libel against the mayor, Martin Behrman.

The grounds for the first two charges which led up to the first arrest were as follows:

"O'Malley had published in his paper that he had imported the thieves, and that they had participated in several robberies, for the purpose of collecting evidence, which, he alleged, he wished to use in bringing about a purification of the police system.

O'Malley for many years has supported the reform movement through his paper. He was indicted in 1891 for taking an active part in the assassination of Chief of Police Hennessey, which assassination at that time led up to the Mafia riots and the killing of twelve men.

The grand jury indictment alleged that he took the lead of the work of influencing the jury and had the lights turned down at the street corner where the assassination took place. At the time of the indictment for complicity in the Hennessey murder he fled for his life. After a short absence he returned to the city, and managed to "smooth things over," as at that time he had, as he is alleged to have now, and as he has had all the time since, strong friends in the district attorney's office and in the various courts.

Whitaker has charged in the opposition newspapers and otherwise that O'Malley's enmity towards him began when he (Whitaker) was a police judge, and he refused to protect some lottery concerns, in which O'Malley was alleged to be interested. Whitaker alleges that O'Malley offered to pay him to protect his lotteries, but says he refused to take any money. He avers O'Malley has continually hounded him since.

"O'Malley himself says that he paid Whitaker's assessment when he went into politics, but, being disappointed in the man, ceased to support him.

The charge of criminal libel on which O'Malley was arrested was preferred by Mayor Martin Behrman, when the Item said O'Malley had saved Behrman from prosecution under a felony charge. Behrman said he would allow O'Malley the fullest opportunity to explain how he had performed this feat of salvation, but this has not been done.

In an extraordinary answer to the charge made against him, O'Malley published last Sunday what was virtually a challenge to Chief of Police Whitaker to mortal combat. He said he and Whitaker had met once when he was unarmed, but that if they met when both were armed the chances of escape would be about equal.

O'Malley also charges that the Times-Democrat, Picayune and States, three reputable newspapers in the English language, conspired to put Whitaker into office, knowing that Whitaker was his personal enemy, for the purpose of knocking him (O'Malley) out of the field.

The editors of the three newspapers do not deny that they agreed to support Whitaker, whom two of them formerly opposed. They say now they have been convinced that their former opposition was due to a misunderstanding of Whitaker's character.

They charge daily in editorials that O'Malley is using his paper to hamper the enforcement of the law and to terrify the police into doing his will.

Walter Smalley, an editorial writer who has been arrested and indicted with O'Malley, suffers because of his association with O'Malley. He is charged with embezzling money which he obtained by drawing a draft on his wife and with purloining a railroad ticket. These two charges are yet to be tried. His principal connection with the O'Malley case is that he is jointly indicted with O'Malley for libeling George Denegre, a lawyer here. Smalley's biting paragraphs in the Item's editorial page simply cut both ways and that is all there is to it. No better paragrapher has ever written in this city, and his enemies have felt the prick of his trenchant pen.

The various charges are now all in court. The trials of the case will take up much time. It is intended that they shall begin immediately.

Mayor Behrman has now been in office since April. He has said he wishes to purge the city of graft and vice, which abound.

DENOUNCED DAUGHTER

For Wedding Millionaire Who Divorced His Wife.

Chicago, Ill., June 30.—A quiet wedding here at the Plymouth Congregational church united Evelyn Wilkinson, aged 20, to Nathan W. Stowell, aged 55, a millionaire of Los Angeles, Cal. Following the wedding, which they did not attend, Prof. William C. Wilkinson of the Chicago university, and wife, wrote letters of condolence to Mrs. Stowell, the divorced wife of their son-in-law, in which they bitterly denounced their daughter for marrying a man who cast off one wife to wed another. Mrs. Wilkinson wrote:

"You cannot imagine the depth of darkness under which we are compelled to live the remainder of our lives. We would infinitely have preferred laying her in the grave. If wide publicity in the papers will contribute to the vindication of the injured wife we are willing to suffer it all."

Prof. Wilkinson wrote: "Not even you can more heavily reprobate the perfidy of my daughter than does her own father."

The Wilkinsons and their daughter visited Mexico fourteen months ago, and on arriving at Los Angeles it was discovered that Evelyn had contracted smallpox. Urgent business took the father and mother to Chicago, and there came to nurse the daughter, Mrs. Stowell, who was immune from the disease. Thus Stowell met her.

The actions of the girl and Mr. Stowell were so circumspect as never to have in any way attracted the wife's attention, and so innocent was the wife of all suspicions concerning her guest, that even when her husband's attorney served the notice of an application for divorce, she never for a moment suspected that there was any intrigue in the matter. She could not understand it at all, and said to her attorney, after thinking it over: "Well, if he wants to be rid of me, let him go." And so it was that a property settlement was made by which Mrs. Stowell received about $150,000.

The two, in spite of the difference in age, loved, and after Evelyn went home she corresponded with him. Her father discovered this, and also that Stowell, in Texas, had started divorce proceedings. He could not move his daughter's resolution, and the divorce was granted, but he told her she could never visit him again. Stowell's wife was ignorant of the divorce until about the time it was granted.

DEFICIT $24,500,000,

According to Treasury Statement For Past Year.

Washington, June 30.—The following statement of the operations of the treasury for the fiscal year ending June 30, has been made public:

"The government fiscal year ends Friday. The treasury deficit for the year will be approximately $24,500,000. This amount is subject to a slight but not material change. The last report of the secretary of the treasury estimated a deficit for this fiscal year of $18,000,000. The actual deficit exceeds this by six and one-half millions.

"The receipts for the fiscal year have been about $543,000,000, two millions more than the receipts estimated by the secretary of the treasury in his last report. The expenditures have been $567,500,000, or about $8,500,000 more than was estimated. The month of June just closing shows a handsome surplus of nearly $13,000,000 and reduced the deficit from $37,000,000 to $24,500,000."

TIN BANK NOT WATERPROOF

Neither Was Henry Gruber's Money, and So It Rotted.

Oto, Io., June 30.—"Every man his own banker" was not successful in the case of Henry Gruber of Oto, Monona county, who buried $1,400 in an old can, and when he went to dig up the wealth the other day, found it a mass of rotten paper.

When the Oto bank failed a few years ago it was a cause for much prejudice against banking institutions generally and many persons have since refused to use this method of saving their money. This was the case of Henry Gruber, a prosperous farmer, eight miles east of this place.

Henry had heard all about the Oto bank affair and decided that no bank would ever close its doors on any of his hard-earned coin.

Accordingly he became a devotee of the tin-can depository and many a shekel he let go into the depths of an old rusty tomato can, buried under the roots of an aged apple tree.

Gruber prospered, and recently, when he thought he had enough money to invest in a farm in the north part of Woodbury county, he went to dig up his reputed wealth. The can was there all right, but the spring rains had entered before him and the money, mostly paper, was a moldy, rotten mass, which no one would ever suspect of having been a circulating medium of this nation. Mr. Gruber has sent the whole mass, some $1,400 to the treasury department, in the hopes of having it redeemed in good gold dollars.

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

KIDNAPING OF BRIDE

No Joke, So Husband Demands Arrest of the Jokers.

While Husband Is Unlocking Door, They Seize His Wife.

Kansas City, Mo., June 30.—John D. Schwitzgebel and Miss Elizabeth Oldham were married Wednesday night at the home of Judge Henry N. Ess, 2416 Brooklyn avenue. An automobile, which was to have conveyed them to the residence of J. J. Foster, 2001 Woodland avenue, after the ceremony, was found to have been tampered with by someone, so a carriage was called.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwitzgebel left Judge Ess' house, followed by another carriage containing these guests at the wedding: Thomas Reed, son of Homer Reed; Leo Crabbs, son of Frank D. Crabbs, president of the Union Bank Note company; Charles Schwitgebel, brother of the bridegroom; Waterman Stone, Jesse Opperheimer and George Oppenheimer. Another carriage followed that in which the young men rode. It carried the bridemaids.

At Mrs. Foster's house, Mr. Schwitzgebel found, to his dismay, that the key given him would not fit the front door.

Leaving the bride on the front steps Mr. Schwitzgebel went to the back door to try the lock there. While he was absent the young men who had followed seized the bride and forced her, laughing and protesting into a carriage and took her to the Hotel Baltimore, where they ordered supper and prepared to await the arrival of the bridegroom.

Meanwhile the bridegroom, for whom the young people were waiting, was having the most exciting time of his life. Suspecting that some of his friends were trying to amuse themselves at his expense he searched around the house and then, looking north on Woodland avenue, saw the retreating carriage and knew that his bride had been kidnaped.

Mr. Schwitzgebel did not take the matter as a joke. The first thing he did, after realizing that his bride had been taken from him, was to notify the police. Special instructions were issued to all substations ordering the mounted police and other policemen to watch for the fleeing carriage. In a few minutes word reached Mr. Schwitgebel that the runaways had gone to the Hotel Baltimore and were there eating supper.

"I'll not go after them," said the young husband, wrathfully. I'll send an officer to arrest those fellows. I'll teach them a thing or two."

The kidnapers and their prisoner reached the Hotel Baltimore about 10 o'clock and were shown to the reception room while waiters hastened to the kitchen with orders for a dinner. The young Mrs. Schwitzgebel tried as events as happily as possible, but as time passed and her husband did not come she became nervous.

"If you insist on keeping me here," she said while waiting for supper to be served, "for goodness sake give me something to eat; I'm famished."

"Terrible, isn't it?" said one of the young men, "for a bridegroom to disappear this day, leaving you here with us."

"Wait till you meet Jack," said the bride, "you'll see the joke all right. Where is the supper?"

In the midst of the supper, indeed when only a few of the first good things had been eaten, one of the party looked at his watch. His face grew grave. "Boys," said he, "it's getting late. We'd better take her back." The bride had been unable to affect carelessness any longer; tears were rolling over her cheeks.

In an instant the party was out, a carriage was called and the start made for Mr. Foster's home. At about the same moment John Schwitzgebel, becoming genuinely alarmed, was starting down town in an automobile. He wore no hat; he was in dead earnest. A brother of Mr. Foster accompanied him. The two parties met on the Paseo, near Eighteenth street. There were a few hasty words, explanations and some tears from the rescued bride. A transfer was made and Mr. and Mrs. Schwitzgebel returned to their temporary home. Patrolman Quinn and Patrolman Malloy and Detective Orford reached the Hotel Baltimore ten minutes after the diners had left.

"It's all right now," said Mr. Schwitzgebel, when seen at Mr. Foster's home about midnight. "They played a pretty rough prank on me. If the police had reached the hotel in time I'd have had all of them arrested. I'm glad now that it turned out all right."

ONE PUNCH OF AN ATHLETE

Sent Millionaire Shaw to the Floor For Keeps.

Chicago, June 30.—E. B. Shaw, millionaire stock broker, automobilist and well known about town, was severely beaten in the Monroe street entrance of the Palmer house for offering an alleged insult to Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of the lawyer and orator and former congressman from Washington.

The trouble occurred at the hour when the hotel guests were passing through the entrance on their way to the theaters, and it caused considerable excitement.

Mr. and Mrs. "Ham" Lewis had just left the dining room of the hotel and were in the vestibule when Shaw entered from the street. Mr. Lewis preceded his wife a few steps to hail a cabman, when his wife called to him to protect her from Shaw, who was impeding her progress.

Mr. Lewis returned and seized Shaw, who struck the attorney a violent blow in the face.

The loud voices and oaths of Shaw attracted the attention of numerous persons, who thronged about the party. At this moment David Neill, an athletic student, advanced toward Shaw just as the latter was about to strike Mr. Lewis for the second time. Neill led with his left straight from the shoulder and landed on the point of Shaw's jaw.

Shaw dropped to the floor as if hit with a sledge hammer and blood streamed from a cut inflicted by a diamond ring worn by Neill. Two friends, whose names could not be learned, picked Shaw up and carried him into Gale & Block's drug store, adjoining the entrance.

Shaw was dazed and appeared to be seriously injured. A cab was summoned, and, accompanied by friends, he was taken to his home, Ashland boulevard and Polk street.

In the meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Lewis had left the scene and gone to a theater. According to the stories of witnesses, Shaw had deliberately jostled against Mrs. Lewis and made some remark in an undertone which caused her to appeal to her husband for portection from the man, who was a complete stranger to her.

This is borne out by the statement of Mr. Neill, who said the startled scream of a woman first attracted his attention to the hotel entrance.

"Mr. Shaw is a big man and Mr. Lewis is much smaller. I went for Shaw and simply knocked him down," explained Mr. Neill. "My ring cut his face, but my blow was strong enough to all but knock him out. I know Shaw to be a curbstone statue and an ogler of women, who ought to have been run in by the police over and over again. I do not regret having attacked him as I did."

CONTROL OF THE PACIFIC

May Cause Future Trouble Between Britain and United States.

London, June 30.—During the discussion of the naval estimates in the house of commons yesterday, Edmund Robertson (Liberal), a former civil lord of the admiralty, asked for further information concerning the new battleships. Mr. Prettyman, secretary of the admiralty, replied lengthily, claiming the highest efficiency for the navy under the new scheme. He declined for strategic reasons to give particulars of the new battleships, but said Great Britain proposed to lead and not follow other nations in naval construction.

Sir John Colomb (Conservative) said he did not agree with the opposition speakers in saying the time had come when the naval expenditure might be reduced. On the contrary, Sir John said, everything pointed to the necessity for keeping up the naval strength of Great Britain. The real question now was, "Who is going to rule the Pacific?" President Roosevelt said the United States intended to rule the Pacific. The United States was giving every sign that this was her intention by the extraordinary increase in her naval power.

Sir John declared that in the not distant future questions would arise in the Pacific affecting the policy of Japan, the United States and Great Britain. He asked what Great Britain was doing against the time when her interests ceased to be identical with those of the two great powers whose naval bases were in the Pacific. No one believed that the Anglo-Japanese alliance would last forever. Great Britain looked with dread and horror to a rupture with the United States, but she could not shut her eyes to the fact that ruptures had occurred between the most friendly nations. Sir John asked what the government was doing to remind Canada and the British colonies of the great responsibilities which they would incur when their seaports and immense interests in the Pacific were imminently threatened.

Secretary Prettyman, replying, said Great Britain did not desire the mastery of any sea beyond securing an equal opportunity for British trade interests without fear or favor.

With regard to the new battleships, Mr. Pettyman said the lessons taught by the naval warfare in the Far East were closely taken to heart by the admiralty.

THREE PERSONS PERISH IN MISSOURI HOTEL FIRE.

Licking, Mo., June 30.—Three persons perished in the burning of the Collier hotel here. The dead:

MRS. V. L. SHELP of Rolla, Mo.
INFANT DAUGHTER.
EMMEL STILCER, Willow Springs, Mo.

The cause of the fire is unknown. The hotel was a two-story frame structure and burned quickly.

TRIBUTE EXTENDED BY HIS HOME CITY

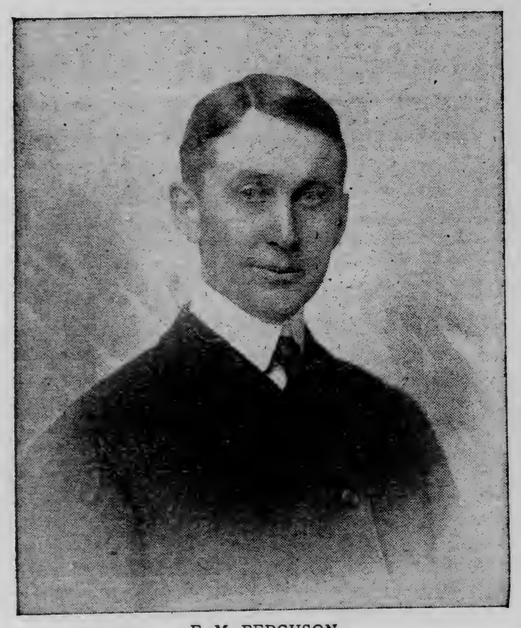
Duluth Citizens Show Appreciation of E. M. Ferguson's Efforts.

Other Cities Send Guests---Eloquent Responses to Toasts.



E. M. FERGUSON,
Guest of Honor at Banquet at Commercial Club.

The city of Duluth last evening through eighty-five of its representative citizens, business men and jobbers, paid E. M. Ferguson a high tribute of respect and admiration for his splendid efforts in the past few years toward bringing about an abolition of the private car line evil in this country.

Not only was Duluth represented at the banquet tendered Mr. Ferguson at the Commercial club, but among the guests were prominent business men or jobbers from other cities. Among these were I. W. Carey, Cincinnati, Ohio; George D. Brandenburg, Gadsden, Tenn.; Frank Cassidy, St. Paul; C. C. Emerson, St. Paul; Edmund Twohy, Superior; Fred Mason, St. Paul, secretary of the National Grocers' association, and A. T. Rock, Superior, secretary of the Wisconsin Grocers' association.

The banquet was a decided success and a delightful affair in every particular and reflected a considerable degree of credit on the friends of Mr. Ferguson who have been looking after the arrangements and especially Simon Clark, who has been one of the prime movers in the event and who was last evening congratulated by many on his success. The banquet was entirely informal in nature, very few of those participating in the toasts having been given any previous intimation of what they were to talk about, yet everybody called on rose to the occasion and the speeches were all appropriate and timely and much enjoyed.

The feast began shortly after 7:30 o'clock, when the doors to the dining room were thrown open and the guests took their places to the strains of music from a stringed orchestra. The tables were decorated with ferns and cut flowers and the service was excellent. Of the menu much might be said of the excellent judgment of those in charge. The menu cards were very handsome affairs, the front page containing an excellent portrait of Mr. Ferguson with a few lines stating that the banquet was tendered E. M. Ferguson by his friends and admirers for his benefit in behalf of the abolition of the private car line evil.

After a few appropriate words from Toastmaster E. L. Millar, the company was seated and the feasting began.

The toasts for the evening began about 9:30 o'clock when Toastmaster E. L. Millar opened the program with a short talk in his usual happy vein and read a few of the letters of regret from Congressman J. Adam Bede, Senators Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp and prominent commission men and jobbers from all over the country.

A smile and then a laugh of appreciation at the humor of the thing followed Mr. Millar's serious announcement that he had received a cablegram from Marseilles, France, which read:

"I regret very much that I am unable to be present.

"J. OGDEN ARMOUR."

"There are two great forces of enlightenment in this country and in the world today," declared Toastmaster Millar when opening the program of speeches for the evening. "These are the press and the pulpit. As a representative of one I bow in humble reverence to the other and take great pleasure in introducing to you Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, who will respond to the toast 'Edwin M. Ferguson, Our Guest.'"

• • •

Mr. Mooney was greeted with applause as he rose to speak. He said:

"I feel greatly honored for two reasons, because of the presence of this gentleman, our guest, and because of the presence of this distinguished body of our citizens.

"Although James G. Blaine did not live to see it, we are living in an age where we have an example of that splendid Americanism, the revival of which that great statesman had in mind. Many of the public speakers of the day are telling people that the country is going to the bow-wows, but I consider that in fact of these things coming to the front and the manliness in developing to handle them fearlessly and ably, that it is the best evidence of the revival of the Americanism that James G. Blaine had in mind.

"I am inclined to be the best kind of an optimist rather than a pessimist. We have been growing as a nation at a rapid pace, and in consequence there have been left unnoticed many things. We have a lot of magnificent dummies in official positions in this country, and expect them to do things they have neglected and we are now trying to correct those things neglected."

Mr. Mooney referred to President Roosevelt's example of Americanism and eulogized the nation's executive in words that brought a generous round of applause.

"He is the type," said Mr. Mooney, "of American citizenship which is the zenith in our country at the present day—a typical American citizen who is doing what an American citizen should do and who is doing it speedily.

"As we look at the things that are being accomplished in Oregon, Philadelphia, St. Louis and New York, we can form some estimate of the latent power in America to handle malefactors and put them where they belong—in the penitentiary."

Mr. Mooney then discussed the tendency toward higher prices of the necessities of life, and declared it was not in the mind of the Master that the produce of the land should be so taxed as it has of late. He said that when he inquired into the conditions bringing it about he was simply appalled at what he discovered, that the people are positively being held up till the price on the necessities of life become a burden of taxation to poor people.

"At no time in the history of the American nation," continued Mr. Mooney, "has there been a time when there was the lack of some leader of the people against the forces of oppression.

"When facing this problem before me I felt a thrill of pride when I realized that our own townsman, Edwin M. Ferguson, was to be one of the men to enter that fight so splendidly equipped in experience, as a leader armed with facts not to be gainsaid.

"When this young man went before the committeemen at Washington, they found a man who had no political ax to grind, but who was a leader of the hosts of God's common people in the country to make that fight which he did, and the results of which are known broadcast over this country. From Maine to the Golden Gate and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf everybody is talking of Edwin M. Ferguson.

"So we here tonight honor him and express, though in a feeble way, our testimonial of our regard for him. I feel that I voice the sentiment of thousands of people in this city when I say let us hold up his hands. Without regard to political creed or anything else, but as good citizens, let us sustain him in this fight until every railroad and every trust in this country is whipped into line by the same splendid Americanism shown in the past, and then show those men back of them the better way. Then will come a day when the poor people can get the same railroad rates as does J. Ogden Armour. Furthermore, the poor people in this land may then eat the things that grow from the land without oppressive taxation.

"So I say, all honor to Mr. Ferguson."

Mr. Mooney's every mention of Mr. Ferguson was received with tremendudous applause, and at the close of his speech the company rose and drank a toast to the speaker, and the subject of his toast.

Edgar Eva sang two songs, and Toastmaster Millar introduced Julius H. Barnes who had been asked to speak from the standpoint of the grower and shipper.

Mr. Barnes said he believed most of those present had been attracted there by the Anglo-Saxon sense of fair play. The company was present, he said, to honor a man who, for five years, has been waging a fight against the private car line practice, and during much of that time with no support.

Mr. Barnes touched on the transportation question, and said that during the past twenty years the cost of transporting grain from Duluth to a foreign market has been reduced from 16 to 20 cents per bushel to about 5 cents a bushel. Transportation charges, he held, are an indirect tax on every consumer, and the most acute minds in the trade today are considering the problem of furnishing flour at a cheaper price by securing cheaper transportation charges. Mr. Barnes said that so long as the transportation charge is natural and fairly adjusted there will be no complaint. He held that every transportation charge, which is an unlawful charge on farm products, is a check to industrial growth of the country, that it is even more, even to the extent of being a criminal charge. A tax on the farmer is a tax on so many thousand homes, that it is almost immediately felt.

"What we need," continued Mr. Barnes, is a man such as we have gathered here tonight to do honor, one whom we can trust; one of resource, judgment and courage, who feels he is fighting for the rights of all of us.

"I am proud to add my endorsement to so able a lieutenant of Captain Roosevelt—Lieutenant E. M. Ferguson."

Mr. Barnes' talk and its trite closing remarks were heartily applauded.

• • •

State Senator George R. Laybourn, was the next speaker, after a serio-humorous introduction by Toastmaster Millar.

Senator Layborn said that while Mr. Ferguson was down at Washington to secure national railroad legislation, the influence of the contest he was waging had its effect on the state railroad bill pending at St. Paul, and where the members of the legislature were in close touch with his efforts. He said that during the last session more than fifty bills affecting railroad rates were introduced, some for improper or for personal motives, and some for meritorious reasons. He treated briefly of three which are of interest to the people here, and relating to the control of rates, and the power in the matter that has been placed in the hands of the railroad commission. He explained that the commission has full power and authority to demand and see the books of any and all railroad companies doing business in the state, and no railroad manager can refuse access to them. He also explained that where there is a grievance over rates, the state may be substituted for the individual bringing the matter to the attention of the interstate commerce commission.

"I believe," said Senator Laybourn, "that the legislature of this state has responded to public sentiment to as large as extent as has any other legislature in the various states of the Union to the wishes of constituency. There are only two states where the legislature has given the commission greater power than has Minnesota. With the public back of the commission there is sure to be an enforcement of the laws so they will not become dead letters. I am glad to honor a man who has not only been able to stir up matters at Washington, but who has given the legislature of his state an idea of what should be done in Minnesota."

• • •

C. C. Emerson introduced by Toastmaster Millar as one of the prominent commission merchants of St. Paul, was the next speaker.

Mr. Emerson's remarks were brief. He said he was glad to add his testimonial of appreciation of Mr. Ferguson and that while Duluth has come to be producer, her citizen the city must not forget that Mr. Ferguson is also a Minnesotan and that Minnesota has the record of always putting forth the best.

Power is sold by H. Hare, W. G. Joerns of this city, whose recent article in the Arena, relative to railroads and rates, attracted much attention, was introduced to toast "The Press."

Mr. Joerns said many complimentary and encouraging things about the press, characterizing it as one of the most important institutions in the country. He declared that it is an avenue for much good and much evil and that no persons, perhaps, but those who are foreign born can best appreciate the advantages of living in a country where the press is at its best.

Mr. Joerns said the press is a molder of public opinion and in the case at bar its influence has been exercised in a good cause. The speaker then branched out to some little extent and told why Mr. Ferguson has pushed to the front in the private car line fight, and the qualities that have been made him a determined fighter.

Former Mayor T. W. Hugo followed Mr. Joerns with a comprehensive talk along the line of what the public affairs committee of the commercial club is doing and pledging its best support to Mr. Ferguson in the fight into which he is now entered.

A. T. Rock of Superior brought the greetings of the people from across the bay and as secretary of the Wisconsin Grocers' association, he tendered the appreciation of that organization to Mr. Ferguson for his efforts to abolish the private car line. Mr. Rock counseled cautious procedure and urged that while an attempt is made to get legislation unfavorable to corporation interests the people should bear in mind their own shortcomings and vices, and be fair and just to corporations and to themselves.

• • •

Fred. Mason, secretary of the National Grocers 'association, was the next speaker. Mr. Mason stated that he was leaving Minnesota today for the city of New York, where he will henceforth reside. It is understood that he has been tendered and has accepted the position at New York of assistant manager for the Diamond Match company's interests.

Mr. Mason's talk was lively, interesting and highly appreciative of Mr. Ferguson's services in the interest of the business men and the jobbers as well as for the people at large, the consumers. He said that everywhere he has traveled over this country the merchants are asking, "who is this man Ferguson of Duluth?"

Mr. Ferguson, he said, is more than a Duluthian, or a Minnesotan. He is an American citizen. He is a man who never made a misstatement and who has faced some of the keenst minds in the country and came out with flying colors and the people cannot help admiring that kind of a man.

"You can't buy him. That's the kind of a man E. M. Ferguson is," declared Mr. Mason and the cheers and applause that greeted the statement indicated that the company was in hearty accord. As he concluded, Mr. Mason asked Mr. Ferguson to stand, while he said:

"Mr. Ferguson, here is the hand of Simon Clark, president of the Minnesota Grocers' association, the hand of George Ebert, president of the Duluth Grocers' association and 177 men back of him, the hand of President John M. Green and Secretary Fred. Mason of the National Grocers' association and the hand of 192,000 grocers in the United States back of us. God bless you."

This eloquent testimonial brought every man present to his feet and the applause was prolonged.

• • •

After a solo by W. A. Cleland, Toastmaster Millar introduced the chief guest of the evening, the undaunted champion of the people against the private car line evil, Edwin M. Ferguson.

Mr. Ferguson's reception, as he arose to speak was an ovation that lasted some moments. While visibly affected by so enthusiastic an expression of appreciation from his friends, Mr. Ferguson spoke earnestly and without any seeming nervousness although he declared that it was harder to face his friends than talk before the congressional committee.

He expressed the deepest appreciation for the splendid exhibition of the friendship and loyalty of Duluth citizens and others and declared that the harness in the present fight has hardly yet been fitted to him.

"We have listened to many good things about me and my work," said Mr. Ferguson, "and may live up to the standard that has been set for me. I little dreamed that this honor of which any citizen would be proud, would ever be mine and it is one to which I may not be entitled.

"I pledge you that my future actions and efforts will be directed toward strengthening the confidence you have reposed in me. This recognition of honest effort will be ever green in my memory and will be an inspiration to me to be faithful to the trust assigned me even though temptations might come."

He characterized the private car line business as "one of the most damnable practices that ever cursed the American people," and told how he came to enter the fight against the practice some five years ago and has since watched it grow to a question of national importance.

This gathering has a significance to my mind," continued Mr. Ferguson. "Behind the mere honor to me is the feeling that the public has at once been awakened to the danger of this system which unchecked is a greater menace to the future of this country than war or a pestilence.

"It is against this most obnoxious system we are now rebelling and against which we will continue to rebel until congress shall give us relief. The sooner congress can be made to understand that the better it will be for all concerned.

"It was because of this Armour yoke that I entered the fight and I pledge you that I shall continue it until we have either won a glorious victory or gone down to utter defeat. There will never be any compromise with my consent. This car line system, if unchecked will create the greatest trust of which the world has ever heard. The attorney general of the United States holds this same opinion and has so expressed himself to me.

"The transportation advantages enjoyed by the Armour monoply are overwhelming. Its latest acquisition is a controlling interest in the United States Leather company, a move which not only enables it to fix prices on green hides from foreign countries, but to fix prices on domestic hides and the price of leather. Since last December the price of leather has advanced 4 cents a foot.

"With the existence of this car line evil established beyond any doubt it is up to us as a people to demand and to obtain legislation that will give us relief. I am not opposed to honest industry in any field and would not be unfair to the railroads. We are asking no special privileges, simply demanding equal privileges—privileges to transport the products in our business free from arbitrary charges fixed by competitors. No one appreciates more than I the necessity of having the railroads prosperous, but there is a vast difference between having them prosperous and of their having it all.

"We have progressed fairly well. We are without court decisions, but the railroad companies have seen the handwriting on the wall, and as their contracts are expiring they are dropping the private car line business and are building their own refrigerator cars.

"I appreciate this gathering. I want to thank every man here who has honored me with his presence. I wish to thank the local press for its influence in this fight, and without whose assistance progress would have been less rapid. I wish to thank the committees on arrangement, the citizens of Duluth who have backed me up with their moral influence, and especially Simon Clark. Much of the success so far achieved is due to the fact that I have had painstaking and competent legal advice from Judge Roger S. Powell. His work has served me well.

"We have well defined in our own minds a remedy for the car line evil, but to discuss it would take up too much time.

"I thank you again for the great honor. It will not increase my self-esteem, but rather impress me with the seriousness of this undertaking."

• • •

Judge R. S. Powell followed Mr. Ferguson, who was again toasted and wished godspeed in his efforts.

Judge Powell's remarks were brief, owing to the late hour. He said that while he had acted as guide in mere technical lines of the fight, the full comprehension of the subject was at all times within the grasp of Mr. Ferguson. He said the greatest factor in the fight has been publicity, and he asserted that it was Mr. Ferguson's persistence that brought the interstate commerce commission to an investigation of the private car line practice, and which has brought the practice to the attention of the public.

To H. B. Knudsen, Mr. Ferguson's business partner, fell the lot to deliver the valedictory, and this he did in a very entertaining manner. Mr. Knudsen referred briefly to their harmonious business relations for so many years, and declared that Mr. Ferguson had lived in his home for fifteen years and that he, Mr. Knudsen, knows him to be one of the noblest men in Duluth. He closed his speech and the banquet with the prediction that Mr. Ferguson will be successful in his fight and that Duluth will never have reason to be ashamed of him.

It was after midnight when the last guest left the banquet room.

SOME CURIOUS BUGS.

Fire Is Their Unusual Method of Defense.

There exists in the region of the Amazon a variety of insects which are provided with a truly remarkable means of defense, says the Scientific American. These are coleoptera of the genus Cicindela, with thorax and legs of a light brownish yellow, black elytra, marked with yellow, and of a total length of from 0.6 to 0.7 of an inch. Although these insects are sometimes seen in the daytime, it is at night that they can most easily do their hunting. "In the paths of my garden," says M. Le Cointe, "by directing the light of a dark lantern toward the ground, I have seen them running in all directions seeking a refuge in the clefts between the stones of the borders or concealing themselves under tufts of grass. Every time that I have tried to seize one of them a slight noise has been heard like that of a steam under pressure escaping from a valve raised by jerks, while a jet of smoke has made its exit with force, in most cases from the extremity of the abdomen, and sometimes even from the mouth, and disseminating a strong odor of nitrous gas.

"At such times I have experienced quite a strong feeling of heat in the hand, and the body of some of the insects that I succeeded in catching appeared to me to be hot. My fingers and the parts of my hands that had been touched by the hot smoke were stained an indelible brown. It would seem as if this were a very caustic substance which the insect projects with violence in an impalpable dust against the enemies that threaten it, and that it holds in reserve for important occasions.

"This process is not absolutely abnormal, since a number of other animals also have recourse to projections of liquids or odors against their enemies for their defense. But this denotes in our insect both a special chemical talent and a special resistance of the intestines that may be qualified as most remarkable.

"Upon the whole, this little coleopter is nothing less than a dragon that projects fire and flame from both of its extremities, and that differs in principle from the famous monster of antiquity only in its dimensions. It may very well have been that our ancestors also knew some gigantic cicindele, the remains of an antediluvian fauna, and that they have not prevaricated as much as might seem to be the case in relating to us the misdeeds of the marvelous and terrible animal committed in the days of yore in guarding caverns in which was hidden every sort of treasure worthy of the name."

THE FICTION CURE.

At one time Dumas was publishing in a Paris daily paper a serial in which the heroine, a prosperous and happy girl, was attacked by tuberculosis, says Modern Society. He had described the slow, wasting symptoms touchingly and vividly, and had excited thereby great interest in the heroine.

One day the Marquis Dalomieu waited upon him and said: "Dumas, have you composed the final chapter of your serial now being published?"

"To be sure."

"Does your heroine die?"

"Why, of course she does—dies of consumption. How could she live after such symptoms as I have described?"

"But, man, you must make her live—the catastrophe must be changed!"

"That is impossible."

"It cannot be impossible. It must be changed, for upon your heroine's life depends my daughter's!"

"Your daughter's?"

"Alas, yes! She has all the various conditions and symptoms which you have so frequently described in your story and watches mournfully for every paper, reading her own fate in that of your heroine. If you make your heroine live, my daughter, whose imagination has been so deeply impressed, will also live; but if you insist upon killing your young lady I am confident that my daughter's life cannot be saved."

"Well! Strange, indeed! But—a life to save is a temptation not to be resisted."

Dumas altered the last chapter of his story to fit the occasion. His heroine experienced a miraculous recovery, and lived happily ever after.

Several years afterward Dumas and the marquis met one evening at a party.

"Dumas," exclaimed the delighted marquis, "let me present my daughter, who owes her life to you."

"What! This fine-looking woman who looks like Jeanne d'Arc?"

"Yes, indeed. She is married, and has four children."

"Well, we are even—my story has passed through four editions."

JAPANESE WRITE THANKS.

One of the proudest lads in Tennessee today is Walter Winstead, a 15-year-old boy of Franklin, Tenn., says the Nashville Banner. Young Winstead has always taken a keen interest in everything connected with the Russian-Japanese war, and has been a loyal sympathizer of the plucky little Japanese throughout their bloody struggle with their big enemy. Not long since the boy wrote a letter to a postmaster in a Japanese town, inclosing 5 cents and asking for a copy of some leading Japanese paper. The letter was turned over by the postmaster to the publisher of one of the papers, and the request for a copy was immediately complied with, a nice postal card accompanying the paper.

Walter Winstead then wrote a letter to the paper, in which he expressed in appropriate terms his sympathy for the Japanese, his hope that success might always follow their arms and that they might never meet with any reverses on the field of battle. This letter also expressed pride over the many Japanese successes, and it made such a favorable impression upon the Japanese that it was copied by other papers and by several magazines.

Since his communication has been given such wide circulation all over the kingdom of Japan, young Winstead has been receiving many letters from various sections of that country. Some of these were written in the Japanese language and others in rather poor English. All thanked Winstead for the keen interest he had taken in their fight with Russia, and for his many expressions of sympathy.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Seventeen-Year-Old Boy Falls Down Elevator Shaft.

Two Sacks of Paper Doubtless Saved His Life.

Grover Kieren, a 17-year-old boy employed by the Duluth Lithographing & Printing company, had an almost miraculous escape from death yesterday.

While carrying two heavy sacks of paper swung about his neck he started for the elevator to go down stairs. He thought that the elevator was in position, and walked off into the shaft, falling from the second story to the basement.

When picked up, he was found to be unconscious, and a physician was summoned. Upon examination it was discovered that he had sustained a fracture of the left arm above the elbow, and severe bruises on other parts of the body. His injuries, however, were not dangerous, and he was removed to his home at 230 Fourteenth avenue east.

It is believed that the sacks of paper, while they were probably responsible for the fall, nevertheless saved him from fatal injuries. He is believed to have fallen on the thick sacks of paper, which acted as a cushion to break the force of the shock. The distance fell was about thirty feet, and had there been nothing to break his fall, he would doubtless have suffered serious injuries and probably have been killed.

The sacks were swung about his neck and he did not notice that while the guard was not in position, the elevator was not there.

JOINED BY DEATH

Pathetic Case of Husband and Wife In Minneapolis.

Wife Jumped Into Mississippi When Husband Was Dying.

Minneapolis, June 30.—Knowing that her husband, William Adamson of 757 Adams street northeast, was sick unto death and realizing that she could not ever be happy without him, Mrs. Grace Adamson made a sensational plunge to death in the muddy waters of the Mississippi river off the steel arch bridge at 6 o'clock Wednsday night.

At 11 o'clock yesterday, scarcely fifteen hours after her tragic death the husband passed into the long sleep at St. Mary's hospital. He was surrounded by his brothers, sisters, mother and father at the time of his death, but his wife, the woman he loved best of all, was absent.

This double tragedy came after eight months of happy married life. During that time William Adamson and his wife lived as happy as two people could live and they looked forward to long and happy lives.

Then came illness and misfortune. The husband some time ago was forced to his bed. He grew gradually worse and weaker from an abscess of the liver and finally all hope of his recovery was given up.

The wife, frightened at first by his sickness, was heartbroken when she heard that he could not live. She worried and fretted herself until her mind was affected. She became dependent and continually made threats that she would end her life if anything should happen to take her husband away from her.

Last Tuesday all hopes of saving the husband's life were abandoned by physicians and the wife was told to prepare for the worst. She bore up as bravely as she could, but the blow was too much for her deranged mind. She conceived the idea of meeting him in heaven and no mortal man could keep her from following her mad desire.

She said she could not live and be happy and for that reason though that death with him would be her last earthly pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. William Adamson, the parents of her husband, tried to dissuade her from her purpose. They pointed out the madness of her whole scheme. She would not be heard, however. Time and time again she repeated her intention until finally relatives gave up all hope of saving her.

Wednesday, therefore, when the report that a young woman had thrown herself over the steel arch bridge came to their ears, members of the Adamson family realized that she had made good her threats.

The last farewell between the dying husband and his wife was said on Tuesday at St. Mary's. Since then Mrs. Adamson could not bring herself to go to the hospital again. She and her husband had resided with his parents, and at their home she spent Wednesday afternoon talking with her father-in-law. Suddenly in the midst of the conversation, she caught sight of a photograph of Mr. Adamson and gave way to an uncontrollable grief. Afterward she talked of his illness and seemed to be persuaded to go to the hospital with members of the family to see him.

They were getting on the car expecting her to follow them when they turned and saw her walking in the same direction the car was going, members of the family saw that she had a small bottle in her hand, but they gave little thought to the girl's behavior. She had not mentioned any intention of taking her own life during the afternoon, although on previous occasions she had often said she could not live without her husband and would kill herself if he died.

Her movements after leaving her relatives are somewhat of a mystery. As far as can be found out she went down town and called upon an old friend, Miss Pauline Fay.

Leaving Miss Fay's house Mrs. Adamson went to Hennepin avenue and boarded a car bound for the East side. That was the last seen of her by friends.

The next time she was noticed was on the steel arch bridge about the middle. Ivan Sissiwitch, a 14-year-old boy, living in Northeast Minneapolis, saw and took particular notice of her as she riveted her eyes on him until he had passed.

J. H. Martin was sitting in his room in the Commercial hotel on Nicollet island when he saw the woman walk to the rail in the middle of the bridge, drink the contents of a vial and leap over the bridge to her death in the muddy waters below.

So horror struck was he by what he had seen that for a moment he was unable to say a word of move. Then, running down into the hotel office, he got W. M. Keefe and they together went to the spot where the woman had been but a minute before. They looked over the bridge rail and could see the body being carried swiftly along by the current. It went down and up three or four times and was then lost to sight.

Mrs. Adamson was very good-looking, and was generally considered pretty. She had wavy, bronze-colored hair, large blue eyes, and a round, pleasant face. Since her husband went to the hospital four weeks ago, she has seemed almost distracted. She could not bear to stay with his parents, because it was so lonely without him, and neither did she care to stay at her parents' home in South Minneapolis, so she frequently went from one place to another and visited with friends.

Mr. Adamson was ill three weeks at home before going to the hospital, and was ill last winter in New Orleans, where the young couple were making their home. At the hospital an operation was peformed for an abscess on the liver. He was a well-known photographer, who made a specialty of taking photographs at conventions and other large public gatherings.

Mrs. Adamson, who was not yet 20 years of age, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Hammer of 2810 Twelfth avenue south. She was the eldest of eight children, five girls and three boys.

Tuesday evening she left her home to go she said to meet friends. Before going she kissed all her brothers and sisters goodbye and bade her mother farewell. She said nothing about suicide.

Before she left she took all the trinkets she had out of her trunk and burned them. She gave no particular reason for doing so.

TO REPAIR AT NORFOLK

Fern Will Not Start For Duluth Until August.

Washington, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The navy department today received a dispatch from Adjt. Gen. Woods, which pledges the state of Minnesota to pay to the government some $2,000 for further necessary repairs to the United States ship Fern. The repairs are necessary in order to put the vessel in perfect seaworthy condition. Upon investigation, Representative Bede, who has been entirely instrumental in securing the loan of the Fern to the naval militia of Minnesota, finds that the work required can be done much more cheaply in the Norfolk navy yard, where the vessel now is, than to endeavor to make the repairs needed through an outside contract.

These repairs will have been completed by the latter part of July, and the vessel ready to put to sea and steam up the coast to the St. Lawrence, and she will be formally turned over to the Minnesota state naval militia at Ogdensburg, N. Y. Some time in August the Fern will, it is expected, make the trip to Ogdensburg under her own steam. No towing will probably be required.

OUTING TO ZENITH PARK

Y. M. C. A. Boys Will Take the Twice Postponed Trip.

The twice postponed outing of the boys' department, Y. M. C. A., to Zenith park, will be held tomorrow. On both dates previously set the wet weather prevented the trip being taken, but the boys will start tomorrow at 10 o'clock and spend the day on Zenith island.

The date for the hike to Two Harbors has been set for Monday, July 10. The party will be limited to eighteen boys, and those who desire to go must hand in their names to the secretary.

The games in the baseball league scheduled for tomorrow are as follows:

Emerson vs Adams on Emerson grounds.
Glen Avon vs Lincoln on Lincoln grounds.
Franklin vs Irving on Irving grounds.

SUMMER COLDS.

Laxative Bromo Quinine, the world wide Cold Cure, removes the cause. Call for the full name and look for signature of E. W. Grove. 25c.

STRONG PROTEST

By Arcanum Councils Against Advance In Rates.

New York, June 30.—Forty-two of the sixty-two Royal Arcanum councils in Manhattan and the Bronx have been represented at a meeting to protest against the recent advance in rates. Resolutions were adopted looking to a reconsideration by the supreme council of the recent increase in assessment rates and declaring confidence in the stability of the order. It was unanimously decided to request that an immediate meeting of the grand lodge be held to take up the matter.

BOUND FOR PORTLAND

Touring Party Will Take Private Car to Exposition.

Plans are now complete for the Y. M. C. A. touring party, which will leave on July 25 for Portland and other coast points, and the personnel of the party is already partly made up.

The party will be limited to twenty members, which is all that the private car will accommodate comfortably.

The itinerary of the trip has been changed somewhat, and it now includes a trip up the Puget sound, and the return trip over the Canadian Pacific road.

The first stop is made at Spokane, where the party will spend twelve hours, and then continue to Seattle, where a day will be spent. Three days will be put in at Portland seeing the exhibition, and the party will then take a trip up the Puget sound by boat to Victoria. From Victoria they will cross over to Vancouver, and after spending a day there, will take the Canadian Pacific train for home, stopping at Banff, the Canadian National park, on the way home.

Every effort is being made to get a congenial party, and a most enjoyable outing is being looked forward to.

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

It is no secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Texas. 25c at all drug stores.

TWO GAMES ON FOURTH

Crippled Duluth Team Will Return From Trip Monday.

Monday afternoon the Duluth baseball team will return from its swing around the circuit, and will meet Crookston in the first of a series of four games.

Two games will be played on July 4. The first game will be called at 2 o'clock and the second at 4. The regular admission will be charged for each game, and the stands will be cleared between the contests.

"We would have been willing to give a double-header," said Manager Van Praagh this morning, "but the other teams would not agree to it. July 4 was fixed upon as a 'pool day.' Two games are scheduled in three of the league cities, and the proceeds are pooled and divided equally among the teams. So we have no alternative but to charge two admissions."

The team is at present badly crippled. No less than five of the nine men who represent Duluth at Grand Forks, are suffering from lame legs. Since Erickson's return home with a sprained leg, there are only nine men on the team, including but two pitchers, and Bennett will have to be used in one of the games against the Tigers. The team was never in such poor shape as it is at present, and it would not be suprising to see Grand Forks take all three games of the series.

The Fargo, Grand Forks and Crookston fans love the Duluth team about as well as the Western clubs in the National league love the New York Giants, and if the Grand Forks nine can accomplish the downfall of the "Togos" it will be done.

COMPLETED BEFORE DUE

First Street Pavement Will Be Finished Ahead of Time.

The contract for paving First street, which is held by P. McDonnell, will be completed over a month ahead of the time called for in the contract, and without any preliminary estimates having been requested of the council.

Mr. McDonnell announced this morning that he expected to have the entire job completed next week, and that all but one block of it would be ready for the circus parade Monday. The time limit on the contract does not expire until August, so that the work will be completed over a month ahead of time, in spite of the wet weather that has prevailed during the last month, greatly delaying the work.

In spite of the fact that the contract amounts to nearly $50,000, and that a large share of this amount is tied up in the work already done, the contractor has not yet asked for an estimate from the council, and he said this morning that he would not do so until the job was completed, when he would take his payment in one check.

This is the first time in the history of the city that a street improvement contract of any magnitude has gone through without a preliminary estimate.

Mr. McDonnell was very active in getting blocks chosen as the material for First street, and he has made special efforts to complete the work promptly and to the satisfaction of the property owners.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Seventeen-Year-Old Boy Falls Down Elevator Shaft.

Two Sacks of Paper Doubtless Saved His Life.

Grover Kleren, a 17-year-old boy employed by the Duluth Lithographing & Printing company, had an almost miraculous escape from death yesterday.

While carrying two heavy sacks of paper swung about his neck he started for the elevator to go down stairs. He thought that the elevator was in position, and walked off into the shaft, falling from the second story to the basement.

When picked up, he was found to be unconscious, and a physician was summoned. Upon examination it was discovered that he had sustained a fracture of the left arm above the elbow, and severe bruises on other parts of the body. His injuries, however, were not dangerous, and he was removed to his home at 239 Fourteenth avenue east.

It is believed that the sacks of paper, while they were probably responsible for the fall, nevertheless saved him from fatal injuries. He is believed to have fallen on the thick sacks of paper, which acted as a cushion to break the force of the shock. The distance fell was about thirty feet, and had there been nothing to break his fall, he would doubtless have suffered serious injuries and probably have been killed.

The sacks were swung about his neck and he did not notice that while the guard was not in position, the elevator was not there.

JOINED BY DEATH

Pathetic Case of Husband and Wife In Minneapolis.

Wife Jumped Into Mississippi When Husband Was Dying.

Minneapolis, June 30.—Knowing that her husband, William Adamson of 757 Adams street northeast, was sick unto death and realizing that she could not ever be happy without him, Mrs. Grace Adamson made a sensational plunge to death in the muddy waters of the Mississippi river off the steel arch bridge at 6 o'clock Wednsday night.

At 11 o'clock yesterday, scarcely fifteen hours after her tragic death the husband passed into the long sleep at St. Mary's hospital. He was surrounded by his brothers, sisters, mother and father at the time of his death, but his wife, the woman he loved best of all, was absent.

This double tragedy came after eight months of happy married life. During that time William Adamson and his wife lived as happy as two people could live and they looked forward to long and happy lives.

Then came illness and misfortune. The husband some time ago was forced to his bed. He grew gradually worse and weaker from an abscess of the liver and finally all hope of his recovery was given up.

The wife, frightened at first by his sickness, was heartbroken when she heard that he could not live. She worried and fretted herself until her mind was affected. She became despondent and continually made threats that she would end her life if anything should happen to take her husband away from her.

Last Tuesday all hopes of saving the husband's life were abandoned by physicians and the wife was told to prepare for the worst. She bore up as bravely as she could, but the blow was too much for her deranged mind. She conceived the idea of meeting him in heaven and no mortal man could keep her from following her mad desire.

She said she could not live and be happy and for that reason though that death with him would be her last earthly pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. William Adamson, the parents of her husband, tried to dissuade her from her purpose. They pointed out the madness of her whole scheme. She would not be heard, however. Time and time again she repeated her intention until finally relatives gave up all hope of saving her.

Wednesday, therefore, when the report that a young woman had thrown herself over the steel arch bridge came to their ears, members of the Adamson family realized that she had made good her threats.

The last farewell between the dying husband and his wife was said on Tuesday at St. Mary's. Since then Mrs. Adamson could not bring herself to go to the hospital again. She and her husband had resided with his parents, and at their home she spent Wednesday afternoon talking with her father-in-law. Suddenly in the midst of the conversation, she caught sight of a photograph of Mr. Adamson and gave way to an uncontrollable grief. Afterward she talked of his illness and seemed to be persuaded to go to the hospital with members of the family to see him.

They were getting on the car expecting her to follow them when they turned and saw her walking in the same direction the car was going, members of the family saw that she had a small bottle in her hand, but they gave little thought to the girl's behavior. She had not mentioned any intention of taking her own life during the afternoon, although on previous occasions she had often said she could not live without her husband and would kill herself if he died.

Her movements after leaving her relatives are somewhat of a mystery. As far as can be found out she went down town and called upon an old friend, Miss Pauline Fay.

Leaving Miss Fay's house Mrs. Adamson went to Hennepin avenue and boarded a car bound for the East side. That was the last seen of her by friends.

The next time she was noticed was on the steel arch bridge about the middle. Ivan Sissiwitch, a 14-year-old boy, living in Northeast Minneapolis, saw and took particular notice of her as she riveted her eyes on him until he had passed.

J. H. Martin was sitting in his room in the Commercial hotel on Nicollet island when he saw the woman walk to the rail in the middle of the bridge, drink the contents of a vial and leap over the bridge to her death in the muddy waters below.

So horror struck was he by what he had seen that for a moment he was unable to say a word of move. Then, running down into the hotel office, he got W. M. Keefe and they together went to the spot where the woman had been but a minute before. They looked over the bridge rail and could see the body being carried swiftly along by the current. It went down and up three or four times and was then lost to sight.

Mrs. Adamson was very good-looking, and was generally considered pretty. She had wavy, bronze-colored hair, large blue eyes, and a round, pleasant face. Since her husband went to the hospital four weeks ago, she has seemed almost distracted. She could not bear to stay with his parents, because it was so lonely without him, and neither did she care to stay at her parents' home in South Minneapolis, so she frequently went from one place to another and visited with friends.

Mr. Adamson was ill three weeks at home before going to the hospital, and was ill last winter in New Orleans, where the young couple were making their home. At the hospital an operation was peformed for an abscess on the liver. He was a well-known photographer, who made a specialty of taking photographs at conventions and other large public gatherings.

Mrs. Adamson, who was not yet 20 years of age, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Hammer of 2810 Twelfth avenue south. She was the eldest of eight children, five girls and three boys.

Tuesday evening she left her home to go she said to meet friends. Before going she kissed all her brothers and sisters goodbye and bade her mother farewell. She said nothing about suicide.

Before she left she took all the trinkets she had out of her trunk and burned them. She gave no particular reason for doing so.

TO REPAIR AT NORFOLK

Fern Will Not Start For Duluth Until August.

Washington, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The navy department today received a dispatch from Adjt. Gen. Woods, which pledges the state of Minnesota to pay to the government some $2,000 for further necessary repairs to the United States ship Fern. The repairs are necessary in order to put the vessel in perfect seaworthy condition. Upon investigation, Representative Bede, who has been entirely instrumental in securing the loan of the Fern to the naval militia of Minnesota, finds that the work required can be done much more cheaply in the Norfolk navy yard, where the vessel now is, than to endeavor to make the repairs needed through an outside contract.

These repairs will have been completed by the latter part of July, and the vessel ready to put to sea and steam up the coast to the St. Lawrence, and she will be formally turned over to the Minnesota state naval militia at Ogdensburg, N. Y. Some time in August the Fern will, it is expected, make the trip to Ogdensburg under her own steam. No towing will probably be required.

OUTING TO ZENITH PARK

Y. M. C. A. Boys Will Take the Twice Postponed Trip.

The twice postponed outing of the boys' department, Y. M. C. A., to Zenith park, will be held tomorrow. On both dates previously set the wet weather prevented the trip being taken, but the boys will start tomorrow at 10 o'clock and spend the day on Zenith island.

The date for the hike to Two Harbors has been set for Monday, July 10. The party will be limited to eighteen boys, and those who desire to go must hand in their names to the secretary.

The games in the baseball league scheduled for tomorrow are as follows: Emerson vs Adams on Emerson grounds. Glen Avon vs Lincoln on Lincoln grounds.

Franklin vs Irving on Irving grounds.

SUMMER COLDS.

STRONG PROTEST

By Arcanum Councils Against Advance In Rates.

New York, June 30.—Forty-two of the sixty-two Royal Arcanum councils in Manhattan and the Bronx have been represented at a meeting to protest against the recent advance in rates. Resolutions were adopted looking to a reconsideration by the supreme council of the recent increase in assessment rates and declaring confidence in the stability of the order. It was unanimously decided to request that an immediate meeting of the grand lodge be held to take up the matter.

BOUND FOR PORTLAND

Touring Party Will Take Private Car to Exposition.

Plans are now complete for the Y. M. C. A. touring party, which will leave on July 25 for Portland and other coast points, and the personnel of the party is already partly made up.

The party will be limited to twenty members, which is all that the private car will accommodate comfortably.

The itinerary of the trip has been changed somewhat, and it now includes a trip up the Puget sound, and the return trip over the Canadian Pacific road.

The first stop is made at Spokane, where the party will spend twelve hours, and then continue to Seattle, where a day will be spent. Three days will be put in at Portland seeing the exhibition, and the party will then take a trip up the Puget sound by boat to Victoria. From Victoria they will cross over to Vancouver, and after spending a day there, will take the Canadian Pacific train for home, stopping at Banff, the Canadian National park, on the way home.

Every effort is being made to get a congenial party, and a most enjoyable outing is being looked forward to.

Grand Forks, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some time early yesterday morning Artie O'Dea and his aggregation of star White Sox performers blew into town and gave an exhibition on the local diamond for an hour and a half in the afternoon. The Tigers were blood-thirsty, after several days' rest, and took revenge out of the Duluth aggregation by handing them a shut-out. Converse was on the slab for the Tigers, and allowed but three hits. Bennett, in the first inning, took a two-bagger. O'Dea in the fourth inning did likewise, but both these men happened to be the first to bat in the inning. The last hit was taken by O'Dea in the sixth inning.

Potts was on the delivering slab for the visitors and was touched up for six hits and issued three passes. Barring the errors, Grand Forks was entitled to two scores, but two errors in the fourth inning, one after the other, allowed two men to go to first without a putout. Then Hanrahan cleared the bases with a three-bagger, and Spanton sent Hanrahan home with a clean single. The next three men went out. It was in the seventh inning that the Tigers scored again. Converse, the first man to bat, was issued a pass. Anderson sacrificed, and Varco went out on a fly to Weiler. Then Chandler took a clean hit and scored Converse. Leach went out on a fly to O'Dea.

In the sixth inning Anderson was entitled to be called a thief. After Menelce had gone out to Anderson in center, O'Dea took a hit and went to second on an error by Reid. Neighbors stepped to the rubber and reached for a beauty, which sailed high and clear over second base and far into the depth of the center garden. It looked like a three-bagger if not a home run, but "Spike" was under it all the time and kept watching it on its aerial flight. A plunge backward just at the right moment nabbed it, and held O'Dea at third. McAleese struck out and the side was retired.

FARGO WINS FIRST.

Finnegan Outpitches Maloney In Game at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Maroons dropped the opening game of the Fargo series yesterday after an exciting pitchers' battle between Finnegan and Maloney. Each team scored in the first inning, and after that both pitchers were invincible until the ninth when Fargo fell on Maloney for three hits, which netted two runs and won the game.

Fargo gave Finnegan perfect support and deserved the victory. The score:

TRIMMED BY CROOKS.

Superior Loses Opening Game on Home Grounds.

The Suburbanites across the bay had the grim pleasure of watching their adopted orphans being trimmed by the tall end aggregation from Crookston, in the opening game of the season yesterday afternoon at the Superior driving park.

The game was a fast, snappy exhibition of ball, and was witnessed by a crowd of about 500 fans, who were given a taste of high life in the shape of genuine league ball. They seemed to appreciate the exhibition after being in the bush league for two months while across here in town, the fans were getting the genuine article.

The adopted ones got away with a bad start, and hits by Leighty, Livingstone and Schlatter netted two runs.

Again in the fifth the Crooks worked a man around the circuit on two hits and a stolen base.

Meanwhile Sorenson was pitching beautiful ball, and the Longshoremen were swinging like gates. Finally in the seventh inning Howell led off with a single and stole second. McShane sacrificed him to third, and he came home on a wild pitch by Sorenson, giving the fans the only opportunity to root during the afternoon.

YALE WON RACE

Defeats Harvard By Length of an Oar In Great Contest.

Remarkable Showing of the Crimson Gives the Blues Great Scare.

New London, June 30.—The Yale 'varsity crew yesterday afternoon wrested victory from Harvard in the annual four mile race on the Thames by the length of an oar. After rowing four miles with the shells lapping and the graceful prows zigzagging between strokes the Yale boat crossed the finish line three-quarters of a length ahead of the crimson, Yale won by two and one-half seconds. The Blue's time was 22:36.

Such a race has never before been rowed in the twenty-seven years of racing between those old rivals.

The Elis went to the starting flags confident of an easy victory but Coach Wray sprung a surprise on Yale and tonight his name is on the lips of every lover of rowing as the coming rival of John Kennedy, the professional coach at New Haven. Wray came to the Thames three weeks ago an unknown coach. He will go back to Boston as the first professional who has inspired absolute confidence in Harvard.

The reason for this is that Yale sent into the race an eight which she claimed was as good as she had ever produced. The lesson of this race is, briefly, that Harvard has found a great coach who undoubtedly will equal Kennedy of Yale and thus begin a new era in Yale-Harvard boating. Harvard's cry is: "We will beat them next year." To this Yale replies with a very serious wagging of the heads of her rowing advisers who see trouble ahead.

Last year's experience of having a 'varsity race postponed kept many away from New London yesterday afternoon, but those who came got their money's worth. There was the customary long line of yachts both above the draw bridges and at the end of the course four miles up the river. It was the first time since 1891 that a 'varsity race has been rowed up stream and yesterday noon the sailing craft practically formed an avenue for four long miles.

The race was scheduled to be rowed at half past four o'clock and was started less than eleven minutes later. The wind which threatened to kick up the river early in the afternoon had calmed down and was blowing almost across the course. It was a hard wind to row against and as the coaches sized up the situation they saw there was no chance for fast time.

At 4:04 o'clock Harvard was at her starting flag, and three minutes later the Yale shell was in position. Within five minutes Referee Meikleham had given his instructions to the crews, there was a flash of a pistol and the strong arms and broad backs swung back in the shells. The race had begun.

Yale got the best of the start and in the first half dozen strokes shot the nose of her shell ahead. Just before the first half mile was finished, Harvard ran her stroke up and began to cut down Yale's lead. Yale started in to the race rowing at 34, while Harvard started at 32 strokes to the minute. By the end of the first half mile the New Haven crew had dropped their stroke to 32, and at this gait they held it almost to the finish. At the end of the first half mile Harvard was rowing at 35 strokes, but even at this gait she was unable to get the lead. Yale finished the half in 2:22; Harvard in 2:23.

The Eli's were now leading by almost a boat's length. Harvard kept up her killing pace almost to the mile flag, where she dropped her stroke to 32, the same gait that Yale was rowing. Harvard's spurt had its effect, however, and she finished the first mile of the race just two seconds behind Yale, having picked up a full second on this half mile. Yale's time at the mile was 5:10; Harvard's 5:12.

When Harvard dropped her stroke down to 32 Yale again got back this second which Harvard had gained, and the New Haven boat passed the mile and a half flag in 8:10; Harvard's time was 8:04.

Thec rews now began to strike the ships channel, just below the navy yard, and Yale got the benefit of the fastest water. Yale gained on this half mile just three seconds, or almost a boat's length, and at the two-mile flagging, off the navy yard, had the greatest lead over Harvard which she had at any time during the race. The time for the two miles was: Yale, 10:47; Harvard, 10:53.

Then the Harvard coxswain called for a spurt, and his crew responded gamely. At the same moment Yale came very near meeting with an accident. An empty barrel had drifted into the blue's course, and it was floating so low in the water that the nose of the Yale shell was within a few feet of it when Coxswain Berkalow saw it and cleverly steered his boat over into Harvard's water just far enough so that Yale's outriggers passed over the obstruction.

This loss of headway, combined with Harvard's spurt cost Yale two of her six seconds' advantage. Yale's time for two and a half miles was 13:42; Harvard's 13:46. As the crews passed this distance mark, Yale was still rowing a 32 stroke, while Harvard dropped down to 31. Harvard put her stroke back to 32, and at the three-mile flag she was still fighting desperately and far from being licked. Yale had put on all her power, and had again increased her lead, but only by two seconds. Yale's time at the three-mile flag was 16:37; Harvard's 16:43.

The last mile of the race was a fight never to be forgotten by those fortunate enough to witness it. Just beyond the three-mile flag, Meir, Harvard's No. 7, who had been rowing a terrific race, seemed to have pumped himself out. He was suffering torture and it looked as though he could not possibly hold his form the rest of the distance. The Harvard stroke dropped back to 31 to a minute, but it only stayed there for a very brief space of time. Suddenly Meir seemed to get his second wind and the Crimson stroke went up two points. The Harvard shell began to gain on Yale. Even the Cambridge men declared that Stroke Filley was making his effort too soon and declared that he would never keep it up. Yale finished the three and a half miles in 19:34, Harvard in 19:39.

Filley's crew was gaining on Yale in the last mile. On every stroke the Harvard shell crept up nearer and nearer the Yale boat. Suddenly the shells were once more lapped. The Yale coxswain called for a spurt and his crew raised their stroke to 34, the highest they had been taught to row. Still Harvard was game.

Up went the Harvard stroke to 34 and over the last quarter of a mile the prow of the Cambridge shell began to gain inch by inch on the stern of the Blue's boat. The crews were only a hundred yards from the finish and still it was either's race. The crowd became wild with excitement. The Harvard shell continued to creep up on the Yale boat and every man of the two crews was pulling out the last ounce of his power when suddenly the flag at the finish dipped and Yale was a winner by three-quarters of a boat length.

Harvard's men danced and hugged each other as though they had won the race. Yale was so dazed by the fright which Wray's crew had given her that she forgot to cheer for a few minutes. When the Elis suddenly realized that they had won the closest race in Yale-Harvard boating history, they let go their cheers until the hills reverberated.

As Harvard passed the finish line Meir at No. 7 dropped his oar and slid down into the bottom of the shell.

A few handfuls of water brought him to his senses an dthen the two eights rowed off to their boathouses, the Crimson getting as much applause as the Blues. Yale's time for the four miles was 22:33½; Harvard's, 22:36.

The best time ever made on the Thames was in 1888, when rowing down stream with a rippling tide and a heavy wind the Yale crew made the distance in 20 minutes and 10 second. Yesterday afternoon the crews rowed up stream with a quartering wind on their bows and only a moderate tide to help them.

The 1905 eights will go down in history as two of the greatest crews that the Blue and the Crimson ever produced.

The race was rowed with just one unpleasant incident. The steam yacht Mermaid, owned by William Ross Proctor of New York insisted on following the race from start to finish against the repeated orders of Chairman Schweppe of the regatta committee.

Yale and Harvard for years have been trying to put an end to this interference and Chairman Schweppe took drastic measures to make an example of the Mermaid. As soon as the race was finished he went aboard the Mermaid with a revenue officer. The captain was placed under arrest and the Mermaid turned over to the United States government.

Harvard's splendid showing in the 'varsity race was not the only consolation which the Crimson got out of yesterday's regatta, which followed her first year's training under a professional coach. Coach Wray had the additional satisfaction of winning both the freshman eight and the 'varsity four-oared races.

Oiseau, Second Choice, Won the Handicap at Sheepshead Bay.

New York, June 30.—Oiseau, second choice at 8 to 5, won the Spindrift handicap for 3-year-olds, one mile and a furlong at Sheepshead bay, yesterday, defeating the favorite Cairngorm Oiseau went to the front at the start and making the pace for the entire distance, won easily by one and a half lengths. Cairngorm, who was second all the way, but never able to get up to the leader, beat Sinister six lengths for the place.

Arklairta, backed down from 6 to 1 to 2 to 1, favorite won the fifth race in a drive by two lengths. By his victory the ring suffered a heavy loss. Two favorites won.

Detroit, June 30.—The riding of Jockey D. Austin, who appeared yesterday in T. P. Hayes colors, was one of the features of the Highland Park card. Austin, who had three mounts, finished first and second and was kept out of the money in his third start by a nose. Weather fine.

Buffalo, June 30.—Favorites fared badly at Kenilworth, yesterday, only one winning. Scotch Plume was the medium of a coup in the third race, winning at 10 to 1.

St. Louis, June 30.—With the "lid" still in effect at the Delmar racetrack and only scattered hand books in operation, a fair sized crowd witnessed the six races yesterday at the St. Louis county track. Lady Washti, conceded a strong favorite and generally quoted at odds of 1 to 2, won the fourth event, at six furlongs, the feature of the program. Sheriff Herpel and deputies were present to see that there was no organized bookmaking but no arrests were made.

Cincinnati, June 30.—Helena C was the only winning favorite at Latonia, yesterday. The gentlemen's rein, the feature of the card, was won by Swift Wing. In the second, Vic Kinney, a rank outsider, got the money.

Memphis, Tenn., June 30.—Four favorites won at Montgomery park, yesterday. The fourth race, at a mile and one-eighth, furnished a spectacular finish. Edward Hale, the favorite, was out of it nearly the entire distance, but coming strong in the stretch, won by half a length.

CITY BRIEFS

Embossing. North-Land Printery.

Independent ferry to Superior, 5c.

B. E. Baker has decided to discontinue his grain and commission office in Superior, and it will be closed after today.

The Northern Hardware Co. will make special prices to anyone buying an assortment of fireworks.

An answer has been filed in United States circuit court in the personal damage suit of Frank Cantwell against the Northern Pacific Railway company. The plaintiff claims that through the negligence and carelessness of the road's employes a train on which he was brakeman, broke in two at Aldrich, Minn., jolting him off the top of the train and under it, whereby he lost both legs. The answer alleges contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff.

Elschen Bros. sale on home grown cut flowers, roses and carnations, Saturday, 119 West Superior street.

Joseph Davey and Louisa Lenz of this city were united in marriage at the Star of Hope mission, yesterday afternoon, Rev. John Callahan officiating.

The Epworth League of the First Methodist church will conduct the services at the Star of Hope mission, this evening.

The Northern Hardware Co. will begin selling fireworks Saturday.

CANAL EMPLOYES RETURN.

New York, June 30.—Fifteen employes from the isthmian canal returned on the Panama Railroad company steamer Seguranca today from Colon with 146 passengers. At quarantine the ship was held several hours while the passengers were examined. Three passengers were sent to Hoffman island for observation. The Seguranca, after being fumigated, was released by the health officers.

BETS BY CODE.

"Hello! Hello! Spot & Spot? This is Mr.——. Take this order, will you? Send me fifteen pounds of prunes—those Belmont Uncas prunes. Don't forget Fifteen pounds."

That is what a business man with a reputation and enough dollars to pave an ordinary city block mumbled into a telephone the other afternoon, says the Chicago Tribune. His typewriter, whose desk is very close to the business man's chair, leaned over a little to listen to what he had to say. Stenographically, she took down his words very carefully, although she was careful to see that her boss did not catch her at it.

Fifteen minutes later the business man left the office, saying he would be gone ten minutes. He had barely passed through the door when the stenographer grabbed the telephone receiver, clapped it to her ear, and nervously shook the hook to hurry the girl at Central.

"Gimme Central 0000," she said. "Is this Central 0000? This is No. 9, you know. Will you take this message for delivery? Have your company buy me $2 worth of Belmont roses to be delivered at Uncas."

The office boy came out a minute later.

"Gee, I guess our stenographer's got a hot tip, all right," he said, as he leaned on the gate that serves as the pass to the interminable labyrinth of office beyond.

"What do you mean?" asked a stranger who was warming one of the pattence breeding chairs in the outer office, and who had heard the two orders given.

"Why, them Belmont and uncles and all that stuff. Them's hot tips. Good-by. I'm goin' out to see me broker. Me for a quarter on Uncles at Belmont."

The boy ran to the elevator and disappeared. In about five minutes he returned.

"You want to get on to that scheme, mister?" he said to the man he had left in the outer office. "There's dust in it. The boss mos' gen'ly has a straight tip."

What the boy was trying to explain was that there were no orders for prunes or roses, or anything of the kind. When the business man had hold of the telephone there was a bookmaker at the other end of the wire. And when the business man left his office the stenographer called up a hand book man—the man with whom she does her gambling. And the office boy, taking the tip from the other two, ran down to the shoe shining parlor and put 25 cents into a pool. This boy carries tips from the office above to the boys down stairs.

The business man, who gets his tip by wire, straight from the track, or is tipped off while out at lunch with some good friend who has "got next" to a "good thing," goes back to the office, telephones his bookmaker, and lays his bet. The stenographer, who has caught onto his game, and is just as well versed in the sporting news as is the employer, catches the tip as it goes by, grabs the telephone, and gets in her bet. And last, and least as well, the office boy bets his 25 cents in the shop where the small boys make up pools to gamble on the races.

If there is anybody who thinks that this is not a true story, all that he will have to do is to walk into some well-regulated office some fine day, with a straight tip that some old crow bait is going to win out at Queens, or Bennings, or at Oakland. Just speak it out loud enough so that everybody can hear it. If there is not a riot within two minutes, then—well, you have got into an office the betting epidemic has not reached.

There is probably not a city in the whole wide world where the betting fever rages any more fiercely than it does right here in Chicago. Some of the religiously inclined business men who do not want to set a bad example before their office boys and their office girls, do just like the business men whose telephonic conversation opened this story. This man—his name means something in Chicago—has a secret code, which only he and his bookmaker—and his stenographer—understand. The man does not need the money he wins on the races. He simply has the betting fever. Face it, he is pretty much of a coward for a gambler, for he never will risk more than $15 or $20 at a time. He doesn't know anything more about a horse than a Hottentot does about the canals of Mars, but he has a number of friends who do know, and at luncheon each day he sits and drinks in as much horse talk as his system will hold. If any one of his friends has a good thing, of course he gets in it, and, once on it, he hastens back to his office and calls up Spot & Spot.

You must not think that the stenographer taught her employer this bad habit of betting on the races, even if she knew the name of every horse on the circuit before she left the business college. Her employer doesn't know she bets, and not in a thousand years would she tell him. If he should find it out she would get the last payment on her wages in about four seconds, for, you know, all well-regulated business firms absolutely taboo any one who has anything to do with the races. They are so strict they always draw the line on an employe having a nightmare.

Of course, all know how strict our city government has been for ages past in dealing with the men who give these people a chance to bet on the races. A city government may honestly try to suppress race track gambling, but it takes more than a city government to get after the average firm like Spot & Spot, who get off in some room in a hotel and hang on to the business end of a telephone wire all day.

These bookmakers—and there are a score of them in Chicago—do a thriving business. Race track gambling has been called dead in this city, but there is not a building in this city in which you cannot find some one who is betting on the races as often as they please, without interruption, without fear of being caught in the act, and without fear of losing their reputations or their jobs. Secrecy enshrouds the whole operation. The majority of the bookmakers now doing business have a regular line of customers. One class of these fellows have a number of clients—exclusive ones, they call them. Club men, business men, and others of the same social or financial standing are in close touch with these handbook operators. There are some of these bookmakers who call up their clients ever day and read to them the card for the day and give them the odds on the various horses. If the man at the other end of the telephone wire knows anything about the horse he bets on, as he sometimes does, he may then and there give his commission. Otherwise he will wait until he sees his advisor, who usually is some one who has time to keep in touch with what is going on at the tracks.

Some bookmakers have perfected telephone codes. There is one hand-book man in Chicago who has a code that will enable a man to telephone from his own home while his family is all about him. If the husband and father desires to lay a bet of say $10 on Crowbait, running at Belmont, he would never have to put the baby into the cradle to make his bet. With his baby on his knee he could sit before the telephone and, while his wife smoothed the wrinkles from his care-worn brow, he could call up the bookmaker and say:

"Hello, there, Sharper & Skinflint! I didn't get over to see you yesterday. I was busy in court. Say, I am going to look into that Crowbait deal at Belmont. What does he want? Well, I'm willing to pay $10. You tell him I'll pay $10 to settle it."

And again wife tells him it is a shame to let his business bother him all the time, and he will sigh and say she is right, that it really is a shame, and then the fond father, with visions of a 20 to 1 killing, paces the floor and happily sings the baby to sleep.

MUTINEERS GIVE UP

Crew of Kniaz Potemkine Surrender to the Baltic Fleet.

Ships Arrived at Noon But Did Not Fire a Shot.

Washington, June 30.—Mr. Heenan, the American consul at Odessa in a cablegram to the state department dated today at 2:35 p. m., says:

"Firing soon ceased. Fleet arrived 12 o'clock today. Kniaz Potemkine surrendered at once without firing shot."

Paris, June 30, 5:30 p. m.—Official advices from Odessa say the warships of the Black sea fleet have arrived there for the purpose of taking measure against the mutinous crew of the Kniaz Potemkine. However no action has yet been taken nor has the commander of the squadron indicated his intentions. Some fear is felt that the crews of the arriving warships may sympathize with the mutineers and join issues with them.

Comparative quiet has been restored in the city, but disorders continue in the harbor section, where a considerable part of the wharves and docks have been burned.

Precise information is not given in the official advices but they are understood further to confirm the press reports that the dead and wounded number several hundred.

London, June 30, 6:20 p. m.—A private cable message received in London this evening says the Black Sea fleet arrived off Odessa and then retired until the vessels could be seen on the horizon, where they are now.

St. Petersburg, June 30, 6:25 p. m.—The battleship Kniaz Potemkine, according to official advices received here at the ministry of the interior, from the governor of the province of Kherson, in which Odessa is situated, left Odessa early this morning for an unknown destination.

The official version of the affair puts an entirely new light on it. It is claimed that the mutiny on the Kniaz Potemkine was the result of a plot concocted by twenty sailors who were members of a revolutionary organization. The complaints against bad food were, it is asserted mere pretexts. When the complaint was made to the captain of the battleship he caused the bluejackets to be drawn up on the quarter deck and asked those who were satisfied to step out and it was seen that they were in the majority. Whereupon the minority headed by the revolutionists, who are said to have included foreign anarchists, seized the guns and turned them on their comrades. A bloody scene followed. Nine officers and many men were killed or jumped overboard and the mutineers after placing the remaining officers in irons took charge of the warship. Commander Golikoff was among those killed. The red flag was hoisted when the Kniaz Potemkine appeared off Odessa.

When the body of Omlitchuk (the man who was shot by the commander of the warship, according to previous reports) was taken ashore for burial it was surrounded by crowds of students and revolutionists, many of whom were Jews. Inflammatory speeches were made and subsequently some of the revolutionists went on board the ship and assured the sailors of the army's sympathy and readiness to co-operate with them.

The sailors then turned their attention to the ships in the harbor, and to the portion of the city along the water front, which was soon on fire in many places.

Berlin, June 30.—A dispatch to the Tageblatt from Odessa timed 3:53 p. m. today, says:

"Mobs estimated to number 12,000 persons attacked the patrols of troops in the streets yesterday, and the fighting continued into the night. Several hundred persons were killed or wounded. The hospitals are crowded with wounded.

"The petroleum reservoirs were set on fire and exploded. All traffic in the streets is stopped.

"The volunteer cruiser Saratoff was burned."

CUMMINGS SENTENCED TO FIFTEEN YEARS.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Lewis, today, sentenced Thomas Cummings to fifteen years in the state prison. The jury which tried Cummings came in late last night with a verdict of guilty. On May 8 last he made an attack on Mrs. Sarah E. Gordon, near the "Wheeler hill" in the Midway district. The attack was made in the morning at 10:30. It was the second trial of the defendant. On the first trial the jury did not agree.

CAPTURE THREE

Police Get Men Suspected of Robbing Silberstein's Store.

Arrest Is Result of Several Small Midnight Depredations.

Suspected of having been connected with a series of robberies which have been perpetrated in the store of Silberstein & Bondy, Mike Mourick and Albert Hagen, were arrested, today, by the police, and lodged in the city jail pending an investigation of the case. Dan Shea was also arrested on the charge of aiding the other two men to make good their escape.

The Silberstein & Bondy robberies have been kept secret by the police for two or three weeks. On several occasions during the month of June the store was entered by unknown thieves, during the night, and on each occasion bolts of silk and other valuable merchandise was removed.

With each successive robbery the police redoubled their efforts to locate the unknown thieves, and they claim to have finally secured evidence against Mourick and Hagen, who were arrested this afternoon. It is claimed by the police that the missing goods were found in the room which is occupied jointly by the two men, although there was nothing to be found when the arrest was made.

Shea was seen with one of the prisoners on several occasions, and he was arrested as a suspect.

Warrants for grand larceny will be sworn out against the first two prisoners, and the case will probably be aired fully in court tomorrow morning. This afternoon all three prisoners were subjected to a severe cross examination which lasted over an hour, by the chief of police and the city detectives.

All three prisoners are residents of Duluth, and are well known in the city.

SYNODICAL DISTRICTS ARE TO BE DIVIDED.

Detroit, June 30.—At the convention of the Evangelical German Lutheran synod of Michigan, Ohio and other states, four synodical districts among them, the Minnesota-Dakota district, were today given permission to divide. The Minnesota-Dakota district will detach South Dakota, and it will become a separate district. Permission was also given to detach North Dakota and create a separate district of it later, if it seems advisable.

BROKE UP HER HOME.

Wife Preferred Society of a Woman Chum.

Detroit, Mich., June 30.—Feminine independence and Mrs. Ollie Hanley have broken up the home of Isaac J. Dillon, foreman for the Detroit Gas company. Mrs. Dillon has left her husband because she would not be separated from her chum, Mrs. Hanley. The latter had lived with Mr. and Mrs. Dillon for several months before the climax came. The women are each twenty years younger than the forsaken man. They have rented a house and are living together.

Leaving the husband at home, Mrs. Dillon and her chum occasionally went out evenings. The husband objected and finally ordered the woman to leave when the two women returned from a moonlight boat ride. Mrs. Dillon, who is 28 years old, explains it this way:

"Women must stand together, even if it results in losing one's husband. I believe in the sacredness of the home life, but friends must never be forgotten, not even for a husband. If a woman has supper ready for her husband, it doesn't matter if she is not there to eat it with him."

Dancing every evening at Oatka Beach.

PROPERTY LEASED

Southeast Corner of Superior Street and First Avenue East.

L. S. and Samuel Loeb to Erect $40,000 Business Structure.

Another important Superior street business property transaction was closed this week whereby the L. S. & S. Loeb company acquired a 50-year lease to the southeast corner of Superior street and First avenue east and on which they will erect within the next few months a thoroughly modren three or four story brick business block to cost in the neighborhood of $35,000 or $40,000.

The lease runs from David Pepper of Philadelphia, who has held the property for a long time, and the terms under which the local men obtained it are not made public.

The lease covers property with a frontage of 100 feet on Superior street and 115 feet deep, and the project of Loeb Bros. calls for a new building to cover the entire amount of ground leased.

The ground is already occupied by a frame saloon building operated by Ole Olson and by another frame structure occupied by Poirier & Nordstrom, manufacturers of tents, awnings, supplies, cruisers' outfits, etc. The property taken over by Loeb Bros. extends from First avenue east to the Norris House.

The frame buildings which are to be torn down or removed are among some of the oldest business places on Superior street and their obliteration, to be replaced by a substantial modern brick business block, will mark an important epoch in the history of that portion of the business district. With large improvements on the Hayes block on the southwest corner, and the recently completed brick business block on the northeast corner of the same avenue and street, Superior street east of Lake avenue may be said to be looking up some.

Plans for the new Loeb building are being prepared by Architect J. J. Wagenstein, but it will be ten days or two weeks, probably, before the plans are ready for figures by the contractors. The lessees expect that active building operations will begin by August 1, and notices to vacate were served today on the tenants occupying the property.

The plans now preparing provide for a store and office building and the owners stand ready to make any changes that will be for the convenience of any persons taking time leases for occupancy. No leases have yet been made although Loeb Bros. already have four applications for stores.

ESTIMATES OF EXPENDITURE

Manager Case Reports to Board of Water Commissioners.

A report of the estimates and expense of the work already ordered by the board of water and light commissioners, was presented to the members, by Manager Case, at the meeting held yesterday afternoon. Th report shows that something over $142,000 will be spent in improvement and extension, including the construction of the West Duluth reservoir and the Duluth Heights auxiliary water system. The total estimate exceeds the bond issue by $2,190, but it is figured that the revenue from the service will make up the deficiency easily. About $20,000 will be spent, probably, for gas meters and other appliances. The estimates were as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| East Fourth street and Twenty-fourth avenue | $ 1,258 |
| Twelfth avenue east and Sixth street | 1,589 |
| Fifty-second avenue west | 700 |

BODY COMES TO SURFACE

Lake Superior Gives Up Corpse of William Johnson.

The body of William Elmer Johnson, the 15-year-old negro boy who was drowned in Chester creek about two weeks ago, was found floating on the surface of the lake near the Endion depot of the Duluth & Iron Range road, about 10 o'clock this morning.

Young Johnson, who was 15 years of age, was drowned while swimming in Chester creek, shortly after the heavy storm early in June. The body was carried out into the lake, and all efforts to locate proved fruitless until it rose to the surface this morning.

The body was taken to Durkan & Crawford's morgue, where it will be prepared for burial. The funeral will be held from the residence, 814 East Seventh street, tomorrow, at 2:30 p. m.

The Old Burrows Men Have Their Say!

The people of Duluth and vicinity have bought quite a few million dollars' worth of Men's and Boys' Clothing and Furnishings in this corner store. Year after year the fame of the principal makers, whose wares are sold here, has grown, not only here, but all over the country. Stein-Bloch and Kuh, Nathan and Fischer clothing have become works of art since the Great Eastern first began selling them in Duluth. These wholesale tailors have successfully invaded the domain the merchant tailors once imagined they owned for all time to come. Manhattan Shirts, Paragon Trousers, Hanan Shoes are names familiar to all good dressers. All these bright and honored brands will continue to have their Duluth home in this store, under the Columbia regime, as they had it of old.

Our artist sent us this large drawing for today's paper and to the joy of Colonel Henry we will have to do a little more talking than is our daily wont. However, we fear you may grow tired of our language, so we have invited the old department managers of Mr. Burrows to write up their part of the big store and to tell the people their honest opinion about the new management, and the Inauguration sale of the Columbia Clothing Co.

Says Victor Johnson,

the head of the Men's Clothing Department, and for nigh onto twenty years with this store, a man who has grown gray whiskers since he first began to sell clothing to the men of Duluth:

"How do you like the new firm?

"The unprecedented patronage at the beginning of its career, the uniform desire of the new proprietors to please customers, coupled with good business methods, will undoubtedly win the confidence of Duluth's buying public. It is my belief that success is their banner." VICTOR JOHNSON.

Then he goes on to chat about the 250 styles of Stein-Bloch's newest creations, selected by Mr. Burrows for this season's best trade and with the intention of selling them at $22.50 and $25—but now going during the Columbia's Inauguration Sale at $17.85.

$8.85 is also the price of excellent outing Suits, that were heretofore marked all the way from $10 to $18.

As great a bargain as any is perhaps the lot which he closes out at $8.85, because they are new styles that should bring at least $12.50, and because they are worth every cent of it.

Of the 500 stylish suits now offered at $13.75 Vic states that they are all of well-known and reliable makes, and should not be sold for less than $15, $18, and some even $20.

Charles Goodrich Speaks:

Charlie has been connected with the "Great Eastern" ever since he wore knee pants, and has now the reputation of being one of the best men's furnishings men in the Northwest. Says he of the present sale:

"This sale differs from others in this respect. Every article in the store, except Knox Hats, no matter of how staple a nature, has been reduced in price. You are not confined to a few undesirable lines or odd lots, but have the choice of Burrows' entire stock at 20 per cent to 50 per cent reduction." CHAS. GOODRICH.

Mr. Goodrich refers to the uniform reduction of prices on all the best-known shirts, ties, hose, collars, suspenders, underclothes, etc. Having been used to selling the best of everything at stiff Duluth prices, he probably doesn't like to see the fine goods he purchased go at department store bargain-counter prices of goods to fit the prices; but as long as Burrows labels are on them, he will have to sell fine Neckwear at 21, 23c, 39c, 48c, 73c and 98c; the best 50c Suspenders at 15c and 21c—and so on through the entire, well-stocked department.

What Jim Wright "believes."

They say of him that he has a faculty of telling the exact size and shape of a hat any man wants the moment he looks at one.

"The reason why I believe The Columbia Clothing Co. will be a success in Duluth is because the owners, who are prosperous and have made a success in other near-by cities, are familiar with the wants of the public in clothing, furnishings and hats. In regards to the sale that the Columbia Clothing Co. is at present running, the closing-out of Mr. M. S. Burrows' stock, would say I consider it the greatest opportunity the Duluth public has had to get good things really cheap." J. W. WRIGHT.

Then he launches into telling that in his Hat department they are selling odds and ends in $1 to $3.50 Straw Hats at 25c; and full lines of $1.50 Straws at 98c; $2 qualities at $1.18—and so on. Stiff Hats have 48c, $1.88 and $2.48 price tickets, instead of $1.50, $2.50 and $3.50. A lot of odds and ends in $2 to $5 Soft Hats go at 98c. Stetson Hats in the $3.50, $4.50 and $5 grades are now $2.48, $3.48 and $3.98. Young Brothers' soft and stiff hats go at $2.48; and summer Caps are 8 cents, 25 cents and 39 cents—instead of all the way from 50c to $1.50.

Smith, the Shoe Man.

He gives us a little higher praise than we like to put into the papers over our own signature, but as long as he wrote it, we might as well permit its print.

"I find the new firm to be one of the most progressive and up-to-date firms of the Northwest, and one with the most liberal ideas of any firm for which I have ever worked.

"In selling goods they not only wish to give you full value for your money, but something better than any other store for the same price. The bargains they are now offering in all parts of the store are of extraordinary value. In the Shoe Department there are goods offered at such low prices that the public are astounded at such sacrifices, but the firm say that everything with the 'Burrows' name in it must go." E. G. SMITH.

All Hanan, Nettleton and Burrows Bench-made Shoes—the new and complete lines retailed by Burrows at $6.00—at $4.48.

All Hanan, Nettleton and Burrows Bench-made Shoes and Oxfords, new and complete, retailed by Burrows at $5.00—at $3.98.

All Burrows Bench-made $3.50 and $4.00 Shoes—this season's latest styles, instead of old Burrows prices—per pair, $2.88.

On the Bargain Counter are broken lines of tan, enamel, patent leather, box calf, velour calf and vici kid Shoes—Burrows' $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 Shoes—per pair, $2.38.

Charles Dorrance is brief.

It seems that the good-natured manager of the Boys' department is better at letting out streams of convincing talk to his lady customers than to put things down in black and white; in other words, he is more handy with the mouth. All he would say about the new firm is:

"THEY ARE ALL RIGHT—SHOOR!" (With an upward twang on the second syllable of "sure.")

Miss Laura Spearin, who for many years has been his assistant in the Children's Department, smiled approval, and the two gave the Advertising Man their latest bargain list as a consolation for the short talk, but, as we have reached the bottom of the page, we cannot give you this list until tomorrow.

READY FOR FOURTH

Commission Men Lay In Large Supplies of Fruit.

Strawberry Season Over—Green Corn and Apples Due.

It is estimated that from seventy-five to 100 cars of fruit were received in Duluth during the last week or ten days, for the Fourth of July trade.

There is always an exceptionally heavy demand for fruit of all kinds on the holiday, and the commission men and retailers always prepare for it in advance.

The greater part of the fruit came from California, peaches, plums and apricots. The fruit is some of the finest that has ever been received in Duluth. The season has about reached its height, and nearly every house in commission row is receiving carload lots daily direct from California.

The prices are a little lower this week, the peaches being quoted at 85 to 95 cents per box, and the plums from $1.25 to $1.60, according to the variety.

The peaches, which were small and tasteless at the opening of the season, have greatly improved in quality as the season has advanced, those now being received are of a high grade.

The Tragedy, Burbank and Red June plums are of a high quality.

• • •

The strawberry season is about over, but raspberries are coming in to take their place. It is not likely that any more consignments of Wisconsin strawberries will be received on the market this year, and when the stocks on hand have been cleaned up they will no longer be obtainable, except such small lots as are grown in the immediate vicinity of Duluth. These ripen later in the season than the Wisconsin berries, but the quality is not sufficient to cut much figure in the market.

The raspberries are now commencing to come in freely and are selling at from $2 to $2.25 for a sixteen-pint case. Blueberries are also helping to take the place of strawberries, and the crop this year promises to be a large one.

• • •

Special consignments of Texas and Georgia watermelons have been received for the Fourth of July trade. Several carloads of them have come in during the last week, and there will be no scarcity for the holiday trade, however warm the weather may turn.

• • •

Oranges and lemons are very scarce, and the market is firmer than it has been for the past year. The Fourth of July demand has been very heavy, and the supply has been light. Owing to these two causes the price of lemons has jumped nearly $1 a case during the last two weeks, and the price is now from $4 to $4.50.

The season is advanced for both oranges and lemons, and the Valencias and Mediterranean fruit is about the only kind on the market at the present time.

• • •

The failure of the Washington and California cherry crop was by no means exaggerated. It was stated earlier in the season that there would not be much over a quarter of a crop in the West, and already the truthfulness of the statement is being shown. Shipments of both Washington and California cherries have been very light, and the price, instead of dropping, has gone higher.

• • •

Already new apples are in the market, although the old stock has scarcely disappeared as yet. A few small shipments of green, harvest apples were received this week from down in Illinois and Iowa. The apples came in bushel boxes, which were selling at $1.50 each.

The apples are a little too green and sour for eating as yet, but for green apple pie and other cooking purposes they are hard to beat.

• • •

Next week green corn will be on the market, and life will once more be worth living.

One small consignment worked its way into Duluth this week, but it was worth from 5 to 10 cents an ear at retail, and the demand for it was not very heavy at that price. After next week, however, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri will commence to yield up their supplies regularly and the price will soon be within reach.

It is possible that some of it will reach Duluth in time for the Fourth of July trade.

Green corn is generally the last of the new vegetables to get on the market, and it is nearly always the most eagerly looked for.

• • •

Tomatoes are now becoming plentiful. Texas has replaced Mississippi as the source of supply, and the crop is said to be larger and of a higher grade.

• • •

There has been little change in the price of new potatoes, although the market is a little weaker with a downward tendency. The new stock is now quoted at 65 and 70 cents a bushel. The crop throughout the South is said to be a heavy one, and as the crops in the more northerly states ripen, the price will probably go even lower.

It is a little too early as yet to make predictions on the Minnesota crop, but owing to the very low price of seed potatoes the acreage is said to be much larger than last year. Last years' crop was so large that the demand did not begin to keep up with the supply, and this spring there was practically no sale for potatoes, the price dropping as low as 25 cents a bushel. The result was that the farmers preferred to plant as much of their surplus stock a possible, rather than see it go to wase.

• • •

Little change has taken place in the conditions of the butter, egg and cheese markets. Butter is a trifle lower, creamery prints selling at 20 cents a pound. The cheese market is very firm.

• • •

Business has been excellent along the street this week. This is normally the busiest season of the year with the commission houses, and the Fourth of July trade has added much to the good conditiins. With all the demand for California fruit, melons, berries and fresh vegetables, business is brisk, and all the dealers report a very satisfactory trade both on the ranges and in the city.

It Cost Money to Make a Bluff Good.

When the Reformed Poker Players' club gathered recently in an all-night chophouse in the city the question of kind-heartedness came up in a remark dropped by one of the members to the effect that people looked down upon gamblers as vampires who could look on the sufferings and misery of others with unconcern, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE TRACK LAID

During the Past Six Months Amounts to 1,284 Miles.

Additional Road Under Construction Aggregates Over 6,000 Miles.

Chicago, June 30.—The Railway Age today says: Although there are upward of 7,000 miles of new railroad under construction in the United States, the mileage of track laid during the first half of the year is less than that for any similar period since 1898. This does not indicate that the total for the year will be correspondingly small, for, although the official returns received by The Railway Age show only 1,284 miles of track laid from January 1 to June 30, on 122 lines in thirty-six states and territories, the additional road now actually under construction, as indicated by the same returns, aggregates over 6,000 miles. The following table shows the location of the completed mileage by states:

| States— | Lines. | Miles. |
|---|---|---|
| Alabama | 9 | 71.93 |
| Arkansas | 5 | 45.20 |
| Arizona | 1 | 45. |
| California | 3 | 17. |

| Florida | 4 | 24. |
| Georgia | 5 | 96. |
| Idaho | 1 | 29. |
| Illinois | 2 | 10. |
| Indiana | 3 | 26.90 |
| Indian Territory | 3 | 65.48 |
| Kansas | 1 | 1. |
| Kentucky | 4 | 57.98 |

| Texas | 3 | 123. |
| Utah | 2 | 3. |
| Virginia | 1 | 2.97 |
| West Virginia | 7 | 43.90 |
| Wisconsin | 3 | 20. |
| Total in thirty-six states and territories | 122 | 1,284.49 |

The first half of the year has been devoted largely to grading, which work was delayed in starting or retarded in progress, first by the severe snowstorms of late winter and later by the heavy rains of early spring. Many of the most important extensions under construction have just reached the point where tracklaying is being started or will begin within the next two or three weeks, while other lines have just got the work of putting down the rails well under way. The following examples may be mentioned:

St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico, 202 miles under construction in Texas, with 49 miles of track laid; Deepwater railroad, 71 miles in West Virginia, with 5 miles laid; Buffalo & Susquehanna, 86 miles in New York, with 20 miles laid; Soo line, 297 miles in Minnesota and North Dakota, just ready to start tracklaying; Denver Northwestern & Pacific, 37 miles in Colorado, tracklaying just begun; Southern Indiana, 103 miles in Illinois, tracklaying under way; Indiana Harbor, 100 miles in Illinois and Indiana, grading being pushed and tracklaying to begin soon; Louisiana Railway & Navigation company, 98 miles in Louisiana, rails being put down; Missouri Oklahoma & Gulf, over 20 miles under construction in the Indian territory and track laid for 40 miles; Kansas City, Mexico & Orient, 300 miles under construction in Texas and Oklahoma and 38 miles of track laid; Midland Valley, 115 miles in Indian territory and Arkansas, with 15½ miles of track down; Coal & Coke railway, 37 miles in West Virginia, tracklaying in progress; Illinois, Iowa & Minnesota, 50 miles in Illinois, tracklaying under way; Denver Enid & Gulf, 78 miles in Oklahoma, with 11 miles laid; Denver & Rio Grande, 52 miles in Colorado and New Mexico, tracklaying just starting; Union Pacific, 37 miles in Kansas, just beginning to lay track; Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City, 31 miles to complete in Mississippi in addition to the 40 miles of track laid since Jan. 1; Davis Lake & Northern, 30 miles in North Dakota, track to be laid during July.

The following are some other important lines on which grading is being pushed, but which are not yet ready for the rails: Tidewater Railroad in Virginia, 109 miles under contract; Great Northern in Nebraska, 103 miles, just placed under contract; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, 52 miles in Illinois; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, two extensions in South Dakota, 95 miles; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, 107 miles in Arkansas; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, 230 miles in New Mexico and 30 miles in Louisiana; Duluth, Missabe & Northern, 54 miles in Minnesota; Louisville & Nashville, 87 miles in Tennessee and Georgia; Wisconsin Central, 45 miles in Wisconsin; Chicago & Alton, 35 miles in Illinois; Chicago & Northwestern, about 90 miles in Wisconsin and contracts just let for 100 miles in Wyoming.

The track laid during the first two months of the current year was insignificant compared with the corresponding months for several years past. Heretofore the close of the year has found tracklaying in full swing on some of the most important lines under construction, with the roadbed completed far ahead of the tracklayers. The laying of track did not cease with the end of the year, but continued without interruption until completion, and this resulted in large additions during the early months of the new year. The same conditions did not exist on Jan. 1 of this year. With few exceptions important lines under construction during 1904 practically finished tracklaying before Dec. 31, and the completed grade on which track remained to be laid represented a mileage comparatively small.

There has been no track laid thus far in New England states, although one line 35 miles in length and several shorter extensions are under construction in that region. In other groups of states the figures of new track are as follows: Middle states, 97.59 miles; Central Northern states, 83.29 miles; South Atlantic states, 251.87 miles; Gulf and Mississippi Valley states, 242.98 miles; Southwestern states, 257.2 miles; Northwestern states, 138.6 miles; Pacific states, 213 miles.

Over one-half of the track laid is located in the South and Southwest, where the new mileage aggregates 792 miles. The following tabulation shows the construction for six months and the entire year since 1891:

| Year. | First Six Months. | Entire Year. |
|---|---|---|
| 1892 | 2,997 | 4,175 |
| 1893 | 1,014 | 2,635 |
| 1894 | 525 | 1,948 |
| 1895 | 641 | 1,728 |
| 1896 | 783 | 1,848 |
| 1897 | 623 | 1,880 |
| 1898 | 1,181 | 3,018 |
| 1899 | 1,360 | 4,588 |
| 1900 | 1,954 | 4,436 |
| 1901 | 1,817 | 5,222 |
| 1902 | 2,314 | 6,684 |
| 1903 | 2,221 | 5,786 |
| 1904 | 1,347 | 4,254 |
| 1905 | 1,284 | |

If the ratio between the figures for the first six months and for the entire year, averaged over the thirteen years covered in this table, is continued through the present year, the total of track laid in 1905 will be over 3,500 miles. But the doctrine of averages is unreliable, and other evidences indicate that the rate of construction will be greatly increased during the remainder of the year. The uncertainty in regard to both financial and legislative conditions which checked railway enterprises during the spring has passed away, money is abundant for legitimate undertakings, the outlook for crops and for business generally is good, the prices of rails and other supplies have been determined, and for the rest of the year work will be pushed actively on numerous roads in almost every state and territory. Several lines of considerable length now under construction will not be completed this year, and the work will be carried into the following year, and numerous enterprises will be started which will not reach the tracklaying stage before winter stops them; but from present indications, the mileage of track which will be laid in the next six months will compare favorably with that for the last half of any recent year.

BAD BLOOD

INVITES DISEASE

The blood supplies nourishment and strength to every part of the body when it is rich, pure and healthy. When from any cause it becomes diseased or weak it cannot supply the nutriment the system needs, and the body is unable to resist the diseases and troubles that are constantly assailing it to break down the health.

I have used S. S. S. and found it to be an excellent blood purifier and tonic. My blood was weak and impure, and as a result my system became very much run down and debilitated. I lost twenty or more pounds in weight, had no appetite and was in bad shape. Seeing S. S. S. advertised I began its use, and am well pleased with the results after using it for some little while. My system and general health have been wonderfully built up, and I no not hesitate to give S. S. S. the credit for it. H. MARTIN. Warren, O., 60 Second St.

Rheumatism, Skin Diseases, Scrofula, Catarrh, Old Sores, Malaria, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are the results of bad or diseased blood, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and made pure, strong and healthy, these diseases will continue. The greatest of all blood purifiers and tonics is S. S. S. It has been curing all diseases of the blood for more than forty years by going down to the very root of the trouble, forcing out all poisons and impurities and building up every part of the system by its fine tonic effect. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Skin Diseases, Scrofula, Catarrh, Old Sores, Malaria, Contagious Blood Poison and all other blood troubles, and cures them permanently. S. S. S. is the acknowledged king of blood purifiers and the greatest of all tonics. Books on the different diseases, and any medical advice you may wish will be given without charge.

ACTOR RATTLED

By Auditor's Hysteria and Driven From Stage.

Toledo, O., June 24.—Being driven from the stage by too much laughter was the experience of Charley Case, the monologist, at the Farm the other night. It was the first time in twenty years' experience Case has ever been forced into the wings, and for a little while last night it looked as though he would do but a two-minute turn.

When Case went on to do his turn he evidently told one joke that made a hit with some man in the audience. With each succeeding climax the man would laugh louder and louder until finally, just as Case was getting fairly launched into his work, he became hysterical.

The attention of the rest of the audience was diverted, and this put Case clear "up in the air." With a despairing nod of his head he directed the orchestra to play the music of his final song and when this was completed left the stage, after having been on just three minutes.

Mrs. Case had been sitting in the park, and, when she heard the disturbing laugh of the man in the house, hurried back to the stage. She knew that trouble was coming. Just as she reached the stage her husband came off, thoroughly disheartened. At first he refused to even return and make a bow, but finally he was persuaded to make another try. He did, and then for ten minutes more kept the audience coming his way. The man with the hysterical laugh apparently realized the situation, for he was not heard during Case's second time on the stage.

THE QUEER RACE

That a Texas Judge Found Living In Mexican Caves.

Neither Indians Nor Mexicans, and May Be Cliff Dwellers.

El Paso, Tex., June 30.—The building of the Kansas City, Mexico & Oriental railroad is bringing to light near Bacoynia, Mexico, a strange race of people, generally supposed to be a remnant of the cliff dwellers.

The country in which this queer tribe exists is as wild as can be found anywhere in Mexico, and its inaccessibility, perhaps, accounts for the fact that such a primitive race could thus long remain untouched by the forward march of civilization.

Judge Jay Goode of El Paso, one of the most eminent jurists of Texas, and who is interested in mining developments, has just returned from a trip of inspection to the La Lus properties in the State of Chihuahua.

While in Mexico Judge Goode went upon a four-days' exploration tour into the innermost resources of the cliff-dweller district, and he is authority for the statement that these people live in caves and holes along the mountain side, much after the fashion of wild animals. Judge Goode has for several years been interested in anthropology, and it is his opinion that he has made a discovery which will lead to extensive scientific research.

Judge Goode made the acquaintance of a recluse priest, Father Mariana Guerrera, a pioneer of Northern Mexico, and from him he learned much as to the habits of the people. Judge Goode says they are neither Indian nor Mexican—in fact, they appear to be a race separate and distinct from all others. They are small of stature, wear scanty clothing, in some instances none at all, and they shrink from contact with persons from the outer world.

However, they are pugnacious when called upon to defend themselves, and for weapons they use bows and arrows. When angered they flock together, showing a disposition to be peculiarly clannish.

They are evidently opposed to race suicide, for children are as thick as fleas, to use a homely expression, and the little ones are fleet of foot as wild animals. They are expert swimmers and often may be seen diving in the streams.

About the only evidence of civilization is the fact that these people till the soil. Their method of farming is decidedly primitive, of course, yet they raise garden truck and other stuff upon which they subsist, and for meat they prey upon the wild animals of the jungles.

Father Guerrera explained to Judge Goode that while the cliff dwellers have always maintained a disposition to hold their distance from him, yet they seem to appreciate the fact that he is a spiritual adviser, and although he has never learned their language, he has at times gained their confidence sufficient to have them come to him for blessing. They will, however, approach him only when he is alone, and then they slip up to him much after the timid fashion of a rabbit.

Judge Goode is deeply interested, and the attention of President Stilwell of the Orient road is to be called to the discovery, with a view to bringing about a scientific exploitation.

"The scenic road of the world will soon be completed right into the section where these queer people hold forth," said Judge Goode, "and I predict that before the end of another year scientists will be flocking there for a study of what strikes me as a most peculiar and interesting corner of the world. It will be a delightful trip in addition to the scientific interest, for the road runs through a most beautiful country, abounding in romantic mountain streams, leafy dells and natural wild flower gardens. If anyone wants to take this matter up I will be pleased to furnish all the information I possess and will also provide a guide from our mining plant out into the interior."

GIRL WHO RAN AWAY

To Become Circus Performer, Inherited $500,000.

New Brighton, Pa., June 30.—The luck of Mrs. Elizabeth Asay of Chicago in receiving the sum of $500,000 from the estate of the late millionaire, Peter Kimberly of Chicago and Sharon, Pa., a relative, has brought to the memory of old-time residents of Bever county the fact that Mrs. Asay was very well known here as Miss Elizabeth Young. She was sometimes called Elizabeth Copeland, her mother having married a second time.

When she was 16 years old she ran away with John Robinson's circus and remained with it until the owners of the circus were threatened with arrest, when the girl was sent home. From that time until the present she has been known throughout the Beaver Valley as "Circus Liz."

DEPLORABLE LACK

Of Knowledge of Slang Makes Siwash Drunk.

Spokane, Wash., June 30.—That the wily but whisky-loving Siwash does not fully understand the meaning of American slang was brought home to Capt. Coverly and the members of the police department most forcibly.

Patrolman Miles arrested Jess Matthews and other Indians Tuesday night for drunkenness. Matthews speaks fairly good English, and suggested to Capt. Coverly that he go out and pawn his saddle to pay his fine. Capt. Coverly has much confidence in the oft-abused redskin. He looked carefully at Matthews and said:

"I will trust you. Go soak the saddle and come back here with the amount of your fine." Nothing more was seen of Matthews until early this morning, when he was again arrested by Pattrolman Miles, even drunker than at the time of the first arrest.

At the station Matthews smiled broadly, flashed a piece of paper at the captain, and said: "Me do what you tell me—pawn saddle and get heap soaked."

The pawn ticket showed that Matthews had borrowed $14 on the saddle at a Main avenue pawnshop. When arrested not a cent of the $14 was left.

Caused by Sores on Neck. Merciless Itching For Two Years Made Him Wild.

ANOTHER CURE BY CUTICURA

"For two years my neck was covered with sores, the humor spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the soreness, inflammation, and merciless itching made me wild. Friends advised Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after a few applications the torment subsided, to my great joy. The sores soon disappeared, and my hair grew again, as thick and healthy as ever. I shall always recommend Cuticura. (signed) H. J. Spalding, 104 W. 104th St., New York City."

CLERK FINED FOR FLIRTING

Secretary Shaw Makes Young Man Regret His Indiscretion.

Washington, June 30.—The circulation of the smiles of the realm as well as the condition of the currency of the country is under the control of the secretary of the treasury, and the secretary has proved it beyond the shadow of a doubt.

A clerk over whom Mr. Shaw has jurisdiction in New York tried to flirt with a girl on a street car.

The secretary heard of it, and the clerk had to pay a fine of ten days' pay.

One fine morning several days ago, when the voice of spring was on the air and Cupid floated on the breezes to the detriment of all softhearted swains, Edward Langdon, employed in the office of Robert A. Sharkey, naval officer of the port of New York, boarded a down-town car in New York.

There sat near him a pretty girl, and there whispered in his ear the luring tones of the God of Love, who considers all things fair in love.

Young Edward smiled at Amaryllis. And here Edward made his mistake. He thought Amaryllis, whose windblown hair cast false shadows upon the dimples of her chin and the rosiness of her lips, smiled back at him.

Apparently, Edward and Amaryllis were intended for each other. Cupid had shot his arrows well.

The young swain then took from his pocket a visiting card, although he was loth to let such a prosaic thing intrude upon the idyl. He dropped the card into her lap and waited for the next move.

It came swiftly.

Amaryllis, her mouth curling in scorn, took the card between contemptuous fingers and tore it into bits, letting them drop on the floor of the car.

Shortly afterward Edward, downcast and sad, leftt he car and Amaryllis next alighted.

Now, although Love is blind, persons on a street car are not. Carefully, and with the zeal that distinguishes those persons who do not love a lover, several gathered up the bits of cardboard and pieced them together. The identity of the man was discovered.

The card was sent to Secretary Shaw with an account of the incident. The writer did not sign his name. He acted, he said, in the interests of unprotected womanhood in America. He did not suggest that Cupid and the call of spring be arrested. How could he, prosaic soul?

Then came the cruel blow. Secretary Shaw promptly directed Mr. Sharkey to investigate the matter.

Accordingly, one day, when Edward, his fingers resting from their toil, sat dreaming dreams of Amaryllis and the wiles of Cupid, he was brought down to earth by the announcement that he had to pay ten days' wages for that smile Amaryllis got from him.

That was the end. The curtain is rung down. The lights are out. Secretary Shaw is the real thing in the smile line. Cupid's pranks are not sacred from the clutch of justice.

Mr. Shaw has ruled that frog legs are poultry, and now comes his decision, like a clap of thunder from a clear sky, that smiles are contraband.

Ah, Cupid! and, ah, Edward!

HUGE STATUE FULL OF HONEY

Image of Goddess Has Been Bees' Workshop Many Years.

Liberty, Mo., June 30.—A swarm of bees has worked and stored honey for twenty-two years in the hollow wooden statue of the Goddess of Justice on the dome of the courthouse in Liberty, Mo., where Mrs. Agnes Myers was tried and convicted of the murder of her husband.

The statue is made of thick pine planking, carved and fitted together. It is fourteen feet high and stands upon the top of the dome, which is 150 feet from the ground. It is believed that in the twenty-two years the bees have lived inside the statue they have stored it full of honey, and it is estimated that it will hold about five barrels.

The courthouse was built in 1858, and in that year the statue was placed upon the dome. For forty-seven years it has stood there, weathering the storms. Last winter a piece of one foot blew to the ground and the pine wood seemed sound and firm. The statue has been painted white every year or two. Since the bees made their home inside it this painting has to be done in the winter, when the bees are dormant. No one dares to go near the statue in summer—the bees would sting him to death. The bees may be seen any day flying in swarms around the goddess.

The statue stands with uplifted right arm and from the hand of this arm once hung a pair of scales. They blew off long ago. Between the lower part of the arm and the fold of the sleeve there is a hole, and this is where the bees go in and out. It has often been suggested that the statue be cut into in the winter time and the honey taken out, but the people of Liberty would never consent to this mutilation of the goddess who has watched above the town for nearly half a century.

Bakers' Marks

There is a story of an old lady who made up a batch of mince and apple pies.

Wishing to be able to distinguish one kind from the other she marked the mince pies T M for "tis mince" and the apple pies T M for "taint mince."

The baker's marks on the ordinary run of bakery products are of little more value for purposes of identification than the marks on the old lady's pies.

But HERE is a trade mark that really identifies—that enables you to distinguish the world's best baking—the Biscuit, Crackers, and Wafers made by the NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY. This trade mark appearing in red and white on each end of a package guarantees the contents to be of highest quality—pure, clean and fresh. To learn something of what this trade mark means try a package of either of the products mentioned below.

OUR TRUSTS

Now Figure In the Literature of France.

Paris, June 30.—"American Kings" is the title of a new piece played at the Vaudeville theater as an example of the increasing curiosity in France as regards the peculiar features of American life. It deals with the problem and personalities of trusts.

Not obscurely, it tells the story of the famous Leiter corn corner, complicated by certain borrowing from the alleged relations which are believed to exist between the Rockefellers, senior and junior, a son disapproving of paternal unscrupulous rapacity and seeking to force restitution of what is ill-gotten in his father's fortune.

The critic Faquet confesses disappointment that the authors do not succeed in making clear the baffling psychology of the heartless trust magnates, which he calls a mystery offering a unique chance for native American playwrights to elucidate for old Europe's benefit.

Paul Adam says he is now at work on a novel which is a social and economic study of trusts. His voyage to America was really undertaken with a view to getting himself informed on these questions; he studied minutely St. Louis, Chicago and New York. The scene of his novel is laid in France with, as chief characters, a French engineer, who, living long in America, tries to found a trust at home, but fails tragically through a great catastrophe of nature, caused by the inability of the Latin races to work on American lines and nature avenging an attempt to ignore the immense temperamental difference between the two.

FIRST BALL

Given at Kensington Palace For a Generation.

London, June 30.—Princess Henry of Battenberg, who has her London residence in a suite of rooms at Kensington palace, gave in that historic building the first ball that has been held there for more than a generation past, for the coming-out of her daughter, Princess Ena.

The palace is a quaint Georgian structure, with the rooms and long corridors nearly all lined to the very ceilings with delightful brown unpolished oak. The rooms are for the most part small; snugness seems to have been more a consideration with the old English than the splendor of a vast apartment. It causes surprise, indeed, to see the smallness of the chambers with which queens contented themselves, of olden times, as is shown by their bouddoirs and sleeping rooms, at Hampton Court and Kensington palace, as well as at Versailles.

There are also, however, a few fine state apartments at Kensington palace, and good staircases, wide and low in the steps. There is no gas in the old palace; wax candles are still employed, aided by a few lamps on staircases, and the like. Queen Victoria would have nothing else in her palaces than these old-fashioned modes of lighting.

The king has had a magnificent installation of electricity put in Windsor castle and all the palaces that he uses.

Princess Henry's guests were very largely young people, naturally enough, under the circumstances. Princess Ena and her cousin and friend, who is at present the guest of her English aunt, Princess Batrice of Saxe-Coburg, are a pretty contrast in looks, the first named so fair and buxom, the half-Russian princess darker and more sparkling in type. Both the youthful princesses wore white embroidered with silver.

Maud—Isn't 5 and 30 too old to hope for any improvement? I should say not. One just begins to live. Take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. You will be blooming fair at 60. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

A WOMAN RAFFLES.

Sunday School Worker Robbed Homes of Friends.

Marion, Ohio, June 30.—The police have discovered in this city a woman who, they declare, for the past three or four years has been leading a dual existence which almost rivals that of Jeykll and Hyde. The woman is Mrs. Bert Powell, an active church worker and one of the most highly respected women in the community where she resides.

For several years people living in the neighborhood have been the victims of petty thieving which invariably occurred in the dead of night. Although every eort was made to get a clew which might lead to the capture of the offender, all means employed were unsuccessful, and the people continued to lose things. Sometime ago it began to be whispered about that Mrs. Powell had been seen prowling about the neighborhood at unseemly hours, and an officer, bearing a search warrant, went to the Powell home. He made an inspection of the premises.

In the house he found innumerable articles which, it is alleged, had been pilfered from people residing in the neighborhood during the past few years. One hundred chickens were found at the rear of the house, and among them were found a large number of fowls which are claimed by neighbors. Twenty-five rugs, stacks of dishes and many other articles were found on the premises.

Of more than ordinary interest to the musicians of Duluth is the bit of news brought to the city by Charles R. Baker who has been the manager of several musicians who have appeared in the city before the Matinee Musicale. Mr. Baker is this year the representative of the Forepaugh-Sells circus and the bit of news of particular interest to the musicians is the marriage of Ottokar Malek, the young Bohemian virtuoso, who has appeared here twice in piano recital. To many who were only slightly interested in Malek as a splendid musician there was the added attraction of an exceedingly touching love affair in Germany, which drove him to America. The spell of the romance made the musician doubly attractive.

During his tour in 1904 he appeared at Dallas, Texas, in a recital and there met Miss Wynne Pyle, a talented musician who had studied with Leschetizky in Berlin and with whom Malek had also studied. After the concert that evening Mr. Malek was entertained at the home of the young woman and during the year a correspondence was kept up. The result is that when playing at Fort Worth in March of this year the musician and Miss Pyle were quietly married one Sunday evening.

It is not known whether Malek will be heard in concert next year or whether he and his wife wil go to Germany.

THEY MAKE SMARTNESS.

Many Little Things That Contribute to It.

Every little device which will add to the smartness and trimness of a girl's appearance is eagerly sought and commands a good sale. Next to the importance of keeping the hair in good condition ranks that of dressing it neatly, and the present fashion of dressing the hair low requires an exceptional amount of care and attention.

The comb of the hour is light amber, severely plain, but highly polished. To match these come very long hairpins with knob ends like balls. Invaluable for dressing the hair are the very short, invisible hatpins. They are used to supplement the combs and can be obtained in two colors, black and gold.

The gold is, of course, only used by the girl with blond or golden hair.

For fastening down the hat in the front comes a new barette. This is driven through the hair between the bandeau and the crown of the hat beneath the brim, and, if seen at all, it looks like an ornament tucked under the hat.

Veil pins are also necessaries, but in the choice of these there should not be any violent contrast. For the white veil there are pearl-headed pins; for the black polished, jet; while there are many colored pins to suit the prevailing veiling tones.

Many of the new silk and linen stocks show, on the upper side, tiny little tabs of the lining material with buttonholes worked to fit over collar buttons. Another device for joining the blouse and stock in the back are the new little silver pin bars. They can also be obtained in gold, plain or studded with tiny jewels.

These come in sets, two for the stock and two for the cuffs, in the same or varying length, at most reasonable prices, says an exchange.

The making of stocks is always an interesting occupation for the home dressmaker, who will find very convenient the new lengths of whalebone, covered with silk, which can be bought in sizes to suit any neck. These do away with the annoyance of cutting the bone into lengths and covering the ends.

A useful article is the broader rubber band for holding down the blouse, while for the front of the corset there is a triple set of big hooks for keeping the skirt from rucking up in front. The lower blouse and the other two hooks ranged above this are to hold down the band of the dress skirt.

The popular short skirts bring footwear into greater prominence and considerable care is required for the proper management of the laces. Next to run-down heels nothing mars the appearance of a foot more than knotted or frayed laces.

The smart lace for a low shoe is of silk or ribbon and matches the leather exactly in color.

Sometimes a small bead tassel is fastened to the end of the ribbon. Clasps for fitting tightly over the knots of these silk ties, to hold them firmly in place, can be obtained in silver and gun metal.

A PREJUDICE OVERCOME

By Belle Maniates.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"I suppose you'll want an amanuensis now, Jeffries."

The man addressed, raised his head dejectedly, and made an involuntary gesture towards his bandaged eyes.

"Yes, though I hate to think of that method of transmitting thought, but the doctor's commands were imperative—that I should keep my optics in solitary confinement for a month. You don't happen to know of some likely, young chap, do you, Louis."

"Girls are more plentiful in the line of stenographers."

"Oh, I won't have a girl!" declared the young author emphatically.

"You are prejudiced, Jeffries. You should mingle more with the fair sex. You know the only criticism against your last novel was that your women were not as realistic as your men."

"I hardly think, Louis, I will improve my style by the study of the average woman stenographer," was the sarcastic reply.

His friend reflected a moment.

"I know a young lad you might get. He is employed by our firm, but he is to have a month's vacation. He is tolerably proficient and might not object to devoting his mornings during this month to a little profit. I'll bring him here in the morning if you say."

"By all means. I'll try him."

The following morning Willis Jeffries sat in his library impatient to begin the opening chapter of a new serial. He heard the well known step of his friend Van Tuyl in the hall, and another—a lighter step behind him.

"Good morning, Jeff. I've brought you the assistant I spoke of—Charley Jordan. Charley, this is Mr. Jeffries."

Jeffries extended his hand and felt the touch of a small, warm hand in response, while a voice said, earnestly:

"I am sorry to learn of your affliction, Mr. Jeffries, but I'll do my very best to please you."

"I'll leave you to your fate," laughed Van Tuyl, as he took his departure.

Jeffries had passed a sleepless night and was not in the gentlest of moods. His efforts seemed to be concentrated on the endeavor to confuse his young secretary rather than upon the framing of fiction. He dictated rapidly, repeated frequently, demanded "reading back" suddenly, and employed all the unpronounceable words in his repertoire.

"There," he said finally. "I think that will do for a beginning. "Write it on the typewriter, please, and then read it through to me."

As the stenographer was gathering up the notes, Jeffries said suddenly:

"How does it sound to you?"

"Oh," was the quick response. "I know nothing of composition. I get time for but very little reading, even."

"Then you ought to be an ideal critic, according to some people's theory. Tell me frankly what you think of it."

"It's very interesting, but—"

"But what?" demanded Jeffries, curious and amused.

"You must have an obsolete dictionary that you choose your words from."

Jeffries laughed in sheer delight.

"I am new at dictating, but you seem to have made a study of words. Perhaps you write yourself?"

"No," was the quiet reply, "but in my profession, I take from so many different people, and every one has a vocabulary of their own, you know, and I have to look up a great many words, to be sure that I write as the dictator meant instead of as he spoke."

"Very well. Subsetitute the words you think proper for the ones you term obsolete, and then read it all through to me."

The stenographer worked away in silence for a few moments. Then, slowly and clearly, read the chapter aloud.

"Very good!" said Jeffries in surprise. "The words are those I had in mind, and I'll confess that I was simply testing your ability to 'take.' You're a bright lad, and must have had good schooling."

"Only the public schools and one year at college."

"Oh, you must be older than I supposed. Van Tuyl spoke of you as a young lad, and I gathered you were sixteen or seventeen."

"I am twenty years old," was the reply, as the stenographer went to the machine. Soon the swift, even click of the keys was satisfactory music to the ears of the author who had renewed his literary ardor.

As the little clock on the mantel chimed the hour of noon, the click of the typewriter ceased.

"We'll have luncheon served in here, Charley. Touch the bell, please."

"Shall I come tomorrow at the usual hour?"

"Yes, but you are not going now!"

"Mr. Van Tuyl said you would only need me mornings."

"For work, yes; but I want you to entertain me afternoons. It will not be hard work, and you might better employ your vacation in this way, than to be idling about town."

"The eyes of the young stenographer twinkled.

"Certainly, I can stay if you wish."

The new secretary served the luncheon very deftly when it was brought into the library.

"Now, if you'll 'help the blind,'" said Jeffries, "we'll go out on the porch and you may read the morning papers to me."

Reclining on the vine-shaded porch in an easy chair, listening to the musical young voice of Charley, Jeffries decided that his captivity was not to be so unbearable as he supposed.

Van Tuyl called in the evening.

"How did you and Charley make out?"

"The boy's a treasure!" declared Jeffries. "He's a veritable book of synonyms."

"Now, for Charley's version!" laughed Van Tuyl, as he left the house and wended his way to a terrace. A combination of bell and tubes finally ushered him into a cozy, little flat where were seated an elderly woman and a fair haired girl.

"Good evening, Mrs. Jordan. How do you do, Miss Charlotte. Did you find Mr. Jeffries a veritable bear?"

"Oh, Mr. Van Tuyl! I have had such an odd day!"

She recounted the events in detail.

"I tried at first to speak and act like a boy, but gave it up finally, and he never noticed. He isn't a bit gruff or irritable as you said, and so courteous to me, that I feel like a deception. I really must tell him. He is suited with my work, and he'd retain me even if he knew!"

"No!" said Van Tuyl pre-emptorily. "This is my affair. I want him thoroughly convinced and his prejudice overcome. You must wait until the month is up. I didn't suppose you'd have to give up your afternoons, too."

"It's a pleasure to be with one so well informed and cultured," replied the girl frankly. "I've always loved his stories so much."

Succeeding mornings were passed in the production of fiction by the joint efforts of Jeffries and his stenographer, while the afternoons were devoted to reading, driving and music, for Jeffries had discovered "Charley" at the piano one afternoon when she supposed he had gone for a drive with Van Tuyl.

"Charley," announced Jeffries one morning, nearly a month after the accident that had temporarily blinded him, "I have some news. The oculist says my bandages may be exchanged for blue goggles today. I'll wait until after our morning's work and then I'll have a look at my young assistant."

His young assistant was strangely silent.

"Why don't you congratulate me, Charley? I thought you would be so glad for me!"

"I am glad for you, Mr. Jeffries, but I am selfish enough to remember that you will not need a secretary any longer."

"And you'll be sorry, Charley. You will miss our work and—our afternoons, really?"

"Very much!" replied Charley in a low tone.

"So will I. Do you know, I don't think I can go back to my old way of writing. Will you stay?"

"You won't want me after—Mr. Van Tuyl tells you something—something he wouldn't let me tell—"

A knock at the door, and a maid entered.

"The oculist, Mr. Jeffries. He's in your room."

"Take me in to him, Fannie. I'll be back soon, Charley."

"Charley" stood at the window for some moments gazing wistfully at the garden where she had passed so many happy hours.

"Will you stay, Charley?" asked a voice with a soft, new note.

She turned, and her startled eyes met the dark, deep orbs of Willis Jeffries.

"Just a minute, darling. Let me look at you before I put on these blinders. Yes! You look just as I thought you did. Will you stay, always, Charley."

"Yes!" she half whispered.

"When did you know?" she asked presently.

"Just as soon as you spoke that first morning. I have a good ear and a good memory. I called at Van Tuyl's law office one day when he was out, and you talked to me about the case I was interested in. I remembered your voice at once, and I guessed Van Tuyl's little game. That was why I tried to rattle you, at the dictation. Will you forgive me?"

The Stage

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—The Pollards in "The Geisha," Saturday matinee, "A Gaiety Girl."

THE POLLARDS.

The fact that last evening was one of the warmest and most pleasant Duluth has enjoyed this year, making out doors an agreeable place, did not deter a fair-sized audience from gathering in the Lyceum theater to witness the second performance of "A Runaway Girl," by the Pollard Liliputian Opera company.

The Pollards never fail to delight, and last night was no exception to the rule. The little people were enthusiastically received, and their efforts brought laughter and applause in generous measure. The songs were all well sung.

Tonight "The Geisha" will be the attraction.

FEEDING OF THE CIRCUS

Immense Amount of Supplies Are Contracted For.

What it takes to feed a circus is always a matter of much curiosity on circus day, and a proper conception of the enormous cost of providing three square meals a day for a big army of one thousand people, is held by comparatively few. Those who journey to the show grounds on Sunday and pay a visit to the commissary department may get some idea. People who have gastronomic proclivities may receive some valuable pointers in domestic science, system and discipline by paying a visit to the great dining room tent of the circus. This tent has a seating capacity of 800, and sixty waiters are required to promptly and properly serve the immense throng of performers, officials, heads of departments, musicians and workingmen. The tent is divided into two sections of equal size, in one of which the workmen are fed—those who, in their haste and hurry are compelled to eat their meals ofttimes with rolled-up sleeves, brawny hands and smeared faces. So far as the service is concerned, however, they fare just the same as the high salaried crowd in the other section of the dining tent.

An army of agents and representatives of the Forepaugh-Sells show hit the town today to make complete and final arrangements for the arrival of the big circus on Sunday, for tons and tons of supplies of many kinds must be taken to and dumped upon the show grounds as early as 7 o'clock on that morning. The merchants of the city are fortunate, as the show is to be here for two days, necessitating the purchase here by the agents of a double amount of supplies. So, outside of the immense amount of money paid daily to the railroad by the show, there is a heavy outlay in each city with the local dealers.

The following supplies, to tide the Forepaugh-Sells circus over until it gets to Superior on Tuesday, have so far been contracted for by the agents of the circus:

Twenty-eight hundred loaves of bread, 2,000 pounds of fresh meat (this includes that fed to the meat-eating animals, such as leopards, lions, bears, etc.;) 100 bushels of potatoes, 400 dressed chickens, 125 gallons of milk, 20 gallons of cream, 10 cases of eggs, 100 pounds of butter, coffee sufficient for 500 gallons when cooked, 2 barrels of fish to be fed to the 20 performing seals, 1 car-load of baled hay, 1 carload of straw, 300 bushels of oats, 100 bushels each of bran and corn, and a hundred other commodities too numerous to mention. That is what it takes to feed a circus. Only the finest grades of everything are purchased.

The chef is an experienced, high-salaried man, and is provided with twelve assisting cooks. Then there are dishwashers, butchers, stove men and employes of various other kinds about the cook house.

The big show will reach Duluth on Sunday morning, the first section arriving at about 8 o'clock. The other three sections will travel along about half an hour apart, and the work of unloading and transferring the immense affair to the show grounds will begin at once.

BIG FRAUD FOUND.

Quarter Million Dollars Graft In Philadelphia Contract.

Philadelphia, June 30.—Mayor Weaver has disclosed a fraud of more than a quarter of a million of dollars in a single item of the gigantic filtration job by which the Durham-McNichol contract ring, with the assistance of a gang officials, enriched itself at the expense of the city.

He peremptorily stopped all payments on the fraudulent contract and declared his purpose to bring civil suits to compel restitution of the loot, and criminal procedure to punish the grafters.

This exposure is the first result of the investigation by New York experts of the books, contracts and other records of the filtration bureau, the former chief engineer of which, John W. Hill, is now under $10,000 bail on charges of forgery and falsification of records.

The investigation has proceeded less than a week. The fraud uncovered is in contract number twenty-five, for the construction of a filtered water basin at Torresdale.

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

To Become a Republican Paper, Says Rumor.

Cincinnati, June 30.—It is stated by several Hamilton county Democratic leaders that John R. McLean, owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer, will change the policy of that paper soon and make it a Republican paper. McLean's resignation as national committeeman from Ohio, sent in a telegram to Chairman McKinney at the state convention in Columbus, was received with much surprise, but friends of McLean were not startled and said that they knew it to be in line with his purpose to change the paper's policy.

THE RED TERROR.

In Russia the yellow peril has paled into insignificance beside the red terror of anarchy.

The situation grows worse hourly, and the real dangers, horrible as they are, have not the potency of the unknown ones, of the uncertainties that prevail. The flames of revolt are leaping from province to province, and Poland and the Caucasus are ablaze. The remnants of the navy are either in revolt or threatening it. The government knows not at what hour the fire may spread to the army, its last bulwark.

It will be nothing short of a miracle if the government is able to prevent the long-expected revolution. And when it comes the Romanoffs will reap the logical fruits of their policy of keeping the people in brutish ignorance.

Ignorance is the fuel that feeds the flame of the red terror. The horrors of the French revolution had their roots in the festering stews of the ignorance and brutishness of the populace. No educated, well-poised people could be so shaken from their social foundations as to plunge their country into a reign of terror. The frenzies of revolution that succeeded the uprising of the French people were due to the condition into which the ruling powers had crushed the popular mind. Practically the same conditions prevail now in Russia, and the result can hardly be much different. A widespread revolt of a leaderless people would mean anarchy. The Romanoffs would disappear like a whisp of straw in a forest fire, and guilty and innocent would follow them into the flames.

History is making, and the world seems about to be horrified by the hideous spectacle of another Reign of Terror.

E. M. FERGUSON.

When a man's fellow citizens single him out for such an honor as was conferred last night upon E. M. Ferguson, who was banquetted at the Commercial club by a number of prominent citizens, it is natural to look for something out of the ordinary as the cause of it.

In this case the seeker need not look far. From a plain, practically unknown business man of Duluth, Mr. Ferguson has leaped in a year or two into national prominence by virtue of his fight against the private car leech which is sucking the lifeblood of commerce and building up and perpetuating one of the most dangerous monopolies in the country. Almost single-handed, he has given this subject deepest thought, and after preparing himself well for the struggle has leaped into the arena and given combat to the monster. With this story everybody is familiar, and the compliment of last night's banquet, while an unusual one, was merited.

Mr. Ferguson, who is personally a plain, modest individual who has had no thought of self in this campaign, has accomplished great good by his efforts. His talks before the congressional committees that were considering the matter were convincing, and early legislation abolishing the evil may be confidently looked for. Not less important was the publicity attached to Mr. Ferguson's exposes of the private car evil, which created a public sentiment that will make it dangerous for congress to fail in its duty of abolishing the monopoly.

It is well that Duluth citizens honored Mr. Ferguson thus, because he has earned it. It is well, too, that there should be a spirit that so enthusiastically recognizes and honors efforts in behalf of the people, who are too often ungrateful.

ROOSEVELT'S FRIENDSHIP.

President Roosevelt is a man of many virtues, of forceful character and of prompt and usually accurate judgment. The Herald has never grudged acknowledgment of his good qualities, as its readers will bear witness, but has yielded praise where it was due him. Looking back over the numerous occasions when he has earned approval and it has been cheerfully accorded, regret over a couple of recent instances becomes deeper.

In the Bowen-Loomis incident the president very properly and very promptly cast Mr. Bowen into the outer darkness, because he deserved it. In the case of Mr. Loomis, though he was admittedly guilty of "indiscretions" in endeavoring to feather his nest while in Venezuela, the president's action was such as to clearly indicate his confidence in Mr. Loomis, though it has led to many criticisms of the chief executive on the ground that he permitted personal friendship to interfere with his administration of justice. In the eyes of many Loomis' fault did not appear so trivial as it did to the administration, and many believed that instead of being showered with honors he should have been disciplined.

But it was like the president, when he made up his mind that Loomis had done no wrong worthy of punishment, to illustrate his confidence by showering honors upon him, even though it aroused a chorus of criticism.

A still greater and more disastrous error appears to have been made in the Morton case. Though the men appointed by the president himself to investigate the rebate charges against the Santa Fe road found them to be true, found that Mr. Morton had been responsible as an officer of the road, and recommended his prosecution, the president refuses to prosecute Mr. Morton, parts with him affectionately, and gives him high recommendations for the important position to which he has been called in the Equitable Life Assurance society.

This action appears beyond doubt to be due to the strenuous quality of the president's friendship. Like the king, his friends can do no wrong—in his eyes. Though absolutely inconsistent with the sterling utterances the people have admired so much, his action in the case of Mr. Morton was performed in no uncertain manner, and appears to have been intended to grace the ex-secretary's person with an abundant and effective coat of whitewash.

Whether or not the president is correct in his view that Mr. Morton was guilty of no wrong personally in the rebate matter, it was an eggregious error to choke off prosecution, and thus destroy all hope of a thorough investigation and hearing of the matter. If Mr. Morton, legally or morally, is guilty of no wrong, the hearing would undoubtedly have shown it, and in justice to Mr. Morton as well as to himself, the president should have permitted the prosecution to proceed.

To stand by one's friends through thick and thin is good, and when it leads to error it is an error that is easily forgiven if its effects are not too far-reaching. But in this case it appears to have destroyed some of the public's confidence in the president's ringing utterances on the vital public questions of the day. The press almost unanimously condemns the whitewash of Morton, and even the most pronounced journalistic friends of the president are keeping still about it.

THE INDIVIDUAL'S RIGHTS.

A St. Louis social organization, in view of the efforts of Governor Folk to close the saloons on Sundays, at one of its meetings recently adopted a resolution setting forth the following theory of individual liberty.

"The right to rest or to work, to eat or to fast, to drink or to refrain on such days as the individual may elect is one which the citizen has never surrendered to the state."

As the Kansas City Star points out, this theory is at the same time indisputably true and indisputably false. Its truth depends altogether on what the individual elects to eat and drink and how and where he determines to eat or drink it. A man may, if he chooses, rest or work whenever he pleases, weekdays or Sundays, but he may not cause others to rest or work against their will, and even his right to rest is dependent upon whether or not he rests to the extent of becoming a public charge, and his right to work depends upon whether or not his working at certain times causes offense to his neighbors and disturbs the peace they are entitled to. He may eat whenever and wherever he may, but it is possible to imagine his eating in a place and at times and in a manner that would give his neighbors a perfect right to complain.

As to drinking, no law can stand that prohibits or restricts the individual's right to drink if he wants to, but the law can and does restrict the sale of drinkables, and it may and does in some places prohibit such sale. There are no laws that attempt to interfere with the individual's right to drink wherever and whenever he pleases, providing he does it without disturbing his neighbor's peace and happiness. There are laws, however, and they are good laws, that restrict the sale of drinkables in the interests of public peace and morality.

The individual's rights are not what he claims them to be but what society accords him. It is usually pretty liberal in its latitude, and permits him to do pretty much as he pleases—in this country at any rate—up to the point where his exuberant exercise of his individual rights infringes upon the individual rights of others. At the exact point where the extension of the rights of one individual collides with the rights of another, the law has the power to step in and decide between them.

This is sane and reasonable, and it is unsane and unreasonable to claim anything further than this for the individual. Let him do as he pleases until he begins to displease others; then let the law step in, and let him submit to its restrictions amiably and peaceably, because if he does not do it that way he will some other way the next minute.

Hotel Gossip.

Ernest Pratt of Chicago, editor of the Black Diamond, a coal trade journal, and who spoke on cooperative enterprises before the recent convention of Northwestern retail coal dealers in Duluth, was discussing the question in the lobby of the St. Louis before leaving for his home.

"The claims of the supporters of these companies remind me of a story told of Abraham Lincoln," he said. "Some time before the issuance of the Emancipation proclamation, and while our military operations were unusually successful, a self-appointed delegation of preachers from New England called upon the president to try and induce him to issue the proclamation at once. Their speaker was cocked and primed full of anticipation of success. He announced that they were delegates of the Almighty, and with a number of flourishes about Moses and the prophets, demanded in the name of the Lord that Mr. Lincoln should issue the proclamation declaring the slaves free. When he had finished the president quietly asked of the speaker:

"'Your reverence, how many legs has a sheep?'

"The speaker raised his hands and the whole body of the delegation showed signs of impatience and disgust.

"But the speaker answered that the sheep had four legs.

"'Now,' said Mr. Lincoln, 'if you call a sheep's tail a leg, how many legs would it have?'

"The answer of course was five.

"'You all agree to this?' asked the president, and they nodded assent.

"'No,' he said, 'you are all wrong. A sheep has only four legs and calling its tail a leg does not make it a leg.'

"For a shipper to call a bad co-operative enterprise a legitimate business which should receive coal shipments at wholesale, does not make it such a business."

* * *

"I make it a point to visit the Yellowstone National Park every two or three years, if circumstances will permit," said George Rowe of Chicago at the St. Louis. "A person can always find something new to interest him there. There are so many things to see and admire that you cannot well appreciate all the beauties of the place on one visit, and even if you could they are fine enough to be seen frequently.

"This year there is really something new, even for the people who live in the park. Along in the winter the newspapers contained an account of a new geyser in Norris basin, but fears were expressed that this feature would not be a lasting one. It now appears, however, that this additional attraction is a permanent one.

"The Skyrocket, as it is called, plays at regular intervals, three times a week, and spouts boiling water to an immense height. It is one of the most beautiful in the entire park, and is attracting as much attention this year as are any of the others. The Skyrocket is located about thirty miles from Old Faithful geyser. The geyser which came into being last fall, playing intermittently for a brief period, has now died away almost entirely."

"Probably you have heard the story about a trip Artemus Ward took on a train somewhere in the Middle West," said a traveling man at the McKay. "The story does not exactly locate the train in question, but I think it must have been on one of the Northern Minnesota roads of lesser importance.

"The train had been creeping along at a snail's pace for two or three hours, stopping at every little station along the line. Ward beckoned the conductor as he passed through the car.

"'Say, conductor,' he drawled, 'do you mind if I give you a little advice?'

"'Well, what is it?' said the conductor roughly.

"'Seems to me,' continued Ward, 'it would be safer to take the cowcatcher off the engine and hitch it to the end of the rear car.'

"'What for?'

"'Well,' said Ward, 'I've been thinking it over, and I don't see what's to prevent one of the cows out there from coming into the car and biting the passengers.'"

A Political Tune.

Success: The experiences of George B. Cortelyou, chairman of the Republican national committee, during the recent campaign were many and varied. With keen relish he tells of one that came under his notice.

A country club, about to give a parade, was debating as to the number of transparencies to be had in line. It was about settled that twelve would be the proper number, when an old fellow with his trousers tucked in his boots arose and said:

"I guess two will be about right. 'Tain't at all likely more'n two will know how to play on 'em."

The Only Cure.

New York Sun: Sermonizing on the laxity of the moral sense of men of business and financial eminence in fiduciary positions will accomplish no improvement. In one way or another the church pulpit has been preaching such sermons from time immemorial, Sunday after Sunday, and false trustees have listened to them without flinching.

The only cure will be in the practical application—that is, in sending some of these false trustees to Sing Sing.

Then the necessary reform will begin, and not till then.

He Is the Real Thing.

New York World: Ambassador Tower appeared at the German crown prince's wedding in high-buttoned, long-tailed, gold-braided coat, gold-striped trousers, court sword and cocked hat with big white plumes. After this no one can doubt that Mr. Tower is a diplomat.

The Weather.

Well, summer appears to be here at last, and it is to be hoped that it will take off its things and make a long visit.

This morning the wind was still in the southwest, bringing the welcome warmth that properly belongs with the southwest wind in June. The sky was cloudy, and it threatened showers, but nobody cared very much about that unless perchance it was somebody that had picnic plans on for today, and its threats were hardly formidable enough to interfere with such schemes. It was more of a haze than a cloud, most of the time, and it was not opaque enough to prevent the sun's warmth from filtering through.

The return of summer was welcomed by the people, and it was welcomed by the vegetation, which has been more or less drowned ov the continued rains. Down on Minnesota Point, in the wet places of the bayside along about Twentieth street, the proud blossoms of the fleur-de-lis, alias blue flag, alias Iris versicolor, appeared in profusion. They were also to be found in similar wet places otherwhere about the outskirts of the city.

The weather man seems to have figured out that it is about time for a change as he predicts cooler weather tonight and tomorrow, with light to fresh variable winds shifting to easterly, also probably with showers.

Warm weather prevails in most districts east of the Rocky mountains, but it is somewhat cooler this morning in the extreme Southwest. Showers fell over scattered portions of the upper lake region, the Upper Mississippi and Middle Missouri valleys and Southern states. Pressures continue low over Arizona and north of the Dakotas. In the lake region the winds are variable but mostly fresh westerly.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

LITTLE BOY.

Say, little boy, with the raggedy pants,
Yes, you little boy with the tan on your cheek,
With the bruise on your heel and the rag on your toe,
And the sand in your hair from the bands of the creek,
You 'neath the tree with your eyes nearly closed,
And your berry-brown hands 'neath your head as you lie,
What are your dreamings down there in the shade?
Say, what do you dream as the glad moments fly?

Oh, say little boy with the collarless shirt,
And the warts on your knuckles, say, what do you dream?
You who are free as the birds are and wild,
You who are lord of the forest and stream,
Do you dream of the time when, grown to a man,
Away from the forests and stream and away
From the shade of the tree where you lie now and dream,
Of deeds you will do; oh, you boy of today?

Do you dream of great deeds of daring you'll do
When you're broader and taller and grown to a man?
Are you dreaming of war in the shade of the tree,
Say what do you dream of and what do you plan?
Do you dream how you'll go round the world and away
And make you a name that shall bring you acclaim?
Dream that you shall be great and with riches untold,
Then what will you do with your riches and fame?

Ah, boy, dreaming there in the shade of the tree,
There's a blush on your cheek and a look in your eyes,
And methinks I could call off the name of a maid
Whose beauty's the spur to your dreams of emprise;
Never mind, little chap, for all men are alike
The things that we do that are worth while at all
Are done with the thought of blue eyes or brown eyes,
Are done for a woman who holds us in thrall.

So dream of the wee little maid of your heart
Remember her dimples, the look in her eyes;
Pluck the fairest of blossoms for her, little boy,
Lie dreaming for her 'neath your youth's arching skies;
You are dreaming of when you are grown to a man
Oh, boy, little boy, in the shade of the tree,
Be happy the greatest men living today
Are dreaming of boyhood and envying thee.

OVER THE HILLS.

Over the hills and far away
A little boy steals from his morning play,
And under the blossoming apple tree
He lies and dreams of the things to be;
Of battles fought and of victories won,
Of wrongs o'erthrown and of great deeds done—
Of the valor that he shall prove some day,
Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills and far away!

Over the hills and far away
It's O for the toil the livelong day!
But it mattered not to the soul aflame
With a love for riches and power and fame!
On, O man! while the sun is high—
On to the yonder joys that lie
Yonder where blazeth the noon of day!
Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills and far away!

Over the hills and far away,
An old man lingers at close of day;
Now that his journey is almost done,
His battles fought and his victories won—
The old-time honesty and truth,
The trustfulness and the friends of youth,
Home and mother—where are they?
Over the hills and far away?
Over the hills and far away!

Twenty-two Years Ago

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers of This Date 1883.

Mary E. Burke, daughter of Mrs. Ann Burke, was married yesterday to John O'Leary of St. Paul.

The number of hard characters to be seen on the streets reminds one of the early days of the town, in 1871 and 1872.

Mrs. Charles R. Haines and her two daughters have returned from a visit in Pennsylvania. The weather was too warm in that part of the county for any comfort.

The village treasurer reports that yesterday $14,081.27 of village funds were in his possession.

George T. Barager, one of the business men of Duluth in its early days, arrived here last week from Cleveland, where he is now located in the office of the new through line opened by the Erie railroad between New York and Chicago. Mr. Barager is thinking seriously of coming back here and going into business.

Between midnight and 3 o'clock burglars entered the market of J. B. Sutphin and after knocking off the outside part of the combination they proceeded to drill through the door of the safe. Dynamite was put in and the front of the safe blown completely out. About 190 in cash was taken and all books and papers left on the floor.

The street railway company made a trial trip this morning with one of their cars over the entire length of the road, from Eleventh avenue west to Third avenue east.

A special car of the Manitoba road came in on Monday with Superintendent Breed of the Duluth road, General Manager Manville and Superintendent Rice of the Manitoba road.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Chicago Tribune: Automobilist (recovering from injury)—Isn't that a pretty stiff bill, doctor?

Surgeon—You don't suppose I'm going to let the repair men do all the getting rich out of this business, do you?

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Yes, I weighed myself yesterday out at the stock yards. How much do you s'pose? Give it up? Two hundred and eighty-three."

"On the hoof or dressed?"

Washington Star: "I guess our boy Josh is going to be a great statesman or suthin'," said Farmer Corntossel.

"Is he interested in the tariff?"

"No. But every time he runs acrost a funny story he learns it by heart an' tells it at the dinner table."

Philadelphia Press: "Pa," asked little Willie, "what does 'food for the gods' mean, anyway?"

"Probably," replied the father, who was a patron of the drama, "it means peanuts, plug tobacco and such things."

Brooklyn Life: "Grandpa, do you have to be awfully good to get to heaven?"

"Yes, my boy."

"Well, I've about made up my mind to try for the booby prize."

Fliegende Blaetter: "Well, Emily, did you have a good time at the masked ball?"

"Oh, I had the time of my life. I had got my husband to dress up as a knight in heavy armor, and he wasn't able to budge from one spot all night."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Miss Gabble calls him a 'good conversationalist,' but he's a perfect stick; just sits and never says a word."

"Well, a woman's idea of a good conversationalist is a man who is satisfied to absorb conversation."

Somerville Journal: Mrs. Blinks—Yes, my husband is studying Russian now.

Mrs. Bjinks—Well that accounts for it. I noticed the other day that he had lost is three front teeth.

Rothschild and the Socialists.

Pittsburg Dispatch: It is related of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, who died recently in Paris, that on one occasion three strangers called at his banking house. They said they had been deputed by a committee to inform him that a movement then on foot at no distant day would compel all rich men to aid in redistribution of wealth, and that his name headed the list. The baron listened patiently, and then drew a sheet of paper toward him.

"Please tell me the population of France and her colonies," he said. One of his visitors gave the desired information, whereupon M. de Rothschild made some calculations, at the conclusion of which he said:

"According to your estimate, gentlemen, my fortune, divided equally, represents 3 cents to each man. I have much pleasure in giving you your share now."

So saying, and to the astonishment of his visitors, he tendered 3 cents to each and politely bowed them out.

Misplaced.

"Are you quite sure," he asked the baggage officer for the sixth time, "that my trunk is safe?"

"Begorra, I wish the Lord had made ye an elephant instead of an ass," was the exasperated reply, "an' then you'd always have your trunk in front of you."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: People worry for fear their cooks will give notice and their pastors won't.

Nothing will ever happen to a girl who gets caught with a man in the dark as she will tell it.

A mother has an idea her boy would never want to smoke if he didn't have a wild streak from his father.

A man begins to be old when, no matter how crazy he is over a woman, he can't sit it out in the moonlight with her without worrying about whether he is catching cold.

Getting Back at Him.

"A practical joke," said Barney Oldfield, the automobilist, "was played on me last season, I had my revenge, though.

"The practical joke took the form of a telegram. It was a telegram from a friend of mine traveling in Italy. It came 'collect;' it cost me $7; and when I opened it all I read was:

"'I am well.'

"To get back on my friend for playing such an expensive trick on me, I went out into the road and found a cobblestone. I wrapped this stone in excelsior and pink paper, sealed it up in a handsome box and sent it by express, 'collect,' to my friend abroad.

"It cost my friend $8 for the box, and on opening it he found, along with the stone, a note from me that read:

"'On receipt of the news that you were in good health, the accompanying load rolled off my heart.'"

Social Progress in Kansas.

Chanute (Kan.) Tribune: Stark is improving. There are only about two women who appear on the streets in Mother Hubbards.

A Week With Roosevelt.

New York Herald: Responded to cry for "square deal" from Charleston by suspending orders for the transfer of Civil Engineer Walker, who balked government contractors.

Pronounced guiltless Lieut. Hamilton Foley, whom he had dismissed from the army, and will reappoint him.

Disposed of Bowen-Loomis scandal by dismissing Bowen and exonerating Loomis.

Appointed Loomis special ambassador to receive John Paul Jones' body from France.

Exonerated Paul Morton of guilt in connection with Santa Fe rebates.

Put out "feelers" for armistice between Russia and Japan.

Made up to Massachusetts and delivered speeches at Williams and other college commencements.

Considered threatened Chinese boycott and sought to avert it by directing liberality in exclusion-law administration.

Put his finger on the pulse of the Moroccan situation.

Our Residence.

The future has a rosy look,
Ambition holds her sway;
We want to live in history,
In youth's auspicious day.

But with the passage of the years
We somewhat change our view,
And when we come to middle life,
A brownstone house will do.

—New York Sun.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Brainerd Tribune: Secretary Wilson predicts that there will soon be an advance in the price of bread. It is up to General Prosperity to provide the people with a little more chink.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Railroad Commissioner Staples is the 'steenth man who has been trotted out for governor. Staples has some qualifications, but he should first make good his present position. Up to 4 o'clock this afternoon the railroad commission has not blazed a way for a square deal for the people.

Little Falls Herald: The Union is the name of Mr. Dunn's paper, but that is not a good name for the Republican party of this state.

Frazee Free Press: Are you aware that history is being made these days quite rapidly, both east and west of us? History that will be put into the school readers and geographys for our children to study about.

Milaca Times: The kicks on Congressman J. Adam Bede originate largely from disappointed postoffice aspirants. Certainly there can be no legitimate kick on Mr. Bede's record in congress. He made good on every count.

Warren Sheaf: The Republicans of Minnesota need a man of the Roosevelt stamp as a candidate for governor next time. But such men are not picked on every bush.

Moorhead Citizen: Some eminent sailors at Washington, who have seldom been to sea, cannot understand how Togo managed to win so handily without a naval board of strategy.

Barnum Gazette: In spite of the disagreeable weather at Duluth last week, the Eagles were royally entertained. The Zenith City becomes more popular every time she welcomes visitors.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: There will be a gathering of great knockers at Albert Lea in a few days—Governor La Follette, W. J. Bryan and Tom Lawson. If this trio does not wake up the echoes, their management should send for our own Jake Jacobson of Lac qui Parle.

Sauk Center Herald: We have received a communication from somebody showing conclusively why the government has no business to regulate rates. If we publish it we are afraid that the men on the branch who have worn their pants out waiting for cars to ship their wood, might mob us.

Wait for Sweden.

Brooklyn Eagle: Twenty thousand Norwegians, resident in the United States, have asked Mr. Roosevelt to recognize the independence of Norway. In doing this and in endeavoring to stimulate popular sentiment in support of their proposition, they are wasting time. Norway is doing very well as it is. There is no occasion to be precipitate. That is to say, recognition should be postponed until a more convenient season. The example in the case should and we believe will be set by Sweden. When the legislature of that country shall formally acknowledge that the union with Norway is at an end, the United States will not be the last country to welcome the restoration of Norway to her ancient condition as an independent and sovereign state. Any other action by the president now would be a deliberate affront to Sweden, whose inability adequately to resent affronts is the greater reason why none should be offered to her.

Chinese Exclusion.

Philadelphia Telegraph: The fact of the matter doubtless is that the act against the Chinese was devised and passed to please the hoodlum political factions of the Pacific coast, and the law has heretofore been administered in the same spirit and with the same intent. The boycotting movement against American trade by responsible Chinese merchants has called especial attention to the matter, and it has been seen that the danger of retaliation is by no means an idle threat, and it is not at all surprising that President Roosevelt expresses himself as "indignant" that such gross violations of decency and courtesy should be possible as noted in the Boston incident, what though such incidents have been common enough heretofore and have passed without especial notice.

Educating the Filipinos.

Boston Herald: "Are we educating the Filipinos?" asks a writer in Harper's Weekly. Beyond a doubt we are. Much of the education, however, is of a kind that we needn't be proud of.

It's Up to You.

Pull yourself together—
Wave banners in the fight!
You're makin' all the weather
In this world of dark and bright!
—Atlanta Constitution.

A Trifle Absent-Minded.

Success: Francis Wilson, the comedian, believes the most absent minded man lives in New Rochelle. Last summer Mr. Wilson's front door bell got out of order and refused to ring, and meeting a friend, an electrician, he asked him to call and make the necessary repairs. Meeting the man several days afterward, he reminded him that the matter had not been attended to and inquired when he could find it convenient to look after it. The electrician indignantly replied: "Why, I called at your house the very day you asked me. I rang your front door bell, time and time again, and no one paid the slightest attention to me."

Mercy to Carthage.

New York Sun: Cato was demanding Carthage be destroyed.

"Why not celebrate the Fourth in it?" they suggested.

Appalled by the fiendishness of the scheme, the senate voted to send the ships instead.

MANY MEN WANTED

Kansas Farmers Watching Trains to Bid For Harvesters.

More Than 22,000 Men and 2,240 Teams Required.

Wichita, Kan., June 30.—The annual pilgrimage of laborers from the East to the Kansas wheat fields is now on in earnest. For more than a week the various railorad depots in Wichita have been crowded with these men in overalls and jumpers.

Wichita seems to be the distributing point for these men, most of their tickets having been purchased to this point. Cheap rates are in effect on all the railroads and there seems to be a larger number than ever taking advantage of them.

This influx of laborers is not stationary after arriving in Wichita. Nearly every passenger train on all the roads is loaded, but after alighting the men do not waste much time in making a transfer to Western points, where one of the biggest wheat crops in the history of Kansas is waiting to be harvested.

Reports from the wheat country, however, are to the effect that the labor demand is greater than the supply and that the farmers there will really lose money if more help to care for the crop is not forthcoming.

At Pawnee Rock, a station on the Santa Fe in Pawnee county, it is stated that farmers have boarded the passenger trains there in search of men to assist in the harvest, and have offered fabulous prices for the proper kind of help.

The general character and appearance of the men hunting for work is above the average. One would suppose that there would be a general sprinkling of toughs among the number, but this is far from the case. Most of them are from Illinois, Missouri and Indiana, and not a few among the number are students, who are working their way through colleges, and are coming to Kansas to secure the necessary money to carry them through the winter months. The police here are having very little trouble, although large throngs of men can be seen around the depots and in the railroad yards after the arrival of trains from the East. They seem to be bent on getting to the wheat country as fast as possible and do not remain here very long.

The railroads are offering the low rate of 1 cent a mile from Eastern points to Wichita to all who wish to help in the harvest, and it is expected that the traffic in this line the ensuing week will be larger than was ever known before.

The state free employment agency at Topeka is sending out many men.

State Agent Gerow has given out a statement showing that the total number of men needed is 22,605, and 2,240 teams. This is somewhat below the first estimates. Detailed reports have been received by Mr. Gerow, showing exactly the number of men his correspondents estimate will be needed in each important town in the wheat belt.

The date of the harvest is shown on the schedule, and, if hot weather continues, it will probably be a day or so earlier in some of the counties.

The average rate of wages will be $2 per day for good hands with board and lodging. Inexperienced men cannot earn more than $1.50 per day and probably not that. Men not accustomed to work in the harvest fields should not go, because they are very apt to break down and then complain of deception on the part of those who sent them out. Good stackers can earn from $2.50 to $3 per day and teams $3 to $3.50 per day, with board for man and feed for team.

The railroad rate has been fixed as in previous years at 1 cent a mile for parties of five or more one way.

FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

Frank Clyde Waited For a Handsome Widow.

Philadelphia, June 30.—Mrs. Bloomfield McIlvaine, one of the handsomest widows in Philadelphia society, once remarked that "she would never marry until she had seen her only child, Josephine, settled in her own home."

On April 27 Miss McIlvaine married George McFadden, the millionaire clubman. Instantly the rumor of an engagement between Mrs. McIlvaine and H. Frank Clyde, the wealthy shipowner, was renewed. The rumor had just about died a natural death when comes the announcement of their marriage at Mrs. McIlvaine's city residence. Dean Broton of St. Peter's Episcopal Church performed the ceremony.

For eighteen years Mr. Clyde was most assiduous in his attentions to Mrs. McIlvaine, and the marriage was the culmination of one of the sweetest of society's romances.

Mrs. McIlvaine was Miss Caroline Burton, daughter of a Philadelphian of prominence. She was married to Lieut. Bloomfield McIlvaine while she was still a "bud," being widowed shortly afterward.

KICKAPOOS IN KANSAS

Ready For Revelry Which July Will Bring.

Germantown, Kan., June 30.—The Kickapoo Indians are preparing for a big green corn and harvest dance to continue several weeks, beginning in July.

Many of the Kickapoos long for the good old times when the buffalo and the wild Indian roamed over the prairies unmolested.

John Butler, one of their prophets, went to Wisconsin last summer and received a revelation that the Western prairies were going to be restored to the Indians and that buffalo and deer would be as numerous as they were 100 years ago. Butler is thoroughly convinced of the truth of the prophecy and has persuaded many of his tribe to accept his interpretation of the revelation.

There will be large delegations of Indians from Wisconsin, Oklahoma and Indian Territory in attendance at the corn dance.

Supt. Edwards of the reservation is a progressive man and is endeavoring to persuade the Indians out of such false ideas, and is using every means possible to get them to attend to their farms and let the dance go, as it has been and is a curse to every tribe that participates in it.

BOY LOST HIS BRIDE OF 45

Brother Spirited Him Away and the Widow Searching.

New Bedford, Mass., June 30.—If Louis Bourbeau had not been so confiding as to tell his love aairs to his elder brother he might this evening have been the husband of Mrs. Margaret Blanchard. Bourbeau is 19 years old. His father and mother are dead, and he lives with his brother, Cyril. Mrs. Blanchard, Cyril Bourbeau says, is 45, and she has lost two husbands.

The first he heard of the affair between his younger brother and the widow was when Louis told him he was going to get married. He inquired who the bride was to be, and learned it was Mrs. Blanchard, who lives with her two children at the South end. Mr. Bourbeau says he visited the woman and told her she must stop the boy's coming, but she laughed at him. He tried to persuade the boy to give up the idea of marrying, but made little headway, the lad being deeply infatuated with the widow.

"I followed my brother to Mrs. Blanchard's house," said Bourbeau. "He had my wheel, and I told him to go home with it right away. I told Mrs. Blanchard the marriage could not take place, but she laughed at me again. Louis is now on his way to find his wife-to-be, but this time I had the laugh on her. If the boy had been older I wouldn't have interfered. I do not approve of his marrying her. It was only a youthful infatuation."

Mrs. Blanchard, who went to Fall River, presumably in search of the intended bridegroom, told the police that, while she did not want to marry a man against his will, she felt undue influence had been brought to bear on her youthful lover to induce him to leave her on the eve of their wedding. Until she heard that he no longer cared for her, she said, she would continue her search. She claims the elder Bourbeau gave his brother $25 and a ticket to Canada and hustled him out of her reach.

UNCANNY RIVALRY

For Burying the Pauper Dead of Joplin.

Joplin, Mo., June 30.—Now is the time to be buried. The Joplin undertakers are at war with each other.

It's a three-cornered battle, with cut prices, high-grade hearses and fast ambulance drivers as weapons.

This war has been raging for more than three years, and has grown more heated month after month. But it reached its zenith this week, when the contract was let by the county court for burying the pauper dead of Joplin.

Three sealed bids were submitted by as many undertakers, and the head of each firm was on hand when the county court opened the bids.

Expectancy stood on stilts, as the judges read them.

One firm offered to bury the pauper dead for $9 each. Another offered to do the work for $8 per pauper.

Then the third bid was opened. The judges could scarcely believe what they read. This firm offered to do the work, furnish coffin, hearse and everything needed in the burial of a pauper for one cent each, and in order to show how anxious it was to get the contract agreed to turn into the county coffers $10 for each case taken care of.

This bid was immediately accepted by the court.

With the fight for the burial of dead bodies came the contest for the most expensive funeral cars and the most elaborate livery, the latest equipped ambulances and the fastest horses.

Each undertaking firm has its friends and wire-pullers scattered about the city, and an accident at the mines often results in a call being sent to each of the three undertaking firms. Then the race begins and ends only when the victim has been placed in one of the ambulances.

THE TALLEST BUILDING

Soon to Be Erected In New York.

New York, June 30.—The tallest structure in the world is soon to be erected in New York. When completed it will occupy the space at the southeast corner of Twenty-fourth street and Madison avenue, where Dr. Parkhurst's church now stands.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance company will erect this magnificent tower, which will be higher than Washington monument. Plans for its construction are now under consideration by the company, whose home office building occupies most of the block bounded by Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets and Madison and Fourth avenues, and is one of the largest in the city. It will exceed all other business edifices in every dimension when the present plans are carried out.

All the land in the block, which is 425 feet long and 197 feet 6 inches wide, is owned by the company. When the land was acquired it was necessary to buy one of New York's most famous residences and three other old familiar structures, the Lyceum theater, the Academy of Designs and the Madison Square Presbyterian church. The last is still standing.

It is on this site that the tallest structure in the world is to be erected. According to the present plans, the tower will bear about the same relation to the main building that the Madison Square tower does to the Madison Square Garden building. The site of the Metropolitan's tower has a frontage of 75 feet on Madison avenue, and 150 feet on Twenty-fourth street. This will give a base area of about 11,250 square feet, which is considerably more than that of the Washington monument. There will be offices in the tower, and, of course, elevators. There will be an observatory at the top, surmounter by a huge flagstaff.

The present plans, it is said, call for an edifice 70 feet square and 660 feet in height; but definite plans have not been fully decided upon as to minor details. The officers of the company have settled upon one point, that it shall exceed in height any tower in the world.

In erecting such a tower the engineering problems to be faced are not considered difficult by experts; but the architectural and artistic effects are certain to give more or less trouble. Very few of America's tall buildings are considered architecturally successful, Madison Square tower being one of the few. Washington monument wins by its massive simplicity alone.

WOMAN KILLS BIG BULLDOG

When Savage Beast, Suffering From Rabies, Attacks Her.

Baltimore, Md., June 30.—To fight a bulldog is a task that even a man of the strongest nerve would sidestep under any conditions or circumstances, yet Mrs. Violet Ferrebea of Far, Wetzel county, W. Va., who was admitted to the Pasteur department of the College of Physicians and Surgeons last week, fought one and killed it. Furthermore, the dog was undoubtedly rabid, and the feat of the little woman —for Mrs. Ferrbea only weighs about 115 pounds—was really remarkable.

Mrs. Ferrebea is very modest. She does not lay any particular claim to bravery, but she admitted that she realized that the animal was rabid, for it frothed at the mouth and its eyes flashed as it attacked her. There seemed but one thing to do and she maintained presence of mind enough to grasp the dog firmly by the back of the neck while she held its jaws together with the other hand. The muscles of both of her hands contracted, and as the fingers of one clutched at the dog's windpipe, the others held the brute's mouth shut.

Becoming desperate by the realization of her true position, the plucky woman's strength seemed to increase ten-fold, and when the body of the animal became limp in her hands she threw it from her, thinking to finish the job in some other way. It was not necessary, for the brute never stirred and then the woman, her hands and arms covered with the froth from the dog's mouth, became a woman once more. The sight before her and the terrible strain to which her nerves were subjected caused her to hurry away from the scene.

The dog was a stray one, and Mrs. Ferrebea's attention was attracted to the animal by the cries of the chickens and other fowl in the yard. Glancing up from her work to ascertain what was wrong, the woman saw the dog chasing the chickens and other inhabitants of the yard. She yelled at the animal and succeeded in scaring it off for a minute or two, but the unwelcome guest soon returned, apparently more bent upon the commission of mischief. This time Mrs. Ferrebea noticed that the dog's face and body were flecked with froth and that its eyes were horribly red.

Still she thought only of saving her chickens, and once more she called to the animal and drove it from the yard into a roadway. She followed the animal to close the gate, but she did not succeed in carrying out her intention. As soon as she reached the gate the dog turned in his tracks and, with a low, hoarse growl, sprang upon the woman. The teeth of the dog sank into the flesh of the woman's right leg, just below the knee, and, as the heavy body surged forward, the teeth tore the wound.

It was while the animal still clung on, with its characteristic enacmy, that Mrs. Ferrebea managed to secure a good hold on the dog. Though the animal struggled fiercely, Mrs. Ferrebea held on until she had choked or smothered it.

Mrs. Ferrebea, who is 29 years old, is a very bright young woman, and from her description of the actions of the dog and its appearance, Director N. G. Keirle said he thought the dog was rabid.

HUGE TASK.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." Guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50c.

RICH RUSSIANS FLEE COUNTRY

To Avoid the Crash Which Is Expected to Occur.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—Nobles, landed proprietors, retired merchants and other persons of means are leaving Russia by the hundred every day. Westward-bound trains are crowded. It takes three or four days' notice to secure a sleeping berth on the European trains.

The exodus is one of the most significant signs of the times. To all careful observers it suggests the inevitable parallel of Paris before the revolution, when the noblesse scuttled like rats out of a sinking ship. The reason is the same in Russia as it was in France. Well-to-do people want to escape the perils and turmoil of a revolution, and to take their money with them.

The emigration has been proceeding steadily since the January massacre. Families have been leaving Russia by the score for Scandinavia, Germany and France, and none of them return. The departures have become much more numerous since the colossal disaster of the Sea of Japan, and they are increasing daily.

Except for the official classes, and the merchants and manufacturers who cannot desert their business, nearly every family of wealth in the country seems to be trying to realize money by selling securities or disposing of land at almost any price that may be offered.

They want to invest their money in a safer country than Russia. Many of them actually sold their Russian securities to invest in the Japanese war loans. They confess it quite openly, without fear of exciting contempt for their lack of patriotism. There is no loyalty left among the wealthy classes; that is among the many things the war has destroyed. They say it is not Russia's war at all, but the war of the bureaucrats, and that the governing classes must pay the price of its as best they can.

Russia is beginning to feel the loss of the money they have taken out of the country. Retail trade, particularly in luxuries, is almost at a standstill. There is an alarming number of bankrupticies. The nation is face to face with a commercial crisis as serious as anything resulting from the war or the political rising.

RUSSIA'S PEASANTS

Not Unlike Ireland's Poor, Says T. P. O'Connor.

London, June 30.—T. P. O'Connor writes as follows of the Russian situation:

"I have been reading a good deal about Russia lately, and, the more one reads the more hopeless one feels about the future of that unfortunate country. It looks as if the autocracy were doomed, and, at the same time, it is hard to see what is going on in Russia at this moment, especially of what is taking place in the rural districts. The majority of the Russian, as of the Irish, nation consists of peasants who have nothing but their small farms to support them, and that awful concentration of population in small patches of land, which, in Ireland, is confined to her western shores, and to some hundreds of thousands of people, in Russia extends to vast regions and to over twenty or twenty-five millions of people.

"There is another of the characteristic features of Irish life reproduced in the life of Russia, and that is the migratory laborer. Every year some ten thousand small Irish farmers pass over to England and to Scotland to reap the harvest for the farmers in these countries, and then return to their small patches to fish or look after their little holdings in the West. But in Russia some millions are on tramp in search of work during the summer and autumn months; and often when the harvest is bad and wages low they have to beg their way back to their own farms again. This is one of the reasons why begging is so common and so tolerated in Russia, and why the tramp figures so largely in the works of Gorky and other Russian writers.

"There is, in consequence, something of the same feeling towards the big land owner in Russia that there formerly was to the landlord in Ireland, and internal revolution, not against the czar, but against landlordism, is seething all through the rural districts. I believe a vast amount of pillage and murder has taken place, of which we have never heard; and that, in fact, anarchy, rather than settled government is the condition of rural Russia at this moment."

FACE TO FACE

A New Problem for Women.

In the looking-glass a woman often sees wrinkles, hollow circles under the eyes, crow's feet—all because she did not turn to the right remedy when worn down with those troubles which are distinctly feminine. Bachache, lassitude, nervousness and the pains and drains of womanhood bring such untold suffering that the face is sure to show it.

Every woman, young or old, is well protected from the blues, nervousness, backache, and the many symptoms of disease so prevalent among our women—if they will conscientiously take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a safe and sure remedy for the ills of womanhood, because it contains not a particle of alcohol, digitalis or any deleterious drugs. Weak women are made strong and sick women are made well by this splendid prescription which was used by Doctor Pierce in his large private practice in the specialty of women's diseases. Every woman troubled in this way should write him about her case, care of Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or overbusy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disease. The physician ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages this practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse, by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause, would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said that "a disease known is half cured." In cases almost innumerable, after all other medicines has failed to help and doctors had said there was no cure possible, the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, supplemented, when necessary, by the medical advice and counsel of Dr. Pierce, has resulted in a perfect and permanent cure. The genuineness of these cures is attested not only by the entire disappearance of pain, but by a gain in flesh, a clear complexion and a cheerful disposition.

THE SECRET OUT.

To refute the many false and malicious attacks, bogus formula and other untruthful statements published concerning Dr. Pierce's family medicines, the Doctor has decided to publish all the ingredients entering into his Favorite Prescription for women as follows: Blue Cohosh Root, Lady Slipper Root, Unicorn Root, Golden Seal Root and Rattle Weed Root, these ingredients being macerated for a long time in a non-alcoholic menstrum. The exact working formula for making these medicines cost Dr. Pierce and his Colaborating Chemist and Pharmacist many years of study and experiments, but as perfected they produce almost perfect pharmaceutical compounds embodying all the active, medicinal principles residing in the ingredients employed.

WARRANT OUT

For Arrest of Rufus Draper For Automobile Scorching.

Machine Was Timed as It Passed Police Headquarters.

The first automobile scorching case in the municipal court of Duluth is due to come up this afternoon, when Rufus H. Draper of 1723 East Second street will be arraigned on the charge of exceeding the speed limit.

The warrant for Mr. Draper's arrest was sworn out by Detective Schulte. It alleges that Mr. Draper "wrongfully, wilfully and unlawfully rode a vehicle, to wit, an automobile, at a speed faster than six miles an hour on the public street, to wit, Superior street, from Second avenue east to Lake avenue."

The offense is alleged to have taken place on Wednesday, June 28.

Mr. Draper was seen coming along Superior street by some of the officers, who were sitting in the window at police headquarters. It was seen that he was going at a good speed, and a watch was pulled on him just as he passed Second avenue east. According to the claim of the detective he ran the two blocks to Lake avenue in just twenty-five seconds.

Estimating the distance he traveled at 900 feet, which is a fair estimate he was running at the rate of a mile in about three minutes, or nearly twenty miles an hour.

The speed limit for this portion of the city is six miles an hour, so that the officers are convinced that an ample margin is left to allow for any possible errors in calculation.

Mr. Draper has not yet been arrested. An officer called up the house on the telephone this morning to notify him of the complaint, but it was stated that Mr. Draper was out of the city, and was not expected back until this afternoon.

As soon as he returns he will be notified of the complaint and brought into court to answer the charge.

The penalty attached to the offense is a fine not exceeding $100, or not less than $5, or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not to exceed thirty days. Under the ordinance the court may impose a jail sentence without the fine alternative.

West Duluth

J. L. Washburn who with associates, has bought about fifty acres of bay frontage at Ironton, declares that there is nothing significant in the purchase, but that it is merely a piece of speculation.

Purchaseable bay frontage is getting scarcer all the time and in fact the piece just purchased by Mr. Washburn, et al, was practically the last. The object of the purchasers was merely to get in when they could for the price of frontage on the bay is going up all the time, and the fact of the Great Northern Power company's development is expected to make the frontage a great deal more valuable on account of a demand for it that there will be from manufacturing plants.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The work on the tennis courts at Fifty-first and Ramsey is about finished. The netting is up, etc., and last night several games were played by members of the club.

A fine new refrigerator for butter and milk has been put in Dormedy's store.

Amol Gingress has returned from Iron Mountain, Mich., where he was called because of the sickness of his father.

James Dashney is down from the range.

B. F. Fisher will leave in a few days for Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada, where he will operate a mill for the Tolford Lumber company.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Keyes and daughter, Kathrine, left yesterday for Portland, Or., to attend the Lewis and Clark exposition.

Mrs. Tony Leidinger and family are leaving today for Couer d'Alene, Idaho, to join her husband, who went there last spring. He is employed by the Coeur d'Alene Lumber company as band sawyer.

Tooth brushes from 8 cents up, at Spencer's.

George Ives, with his bride, has returned to West Duluth. They were married in Alexandria a short time ago. Mrs. Ives was formerly Mrs. Hope Chapman. They are keeping house at 231 North Fifty-ninth avenue west.

The N. S. C. entertainment, scheduled for last night, was postponed, as the tanks for the 'streopticon refused to work. The affair will be held on the evening of July 6 at Great Eastern hall.

Our new price schedule of prescriptions is 40 per cent below regular old-time prices. Nygren's.

FOURS IN POKER.

Joe Bassett Tests Old Man Greenhut's Theory.

New York Sun: "I heer'd a story t'other day," said Jake Winterbottom, "about a man holdin' four aces into a poker game, an' layin' of 'em down, 'thouten a bet."

"'Peers to me I heer'd a yarn like that oncet," said Joe Bassett. "Feller didn't have his gun handy, or somepin' o' that sort."

"I heer'd somepin' o' the sort when I was to Memphis last month," said Sam Pearsall. "On'y them that was talkin' about it was sayin' as how there were another man in the game 't had a straight flush, an' give away his hand some way. 'Peared he drawed to four little spades an' catched the trey, makin' a straight f'm the deuce to the six. O' course, that'd beat four aces, an' it 'peared natural enough for t'other feller to lay down when he knowed he were beat."

"Oh, well, if he knowed the backs o' the cards that well—" began Bassett, but at this point old man Greenhut, who had been listening intently, butted into the conversation without ceremony.

"This here problem o' throwin' down four aces is easy if you on'y figger it out right," he said. "S'posing us six is playin' poker."

(Barescu and Harry Quimby were in the room, so the old man's count of six was correct.)

"You're the dealer," continued the old man, 'an' there's a jack pot. Pearsall an' Jake set next, an' they pass. Then Barescu passes, an' I open on three aces. Quimby hists me, an' you hist Quimby. Then Pearsall an' Jake drops' an' Barescu stays.

"Now, s'posin' we stick a pin in right there. What'd you reckon Barescu 'd have? You wouldn't figger on him havin' two pair. If he had, he'd ha' opened the pot, settin' where he did. Stands to reason, don't it, he must have a four flush, 'r a four straight."

"That's plain enough," growled Bassett, seeing that the old man was waiting for an answer.

"Well, naterally, me havin' three aces, stays, but don't go back again a double raise, fearin' a pat hand. An' Quimby stays, an' that makes the pot. Comin' to the draw' Barescu takes one card, an' I take two, an' Quimby an you both rest easy.

"Then I look at my draw an' find I've got the fo'th ace. Just naterally I feel good, an' I say to myself there ain't no good skeerin' you all. It's up to me to lay low, an' I chips a white chip.

"Quimby bein heavy, not seein' no reason fer to be afeer'd o' nothin' as has came to light so fur, an' you bein' filled with that there overweenin' confidence o' yourn, that's been your ondoin' more'n oncet, goes him a hundred more, an' that brings it up to Barescu.

"Then, when we all is lookin' f'r him to fold, he grins like a Chessy cat an' chucks in four or five hundred dollars worth o' chips, just like they were shavin's. An' me settin' there with four aces.

"Now, four aces is a almighty good hand, but 'tain't no more'n a busted flush when it's beat. All's a man has to do is to figger on what t'other man has. What'd you say Barescu had?"

But Bassett made no answer. He seemed to be thinking hard, and as none of the others cared to break into the conversation the old man continued after waiting a few moments for Bassett to speak.

"It 'pears like you was beginnin' to see a gre't white light, don't it?" he said, scoffingly. "Stands to reason Barescu wouldn't go back on no bluffin' proposition ag'in two pat hands an' a two-card draw.

"Not if he was sober, he wouldn't. An' if he knowed A B C in draw poker he wouldn't play no straight nor no flush to no such extent.

"There ain't but one thing f'r him to have. That's a straight flush, an' my four aces ain't no good. Just naterally I lay 'em down, don't I?"

Then there was another silence. Bassett was still pondering the problem the old man had propounded and he seemed in no hurry to speak. Finally, however, he rose and stretched himself, and said carelessly:

"Well, I reckon maybe you would lay 'em down. Some would."

Then he walked out into the street. The old man looked after him, half angry and half amused, but greatly pleased with himself.

"Joe's all right, if on'y he wa'n't so sot in his notions. He's l'arned somepin tonight, though."

It seemed altogether likely at the moment that this was true, and subsequent events indicated that he had. It was about two hours later that Bassett returned, bringing with him a stranger whom he had met at the hotel.

The two walked in and approached the bar with an evident intention of transacting business, which attracted favorable notice. The old man got busy behind the bar, and the other four, who had been thinking of the poker discussion, looked up expectantly.

The drinks were ordered and consumed, and Bassett said by way of introduction:

"Col. Slayback is a stoppin' over at Arkansas City, gentlemen, on his way up the river, an' he has told me confidential, 't his principal reason f'r stoppin' is 't he's heerd considerable about Arkansas City as a sort o' center f'r poker players. Bein' as he's some fond of poker hisself, he was a-reckin' on settin' into a game if there was one goin' on. I told him more'n likely some on us might get together an' give him a fling at it if Greenhut 'd let us have his back room."

"Why, cert'nly," said Greenhut. "I don't never play myself in my own place. Somebody has to look after things. But there's six on ye, countin' the colonel, an' if ye want to play, there's cards an' chips."

It appeared that they did want to play, and within a few minutes they were all seated in the back room. Nothing was said about the limit, and the game was therefore wide open, according to the custom of the country.

Nobody knew how much the colonel had, but he pulled a hundred dollar bill from his pocket as an initial investment, so it was natural to suppose that there might be money in sight before the end of the game. They each took a hundred in chips to start with and the game began.

It was evident from the start that the colonel was no tyro. He played coolly and cautiously, but once in a while, when nobody was expecting him to do it, he would bet boldly and heavily. If he was really bluffing on these occasions it was not discovered, for he planned his attacks carefully and made them only when he had reason to think there was nothing very strong against him.

Once he raised the opener of a jack pot when two others had come in, and each player took one card. There was some betting before it came to him, and then he took a hundred dollar bill from his wallet and threw it into the pot.

Bassett was the opener, and he called, having made a small full, but Col. Slayback showed down a straight flush and took the money.

"That comes to'able nigh bein' such a hand as I was tellin' about," said Greenhut, who was looking on, "on'y o' course there wa'n't the same opportunity o' sizin' up the colonel's hand."

The colonel looked up with some interest, and asked what the reference was, so Greenhut explained. The colonel was much impressed, and declared that he had never known of any instance in which better judgment was shown than in the laying down of four aces, under the circumstances as Greenhut told them.

After that the game progressed without special incident for fully an hour. The colonel continued to play carefully, but luck seemed to be against him, and he dropped several hundred dollars, after losing all that he won at first. He was unruffled, however, and played on as if confident of recouping before the finish of the game.

Then came a jackpot that had been sweetened till there was nearly fifty dollars in it. Winterbottom was dealing, and Pearsall and Barescu passed. Bassett sat next, and after looking once through his cards he passed also.

Col. Slayback, being next, opened the pot for fifty, and Quimby made it a hundred to play. Then Winterbottom with great deliberation pulled out a huge roll of five dollar bills and, skinning off forty of them, placed them in the center of the table.

Pearsall and Barescu threw their hands in the discard, and Bassett seemed about to do the same thing, but before doing it he looked through his hand again. Then, with an almost imperceptible start, he reached for his own wad and put in the required two hundred.

Col. Slayback studied for a few moments, but finally put in his hundred and fifty, and Quimby made good also. There was then about $850 in the pot, which was far the largest amount in any one pot of the evening before the draw.

When that was served, Bassett took one card and Slayback took two. The others stood pat.

This was a remarkable coincidence, and Pearsall and Barescu exchanged significant glances, while Greenhut, who stood by watching the game, was visibly excited. Col. Slyback also seemed disturbed, especially after he had looked at his draw, but without a word he threw in a white chip.

Quimby was evidently mindful of all that had been said, but he looked over his hand again and, finding that he still had a full house, he bet a hundred dollars. Winterbottom seemed quite undisturbed. He had a queen full on aces, and he threw in forty more five dollar bills with the utmost cheerfulness.

Bassett was like a graven image, so far as his face was concerned, and his hand was as steady as a clock when he placed his wad in the pot, without counting it. There were several hundreds in it and quite a number of smaller bills, and the colonel made no attempt to find out how much it was.

"I will acknowledge," he said, "that I would have raised you but for the story Mr. Greenhut has just told, for I made my fours, all right. But I can see how clear the case is. I drop."

This seemed to rattle Quimby and Winterbottom, and when the latter had reached forward and found a thousand and odd dollars in Bassett's roll, they both threw down their hands and Bassett took the pot.

Pearsall was picking up the cards to deal another hand when Col. Shayback announced that he had had enough.

"After having four jacks beaten," he said, "I don't feel that I'm likely to hove luck."

And he said goodnight and left.

"He's a monstrous good player," said Greenhut admiringly. "You c'n see for yourself now, Joe, how a good player plays when he's got four of a kind an' he knows he's beat. It 'd ha' been just the same if he'd had four aces."

"Yes," said Bassett, "I reckon 'twould. That's what I was figgerin' on. It didn't make no difference to me whether he had four aces or one. Ace high 'd ha' beat me."

And he showed his hand, which was nine high, without a pair.

"You're almighty peart about some things Greenhut," he said, very deliberately, "but if you was to talk less an' play more, you'd understand draw poker a heap better'n you do."

LYCEUM CLOTHING AND SHOE HOUSE,

423 W. SUPERIOR ST. LYCEUM BLDG.

WEST END.

WILL PAVE SOON

City Funds Getting Into Right Condition For Superior Street.

West First Street Property Owners Settling With the City.

The city authorities hold out some hope for the rapid completion of West Superior street in the way of paving. The assessment, as has already been noticed, is not yet on the comptroller's books, but will be shortly and a good many of the more patriotic type of West Superior street property owners are simply waiting for an opportunity to pay in their assessment and start the fund. But the city authorities say that almost every body assessed for the West First street improvement has paid up and this will put the fund in condition for the West Superior street paving.

This West Superior street paving will run from Eighth avenue west to Twenty-fourth avenue west. The vitrified brick paving ends at Eight avenue west, but the tar macadam will be put in from there on is believed by many to be a much better paving than the brick.

Every effort is being made by the patriotic ones at the West End to have property owners settle their assessments and have done with it so that the paving may go in at once. Forty days are allowed in the way of grace, but it is hoped that nobody will avail himself of this time.

PRESENTED WITH WATCH.

George M. Peterson Honored By I. O. O. F.

Zenith City lodge, No. 169, I. O. O. F. held a social session last Tuesday night at Columbia hall and passed a most pleasant evening. The lodge business came first and this was followed by refreshments after which George M. Peterson, past grand and captain of the degree team was presented with a handsome gold watch. The presentation speech was made by R. Dr Haven, who told Mr. Peterson of the esteem and honor in which the lodge held him.

Mr. Peterson was completely surprised and almost overcome with emotion. He managed to thank the members for the present and to show how much he appreciated their good feeling, but was too overcome to say much more than that.

Delights His Audience.

Rev. H. K. Madsen, pastor of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church of the West end, has just returned from Minneapolis. On last Sunday, mid-summer day he addressed a crowd of about 10,000 people in Como park, speaking on "Norway, As It Has Been and As It Is Today." Reports from the Twin Cities say that Mr. Madsen's effort was wonderful, both from an historical and an oratorical point of view. He held his audience spellbound from the start to the finish.

West End Shortrails.

The concert which is to be given this evening by the Young People's and Parthenon Societies of the Swedish Mission church promises to be an excellent one, and it is also expected that the church will be packed to the doors. Mrs. Emily Sundeen, formerly of Duluth, will be the leading soloist.

The Lake Superior & Southeastern road is continuing to obtain right-of-way property at the West end and has practically all it requires at present.

Johnson & Moe are busy decorating their store for the Fourth. Flags and streamers are being placed about the store in a style that adds brightness to the rooms and good taste to the general appearance.

The Sunday school teachers of the First Swedish Baptist church will meet this evening with Mr. and Mrs. Matt Strom of 229 Twenty-eighth avenue west.

The Epworth league concert given at the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church last Tuesday evening was a distinct success. Each number proved delightful and most acceptable.

Emil Antonson has taken out a permit to build a frame dwelling on West Sixth street between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues west. It will cost $1,500.

Mrs. Collertt of 2019 West Seventh street is at St. Mary's hospital, where she was recently operated on by Dr. Oredson. She is reported as doing nicely.

Diphtheria broke out recently in the laundries of Mr. Foreen, 1911 West Third street, and Mr. Anderson, 311 Eighteen-and-a-Half avenue west. Their physician, Dr. Oredson, declares that they are over the worst danger.

Mrs. H. K. Madsen will leave next week for Milwaukee to spend some time with friends.

JUROR PERMITTED

To Receive Cotton Quotations While Hearing Evidence.

New York, June 30.—Judge Warren W. Foster's court room was turned into a branch of the cotton exchange, while Emma Nash, a negress, was on trial charged with having killed her common law husband, Josiah Whitehurst, by stabbing him. The trial was under way when Barton S. Castles, a juror, who is a member of the cotton exchange, and a heavy speculator, asked to see Judge Foster.

"Judge," said Mr. Castles, "have a request to make, and I hope your honor will grant it. I am heavily interested in the market, and I want to receive the market quotations while I am in court. I would not be able to pay attention to the testimony while my mind was on the cotton market."

"Very well," said the pudge, "you may receive the quotations."

So all day messenger boys rushed in and out of court carrying telegrams to the juror.

A HOTEL YARN.

The fat drummer leaned over the hotel desk, and, grabbing the first piece of paper he could lay his hands on, began to figure up his expense account for the day, says the Anthony, Mo., Republican. The slip happened to be a "call" blank, and he began penciling his figures in the 3:30 column. First he jotted down $1.50 for buggy hire, then 15 cents for stamps, 35 cents for car fare, $1.60 for express charges, 50 cents for trunk straps, 5 cents for paper and a quarter for a messenger. Down at the bottom, as an afterthought, he put 40, and wrote "beer" after it. Well, at 3:30 in the morning there was trouble, and plenty of it. The night clerk supposed, of course, that the calls had been left in the ordinary way, and while he was a little surprised that so many guests should want to get up at such an unearthly hour, he told the boys to wake Nos. 150, 15, 35, 160, 110, 50, 5 and 25, and carry a quart of beer to No. 40, which happened to be occupied by a Methodist minister—that's all.

The Boy King of Uganda

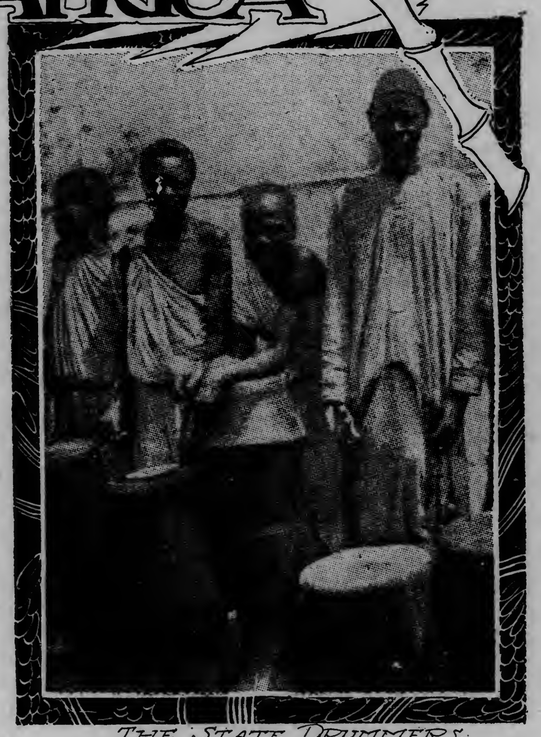
CELEBRATING THE LITTLE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

THE LITTLE KING

THE GREATEST RULER IN DARKEST AFRICA

THE LITTLE KING'S FAVORITE PET.

THE KING of the PROVINCE of TORO AND SOME of HIS CHIEFS.



THE STATE DRUMMERS.

Beyond any question the British are the exploiters of the earth. Perhaps even more remarkable than their invasion of Lahassa, the secret capital of the unknown land of Thibet, are their present explorations and developments in Uganda. For while Uganda is cut off from the rest of the world, by no such natural barriers as hedge in the mysterious land of the Lamas, yet this naturally rich country of Eastern Central Africa, with an area of 50,000 square miles and a population of over six millions, is actually far more difficult to reach, and even more difficult to get away from than the most isolated country in the Asian continent.

Stanley, who followed Livingston in Africa, and went a great deal farther than his predecessor, only skirted the edges of the vast primeval forests that hedge in Uganda along the borders of the Kitangule river and along the upper reaches of the sources of the Nile. To the north and south tremendous mountain chains bar the approach to the territory of Daudi Chwa, the son of Mwanga, the Boy King of Uganda, who styles himself, officially, the Kabaka. With three minor kings and a host of less important chiefs, he rules the African country from the edges of the Soudan down to where the continent tapers into the first beginnings of the British South African country.

The Uganda hills, covered with splendid timber and abundant underwood, rise to a height of 400 feet above their valleys, through which sluggish streams flow to the lake. Farther north the country becomes a plain, and the eastern portion of Uganda, between the Rubaga and the Nile, consists of undulating country, varied by deep, narrow valleys. The geological foundation of the country is volcanic, and two or three feet of rich black alluvial soil form the upper strata, covering a bed of sandy clay, often 30 feet thick. In some places porcelain earth is found, as well as large masses of mica, and ironstone is present in considerable quantities.

The climate is mild, and the temperature remarkably uniform throughout the year. The range is from 50 to 90 degrees. The annual rainfall is 50 inches, and the greatest amount falls in March, April, May, September, October and November, when it falls nearly every day. The population of Uganda is about six millions, including five hundred Europeans. The men are tall and well built, and have good features and dark, chocolate-colored skins, with masses of woolly hair.

The Kings of Uganda.

Nothing could better illustrate the difference between Uganda as it was and Uganda as it is than the position of the monarchy. In the old days the King could dispossess the greatest chief. General Lugard, a Frenchman who was there in 1899, says: "His voice was the voice of God to his people." His court was surrounded by a large retinue of soldiers, musicians, dwarfs, clowns, albinos, messengers, executioners and pages. Emin says that the death of the King from natural causes was considered to foreshadow misfortune to the land, and he was therefore killed by his wives (of which he had many), when his death seemed imminent.

Suna is the first historical personage in the life of Uganda. He was a cruel despot about whom Stanley has a good deal to say, and a mighty warrior who greatly extended his dominions after terrible brutalities. He was succeeded by his son, Mutesa, the first King under which Uganda became known to Europeans. He showed much cordiality to explorers and adopted Christianity. In 1879 he sent three envoys to England, but cunningly selected slaves instead of chiefs, so that this Christianity was not more than skin deep. For a time he was enamored of Islam, and gave the French priests much trouble. He was a remarkable man, and could read and write Arabic in addition to many African dialects, especially Swahili. He died in the autumn of 1884 and, contrary to custom of Uganda, was buried in a huge grave. He was succeeded by Mwanga, who bore him such a strong likeness that it left no doubt as to his paternity. Mwanga, who was born in 1866, soon began, in the words of General Lugard, to play the part of Rehoboam. His reign was full of blood and terror. At last, in 1899, he was captured by Lieutenant Colonel Ewart and deported to the coast, where he died on May 8, 1903.

The Little King Who Rules Now.

The present King, Daudi Chwa, is the son of Mwanga. The little boy was proclaimed King when his father bolted, and is now under the regency of three native chiefs, so that when he comes into his own he will find the country better off than did any of his predecessors. He is entitled to a salute of 11 guns, and has a minimum civil list of $7000 a year out of native revenues.

Prime Minister Is Up-to-Date.

Uganda undoubtedly owes much of its success to Apolo Kagwa, the Katikiro or Prime Minister, who came to England for the coronation. He is a very muscular man of 6 feet 3 inches, and is of absolutely unmixed negro race. He is the grandson of a great chief, Bunya, and belongs to the clan of the "Nsenene," or Grasshoppers. He began life as a page to King Mwanga, and narrowly escaped death at the hands of that cruel monarch. He is pro-European to a degree, availing himself of all sorts of inventions, and his eldest son is now at a small preparatory school near Cambridge. He has four daughters and three other sons. Apolo is the Uganda rendering of Apollos, the first Gentile convert to Christianity.

The Prime Minister's Secretary.

Ham Mukasa, the able secretary of the Katikiro, who really wrote the book for his master, belongs to the clan of the Mambra. He is about 36 years old, and became converted to Christianity as a lad of 19. He began his courtly career when a page to King Mutesa, and was lamed permanently in the war between the Christians and Mohammedans. He writes and speaks English fairly well and has written in the Uganda language a commentary of the Gospel of St. Matthew. Despite his lame leg he is an ardent bicyclist. Ham Mukasa is not so dark as the Prime Minister.

Daudi Chwa Has Three Sub-Kings.

There are three other kings—of Unyoro, Toro and Ankole—together with a host of less important chiefs. The native Parliament is called "Lukiko." The administration of Uganda was fixed on definite lines by an agreement of March 10, 1900, when the rights of all its rulers were clearly defined. The natives are ordinarily under the rule of their own chiefs, but in the organized districts the commissioner alone has the power of life or death, of levying taxes and so on. Mukasa owns the island of Lujabwa, which was given to him by Mwanga. He is one of the guardians of the little King.

Wgand Women Are Pretty.

The women in their youth are good-looking. The country is divided into three provinces—Udda in the South, Sungo in the west and Changwe in the east, to which must be added about 400 islands in the lake. The government of the country is feudal, the King being nominally supreme. Succession to the throne is hereditary, but the successor is usually a minor chosen by three hereditary chiefs, who, with the young King's mother, carry on the Government until he is of age.

Claim Descent From Ham of Bible.

The reigning family in Uganda is descended from the Wahuma tribe; the late King Metesa professed to trace back his descent to Kintu (or Ham), the founder of the dynasty. The country is ruled by the King, three hereditary chiefs and a council of minor chiefs; two of the hereditary chiefs and a certain proportion of the other being continually in residence at Rubaga, the capital of the country. There is no real taxation, but the people are compelled to render feudal service to all their superiors.

The people are divided into four classes, the lowest class being the slave population, consisting of prisoners taken in war and their descendants. Next come the "bachopi" or peasants, who form the mass of the population; the third class are the "batongoli," or chiefs, who are recruited from the bachopi, but whose honors are not hereditary. They receive their rank for distinguished bravery in the field for services rendered to the State, and they are the Governors of the villages. The highest class is that of the "bakungu," a superior grade of chiefs, all belonging to the "luchiko" or State council, and being governors of large districts of land.

Lions and leopards are numerous, living upon antelopes and wild and tame cattle, the river and lakes abound in crocodiles, feeding upon the fish, many of which are wholesome for food. In the eastern sections of the protectorate granite and gneiss are prominent; in the central regions quartz, sandstone and basalt are added; around Lake Rudolf lave and tuff are superimposed on the foregoing formations. Iron ore abounds. Gold has been discovered in the north, and there are promising indications that many varieties of precious stones and metals will be found. Rubber, ivory and hides are the leading articles of trade. Not a little has been done toward improving the country by building substantial houses and making good roads. The commerce is chiefly in the hands of the Germans, British, Indians and native dealers, and is slowly developing.

When the Soudan railway, constructed by Lord Kitchener, pushes south to the Uganda road, which ends at the Kitangle river bank, Uganda will be wiped off the mystery map of the world, which has, under British energy, shrunk to a tiny spot on the surface of the globe.

The "Plougastels,"

Some distinctive and curious marriage customs prevail among the "Plougastels," a strange race of people (thought by some to be of Asiatic origin) inhabiting Plougastel Daoulas, in Brittany. They are great strawberry growers. They are also noted for intermarrying exclusively with each other. The alliances, which are engineered by an intermediary known as the Basralaine, all take place on one day—a Tuesday—early in the new year. The Basralaines start their campaign early in September, as soon as the harvest is gathered in, demanding, on behalf of the intending bridegroom, the hand of his bride-elect. The courtship is then authorized, and proceeds with ardor during the dark months which follow. Last year the nuptial ceremony occurred on January 12, when 23 couples received the benediction of the church. They issue (not in pairs) from the church of Plougastel Daoulas after the ceremony. Then follows much dancing and feasting. The great dinner which is served at the numerous inns begins at 2 o'clock, and lasts well on to midnight. The favorite dish is tripe, and an inordinate quantity of alcohol is consumed—one would like to know with what results.

The whole place is en fete during the marriages, and there are never fewer than 2,000 guests. After the orgy the united couples repair to their separate homes. They do not take up their joint life until the following evening (after the service for the dead and a second feast), when they are escorted to the bridal chamber by a large contingent of groomsmen and bridesmaids, to whom soup and cakes are presented by the newly married couples.

Insects in Closets

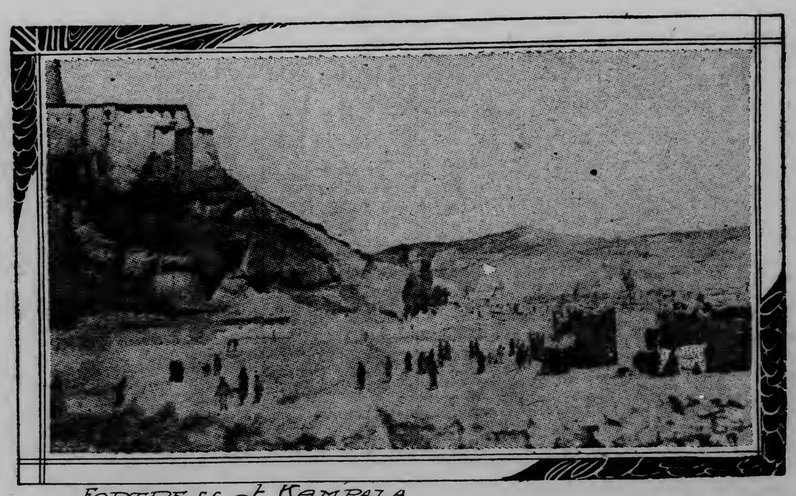
May be exterminated by the use of carbolic water. Dissolve four ounces of the crystals and pour into a bottle containing one pint of cold water. To each gallon of clean water add two tablespoonfuls of this liquid. The water must reach every crack in the closet or drawer. When the water is prepared with the carbolic crystals the odor is not unpleasant and soon passes off.



FORTRESS at KAMPALA

Queer Stories From the Russian Camp.

After the battle of Taschischao a correspondent of the Russian journal Zhizn wrote home: "Before burial the pockets of all men are searched and an inventory made of any valuables, so that they may be returned to relatives. The tent of Staff Captain Biriieff, who is intrusted with this duty, is a perfect museum. In addition to valuables may be seen hundreds of worthless but curious things. There are hundreds of buttons and hooks, scores of nails and dozens of detachable parts of rifles. I noticed a camera lens, a roll of typewriter ribbon, a linen collar about three inches high, the ivory key of a piano and the scone of a candlestick. From one soldier's pocket were produced four pipe mouthpieces but no bowl."

Fish-hooks by the hundred are found on the bodies of Japanese. "We once found a Manchurian trout nearly dead," says another correspondent; "the Japanese had evidently caught it just before the battle." A stranger thing is the way live stock came from the pocket of a sergeant buried after Turentcheng battle in the shape of a live mouse imprisoned in a soap box. "The mouse, which had survived its captor," writes the correspondent, "was released in excellent health and scampered away, no doubt congratulating itself on having come unscathed out of one of the fiercest battles on record."

A box of live spiders was taken from the pocket of a Japanese soldier killed at Motienling. On other bodies were found cocoons of silk worms. "Last messages" are often found in the pockets of the Czar's superstitious Tommies. "I, Feodor Mirkoff, knows by signs in the sky that I will die tomorrow. Pray for my soul," was the testament of a victim of Liaoyang battle. Another message read: "If I am killed, good Christians, do not bury my body near the running water." And yet another: "Leave me three days to make sure I am dead."

The foppish tastes of even the most ignorant soldiers are often discovered only after their death. In the pocket of a Polish private killed in a skirmish on the Korean frontier were found a box of manicure instruments, a jar of pomade and a small bottle of rose water. The turning out of another man's pockets brought to light no fewer than seven photographs of himself taken in different poses. Books are found by the dozen. Describing a collection of personal property collected from the fallen after the battle of Telissu, a Siberian newspaper says: "From the pockets of a man who did not know how to read his own language came an English Testament. Another of the Russian illiterate soldiers had collected loose pages from half a dozen books. Some were Russian, but others French and German. He evidently regarded them as fetish."

Daintily executed drawings were found by the Russians on the persons of many Japanese. Some showed scenes of Japanese life, others were drawings of battles, while a few soldiers had evidently spent their spare time caricaturing their foes. A Moscow illustrated paper recently reproduced one of these caricatures in which Kuropatkin was depicted surrounded by the Japanese forces and saying, "How pleasant! I am now saved from being killed by Poles or Nihilists."

Bottles filled with quaint medicines are sometimes brought to light. Many dead Russians carried bottles of olive oil, and on inquiry being made by the officers it appeared that the men had been informed by some practical joker that olive oil was a sure preventive against dysentery. Bottles containing an infusion of millet seed were taken from the pockets of other men. Queer smoking appliances are occasionally found. A pipe made by fixing a tube to a wooden pill box came from the pockets of a Cossack. "The pipe," says the narrator, "was filled with tobacco and had never been smoked; but the finder calmly lit it, took a puff and passed it to his comrades."

Mike—No, but Oi whint to the theatre the other night and Oi think one of the stars was half shot.

Care of the Eyes.

Avoid bright light after coming from the dark or looking steadily at a flame of light.

Never read books or papers with small print in a poor light; not at all would be better.

When reading lean well back, holding up the book and allowing the light to fall on it from the side.

Using any drugs in the eyes to make them appear larger is sure to result in permanent injury to the sight.

Always shield a baby's eyes from the sun or strong light while sleeping or the sight may become weak.

For styes on the eyes try bathing them with milk or applying cold tea leaves, as these often give relief.

Old people who suffer from aching and tired eyes should bathe them in hot water, as in cases of advancing years this gives more relief than in cold applications.

Even when the eyes are in good condition they are benefited by occasionally bathing them in cold salt water, and when they have been overtaxed this will be found to afford great relief.

Never abuse the eyes. If you feel that they need medical attention in any way consult the best oculist you know at once.

Many latent troubles are first discovered by a specialist. These are usually a sign of delicacy of constitution; they are common in badly nourished children. Cod-liver oil, with a quinine bark or iron tonic and plenty of milk and fresh air are the grand remedies. Overmuch study should be avoided and going out in wet or even damp weather.

ANOTHER BULGE

Weather and Foreign Condition Again Force Wheat Upward.

Rains In Southwest and Disturbing Ohio Valley Report.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 30.—The wheat market opened easy this morning under the influence of clear weather in the Northwest, but had a sharp bulge later, owing to heavy rains in the Southwest, three inches being reported at one point, and predictions of more rain. The Russian situation which grows more acute is also responsible for a considerable part of the bullish sentiment that prevails. The market seems to be in condition to respond to anything of a bullish nature that arises.

Inglis reported that he had finished his inspection of the Ohio valley and that the splendid prospects there had been cut down by blight and rust and that the quality has deteriorated.

The Liverpool market closed ½@¾d higher.

The September option advanced 2c for the new and 2½c for the old in Duluth, 2½c in Minneapolis, 1⅛-¼c¼ in Chicago, 1½c in New York, ⅞c in St. Louis and 1½c in Kansas City.

Stocks of wheat are expected to decrease 225,000 bus. this week. This will leave them not very far above the half million mark and before July closes there should be nothing left here.

Car receipts at Duluth were 5, against 29 last year, and at Minneapolis 164 against 182 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 169, against 222 last year. Chicago received none, against 14 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 291,000 bus., last year 262,000 bus. Shipments 186,000 bus., last year 123,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 55,000 bus.

Argentine shipments this week amount to 2,896,000 bushels, against 2,616,000 bushels last week, and 1,128,000 bushels last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅛@¼d lower. In the Chicago market September corn closed a shade higher. September oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 830,000 bushels, last year 381,000 bushels. Shipments 352,000 bushels, last year 527,000 bushels. Clearances were 148,000 bushels. Argentine shipments this week are 3,029,000 bushels, against 2,136,000 bushels, last week, and 1,716,000 bushels last year.

Trading in the Duluth market in wheat was fairly active. The new September option opened ¼c lower at 87¾c and bulged to 90c at 11:14, falling back to 89¾c at 12:15. It steadied again to 90c at 12:55, and closed there, a gain for the day of 2c. The old September also opened ¼c lower, and in its advance kept even pace with the new option, but at the close it was ¼c stronger, closing with an advance of 2⅛c at 95¾c.

Flax was very dull. The October option advanced ½c to $1.27, and closed ¼c higher at $1.26¾. September and July were unchanged. Stocks of flax at Duluth are estimated to increase 120,000 bushels this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week amount to 336,000 bushels, against 256,000 bushels last week, and 224,000 bushels last year.

Oats and rye showed no change.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Firm Undertone Prevails In the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, June 30.—A firm undertone prevailed in the wheat pit here today as a result of the heavy rain in Kansas and higher cables. Clear weather in the Northwest had a bearish influence at the start. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 91¾c to 92⅛c. After touching 91⅝c, the price rallied to 92¾c and steadied around 92¼c. September opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 88½c to 89¼c, sold up to 88⅞c and then eased off to 88½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 169 cars against 168 cars last week and 236 cars a year ago.

Later the market developed decided strength, prices showing sharp advances. Predictions of rain west and southwest started urgent covering by shorts, resulting in July advancing to 94c and September to 90¼c. Although part of the gain was subsequently lost the market closed strong, with September up 1⅛@1¼c at 89⅝@⅞c. July was up 1⅝c at 93⅝c.

A rise in temperature had a depressing effect on corn, the weather being extremely favorable for the rapid development of the crop. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 54⅞c to 55⅛c and held within the opening range. September opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 54c to 54¼c, sold up to 54⅝c and then reacted to 54¼c. Local receipts were 605 cars with 177 of contract grade.

On the bulge in wheat the market became a trifle firmer. For July the close was at the highest point of the day at 56½@⅝c, a net gain of ⅝@½c. September closed a shade higher at 54¼@⅞c.

Oats were easy under moderate selling by pit traders. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 32¼@⅜c and eased off to 32⅛c. September opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 31¼c to 31⅜c, sold at 31½@⅝c and then declined to 31¼c. Local receipts were 101 cars.

September pork was off 5c at $12.95. Lard was a shade lower at $7.45. Ribs were unchanged at $7.92½.

Close: Wheat—July, 93⅝c; Sept., 89⅝@⅞c; Dec., 89¼c. Corn—July, 55½@⅝c; old, 56c; Sept. 54½@⅝c; old, 54⅝@¾c; Dec., 49¼c; old 51¼c; May, 48⅞c. Oats—June, 32½c; July, 32⅜c; Sept., 31⅜c; Dec., 32¼c; May, 33¾c. Pork—July, $12.62½; Sept., $12.95; Oct., $13.00. Lard—July, $7.27½; Sept., $7.47½; Oct., $7.52½; Dec., $7.10. Ribs—July, $7.70; Sept., $7.95@7.97½; Oct., $7.97½@8.00. Rye—July, 66½c; Sept., 65¢¼c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.25. Barley—Cash, 42@56c. Clover—June, $12.75. Timothy—June, $3.25; Sept., $3.45; March, $3.70. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.04; 3 red, 96c@$1.00; 2 hard, $1.06; 3 hard, 97c@$1.03; 1 northern, $1.20; 2 northern, $1.10@1.15; 3 spring, $1.06@1.10. Corn—2, 56@½c; 3, 56@¼c. Oats—2, 31¾@32c; 3, 31½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The low point in today's market was made immediately after the opening and as in the past two or three sessions the market at the low point from its action clearly indicated that offerings have dried up suddenly, leaving the market bare. Undoubtedly the predictions for rain through the spring wheat country and through the greater part of the winter wheat belt gave zest to the buying. The market has developed into a great big public affair. Trade is very broad and the buying power seems to be without limit. Until the cash demand flattens out absolutely and the weather takes t turn for the batter, we feel the short side is extremely dangerous. On sudden sharp bulges we rather favor taking profits with a view of buying back on reactions. Would still buy wheat on set-backs.

Corn—The action of today's market was certainly most disappointing in view of the pronounced strength displayed by the wheat. At one time during the session it seemed as if the market would scarcely hold its own, but the close found prices ⅜c to ⅝c higher, which represents purely a sympathetic move with wheat. The weather map which promises to be slightly unfavorable, but the market does not act any too strong and we feel would still avoid buying on thebulges.

Oats—The trade is now by any means broad. There has been some good buying in this market based on the Odessa incident. At best it is a slow trading market.

Provisions—Hog prices closed more active and firm though the speculative market seemed to suffer from liquidation. Aside from this fact the market had no special feature.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Another day of advancing prices. Closing prices compared with yesterday show a net advance of even 2c and still higher prices are predicted. The Modern Miller is rather bullish, and new factors are constantly coming to light, among them the scare now in Odessa. The situation looks strong and we believe that purchases of the brakes should yield good returns.

• • •

Ben Bryan, Chicago: As wired yesterday, I feel that some wheat profits should be taken on all bulges. We have had a lot of steam on, and while it is true the Russian situation might become very serious, would only buy wheat on the weak spots. Shorts has been covered freely and a good many people went long yesterday who were bearish at much lower prices. As I said before, I expect September wheat to sell in the 90's, but feel it is wise to buy only on soft spots. Still feel that September corn should be sold on all bulges with stop-loss orders back.

STRONG APPEAL

To President to Recognize Government of Norway.

Chicago, June 30.—The petition which has been forwarded to President Roosevelt, signed by nearly 20,000 Norwegians, residing in or near Chicago, asking recognition of the new government of Norway, quotes the resolution adopted by the Norwegian stortohing on June 7, and then says:

"We, citizens of Norwegian birth or blood, do earnestly hope and respectfully petition you that you will at the earliest opportunity signify your recognition of the new government of Norway, created by the sovereign will of the people through their representatives in the storthing."

In a letter accompanying the petition, Frederick Gade, chairman of the committee having the petition in charge, writes to President Roosevelt as follows:

"This government is a de facto government in full, complete, peaceable control and occupation of the governmental functions and machinery of the country, was established by the unanimous action of the representatives of the people and is supported by the entire people of Norway. Nearly one-third of the entire Norwegian population of the world resides in the United States under your care and protection and these citizens of the United States, following the events in their old home with the deepest interest and concern earnestly hope that their country of adoption will be the first to accord friendly recognition to their country of birth."

PROFIT RETURNED.

Two More Equitable Directors Send Back Money.

New York, June 30.—It was announced at the office of Chairman Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance society, today, that H. C. Deming, president of the Mercantile Trust company of this city, and Valentine P. Snyder, president of the National Bank of Commerce of this city, have returned to the Equitable society their respective shares in the profits of the syndicate known as "James H. Hyde and associates." The syndicate, according to the report of State Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks, sold bonds to the Equitable society at a total profit of $186,107 of which Mr. Deming received $4,576 and Mr. Snyder $1,510. Both were directors of the society.

To the Stock Market But the Tone Quite Firm.

Russian Situation and Call Money Bulge Caused Declines.

New York, June 30.—Some large blocks of the principal active stocks were thrown on the market at the opening in continuation of yesterday's realizing movement and sharp losses resulted. Reading and Louisville & Nashville, were carried down over a point, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and United States Steel preferred about a point and Locomotive and Baltimore & Ohio large fractions.

A pause in the selling enabled the favorites to make up a good part of their losses. Purchases, however, increased visibly as the market went up which encouraged later selling, in which St. Paul and Pennsylvania were offered freely. A two-point advance in Metropolitan Street Railway and manifest good support in Union Pacific were ignored as sustaining factors. Pennsylvania, Wheeling & Lake Erie, Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Steel Foundries preferred declined a point and Northwestern 2. Metropolitan Securities rose 1 and Havana Electric preferred 6¼.

Prices moved towards recovery led by the coalers. The second preferred rose 1½ and Ontario & Western 1¼ and some fractional gains were established. United Railway Investment advanced 2½ and Consolidated Gas 1¼, while Foundries preferred fell 2 and Iowa Central ¾. Bonds were firm at noon.

Stock prices showed little if any reflection of the 6 per cent call money rate. Erie second preferred continued to go up until it crossed 71, but other stocks were not essentially changed from the noon figures.

Business was only of nominal proportions, the indifferent speculation driving many of the traders away for a prolonged holiday. The undertone was that prices only a few stocks did more than recover their morning losses. Metropolitan Street Railway reached 128 and pulled Brooklyn Transit up a point and Metropolitan Securities 2. Pacific Mail ran off 1, American Car and Foundry 1¼ and United States Rubber 1½.

Renewed buying of the Erie carried them to the top level. The general market was dull and hard, but Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred, Wabash and the preferred declined 1 to 1¼. The decline in the call loan rate to 3 per cent relieved the market from pressure and the closing was steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market is closing somewhat irregular, but on the whole the tone is not at all bad. The volume of business shows some decrease but, as compared with the early part of the month, it is a great, big market. The action of Union Pacific is somewhat disappointing, and seems to indicate some difference of opinion in the directory as to the next dividend payment. The action of the market does not reflect any uneasiness over the foreign political situation. Opinions on the bank statement are somewhat mixed, but from what we know banks will probably lose 1½ million for the week. On recessions we would buy stocks.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been dull and irregular today. There were declines through the list due to the critical Russian situation, and the bulge in call money. The list became very dull late in the day and showed some disposition to rally at the close. The most promising feature was Brooklyn. The market was dull, but firm at the close.

• • •

Waldorf to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: Despite the fact that the governing committee of the stock exchange has decided to keep the exchange open next Monday many traders will leave the street tomorrow not to rturn until next Wednesday. Their best sentiment, however, continues bullish and the belief is strong tonight that after the Fourth of July greater activity and higher prices will be seen.

Under the leadership of Standard Oil, the large financial interests are ranged on the long side although not aggressively bulling the market, but when it can be seen that the average crops are assured, it is believed that the magnates will create a market of great breadth. It is also the opinion of experienced brokers that the large interests will, as in the event of good harvests, get a big public following. Increased dividends are making a decided change in sentiment and it is apparent that the public is very favorably impressed by them. This would not be the case if the increased payments in contemplation would not be justified. As a matter of fact, these large dividends are exceeded by net incomes. Take the Reading, whose common stock has just been placed on the 4 per cent basis. Over 10 per cent will be shown on this stock for the year ending June 30. This takes no account of earnings of the Reading Iron company, owned by the Reading and which give the latter over 2 per cent additional earned on its common stock. Here is the basis of the great movement in these shares during the past year. There are no indications that this movement has culminated either. Edward Wassermann of Wassermann Bros., who have been the largest buyers of Reading common throughout its great advance, said: "There is only one Pennsylvania. There is only one anthracite region. There is only one Reading and it is the largest owner of coal lands in that region. Years ago when the late George Osgood was building the Lackawanna his great argument was that the production of anthracite would rise to 25,000,000 a year. It was less than 20,000,000. It is now nearly 60,000,000, in a few more years it will be 75,000,000. The world moves. The new building where my firm has offices consumes sixteen tons of anthracite a day. The buildings it displaced did not consume two. The increase in population and business is bound to increase the demand for anthracite. These things have made me a great bull on Reading common for more than a year and I am happy in knowing that those friends who have followed me have made money. My confidence today in the stock is greater than ever. I believe, and will wager, it will cross Union Pacific within a year and I think well of Union Pacific at that. I firmly believe it will sell above Pennsylvania in three years, and I'm a great bull on Pennsylvania at that."

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was very quiet, with no feature of special interest. One lot of 1,000 Copper Range was sold between 69 and 68½. Tamarack was slightly stronger with very small sales. Osceola also was very scarce. We advise buying the medium priced copper stocks every time they are weak.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 30.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 12 to 15 points in response to higher cables and strong spot market advices. July ruled very firm and tended to support the entire list, which during the middle of the morning was about 11 to 18 points net higher.

Spot closed quiet, 25 points higher; middling uplands, 10.15; ditto gulf, 10.40. Sales none. Futures closed steady; July, 9.65; August, 9.68; September, 9.73; October, 9.75; November, 9.82; December, 9.87; January, 9.90; February, 9.92; March, 994; April, 9.96; May, 9.98.

WALLACE THREATENS

To Make Statement Which Will Cause Investigation.

New York, June 30.—A statement published today by the Times credits to a "confidential representative" of John F. Wallace, whose resignation as chief engineer of the Panama canal has just been accepted by the government, declares that when Mr. Wallace accepted the place it was his purpose to remain in charge of the construction of the canal until its completion. The "confidential representative" declares that Engineer Wallace will soon present his side of the case to the public in a statement, which will conclusively show that he was justified in tendering his resignation, and will cause an investigation to be made.

The offer that induced Chief Engineer John F. Wallace to quit his post on the Panama canal came from the Interborough Rapid Transit company of this city, operating the elevated and subway lines, and carries with it a salary of $60,000 a year.

WOMEN OPEN SESSION.

Portland, Or., June 30.—The opening session of the National Woman's Suffrage society was presided over by Rev. Anna Shaw. Speeches of welcome were made by women representing the local W. C. T. U., and women's clubs, followed by a response by Miss Susan B. Anthony. No other business was transacted at the session.

O'REILLY'S DAUGHTER WEDS.

Boston, June 30.—Miss Agnes Boyle O'Reilly, third daughter of the Irish poet and patriot, John Boyle O'Reilly, has been married to Ernest Hocking, professor of philosophy at Phillips Andover academy. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. M. Crothers, a Unitarian clergyman of Cambridge after the bride had tried in vain to procure a Roman Catholic priest to officiate, Archbishop Williams having refused his permission. The marriage occurred at the bride's home in Brookline.

THREE DROWNED.

Scottsboro, Ala., June 30.—Philip Hill, Henry Martin and a little daughter of Martin have been drowned while attempting to drive across a swollen stream.

ALLEGE JUDGE IS PREJUDICED; STRIKERS ASK CHANGE OF VENUE

Chicago, June 30.—The men who drive express and parcel delivery wagons in Chicago, 500 in number, halted on the verge of declaring a strike early today. Four hours of argument were required on the part of conservative leaders to prevent radical action.

As a compromise five men from the union were appointed to visit three local express companies today with an ultimatum. The power of ordering a strike against one or all of the concerns in the furniture and expressmen's association rests with the committee.

John V. Farwell, Jr., representing the employers, has announced that no more conferences will be held with the teamsters' committees.

Members of the Furniture and Expressmen's association, against whom injunction proceedings have been started to compel them to deliver to strike-bound houses, went before Judge Holdom today to ask for a change of venue. Attorney James Brady, counsel for the parcel express companies, served notice on the employers' association that he would ask for a change on the ground that Judge Holdom is prejudiced.

HILL'S CHAUFFEUR KILLS WOMAN

New York, June 30.—Frank C. Foote, a chauffeur for James J. Hill of the Great Northern railroad, while running an automobile, today, ran over and fatally injured an unknown woman at Charles and Greenwich streets. The woman died half an hour later. Foote was remanded to the custody of the coroner.

He was on his way to court to be tried on a charge of speeding the car when he struck the woman. The police say Foote was running the machine carefully and that the woman's death was purely accidental.

SOME CHARTERS FOR CORN.

Chicago, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two or three charters were made today at 1⅜c on corn and a fair amount of business will be gathered in before night at that rate. The three days of idleness on the board of trade caused vesselmen to get their boats in out of the wet before Saturday noon and the fleet which will be ready to load before Wednesday was well taken care of.

NEW BOAT ORDERED.

Cleveland, June 30.—Henry Hawgood, president of the Hawgood Transit company yesterday placed an order for a 10,000 ton ship to take the place of the steamer Etruria, lost in collision on Lake Huron, two weeks ago. The new boat will come out in April, 1906, and will be a duplicate of the steamers Lyman C. Smith and Amasa Stone, which sank the Etruria. The steamer will be 545 feet long over all, 525 feet keel, 55 feet beam and 31 feet deep. She will have triple expansion engines and Scotch boilers.

THE PAINE LAUNCHED.

Cleveland, June 30.—The steamer William Paine, named for the president of the Copper Range Consolidated company and christened by Miss Ruth Paine, his daughter, was launched at the local yard of the American Shipbuilding company yesterday afternoon. The new boat will have a carrying capacity of 9,000 tons and will cost $300,000. The boat is building for C. L. Hutchinson and others and will be ready for service Aug. 1. Capt. W. P. Benham, now on the steamer Martin Mullen, will sail the Paine.

ANOTHER BULGE

Weather and Foreign Condition Again Force Wheat Upward.

Rains In Southwest and Disturbing Ohio Valley Report.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 30.—The wheat market opened easy this morning under the influence of clear weather in the Northwest, but had a sharp bulge later, owing to heavy rains in the Southwest, three inches being reported at one point, and predictions of more rain. The Russian situation which grows more acute is also responsible for a considerable part of the bullish sentiment that prevails. The market seems to be in condition to respond to anything of a bullish nature that arises.

Inglis reported that he had finished his inspection of the Ohio valley and that the splendid prospects there had been cut down by blight and rust and that the quality has deteriorated.

The Liverpool market closed ½@¾d higher.

The September option advanced 2c for the new and 2½c for the old in Duluth, 2½c in Minneapolis, 1⅞-½c¼ in Chicago, 1½c in New York, ⅞c in St. Louis and 1½c in Kansas City.

Stocks of wheat are expected to decrease 225,000 bus. this week. This will leave them not very far above the half million mark and before July closes there should be nothing left here.

Car receipts at Duluth were 5, against 23 last year, and at Minneapolis 164 against 182 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 169, against 222 last year. Chicago received none, against 14 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 291,000 bus., last year 262,000 bus. Shipments 166,000 bus., last year 123,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 55,000 bus.

Argentine shipments this week amount to 2,896,000 bushels, against 2,616,000 bushels last week, and 1,128,000 bushels last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½@¼d lower. In the Chicago market September corn closed a shade higher. September oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 830,000 bushels, last year 381,000 bushels. Shipments 352,000 bushels, last year 527,000 bushels. Clearances were 148,000 bushels. Argentine shipments this week are 3,029,000 bushels, against 2,136,000 bushels, last week, and 1,716,000 bushels last year.

Trading in the Duluth market in wheat was fairly active. The new September option opened ½c lower at 87¾c and bulged to 90c at 11:14, falling back to 89¾c at 12:10. It steadied again to 90c at 12:55, and closed there, a gain for the day of 2c. The old September also opened ¼c lower, and in its advance kept even pace with the new option, but at the close it was ¼c stronger, closing with an advance of 2⅛c at 95¾c.

Flax was very dull. The October option advanced ½c to $1.27, and closed ¼c higher at $1.26⅜. September and July were unchanged. Stocks of flax at Duluth are estimated to increase 120,000 bushels this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week amount to 256,000 bushels, against 256,000 bushels last week, and 224,000 bushels last year.

Oats and rye showed no change.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11⅞; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.11⅞; No. 2 northern, $1.03⅞. Durum, No. 1, 86c; No. 2, 85c; July, $1.11⅞; September new, 90c; September old, 95¾c. Flax to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.45; September, $1.29; October, $1.26¾. Oats to arrive, 32¾c; on track, 32¾c. Rye on track, 72c. Barley: Feed, 39½@41c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 5; last year, 29; oats, 11; barley, 3; flax, 6; last year, 17.

Receipts: Wheat, 15,866; oats, 8,156; barley, 3,159; flax, 4567.

Shipments: Wheat, 6,874; flax, 5,049.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Firm Undertone Prevails In the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, June 30.—A firm undertone prevailed in the wheat pit here today as a result of the heavy rain in Kansas and higher cables. Clear weather in the Northwest had a bearish influence at the start. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 91¾c to 92¼c. After touching 91⅝c, the price rallied to 92⅜c and steadied around 92¼c. September opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 88⅝c, sold up to 88⅞c and then eased off to 88½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 169 cars against 168 cars last week and 236 cars a year ago.

Later the market developed decided strength, prices showing sharp advances. Predictions of rain west and southwest started urgent covering by shorts, resulting in July advancing to 93⅝ and September to 90¼c. Although part of the gain was subsequently lost the market closed strong, with September up 1⅛@1¼c at 89⅝@89⅞c. July was up 1⅝c at 93⅜c.

A rise in temperature had a depressing effect on corn, the weather being extremely favorable for the rapid development of the crop. July opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 54⅞c to 55⅛c and held within the opening range. September opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 54c to 54¼c, sold up to 54⅝c and then reacted to 54¼c. Local receipts were 605 cars with 177 of contract grade.

On the bulge in wheat the market became a trifle firmer. For July the close was at the highest point of the day at 60¼@⅝c, a net gain of 5@⅝c. September closed a shade higher at 54¼@⅝c.

Oats were easy under moderate selling by pit traders. July opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 32¼@⅜c and eased off to 32¼c. September opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 31⅛c to 31⅜c, sold at 31½@⅝c and then declined to 31⅛c. Local receipts were 101 cars.

September pork was off 5c at $12.95. Lard was a shade lower at $7.45. Ribs were unchanged at $7.92½.

Close: Wheat—July, 93⅝c; Sept., 89⅝@⅝c; Dec., 89¼c. Corn—July, 55½@⅝c; old, 56c; Sept., 54¼@⅝c; old, 54⅝@⅝c; Dec., 49¼c; old 51¼c; May, 48⅞c. Oats—June, 22½c; July, 32⅜c; Sept., 31⅛c; Dec., 31¼c; May, 33⅝c. Pork—July, $12.62½; Sept., $12.95; Oct., $13.00. Lard—July, $7.27½; Sept., $7.47½; Oct., $7.52½; Dec., $7.10. Ribs—July, $7.70; Sept., $7.95@7.97½; Oct., $7.97½@8.00. Rye—July, 60½c; Sept., 56½c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.25. Barley—Cash, 42@56c. Clover—June, $12.75. Timothy—June, $3.25; Sept., $3.45; March, $3.70. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.01; 3 red, 95c@$1.00; 2 hard, $1.06; 3 hard, 97c@$1.03; 1 northern, $1.20; 2 northern, $1.10@1.15; 3 spring, $1.05@1.10. Corn—2, 56@56½c; 3, 56@⅝c. Oats—2, 33¾@33c; 3, 31½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The low point in today's market was made immediately after the opening and as in the past two or three sessions the market at the low point from its action clearly indicated that offerings have dried up suddenly, leaving the market bare. Undoubtedly the predictions for rain through the spring wheat country and through the greater part of the winter wheat belt gave zest to the buying. The market has developed into a great big public affair. Trade is very broad and the buying power seems to be without limit. Until the cash demand flattens out absolutely and the weather takes t turn for the better, we feel the short side is extremely dangerous. On sudden sharp bulges we rather favor taking profits with a view of buying back on reactions. Would still buy wheat on set-backs.

Corn—The action of today's market was certainly most disappointing in view of the pronounced strength displayed by the wheat. At one time during the session it seemed as if the market would scarcely hold its own, but the close found prices ⅜c to ⅝c higher, which represents merely a sympathetic move with wheat. The weather map which promises to be slightly unfavorable, but the market does not act any too strong and we feel would still avoid buying on thebulges.

Oats—The trade is not by any means broad. There has been some good buying in this market based on the Odessa incident. At best it is a slow trading market.

Provisions—Hog prices closed more active and firm though the speculative market seemed to suffer from liquidation. Aside from this fact the market had no special feature.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Another day of advancing prices. Closing prices compared with yesterday show a net advance of even 2c and still higher prices are predicted. The Modern Miller is rather bullish, and new factors are constantly coming to light, among them the scare now in Odessa. The situation looks strong and we believe that purchases of the brakes should yield good returns.

• • •

Ben Bryan, Chicago: As wired yesterday, I feel that some wheat profits should be taken on all bulges. We have had a lot of steam on, and while it is true the Russian situation might become very serious, would only buy wheat on the weak spots. Shorts have covered freely and a good many people went long yesterday who were bearish at much lower prices. As I said before, I expect September wheat to sell in the 90's, but feel it is wise to buy only on soft spots. Still feel that September corn should be sold on all bulges with stop-loss orders back.

STRONG APPEAL

To President to Recognize Government of Norway.

Chicago, June 30.—The petition which has been forwarded to President Roosevelt, signed by nearly 20,000 Norwegians, residing in or near Chicago, asking recognition of the new government of Norway, quotes the resolution adopted by the Norwegian storthing on June 7, and then says:

"We, citizens of Norwegian birth or blood, do earnestly hope and respectfully petition you that you will at the earliest opportunity signify your recognition of the new government of Norway, created by the sovereign will of the people through their representatives in the storthing."

In a letter accompanying the petition, Frederick Gade, chairman of the committee having the petition in charge, writes to President Roosevelt as follows:

"This government is a de facto government in full, complete, peaceable control and occupation of the governmental functions and machinery of the country, was established by the unanimous action of the representatives of the people and is supported by the entire people of Norway. Nearly one-third of the entire Norwegian population of the world resides in the United States under your care and protection and these citizens of the United States, following the events in their old home with the deepest interest and concern earnestly hope that their country of adoption will be the first to accord friendly recognition to their country of birth."

PROFIT RETURNED.

Two More Equitable Directors Send Back Money.

New York, June 30.—It was announced at the office of Chairman Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance society, today, that H. C. Deming, president of the Mercantile Trust company of this city, and Valentine P. Snyder, president of the National Bank of Commerce of this city, have returned to the Equitable society their respective shares in the profits of the syndicate known as "James H. Hyde and associates." The syndicate, according to the report of State Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks, sold bonds to the Equitable society at a total profit of $186,107 of which Mr. Deming received $4,576 and Mr. Snyder $1,510. Both were directors of the society.

IRREGULAR CLOSE

To the Stock Market But the Tone Quite Firm.

Russian Situation and Call Money Bulge Caused Declines.

New York, June 30.—Some large blocks of the principal active stocks were thrown on the market at the opening in continuation of yesterday's realizing movement and sharp losses resulted. Reading and Louisville & Nashville, were carried down over a point, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and United States Steel preferred about a point and Locomotive and Baltimore & Ohio large fractions.

A pause in the selling enabled the favorites to make up a good part of their losses. Purchases, however, increased visibly as the market went up which encouraged later selling, in which St. Paul and Pennsylvania were offered freely. A two-point advance in Metropolitan Street Railway and manifest good support in Union Pacific were ignored as sustaining factors. Pennsylvania, Wheeling & Lake Erie, Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Steel Foundries preferred declined a point and Northwestern 2. Metropolitan Securities rose 1 and Havana Electric preferred 6¾.

Prices moved towards recovery led by the coalers. Erie second preferred rose 1½ and Ontario & Western 1¼ and some fractional gains were established. United Railway Investment advanced 2¼ and Consolidated Gas 1¾, while Foundries preferred fell 2 and Iowa Central ¾. Bonds were firm at noon.

Stock prices showed little if any reflection of the 6 per cent call money rate. Erie second preferred continued to go up until it crossed 71, but other stocks were not essentially changed from the noon figures.

Business was only of nominal proportions, the indifferent speculation driving many of the traders away for a prolonged holiday. The undertone was firm enough only a few stocks did more than recover their morning losses. Metropolitan Street Railway reached 128 and pulled Brooklyn Transit up a point and Metropolitan Securities 2. Pacific Mail ran off 1, American Car and Foundry 1¼ and United States Rubber 1½.

Renewed buying of the Eries carried them to the top level. The general market was dull and hard, but Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred, Wabash and the preferred declined 1 to 1¼. The decline in the call loan rate to 3 per cent relieved the market from pressure and the closing was steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market is closing somewhat irregular, but on the whole the tone is not at all bad. The volume of business shows some decrease but, as compared with the early part of the month, it is a great, big market. The action of Union Pacific is somewhat disappointing, and seems to indicate some difference of opinion in the directory as to the next dividend payment. The action of the market does not reflect any uneasiness over the foreign political situation. Opinions on the bank statement are somewhat mixed, but from here we know banks will probably lose 1½ million for the week. On recessions we would buy stocks.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been dull and irregular today. There were declines through the list due to the critical Russian situation, and the burge in call money. The list became very dull late in the day and showed some disposition to rally at the close. The most promising feature was Brooklyn. The market was dull, but firm at the close.

• • •

Waldorf to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: Despite the fact that the governing committee of the stock exchange has decided to keep the exchange open next Monday many traders will leave the street tomorrow not to rturn until next Wednesday. Their best sentiment, however, continues bullish and the belief is strong tonight that after the Fourth of July greater activity and higher prices will be seen.

Under the leadership of Standard Oil, the large financial interests are ranged on the long side although not aggressively bulling the market, but when it can be seen that the average crops are assured, it is believed that the magnates will create a market of great breadth. It is also the opinion of experienced brokers that the large interests will, as in the event of good harvests, get a big public following. Increased dividends are making a decided change in sentiment and it is apparent that the public is very favorably impressed by them. This would not be the case if the increased payments in contemplation would not be justified. As a matter of fact, these large dividends are exceeded by net incomes. Take the Reading, whose common stock has just been placed on the 4 per cent basis. Over 10 per cent will be shown on this stock for the year ending June 30. This takes no account of earnings of the Reading Iron company, owned by the Reading and which give the latter over 2 per cent additional earned on its common stock. Here is the basis of the great movement in these shares during the past year. There are no indications that this movement has culminated either. Edward Wassermann of Wassermann Bros., who have been the largest buyers of Reading common throughout its great advance, said: "There is only one Pennsylvania. There is only one anthracite region. There is only one Reading and it is the largest owner of coal lands in that region. Years ago when the late George Osgood was building the Lackawanna his great argument was that the production of anthracite would rise to 35,000,000 a year. It was less than 20,000,000. It is now nearly 60,000,000, in a few more years it will be 75,000,000. The world moves. The new building where my firm has offices consumes sixteen tons of anthracite a day. The buildings it displaced did not consume two. The increase in population and business is bound to increase the demand for anthracite. These things have made me a great bull on Reading common for more than a year and I am happy in knowing that those friends who have followed me have made money. My confidence today in the stock is greater than ever. I believe, and will wager, it will cross Union Pacific within a year and I think well of Union Pacific at that. I firmly believe it will sell above Pennsylvania in three years, and I'm a great bull on Pennsylvania at that."

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was very quiet, with no feature of special interest. One lot of 1,000 Copper Range was sold between 69 and 68½. Tamarack was slightly stronger with very small sales. Osceola also was very scarce. We advise buying the medium priced copper stocks every time they are weak.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 30.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 12 to 15 points in response to higher cables and strong spot market advices. July ruled very firm and tended to support the entire list, which during the middle of the morning was about 11 to 18 points net higher.

Steady closed quiet, 25 points higher; middling uplands, 10.15; ditto gulf, 10.40. Sales none. Futures closed steady; July, 9.65; August, 9.68; September, 9.73; October, 9.78; November, 9.82; December, 9.87; January, 9.90; February, 9.93; March, 994; April, 9.96; May, 9.98.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul—Barrett & Zimmerman report: The normal dullness that usually precede the national holiday is being felt, there being few out-of-town buyers in the market. Local market rather dull except for few sales of extra heavy drafters. All classes moving slowly at the following prices. Values:

WALLACE THREATENS

To Make Statement Which Will Cause Investigation.

New York, June 30.—A statement published today by the Times credits to a "confidential representative" of John F. Wallace, whose resignation as chief engineer of the Panama canal has just been accepted by the government, declares that when Mr. Wallace accepted the place it was his purpose to remain in charge of the construction of the canal until its completion. The "confidential representative" declares that Engineer Wallace will soon present his side of the case to the public in a statement, which will conclusively show that he was justified in tendering his resignation, and will cause an investigation to be made.

The offer that induced Chief Engineer John F. Wallace to quit his post on the Panama canal came from the Interborough Rapid Transit company of this city, operating the elevated and subway lines, and carries with it a salary of $60,000 a year.

WOMEN OPEN SESSION.

Portland, Or., June 30.—The opening session of the National Woman's Suffrage society was presided over by Rev. Anna Shaw. Speeches of welcome were made by women representing the local W. C. T. U., and women's clubs, followed by a response by Miss Susan B. Anthony. No other business was transacted at the session.

O'REILLY'S DAUGHTER WEDS.

Boston, June 30.—Miss Agnes Boyle O'Reilly, third daughter of the Irish poet and patriot, John Boyle O'Reilly, has been married to Ernest Hocking, professor of philosophy at Phillips Andover academy. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. M. Crothers, a Unitarian clergyman of Cambridge after the bride had tried in vain to procure a Roman Catholic priest to officiate, Archbishop Williams having refused his permission. The marriage occurred at the bride's home in Brookline.

THREE DROWNED.

Scottsboro, Ala., June 30.—Philip Hill, Henry Martin and a little daughter of Martin have been drowned while attempting to drive across a swollen stream.

ALLEGE JUDGE IS PREJUDICED; STRIKERS ASK CHANGE OF VENUE

Chicago, June 30.—The men who drive express and parcel delivery wagons in Chicago, 500 in number, halted on the verge of declaring a strike early today. Four hours of argument were required on the part of conservative leaders to prevent radical action.

As a compromise five men from the union were appointed to visit three local express companies today with an ultimatum. The power of ordering a strike against one or all of the concerns in the furniture and expressmen's association rests with the committee.

John V. Farwell, Jr., representing the employers, has announced that no more conferences will be held with the teamsters' committees.

Members of the Furniture and Expressmen's association, against whom injunction proceedings have been started to compel them to deliver to strike-bound houses, went before Judge Holdom today to ask for a change of venue. Attorney James Brady, counsel for the parcel express companies, served notice on the employers' association that he would ask for a change on the ground that Judge Holdom is prejudiced.

HILL'S CHAUFFEUR KILLS WOMAN

New York, June 30.—Frank C. Foote, a chauffeur for James J. Hill of the Great Northern railroad, while running an automobile, today, ran over and fatally injured an unknown woman at Charles and Greenwich streets. The woman died half an hour later. Foote was remanded to the custody of the coroner.

He was on his way to court to be tried on a charge of speeding the car when he struck the woman. The police say Foote was running the machine carefully and that the woman's death was purely accidental.

Marine.

SOME CHARTERS FOR CORN.

Chicago, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two or three charters were made today at 1⅜c on corn and a fair amount of business will be gathered in before night at that rate. The three days of idleness on the board of trade caused vesselmen to get their boats in out of the wet before Saturday noon and the fleet which will be ready to load before Wednesday was well taken care of.

NEW BOAT ORDERED.

Cleveland, June 30.—Henry Hawgood, president of the Hawgood Transit company yesterday placed an order for a 10,000 ton ship to take the place of the steamer Etruria, lost in collision on Lake Huron, two weeks ago. The new boat will come out in April, 1906, and will be a duplicate of the steamers Lyman C. Smith and Amasa Stone, which sank the Etruria. The steamer will be 545 feet long over all, 525 feet keel, 55 feet beam and 31 feet deep. She will have triple expansion engines and Scotch boilers.

THE PAINE LAUNCHED.

Cleveland, June 30.—The steamer William A. Paine, named for the president of the Copper Range Consolidated company and christened by Miss Ruth Paine, his daughter, was launched at the local yard of the American Shipbuilding company yesterday afternoon. The new boat will have a carrying capacity of 9,000 tons and will cost $300,000. The boat is building for C. L. Hutchinson and others and will be ready for service Aug. 1. Capt

Accuracy, Promptness, Reliability Our Motto!

WHEAT HAS A SENSATIONAL ADVANCE!

Due to Light Receipts and a Small Stock of Old Wheat and Reported Damage to the New Crop.

Rust and Hail Damage Crop

The United States Visible is Under Twelve Million Bushels, the Smallest in Twenty Years, and Spring Wheat is Fast Losing Ground.

Up until a week ago the condition of spring wheat in the Dakotas, Minnesota and Manitoba was admirable and of better promise than for ten years past. The persistent heavy rains during the past ten days have worked immeasurable damage to the growing crop, however, having developed red and black rust at different points throughout the Northwest. This, coupled with the cool weather, leaves the plant in very poor shape for development, and wheat sold today at 95¾c, the highest point wheat has reached for the new crop. There are many unfavorable reports and many poor samples of wheat coming in daily, and the weather of the next few days will, in all probability, tell the story of the price. Last year we were the first firm to acquaint the public with the true condition of the growing crops, and we calculate, through the service of our many managers throughout the Northwest, to keep our customers in closer touch with the situation than any grain firm in the Northwest. Our market letters are free upon application to any of our branch offices, main office, or we will be pleased to mail market information to you personally. We believe that we have the best sources of information obtainable and our opinion, based on the latest and most reliable reports, points to the market price on September wheat exceeding a dollar. Send us your order for Minneapolis, Duluth, Chicago or Kansas City delivery.

GLORIOUS WEEK

The Circus, July Fourth and Herald Newsboys' Picnic.

Occur on Successive Days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Next week will contain three days of unprecedented glory for 650 Duluth newsboys. All of the boys have attended circuses, Fourth of July celebrations and picnics in the past, but never in their lives have they had these three monster pleasures coming on three successive days, as will be the case this year.

First, on Monday, July 3, will come the big Forepaugh & Sells Bros.'s circus, the next day will be the great and glorious Fourth, and the following day, July 5, will prove the most glorious and great of all, for on Wednesday will be held the eighth annual Evening Herald newsboys' picnic at Fond du Lac. This arrangement will fit in well with the ideas of the boys, for the young like to save the best things for the last, as at dinner, when they eat the burned portion of the pie and the black crust first.

The annual picnic, which will be better than the best in the past, because it will be larger and on a more elaborate scale, will be held at Fond du Lac, on the banks of the picturesque St. Louis river, and the picnickers will be carried to the grounds on the steamer Newsboy, kindly loaned for the occasion by Clow & Nicholson, her owners, who have contributed largely to the remarkable success of these affairs in the years gone by. The boat will leave the dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west, at 8 o'clock in the morning, returning at 3:45 p. m., in time for the boys to distribute the evening edition of The Herald. The regular schedule of the excursion vessel is changed for this day alone.

The smaller details of the event are not yet entirely decided upon, but the program of the day's sports is far enough along to show that the picnic will surpass any previous efforts along this line, although all of them, since the first inception of the idea, have been grand successes. As usual, everything for the day will be in charge of A. C. Pearson, circulation manager for The Herald, than whom there is no more popular or better known man among the Duluth boys. They all like him, and the result is that he is enabled to exercise a marvelous control over them on all occasions. They would no more think of disobeying any of his orders than they would of missing one of The Herald picnics or Thanksgiving dinners. One reason for this is that his orders are never unreasonable, and this fact is well understood among them.

There is no rule against making a noise at these annual affairs. That would be unreasonable. The result is that the inhabitants of the quiet little town would be aware of what was coming before the boat was within half a mile of the city, even though they had not been notified beforehand of what to expect. The strange mixture of howls of delight and anticipation that arise upon the summer air, when all of these newsies get in a bunch make even the Indians sit up and take notice, and doubtless recalls to the minds of the older members of the tribe the old days of warfare with the whites and among themselves, when a wild combination of war whoops announced the approach and continuation of a battle. Only the Indians of that time did not know how to make as much noise as do the white boys of today.

The seven Herald picnics have been held at Spirit lake, Sucker river and Fond du Lac, the most of them at the latter place, for it is much the most popular. Added to the joys at the picnic itself is the pleasure of a ride on the fine excursion boat up the beautiful St. Louis river, with its pretty scenery. The boys always receive the best of care at the hands of Mr. Pearson and Capt. Clow, and never yet has even a slight accident occurred to mar the pleasures of the day. The weather man has also had his eye out for the comfort of the newsies, and at each of the seven events only the finest of weather has prevailed. Forecaster Richardson has done everything except given a written guarantee that the same condition of affairs will exist this year. Rain may fall the day before or the day after the annual event, but the big day itself has always provided plenty of sunshine and no rain.

As usual, every precaution will be taken next Wednesday for the safety of the young people. Everything possible will be done to prevent accidents. To the stern of the steamer will be attached a rowboat containing two expert swimmers, fully equipped with ropes and life preservers, and ready at every instant to offer assistance should anyone accidentally fall overboard, something which never happened on any like trips up the river in the past. The rowboat and occupants will be towed clear to Fond du Lac and back. Mr. Pearson will have enough assistants to look after the welfare of his charges in a proper manner once the picnic grounds have been reached.

All of the boys must be in The Herald circulating rooms not later than 7:40 Wednesday morning. They will form in line and march to the boat. The procession will start at The Herald building and will probably lead along First and Superior streets for a short distance, to show the people what a crowd of hustling newsboys out for a good time look like.

The West Duluth boys will meet with Donald Holmes at Spencer's drug store, shortly after 7 o'clock, and the West end boys will meet at Herman Olson's Herald branch in the West end, 1821 West Superior street. The latter will form in line in front of Olson's store and will march to The Herald building.

There will be a fine program of athletic events and other contests to be pulled off at Fond du Lac. A number of boys will take along kodaks, and The Herald will award a suitable prize to the newsie who takes the best photograph on the trip.

The boys will be expected to take their own lunch, but an unlimited supply of lemonade and oranges will be supplied on the picnic grounds.

LOOK FOR BLOODY FOURTH.

Oneida Indians Buy Fireworks and Firewater.

Appleton, Wis., June 30.—Appleton citizens fear for a bloody Fourth of July on the Oneida Indian reservation. For the first time in the history of the tribe the redskins this year will celebrate Independence day and a vast quantity of fireworks and "firewater" have already been purchased. This will be the first Fourth that the Oneida Indians have had plenty of money, this condition having been brought about by the recent permission given them to sell property. Since they have received allotment rights from the government there has been no end of trouble, and the Outagamie county jail has had as many as a half dozen of them confined at once.

Yesterday a delegation of six Indians came to Appleton to purchase fireworks. Appleton dealers saw a good chance to rid themselves of a supply of explosives they are forbidden by city ordinance to dispose of here. In the consignment sold to the redskins were any number of toy pistols, dynamite canes, cannon crackers and other dangerous explosives.

The Oneida fair grounds has been designated as the place for the initial Fourth of July pow-wow. It is known that a quantity of intoxicants has been smuggled upon the reservation and will be of easy access. Among the features for the afternoon's program are running horse races, foot races and pole-climbing contests. A unique feature of the equipment of the park is a home-made merry-go-round, the handiwork of one of the Oneidas. This will be operated by a dozen little redskins.

A deal that has been pending for six months was closed in Appleton today when a consolidation was affected between the Fox River Valley Telephone company of Appleton and the Valley Telephone & Telegraph company of Green Bay. It is believed that John S. Van Nortwick, president of the Appleton company, will remain in control and head the new company.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE FAILS

Mrs. May Towsey Recovers After Drinking Carbolic Acid.

After drinking the contents of a small bottle of carbolic acid at the Scandia hotel, 529½ West Michigan street, about 2 o'clock this morning, Mrs. May Towsey, 28 years of age, was taken to St. Luke's hospital in great agony.

Antidotes were administered and this afternoon it was reported that she was out of danger.

Mrs. Towsey had been at the hotel with her husband, about a week. Little was known concerning her, and the cause of the attempted suicide is a mystery. The woman was found, partially undressed, and unconscious, in her room about 2:10 o'clock this morning. She is believed to have been alone when she committed the act, which was probably done in a fit of despondency.

Restoratives were administered pending the arrival of the physician, and the woman was then taken to the hospital, where she recovered gradually from the effects of the drug.

PHYSICAL IMPOSSIBILITY

To Take Ore Charged, Says Mining Company.

New York, June 30.—Counsel for the Boston & Montana Copper company has interposed an answer in the United States circuit court here to the amended complaint recently filed against it by the Johnstown Mining company, controlled by the Heinze interests. The latter corporation charged the defendant with removing loose ore in Silver Bow county, Montana, belonging to it and the Montana Ore Purchasing company, valued at $37,000,000. The answer declares that the removal of any such amount of loose ore is a physical impossibility. All the specifications in the bill were denied in detail.

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR—
State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term. June 16th, 1905.
In the matter of the Estate of A. H. Phillpson, Deceased:
On receiving and filing the petition of John Lindblood of the County of St. Louis, representing, among other things, that A. H. Phillpson, late of the County of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, on the 6th day of May, A. D. 1905, at the County of St. Louis, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is a creditor of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to John Lindblood granted;
It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said Court on Monday, the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County.
Ordered Further, That notice hereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.
Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 16th day of June, A. D. 1905.
BY the Court:
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County, Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis County, Minn.
(Seal, Probate Court, St. Louis County, Minn.)
BALDWIN, BALDWIN & DANCER,
Attorneys for Petitioner.
Duluth Evening Herald—June 16-23-30.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF ST. LOUIS, ss.—
In Probate Court. .
In the Matter of the Estates of George W. Perry and Delia Horton Perry, deceased.
The petition of Samuel Nesbitt having been duly made and filed in this court, representing among other things that George W. Perry, who resided last prior to his death at Madison, state of Wisconsin, died at Madison, in said state, on the 17th day of February, 1883, and that Delia Horton Perry, who resided last prior to her death at Superior, in the state of Wisconsin, died at Superior in said state in the year 1893, and that each of said persons was seized of an estate of inheritance in certain lands in the county of St. Louis, State of Minnesota, described in said petition, and that five years have elapsed since the death of each of said deceased persons, and that no will has been probated, and administration has not been granted or had of said estates in this state, and praying that the descent of said lands and of the interest of said petitioner therein be by this court determined and said lands assigned to such persons as may be entitled thereto by law.
Now, therefore, it is ordered that the said petition be heard at a term of this court to be held at the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County of St. Louis, State of Minnesota, on the 10th day of July, 1905, at ten o'clock a. m.
It is further ordered, that notice of said hearing of said petition be given by the publication of this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published in said St. Louis County, Minnesota.
Dated, Duluth, Minn., June 15th, 1905.
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County,
Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis County, Minnesota.
(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co., Minn.)
Duluth Evening Herald—June 16-23-30.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECeived at the office of the Light-House Engineer, Detroit, Mich., until 3 o'clock p. m., July 31, 1905, and then opened, for furnishing the materials and labor of all kinds necessary for the construction of a wharf, oilhouse, and buoy shed for a light-house depot on Minnesota Point, Minn., in accordance with specifications, copies of which, with blank proposals and other information, may be had upon application to Major Lansing H. Beach, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., Engineer.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Insurance Rates Will Be Reduced at Fargo July 1.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Fargo property owners are to pay less insurance after Saturday. The long-looked-for improvements requested by the underwriters have been completed and the city advanced a class rating. Among the changes the past year was the installation of a paid fire department, the extension of the 14-inch watermains in the business district, the installation of a new pump, doubling the capacity of the waterworks, and the establishment of a settling basin. Connections have been made and everything is now in good order. The new rating means a reduction of from 15 to 25 per cent in the business part.

After Friday, it will be less difficult for druggists to secure permits to sell intoxicants and more of them will make applications. Under the law enacted two years ago it was necessary to obtain the signatures of 80 per cent of the male and 70 per cent of the female adults in the precinct where the drug store is located. Under the new law 60 per cent of the male and 50 per cent of the females is all that is required, and a large number will seek permits.

The testimony against Nurenberger in the land fraud cases was completed and the government rested, after which the defense renewed the motion to quash the indictment, and it was argued yesterday afternoon and today. The former motion to quash was denied with the privilege of renewal.

Near Harvey, in Wells county, a Russian farmer has developed a new economical plan. The only horses on his farm are two for driving. The half-section farm is tilled with cows as the motive power. They are worked by day and milked morning and night, and the milk sold to a convenient creamery. The farmer declares they are satisfactory as work animals and are doubly useful. He feeds them high and is growing wealthy. His neighbors quote him Bill Nye's remark about working the cows less and the butter more, but he seems to be succeeding with his plan.

Jamestown—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Methdist church was celebrated by large congregations. Eight persons, members of the congregation, were here who were present at the organization of the church and have been members in good standing ever since. The pastor, Rev. Thomas Greene, and leading members, have started a movement for the erection of a new building.

A recent ball game between Jamestown's "fat" and "lean" nines, composed of business men, netted $102 gate receipts for the local ladies' relief society.

Horses for the July races in this place are arriving. Trainer Heinbauch of Cooperstown is here with a bunch of five owned by Cooperstown and Aneta men. Horses from Edgeley, Buffalo and several points in Minnesota are already entered. The entries are numerous and $1,500 is up in prizes for the three days.

A valuable percheron stallion belonging to Veterinarian Moore was standing with his head out of his stall window when a cannon used during the G. A. R. encampment was fired in close proximity to the stable. The horse threw his head upwards with great force and injured the upper part of his skull to such an extent that he died a few days after with every evidence of brain fever.

Rector Burleson of the Episcopal church and a former assistant, spent two days in excavating an Indian mound on a bluff west of Arrowwood lake near Edmonds. They found a well preserved specimen of the Indian tribe about four feet below the surface. The grave was surrounded with boulders but contained no relics or aboriginal ornaments or weapons. The skeleton was brought to Jamestown and may be mounted.

Buchanan—Buchanan is to have a new general store. Merchant Isaacs of Minnewaukan is to be the new proprietor. A new building is about completed for the enterprise.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—The Yankton county courthouse, which has been standing half completed for several months and which has been the subject of much discussion and criticism, owing to the defects in the plans and the workmanship, bids fair to be so carried to completion that every taxpayer will feel that the county has received full value for the money expended.

The work was brought to a standstill by the death of the general contractor, Sam Engelbreth. The commissioners, knowing that defects existed in the building, set about to determine the cause and to fix the responsibility. They settled with their superintendent of construction, E. D. Palmer, and severed relations also with the architects, W. R. Parsons & Sons company of Des Moines. The estate of the contractor proved unable to carry out the contract and at the meeting of the board today the county took the contract from the estate and will finish the building at its expense.

The architect now in charge of the building is Webster Tomlinson of Chicago, and the new foreman of construction for the county will be Foreman Reed, who has just completed the United States postoffice in this city.

Huron—Water in the Jim river has been rapidly rising. At some points it has passed above the banks and flooded the lowlands. Some fields of grain and corn are under water. The flood, with a single exception, is the greatest since the spring of 1897. The damage is not great, but if rain continues the aggregate loss will be heavy.

In the city the water is disappearing, but many streets are yet flooded. The sewerage system is unable to carry off the immense volume of water, and as a result, miniature lakes abound in all parts of the city, and boats are needed to get people out of the flooded districts. Merchants have suffered some loss because of damage to goods stored in cellars and basements.

Mitchell—Part of the south wall of the new building of the Commercial and Savings bank collapsed. The inner part of the wall was back up with chalkstone rock, which became softened by the rains.

Andover—Burglars entered the saloon of N. Hollien and secured a small sum of money. They are thought to be the same persons who robbed John Gaskin's store at Columbia on Monday night.

Aberdeen—Of the sixty-three children in Brown county who took the examination under County Superintendent Eddy for eight-grade diplomas, forty-one passed.

Deadwood—Roy L. Sharpe, who has been city editor of the Pioneer Times for twelve years, has accepted a position with a powder company at Wilmington, Del.

Spearfish—Those who have charge of the construction of the trolley line between this place and the northern Black Hills towns say that work is to be commenced immediately and that the track will be laid at least half way this season.

Lead—Douglas Urgurhart is dead at Nicaragua. He left this place recently for the Lone-Star mine in the Bluefields mining district. His death was caused by beri-beri.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Two Workmen Fall 115 Feet From Tower at Negaunee.

Negaunee—George Mode, Jr., of Negaunee, and David Grant of Chicago, employed in building the concrete tower at the plant of the Marquette County Gas, Light and Traction company, met death in a tragic manner Wednesday afternoon.

Grant came to Negaunee a month ago to supervise the building of the concrete stack at the gas plant, being employed by the contracting firm of the Webber Steel Concrete Chimney company of Chicago. In company with Mode he was working at a height of 115 feet from the ground, building a section of the chimney, when the section which had been built the day prior collapsed without warning, precipitating the two men to an awful death.

The bodies were crushed by the fall Mode striking on his head, which was crushed beyond all semblance of human form. Grant struck on his feet, and every bone in his body was broken. He lived five minutes after he was picked up.

Escanaba—The business men of Escanaba have decided to discontinue the free excursions it was proposed to run from Gladstone every Saturday night on the steamer Lotos. The business drawn was not sufficient to defray the cost.

Hardwood—A. P. Farrell of Hardwood, Dickinson county, is negotiating with the A. Spies Lumber and Cedar company for a three-years' logging contract, which will embrace 9,000,000 feet of pine, hemlock and basswood, 22,000 poles and 100,000 posts.

Iron Mountain—Isaac Unger of Iron Mountain has received notification from the department at Washington that he has been granted a patent on a safety guard for high chairs. The invention has been endorsed by chair manufacturers, and is already meeting with a large sale. Mr. Unger is certain to receive a nice income from its invention.

Manistique—The water supply of South Manistique is piped from a spring located on land owned by Manistique parties. Recently the owners of the spring endeavored to collect $400 from the township of Harrison for water used by the people of the village in question during the past few years. The town board, at a special meeting, has refused to pay the same, and as a result wells may become popular in the suburban town.

Sault Ste. Marie—Gladstone gets the next annual reunion of the Upper Peninsula League of the Knights of Pythias. Officers were elected as follows: President, Charles D. Mason of Gladstone; vice president, T. A. Peets of Hermansville; secretary-treasurer, Dr. Frank T. Long of Escanaba.

TEN YEARS IN PRISON

Lenich and Longer to Pay Penalty For Manslaughter.

Ten years in the state penitentiary at Stillwater, was the penalty meted out Frank Lenich and Frank Longer, by Judge Ensign, yesterday afternoon, on conviction for the murder of Peter Kracovitch.

Rev. Father Kosmerl translated the sentence to the prisoners. Lenich stood apparently unmoved while Longer was pale and nervous and wept like a child as he realized what was before him.

The sentencing was done between 4 and 5 o'clock and only a few were present in the courtroom at the time. L. H. Corcoran appeared for the convicted men and C. E. Adams for the state, in the absence of County Attorney McClintock.

When asked by the court if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, Lenich indicated that he did not fully understand the procedure and said he understood that his attorney would move for a new trial. Longer had the same understanding.

Judge Ensign slowly reviewed the evidence of the crime and explained the futility of the hope for a new trial for the reason that not a shred of new evidence had been offered although some time has elapsed since the trial.

Mr. Corcoran pleaded for more time claiming that the accused did not kill Kracovitch, but that Peter's brother-in-law had a motive and that he could get evidence of an earlier fight on the night of the killing. He said his clients are ignorant of the courts of justice in this country and asked for clemency in their behalf.

The court then explained to the prisoners the process of law and reviewed the evidence submitted at the trial.

In passing sentence on Lenich the court said that he appreciated the courage of Lenich in going to the assistance of his friends, but that he erred in that he chased Kracovitch when the matter ran away.

In Longer's case the court declared that he was to blame for the unfortunate position of Lenich in that he, knowing Kracovitch's disposition, sought a quarrel. He held Longer more deeply in the blame than Lenich, who did the stabbing that resulted fatally.

Railroads.

MANY ARE SOLD

Roads Having Lively Demand For Portland Exposition Tickets.

Both Northern and Southern Routes Being Well Patronized.

All of the local railroad offices representing lines leading westward report a very good sale of tickets to Portland, where the big Lewis and Clark exposition is being held. As the summer advances the demand for the low-rate tickets increases, and every day each of the differetn offices disposes of several of them.

A great many of the passengers who came up the lakes on the steamship North West, last Tuesday evening, stopped in Duluth a day and then started for the Pacific coast, some of them making provision to stop off at the Yellowstone park on the way out. It is believed by the Northern Pacific officials that all previous records in point of the number of people visiting the park in a single season will be broken this year. This will be due to the fact that so many pleasure seekers, bound for Portland, will stop off at the Yellowstone, enther going out or coming back. Railroad men say the passenger business to the West is 25 per cent greater than the traffic that the exposition was expected to attract. Already the fair is turning out to be a paying proposition.

The big majority of those purchasing tickets get those that will entitle them to a trip down the coast into California, good over both the northern and southern routes.

Railroad Notes.

It is estimated that the cost of the recent Lake Shore wreck, near Cleveland, was $771,000. Insurance companies have peid $266,000 on life and accident policies as a result of the wreck, and will be obliged to pay $150,000 more. The railroad will probably be compelled to pay about $295,000 in damages for persons killed and injured, and the damage to equipment is $60,000.

The construction of an electric railway between Brookings, Iowa, to Sioux Falls, is now proposed. The promoters of the enterprise are Eastern capitalists and a few citizens of Brookings.

The first train over the new La Crosse & Southeastern railroad arrived at La Crosse yesterday. It ran over the entire road between La Crosse and Viroqua, a distance of Forty-four miles. Trains will be run regularly hereafter, two each way every day.

J. M. Schweizer, chief clerk in the office of the division superintendent of the great Northern at Willmar, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Northern division at Crookston.

The Rock Island and 'Frisco lines have completed plans for a million-dollar warehouse at Kansas City, for the use of all railway lines.

THE NATION GUARDS HIM.

An Eglishman, at lunch in a New York club, told a story that should be inspiring to Americans, especially to such Americans as think their country is going to the dogs, says the Los Angeles Times.

"I was in Washington," he said. "I was walking down a very level, straight, hot street. Suddenly, I heard a number of scattered huzzahs, and from every direction men and boys, laughing and crying out excitedly, hurried toward me.

"'What's the matter?' I said to a well-dressed man of middle age.

"He indicated an approaching figure, a graceful, sturdy figure, that drew near with the swinging stride of an athlete in trim.

"'Our president,' he said. 'President Roosevelt.'

"I was amazed to see the head of your great country unescorted, and I exclaimed:

"'But where is his guard?'

"My informant touched himself on the breast, and pointed from one to another of the cheering crowd.

"'Here,' he said, 'and there, and there.'"

A WISE STENOGRAPHER.

"I'm not opposed to the idioms of speech providing they are expressive," said the senior member of a stock broking firm to the Philadelphia Record, "but I certainly do deplore the growing use of senseless slang. I may be old-fashioned in my fears, but I predict that the time will come when pure English will be as unintelligible to the so-called 'up-to-date' people as a foreign language. I'll give you an example. Last week the son of an old friend of mine came to see me regarding some investments. I had met him only once, but this is the way he greeted me: 'Hello, governor; I've been tipped that you're the main squeeze in this layout, and I want you to brush me up on the game. I'm shouting that I'd be willing to cough a few cases if you put me wise to a dead sure thing. I've been bucking the ponies, and the con artists certainly trimmed me to a finish. No more for mine. I want to stack up against a kid-glove layout where there's a chance to cop out some simoleons.' I didn't know what he meant and, excusing myself, called out my stenographer. This is the way she translated it: "Good morning; I understand you are the head of the concern, and I seek advice. I wish to say that I will gladly pay a commission of a few dollars for advice regarding a safe investment. I have been risking my money on horse races and the bookmakers cheated me so outrageously that you may be certain that I will never again gamble in that way. What I seek is a respectable channel of speculation where there is an opportunity to make money.'"

HOUSEKEEPING SCHOOLS.

The question of establishing traveling schools for farmers' daughters which shall teach the principles of scientific housekeeping, cooking and farm work is being agitated in Alsace-Lorraine, says United Consul Brittain of Kiel, Germany. Such schools are already in operation in Baden, Bavaria, Thuringen and Hesse, and are giving great satisfaction.

The teachers are all educated women, graduates of the best schools of housework, who must have passed government examinations. All expenses incident to conducting the schools are paid by the government, but these are comparatively light. An outfit for a school consists of a cooking stove, serving utensils, ironing boards, irons, tablecloths, towels and cooking utensils. Tables and chairs are borrowed in the various villages, and the classes are held in the schoolhouses. Only twenty girls re allowed in a class, a term lasts six weeks, and no pupils are admitted who are under 16 years of age.

There are practical lessons in housekeeping, cooking and the selection of food; then lectures on the analysis of food, the scientific care of cattle and poultry, the cultivation of vegetables, and the making of butter and cheese. It is proposed to enlarge the curriculum to include a minor course in nursing, cooking for the sick, sewing, mending, etc.

The tuition will be so low as to practically exclude no one. The schools are especially intended to benefit remote farming communities not easily accessible to permanent schools of such nature.

SOME ODDITIES.

Chicago Chronicle: "The Danish method would do away with a great deal of drunkenness," said a woman with a white ribbon fixed to her breast.

"The Danish method? What is that."

"In Denmark," was the answer, "when a drunken man comes forth from a saloon or a cafe he is at once put into a cab and driven home and the cabman's bill is paid by the liquor dealer from whose house the man issued. Any liquor dealer who allows a man to depart from his establishment in an intoxicated condition is compelled by the Danish law to pay that man's cab fare home.

"The Danes, in consequence are a sober people."

A clerk in the department of agriculture said:

"So you think that scientific farming is a bluff? You demand some illustrations of the good that is accomplished by the scientific method? Very well.

"When clover was first introduced into Australia it grew there beautifully, but it never seeded. The soil was all right. The climate was all right. What then was the trouble?

"A scientist studied the matter and this is what he found:

"He found that the native Australian bees had tongues too short to reach the clover's pollen-forming organs. These organs, in red clover, are hidden deeply in the heart of the tube-like petals and they can only be fertilized by the long-tongued bumble bee. If red clover is not visited by bumble bees who bear the golden pollen grains from one blossom to another, it never seeds—it cannot be grown. The scientist, aware of the fact, soon put his finger on the barren Australian clover's trouble. He imported a lot of long-tongued bumble bees, these bees flourished and immediately Australian clover, which had promised to be a failure, became one of the country's richest and finest crops."

"During my stay in Gambia," said the sailor, "the king was taken sick. He rolled all over the mud floor of the royal kraal, he groaned and swore, and he clutched his fat stomach with both hands. He had, it seems, a cramp.

"Gambia is on the African west coast and the people there are primitive. When the medicine man arrived to treat the king I went into the kraal behind him, being anxious to see what a Gambian prescription would be like.

"The king stopped rolling about. He lay quite still on his back. His stomach, much swollen, stuck up in the air, and he rubbed it gently with the palm of his hand.

"'Do your best for me, father,' he says to the physician.

"'Have no fear, son,' the physician answers.

"Then this African M. D. took out a wooden slate and a charcoal crayon and he began to write. Scratch, scratch, scratch, away he went. The slate filled up with fine, close writing.

"'Do your best, father, repeats the king.

"'I spare no pains,' says the physician.

"'What are you writing?' says I.

"'A prayer for our great king's recovery,' was the answer.

"When the slate was full the physician took some water and washed it clean, and he saved all the dirty water in a cup.

"'In this dirty water,' he says, 'is the prayer I have just written. Drink, my son, the draught in it the prayer lives.'

"The king drained the darkish fluid out of the cup. Then he sighed and said:

"'I feel better already.'

"The Gambian people told me that the drinking of prayers in that way was the only kind of medical treatment they ever got."

USED POOR JUDGMENT.

The salesman in the wall paper store loked discouraged after he had written down an order for seven different kinds of paper, says the New York Sun.

"All going into a small apartment," he said with a sigh, "that will look two sizes smaller after these papers have been put into it. I tried to tell her that the same kind of paper in the adjoining rooms would give a sense of space and roominess impossible if she had different kinds in every room. But she wanted as many kinds as possible, and she has 'em. The flat will look like a crazy quilt. But she wont' mind that. She's got enough different kinds of wall paper to make her happy."

POPULAR BELIEF EXPLODED.

Water is so nearly incompressible that it is but little denser at the bottom of the ocean than on the surface. Any substance which will sink will go directly to the bottom, in spite of the popular belief to the contrary.

THE QUEEN'S HANDKERCHIEF.

The most valuable handkerchief in the world belongs to the queen of Italy, says London Tit-Bits. It consists of the purest Venetian lace, and it is in perfect condition, in spite of the fact that it was made during the fifteenth century. Lace collectors reckon it to be worth from £400 to £600.

People who commenced to buy real estate in this city ten years ago, and "kept at it," are among your "rich neighbors" today. If you acquire the habit now, and watch the real estate ads, as closely as you do the news, you may be "well to do" in a few years.

FARMS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Thousands of working men in the cities and elsewhere are at last realizing that the farmer is the most independent man on earth, and there is a corresponding rush for good land that is cheap. As a result, the fertile sections in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin are filling up with hundreds of sturdy men who in five years will be in better circumstances than ever before in their lives.

We have the finest land in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, and can sell it to actual settlers at terms that will surprise you. In fact, no other land company can offer the encouragement to farmers that we do in the way of payments.

We would be glad to send you maps and all other information upon receipt of a postal.
